God wants men to mine for His truth. Jesus did not hide His rich teaching in parables to keep us all from finding it, but that they who would might come to appreciation through appropriation. Such would make truth their own by digging for it. Jesus paused in the midst of His parable teaching to say, "For he that hath to him shall be given." It was an old principle before he restated it. The man who uses his money gets more money. The athlete who goes into training increases his muscle to bulging cords. And so Jesus says that if we use what Bible truth we have we shall get more. If we do not use it, he declared, we shall lose what we have. Are you refusing to teach that Sunday school class because you think you are not well enough equipped in Bible knowledge? You can only become a Bible student by building on the truth you now have.—Sunday School Times.

You Do More Work

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and Quinine suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength - Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same to-day, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle. —Adv.

Overworked Women

It is the never ceasing treadmill of household duties — washing, ironing, cleaning, mending, cooking; the house to keep tidy, children cared for and well dressed, church and social duties to perform — that so often overtax a woman's strength, and she falls a prey to those dreaded female ills.

ST. MARK'S HALL,
908 Esplanade Avenue.
BULLETIN FOR AUGUST, 1919.

"As we have opportunity let us work that which is good toward all men."

At a meeting of the Board of City Missions, August 12, at Rayne Memorial, a new Board was organized, composed of both men and women. A constitution was adopted, and the following officers were elected: President, Mr. Chauncey French; Vice-Presidents, Dr. E. L. King and Mrs. H. J. Thompson; Recording Secretary, O. J. Dunn; Corresponding Secretary, J. S. Pearce; Treasurer, Mrs. J. B. Parker. For twenty-two years the membership of the board has been composed of women. In view of the enlargement of the work and the inspiration of the Centenary, the new board is composed of an equal number of men and women. We believe this will mean larger success for the mission work of our city.

Miss Ruth Byerly, of West Virginia, formerly in charge of the girl's department, has been returned after a year's absence. Her many friends gave her a warm welcome.

Vacation School.

After a most successful session, to the great regret of the children, our school closed, August 15, with an attendance of 120. The program and exhibits were unusually interesting. Much credit is due Mr. E. H. Prescott for his splendid management of the auto ride in the afternoon. Through the courtesy of our friends, one hundred of our children were driven through the city and parks and to West End. It was a gala day and we had difficulty in persuading the children to vacate the machines when they returned to the Hall.

Camp Fire.

The play given August 9 was a success socially and financially. After the program, refreshments were sold in the yard from decorated booths. The receipts were $34, which applied on the camp at Mandeville. They had the use of a cottage next door to Rest-Awhile. Twelve girls set forth with blankets on shoulders, and at the end of a week reported a royal good time. One girl expressed the sentiments of all when she wrote home, "It's great—even better than last year."

Boys' Work.

Both Scout Troops have been meeting regularly all month. Troop No. 3 is in camp at Mandeville for a week.

The boys are delighted with the new volley ball net, the gift of Mr. D. R. Metzger. Also the tennis net and racquettes, the gift of Mrs. Paul Sanders. Boys in the woodwork class in vacation school made 163 toys. These young hopefuls are like fish out of water since school has closed. Keeping them busy is the only way to keep them out of mischief. Our work is largely preventive, not so much with delinquents as to prevent them from becoming delinquents.

Clinic.

This department is rejoicing in the return from France of Dr. E. L. King. He and Dr. W. E. Graves have one clinic each week, and Dr. Fuchs has the Ear, Nose and Throat Clinic. There are two outstanding needs: a scale for weighing babies and other patients, and an instrument for recording blood pressure.

Statistics.

Visits made, 266; visits to institutions, 10; visits received, 337; cards and letters, 94; enrollment vacation school, 160.

Clinic.

Number of general clinics, 6; number of ear, nose and throat, 2; new cases, 93; returned cases, 115; total number patients, 218.

Receipts.

Supply store, $16.30; toy class, $1.48; sewing classes, $5.70; vacation school, $5.02; Clinic dues, $7.70; total, $35.90.

DIVISION OF TERRITORY IN HOME DEPARTMENT, W. M. S.

In obedience to instructions, the committee of five appointed by the Executive Committee of the Council in session June 7, 1919, to frame a tentative plan to hold until the next annual meeting of the Council for a territorial division of the work of the two Secretaries of the Home Department, and submit same to the Council members for their vote, divided the work now organized as follows:

1. Gulf States and Eastern Division, comprising the conferences in all States bordering on the Gulf of Mexico, except Texas, and the conferences in all the States bordering on the Atlantic Ocean, and the Western Virginia and Holston Conferences. (Holston Conference is composed of portions of Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia.) The work of this division is to be administered by Mrs. McCoy.

2. Western and Central Division, comprising the conferences in all States west of the Mississippi River except Louisiana, and all conferences in Tennessee and Kentucky except Holston. The work in this division is to be administered by Mrs. J. W. Downs.

The Social Service Department is to be conducted jointly by the two Secretaries.

This plan accompanied by a map indicating the division was sent to the Council members who returned a majority of votes in favor of the plan.

MRS. F. S. PARKER,
Recording Secretary.

The above action was taken because it seemed to those who were in position to know that the division provided for in the Home Depaprtment in the By-Laws did not make the proper equalization of work for the two Secretaries and necessitated overlapping of effort in many cases. It seemed wise, therefore, to make some tentative adjustment on account of the incoming of Mrs. MacDonell's successor. Under the present action the Council will be free at its next meeting to make any further adjustment.—Bulletin of Missionary News.

Eat Less and Take Bitro-Phosphate To Put On Flesh

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Frederick S. Kolle, M. D., Editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says that weak, nervous people who want increased weight, strength and nerve-force, should take a 5-grain tablet of Bitro-Phosphate just before or during each meal.

This particular phosphate is the discovery of a famous French scientist, and reports of remarkable results from its use have recently appeared in many medical journals.

If you do not feel well; if you tire easily; do not sleep well, or are too thin, go to any good druggist and get enough Bitro-Phosphate for a two weeks' supply—it costs only fifty cents a week.

Eat less; chew your food thoroughly, and if at the end of a few weeks you do not feel stronger and better than you have for months; if your nerves are not steadier; if you do not sleep better and have more vim, endurance and vitality, your money will be returned, and the Bitro-Phosphate will cost you nothing.

The Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its most distinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, including not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

The keynote of the Christian religion is the development of the individual to the utmost of his powers. No one of us can follow Christ closely, and live a narrow life. We may not be given great tasks, but life takes on new dimensions. Michael Angelo, working on his statue of David, put a lighted candle in the visor of his cap, and so prevented any shadow of himself falling upon his work. Worldliness disqualifies us for spiritual greatness, for largeness of heart. False pride, social envy, wrath, ignorance, low ideals, immoderate love of ease and pleasure, unbridled passion—all these are prison bars to keep our souls within a meagre compass. We may get out; we may break the bars; our souls have a strong Friend who opens gates of iron and breaks down thick walls, and leads us to high viewpoints and vast outlooks. God awaits only our prayer to deliver us from bondage to little things.—Selected.

Letters From Rheumatics.

Possibly you have imagined that you could not get your own consent to write a testimonial letter, but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of rheumatism you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring. This water overcomes many diseases, including Indigestion, Gout, Uric Acid Poisoning and Liver and Kidney diseases, but no patrons of the Springs are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water that those who have been relieved of their rheumatism. Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the Management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick Headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisoning matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of Stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefitted. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr Rhodes, of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The Water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McCann of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

FROM PRAIRIE AND STRONGS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Permit a few words from Prairie and Strongs. We have just held our meetings, which were seasons of refreshing from the Lord. As a part of the results, we received 18 on profession of faith. Our people showed true loyalty by their regular attendance and taking part in the service. We were interfered with by rain a few times, but that did not destroy the interest of the people in the meetings. The preaching was done by Rev. W. W. Jones, of Lula, to the delight and edification of the people, as was manifested through all the services, and especially at the close of each meeting.

Our Conference collections are in sight. We have already paid more than $1300 on our Centenary subscription of $4,142, and will pay another hundred before this gets in print.

We are planning to build a new church at Strongs. We are waiting for the plans from the architect. Everything is moving along smoothly on our work. I want our church to remain as it is—M. E. Church, South. You see where the emphasis is.

A BEAUTIFUL WEDDING.

A most beautiful wedding was solemnized in the Methodist church at Pontotoc, Miss., on September 4, at 8 p. m., in the presence of the largest company ever gathered in the church. The church was beautifully decorated and lighted. Special music was furnished. The solemn ceremony was said by the pastor of the bride, the Rev. W. M. Young, which made Mr. James Howard Curlin and Miss Zora Millicent Grisham man and wife. Mr. Curlin is a young business man of Marion, Ark., and Miss Grisham is one of the most accomplished young women of Pontotoc. She has taught in the city school for several years. The young couple will reside in Marion, Ark.

COMMENDATORY.

Dear Advocate: The issue of September 4 contains an article on Repentance by Rev. J. Tillery Lewis. I wish every reader would peruse this carefully and see how well it coincides with the Bible. I have read the Bible carefully and tried to understand it, and this is the first time I have ever seen my views expressed so plainly.

The same issue of the Advocate contains two letters by O. S. and Jas. M. Lewis—all brothers. There are five of these brothers preachers—all the sons of the late Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr. I knew the father and mother, and I am not surprised to see the fruits of their faithful labor in these sons.

The name of Lewis extends to two other faithful sons and father—the brother and cousins of the H. P. Lewis family. Represented by such faithful men, the M. E. Church, South, can move but one way, and that is forward. As long as the Advocate circulates, the good they have done will be told.

NOTES FROM MANGHAM CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: I am delighted to read accounts of so many great revivals. This, however, is only an expected result of liberal offerings of material things—God making good his promise. Mal. 3:10.

The Mangham charge has been blessed with great revivals. On July 1, we began at Mangham, with Rev. Dan Kelly doing the preaching. About thirty additions, many family altars, and a number of pledges to lead in public prayer are some of the results. After closing a two weeks' meeting here, Brother Kelley remained four days and preached for us at Union Church. Here the results were very satisfactory. While only four united with the church, many family altars were established and practically the entire membership were lined up for public service. One of the oldest members told the pastor that this is the first time in the history of the church that they ever had a public prayer meeting. I attended their first public service and nine took up the cross.

Our Sunday school at Mangham has taken on new life and gets better every Sabbath. Some of the most substantial men of the community came into our church and many of the older members got "in the harness" for service. This is the fourth time I have had Dan Kelley, and he gets better every time he comes. He knows God and men. Kelley is the most successful man I have ever seen to influence men. No one can doubt his sincerity. He has a burning zeal for souls. God is greatly using this man. He is great!

On August 1, my brother, Rev. L. F. Alford, of Laurel, Miss., came to us for another meeting and if crowded houses, undivided attention, and increase of interest from start to finish, are good indications, we had a successful meeting. Besides this, we added eight new members to our church. The gospel was presented in a straightforward, forceful and logical way, and got hold of the people from the first service.

This charge is composed of three regular churches—Mangham, Union, and Little Creek. But we have taken in some "new ground" this year. Early in the year we organized a little church at New Light, about five miles in the country, which we serve as an afternoon appointment, once a month. The pastor held his own meeting there, which resulted in eleven accessions, making about thirty members in all at this point. Immediately after closing, we went to another country appointment where we once had a Methodist church, but which was abandoned. Many have gone to the Baptist church, others were adrift. After holding an eight days' meeting, we organized a Methodist church with forty-two members. Here we have organized a Sunday school—a real Methodist Sunday school—and the people have authorized a liberal assessment for ministerial support. Several family altars were erected. Up to this date we have added about one hundred members to our church this year.

Our people are hopeful and the Mangham charge is prospering as never before. We "thank God and take courage." Yours in Christ,

J. MARTIN ALFORD.

GOOD NEWS FROM FRANKLINTON, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I desire to make a short report of conditions in the Franklinton Station. This is our first year in this place, and I suppose I have had, at least, an average success in my work with this church up to the beginning of August. We put over the "Centenary Drive" without credits; the stewards raised the pastor's salary and are paying it. Sunday school is splendid, and our Epworth League is fine. We also have the Junior Departments at work in our Missionary Society and Epworth League. Our Woman's Missionary Society is led by as consecrated band of Christian women as could be found, and, withal, we have found our work delightful since we came.

The need of a genuine revival was apparent, but, best of all, the people realized it. I was fortunate in securing the services of Rev. J. A. Smith, of Meridian, Miss., to assist me in this work. Brother Smith came on August 23, and stayed through the following week. His sermons were splendid discourses, calculated to provoke deep thought and stir to action. Never have I had more efficient and more sane help. He is thoroughly orthodox and a strong preacher. After hearing him twice a day for eight days, I found every sermon of the highest type. Our church was greatly strengthened, many were reclaimed, and quite a large number were converted. As to visible result, sixteen joined the church. Great crowds came, many not being able to find seats.

On Sunday, August 30, we had with us our presiding elder, Rev. Harry W. May, and Rev. Alonzo Early, our Sunday School Field Secretary. Brother Early found occasion to speak twice, while Brother May held our third quarterly conference. All the interests of our church seemed to be well up and doing nicely, for which "we thank God and take courage."

Cordially,
J. B. FULTON.

GOOD CAMP MEETING ON THE SCOTLAND CHARGE, MISSISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: Please allow me space to report our camp meeting on the Scotland charge. We began on August 21, with Dr. H. C. Morrison and wife, of Louisville, Ky., and Rev. J. A. Wells, of Oak Ridge, Miss. We had large crowds and, I believe, the best conduct about the camp I ever saw at a camp meeting. Something like 50 souls were definitely blessed at the altar during the meeting. Wells was at his best in preaching, singing and praying. Dr. Morrison is one of the greatest preachers of the South. Mrs. Morrison's sermons to the children were simply fine; older people enjoyed them as well.

Among the ministers present during the meeting were J. T. Leggett, J. L. Decell, W. B. Alsworth, Rev. Mr. Barrett, W. H. Lewis, W. W. Murray, Dr. C. W. Grafton, Dan E. Kelley, Rev. Mr. McKeithen, J. W. Thompson, C. M. Dunaway, J. D. Crymes, and Rev. Mr. Roberts, of the North Mississippi Conference. The different points represented were West Point, Moscow, Gloster, Carthage, Ora, Meridian, Wesson, Magnolia, McComb, Broohhaven, Meadville, Foxworth, and other places. We had a great meeting. We had 19 additions to our church and one to the Presbyterian. God did graciously bless the country.

I would not fail to tell about the edibles that came in during the meeting. We had more chickens when the meeting closed than we did when it began, and we had two hams untouched, and many other things. The people of the charge were so good to us. May our Heavenly Father bless them all abundantly for their kindness to us.

So, Mr. Editor, you see we have something to make us rejoice—people saved and pantry filled. Fraternally,

A LETTER FROM SISTER T. S. RANDLE.

Dear Advocate: I have just read "Help the Advocate," and a few days ago I received a letter from Dr. Luther Todd, saying, "Some day we hope to increase the General Superannuate Endowment Fund to at least $10,000,000. When that good day comes, your necessities will be amply provided for. You can greatly help to bring that day by securing life members for C. C. C." To become a life member of this holy comradeship, it is necessary for one to send as many dollars as there are years between one's present age and eighty (80). I sent one dollar and promised $10 more. How old am I?

This letter was addressed to Rev. T. S. Randle, Yoakum, Tex., with a check for $13.25 from the Treasurer of the Board of Finance of the M. E. Church, South, saying: "It is necessarily small because the present superannuate endowment fund is small, only $514,083.22, but the check is not all you will receive this year, as the Conference Board of Finance of your Conference will send you your annual allowance." Praise the Lord and thank the brethren of Louisiana! For with what you sent last year, my dear husband had a beautiful gray casket, with gray hearse and horses; he was taken to a beautiful undertaker's parlor (we had no home); beautiful flowers were provided; from there his body was taken to a beautiful new church in which he so longed to preach just once; we had a beautiful service, our pastor, Brother Hartsfield, preaching an appropriate sermon. From there, with all three of our dear children (we have five in Heaven with Papa), we took him to a beautiful cemetery and laid his tired, worn frame to rest. It is a beautiful place and, thanks to the Louisiana Conference, we bought a lot. Some day, D. V., we hope to sleep by him. We had beautiful flowers planted, and have a picture of it, but Papa dear is gone for awhile and I am so lonely. More than half of me lies in that grave.

But God being my helper, I am coming to Louisiana to spend a few months, and I want to announce myself as agent for the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and Triple C. I want to say to our many friends in Louisiana that I have not forgotten how to talk, and I am expecting to get me a much needed Bible and 10 Life Members to C. C. C., God being my helper. For six months I could not talk; I could not help but grieve. But I had a vision. I awoke to realize that the Lord had work for me or he would have sent a "double chariot" as Papa dear said he wished He would, if it were His dear will. He did not and I am going to work. I ask every one who reads these lines to pray for me, and when I come, to subscribe to one or both and remember, I am still agent for The Voice, King's Messenger, and Young Christian Worker. Yours for others,

SISTER T. S. RANDLE.

P. S. I hope to get both premiums, as I do want to read that Life of Bishop Wilson. I loved to hear him preach.

That you may rightly represent your Savior to your fellowmen, be true. For your own satisfaction in living, be true. That your friends may not be disappointed in you, be true. Put your conscience into every word you speak, and every act of your life. "Lying lips are an abomination unto the Lord." Into God's holy city at least there shall not enter any who maketh a lie. Ask your Heavenly Father daily to help you live a truthful life.—Exchange.

A wise man has well reminded us, that in any controversy, the instant we feel anger, we have already ceased striving for truth, and have begun striving for ourselves.—Carlyle.

In connection with the college, Centenary Academy is maintained, which offers regular high school work of College preparatory type.

The Fall Session will open on September 25.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

MEN NEED TO THINK.

Difficult problems are not usually settled off-hand. Even simple questions frequently have far-reaching implications which must be taken into consideration in dealing with them. Men need to think carefully and seriously when they are called upon to deal with complicated and difficult matters. Men should think for themselves, too. We oftentimes boast of our independence of action, when, as a matter of fact, we are doing simply what another man's thinking has forced us to do. It is much easier to follow the path blazed by another than it is to find our way through the forest ourselves—but in so doing we frequently take the long way to our destination; and not infrequently we take the wrong way. True and tried leaders we may sometimes follow without question—but even then we run the risk of becoming the victims of a lapse of judgment. "Prove all things—hold fast that which is good," is a safe rule in the realm of the intellect as it is in the realm of morals. When we fail to exercise the right to think for ourselves, we surrender our right to have a part in the management of affairs. It is not easy to think—"much study is a weariness of the flesh"—but it is a profitable exercise. The athlete is willing to spend weeks and months in diligent physical training in order that he may be qualified for a supreme test of endurance; many a man refuses to give one hour a day to the consideration of questions that have to do with his welfare here and hereafter. Thinking does not necessarily make a good man, but it does make an intelligent man. The man who thinks rightly, however, is likely to become good—"as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

THE STRIKE SITUATION.

In addition to the unsettled industrial condition of the world generally, due to influences arising out of the war, the people of America are forced to face a most trying situation brought about by the habit of frequent and widespread strikes. A strike seems likely to develop at any time, in any place, by many workers or by few, to enforce demands ranging all the way from higher wages to recognition of the union. We do not presume to guess what the outcome will be. Organized labor is enjoying such financial rewards and such political influence as were not dreamed of a few years ago. Only a very careless observer would be willing to say to-day that labor is at the mercy of capital. There are some who maintain that the tables have been turned, and that labor is the dominant influence in the economic and industrial world. Our own view is that the age-long struggle between the two forces is reaching its climax, and that a determined and desperate effort is being made to establish the final supremacy of the one or the other. Our hope is that out of the struggle there may come a clearer view of the fundamental relationships of these necessary factors in all economic progress that will make possible the finding of an equitable basis upon which both may work in sympathetic co-operation. There was never a time in the history of the world when a thorough understanding and a more complete application of the teachings of Christ were more needed than they are needed now. The church has a momentous mission to perform.

THE FIGHT FOR THE LEAGUE.

The ground seems to have shifted since the League of Nations was submitted to the Senate for ratification. The indications then were that there would be a strong fight against ratification; those indications were so well borne out that it has become necessary to make a hard fight for ratification. President Wilson has deemed it advisable to make an extended tour of the country in order to enlighten the people concerning the provisions of the League, with the hope that the people, in turn, would bring such pressure to bear upon the members of the Senate as to make ratification inevitable. It is impossible, as yet, to tell what effect his speeches have had. We regret that he has been willing to use such terms in condemnation of those who differ from him concerning the League as seem to us to be out of keeping with the position he occupies and the cause he advocates. The whole world is committed to the idea of the League; but there are some eminent citizens of the United States, whose intelligence and patriotism are not to be questioned, who feel that the League in its present form does not sufficiently safeguard certain principles which the nation has always regarded as essential to its welfare. We should not harshly condemn them for their attitude when they are manifestly animated by patriotic motives, no matter how much we may regret their inability to see as we see. Present indications are that the League will be ratified with certain reservations unequivocally stating the cases in which it will not be operative in the administration of our internal affairs.

SERGEANT YORK—BENEFACTOR.

Sergeant Alvin C. York's achievement on the battlefield, which made him the greatest individual hero of the war, has brought him into a prominence which is seldom reached by a simple citizen. He has received more invitations than he could accept to appear in public receptions, and he has been overwhelmed with commercial offers that would guarantee him a fortune in a short time. But he has steadfastly refused to lend himself to any movement that was merely spectacular in its nature, or that had the idea of personal gain back of it. Instead, he has resolved to devote his energies to securing for the mountain youth of his native State such educational advantages as will enable them to enjoy the benefits of intellectual and moral culture. In doing so, he has demonstrated the essentially heroic cast of his mind. It was no small matter to face the guns of the enemy and, single-handed, kill and capture more than a hundred of them; his physical courage stood the supreme test. But it is an infinitely greater thing to forego the opportunity of making a personal fortune easily and quickly in order that he might minister helpfully to those who, without his efforts, would be handicapped for life. He is a benefactor of his people.

ACCORDING TO "THE MIND THAT WAS IN CHRIST."

Menial service from others is needed at times by every human being, and he who is not willing to render this service when need arises, does not have "the mind that was in Christ." He is lacking in one of the essentials of true greatness. "Not so shall it be among you; but whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister (servant); and whosoever would be first among you shall be your servant (bondservant): even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

WHAT ARE THEY INTERESTED IN?

A recent writer in the Atlantic Monthly makes the statement that eighty per cent of the young men of America have no vital interest in the church and that for which it stands. Zion's Herald, of Boston, in commenting on the article in question quotes as follows: "Most modern American young men care little or nothing about organized religion. * * * Religion as a real motive power, it is safe to say, is unknown to at least eighty per cent of them. Spirituality as presented by the churches has impressed them as not mattering much. With a majority of them, church-going is a thing done almost solely for family reasons, or, in smaller places, for social reasons." We have no means of knowing how accurate this statement is. But it is made by a man who was a chaplain at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station and who had a fine opportunity to study young men representing all classes of our population. Whether his figures are strictly accurate or not, the subject he discusses is one which should give us serious concern. If the great majority of our young men are not interested in the church and the things it stands for, what are they interested in? Are we soon to find that the affairs of our nation, industrial, economic, social, political, are being administered by men who have not felt the influence of the church and who are unaffected by the moral principles for which it stands? If so, what will be the result? In our evangelistic campaign, which is already under way, we shall need to give special attention to the young people in our communities. We must present Christianity as a program of life that is in keeping with the requirements of virile young manhood. Sensational methods and a display of lachrymose emotionalism will not produce the desired result. A sane presentation of the meaning of the gospel, re-enforced by the use of consecrated common sense in dealing with young life, and a tremendous moral earnestness that is not discounted by inconsistent living, will be likely to command the attention of young men, who are usually fair-minded enough to consider seriously a reasonable proposition. In a very real sense, the church is being put to a severe test to-day; shall it meet that test successfully?

STANLEY ON PRAYER.

By Wm. C. Allen.

O Thou that hearest prayer,
Unto Thee shall all flesh come.
Psalms 65:2.

But if I lowly fall,
And thus in faith I call:
"Through Christ, O Lord, I pray Thee give to me
Not what I would, hut what seems best to Thee
Of life, of health, of service and of strength,
Until to Thy full joy I come at length."
My prayer shall then avail,
The blessing shall not fail.

—Chas. F. Richardson.

Sir Henry M. Stanley, the great African explorer, was one of the hardest-headed men of his generation. Yet his biography is not only one of the most fascinating books, but reveals a remarkably strong religious side to his tremendously vigorous personality. With him, as with so many of the world's strong men, a firm, yet almost child-like, faith in God was combined with a prayerful heart, amidst his extraordinary adventures and achievements in the wilds of Africa. Let us select a very few of his comments on the subject of prayer.

"Have I not joined the scoffers and smiled in contempt at such puerile ideas, and said, 'Prayers were well enough when we were children; but not now when I have lived so long without the sign of a miracle?' And yet—prayer has saved me."

"When my own people have willfully misbehaved, after repeated warnings, I have prayed for that patience which would enable me to regard their crimes with mercy, and that my memory of their gross wickedness should be dulled; and after the prayer it has appeared to me that their crimes had lost the atrocity that I had previously detected in them."

"In all my expeditions, prayer made me stronger, morally and mentally, than any of my non-praying companions."

Speaking of a desperate situation he writes: "And thus that night was passed in prayer, until the tired body could pray no more. But the next dawn, a few minutes after the march began, my people were restored to me, with food sufficient to save the perishing souls at the camp."

"I have evidence, satisfactory to myself, that prayers are granted. By prayer, the road sought for has become visible, and the danger immediately lessened, not once or twice or thrice, but repeatedly, until the cold, unbelieving heart was impressed."

"I have repeated the Lord's prayer a countless number of times; but I must confess my thoughts have often wandered from the purport of the words. But when I have prayed for light to guide my followers wisely, through perils which beset them, a ray of light has come upon the perplexed mind, and a clear road to deliverance has been pointed out."

These experiences of Stanley are not remarkable. Probably the truly wonderful thing about it is that he so openly confesses his faith in God and lays bare his inmost convictions and experiences. Many great men have confessed, as Stanley has, that prayer was to them a supreme source of confidence and strength. But the vast majority of us are probably all too timid about telling of victories won by intercession at the Throne where the greatest men have deigned to sue for mercy and help.

Finally, we can gather much Christian instruction from this short sentence of our writer: "When I have been earnest, I have been answered." Is it not true that the incense of the ardent and Spirit-directed prayer ascends to God?

RELIGIOUS WORK OF THE ARMY Y. M. C. A.

By John S. Chadwick.

Perhaps there are yet many ministers and active lay members of the churches in this country who believe that the program of the Young Men's Christian Association in the Army and Navy was largely a recreational one—that the "Y" was there to entertain and to help in the making of a better fighting machine. Our big purpose of the Army Y. M. C. A. was to help win the war and to make of the boys better fighting men, and every service rendered had in mind that purpose as well as the welfare of the men as individuals.

There are hundreds of officers, from General Pershing on down the line, who bear witness to the fact that the "Y" did, in no small measure, help to bring victory—and many real Americans were, in good faith and through ignorance, used to aid enemy propaganda in attacks on an organization that, with its many acknowledged mistakes, was telling as one of the great agencies in maintaining the fighting spirit of the men. It was not protests against mistakes that were back of every attack on the "Y"—it was its successes that were responsible for attacks from many quarters. And those under cover oftentimes used honest and patriotic American citizens in working their destructive purposes.

But even many who defended the "Y" were concerned at what appeared to be an over emphasis on sports and amusements and a lack of emphasis on religious work. This was not really the case. Had you thought that in the daily papers of the country, sports and amusements have a larger place than does the regular work of the churches? This does not mean that the churches have gone out of business, or even that the newspaper men are not friendly to the church. Whatever we may think about it, the fact is that the newspaper man believes that there is more of news value in a baseball game, a boxing bout or a golf tournament than there is in a prayer meeting or an ordinary church service.

Now in the newspaper publicity given the Army Y. M. C. A., it was to be expected that sports and amusements be given the larger place—it was just as was being done at home when the news copy was being prepared; sports and amusements were given larger space and bigger headlines than the items concerning church work.

The average Religious Work Secretary, with a job at least as big as any he had ever had, with a larger number of religious services than he had in the pastorate and with more men being won for the Christian life than ever before he had been able to reach, just took it for granted that the people back home knew that the religious work was being done. Almost too late he awoke to the fact that many of those back home did not know these things and that there were serious doubts and questionings.

Before me is the report of the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. for the Southeastern Department for the two years from July 1, 1917, to July 1, 1919. This report covers the activities of the "Y" in the camps in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee; hence it will be seen that it includes only a part of the army trained for service overseas.

During those two years the aggregate attendance at "Y" Buildings was 82,349,775; these men used, free of charge, more than 230,000,000 sheets of paper and envelopes and the "Y" workers handled for them more than 67,000,000 pieces of mail. The number of men attending lectures reached a total of 2,738,103; the number of books circulated, 1,456,534; the number in attendance on entertainments, 8,046,183; on motion picture shows, 10,651,489; and the number participating in physical activities, 10,962,612.

Now, much of this would not be counted religious work, and the "Y" workers did not regard it as such, but all was done by an organization that served the men of the army in the name of Christ. And, incidentally, I would call your attention to the fact that all of this service mentioned was without one penny of cost to the men of the Army and Navy, and these figures represent some of the activities of but one section of the Army Y. M. C. A.—just one Military Department in the homeland. When you hear the question asked, "What did they do with all the money we gave?" make some estimate of what all this service cost.

But of the work strictly religious: In the camps of the Southeastern Department during the two years July 1, 1917, to July 1, 1919, there were held 34,657 religious services, and, in addition to this number of public services, there were 31,933 sessions of Bible Classes, either in regular sessions of Sunday schools or week-day Bible study. The total attendance on religious services was 6,930,184, and on Bible classes, 777,510, a grand total of 7,707,694.

It will be noted that this total is but little short of the total attendance on entertainments and practically seventy-five per cent of the number attending free motion picture shows—and the movies were on several nights of each week. Could we make as good showing in our home communities, where church work is well organized and church attendance is drawn from all ages of men, women, and children? That alone should answer the critics of the religious work of the Army Y. M. C. A.

But there are some other figures. Of the "Y" men, two hundred were ministers, representing practically all of the Protestant churches of the country. Not all of these were Religious Work Secretaries, but that number represents the ministerial force in the Southeastern Department. These men, together with the lay workers, reported 485,150 visits to the sick, 637,717 copies of the Scriptures given to the soldiers and sailors, 361,331 personal Christian interviews, 131,011 signers of the War Roll and 84,091 Christian decisions.

There were many active Christian laymen in the "Y" work who had a large part in securing the results named, just as there are active laymen in the churches at home. But as we do at home, let us figure results on the basis of the number of ministers at work. Two hundred ministers, 84,000 conversions within two years. Does that compare favorably with the work at home?

The writer knows that overseas there were not so many favorable opportunities for public religious services as in the home camps. The men were busier with the duties incident to intensive military training, they were more often on the move, and the conditions at the front were such that the man who was there to serve their religious needs found his chief opportunity in personal interviews and in ministry to the physical needs of the men.

Whatever the critics may say about the "Y" men not being at the front, the fact is that nearly a score were killed, more than one hundred and twenty wounded, and many others came back broken in health. And keep in mind, too, that these were men who were not under compulsion to go into the army. After the first few months of war, no man was accepted for "Y" service who was subject to draft.

And it must also be taken into account that the religious work overseas was done in an atmosphere not always friendly to Protestanism. And the forces working against Protestant organization were both in the army and out of it. Men had to move cautiously and sometimes, perhaps, there was over-caution in the mater of emphasis of truths for which Protestantism stands.

All of us to-day can see how the work might have been better done, but all cannot yet see how well that work was done when we take into account the difficulties and the enemy influences at work in our army and here at home.

Mistakes were magnified, every complaint was given publicity, and the men were encouraged to tell their grievances. Many honest men of the army were used, unwittingly sometimes, to repeat what they had heard concerning the mistakes and failures of the "Y." The writer has been out of the "Y" service for more than seven months; he never had the chance to go overseas, and all of his work was here at home. But he still knows that no like period of his ministry of twenty-five years has counted more for the Kingdom and for the faith of Protestantism than those months in army "Y" service. He never had a better chance for distinctively religious work.

GOING SOME!

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

The father was at the wheel, and the car—I mean the Ford—was going at a speed of thirty miles, when the little five-year-old turned to me and said, "Grandfather, ain't we going some?" In pursuance of an invitation to be present at a marriage in Crawford St. Church, Vicksburg, Wednesday, 3d inst., I laid aside my georgic garb and hied me to the city of my friends. Of course the local reporter soon announced my presence, and then the 'phone began: "How long will you be in the city?" "Till to-morrow, 7:30 p. m." "Well, can't you baptize my baby?" "Fix the hour," and so it happened I had three babies on my hands; and then in the early morning there came the request that I go into the country eight miles to attend a funeral in the home of one of my boyhood friends, which, of course, could not be denied. So, between 6 p. m., Wednesday, and 6 p. m., Thursday—just 24 hours—I had baptized three babies, attended a funeral, and officiated at a beautiful church wedding; now am I not at liberty to quote the boy, "Wasn't grandfather going some?" Why, I challenge Sam Steel to beat that record. By the way, I read his little note of flattery in the New Orleans Advocate of yesterday; but Sam, old fellow, you don't know how many of these things have gone to Botany Bay, as Bishop Galloway used to put it when in Carley's place, and of course one who has written as much as the Doctor knows how it takes the starch out not to see his effusions out in the types. Next issue, of course!

On my return trip, I ran down to Ellisville to see the little mother who is making her home in that place, and spent 48 hours with her in the hospitable family of Mr. W. S. Pettis. Just across the street I found delightful company in the association of Brother L. Carley, who has fixed himself with surroundings as "snug as a bug in a rug" for his old age, which, however, doesn't seem very near at hand. That promising fall garden (by the way, the best that I have seen this season) doesn't indicate that his "natural force has abated." It was indeed a pleasure to hear expressions of the great esteem in which he is held by all in the little city; and the lecture given to his Bible class in the Sunday school proclaimed him a strong helper to the pastor. Well, I said if I could be bishop for a little while I'd appoint L. Carley to Ellisville and put Howse on a big district or other work where he could spread himself. (Now, Mr. Editor, I'm responsible for this paragraph, and don't you draw that blue pencil through it). To proclaim a man with the strength, physical, mental, and moral, like L. Carley a worn-out man," is a travesty on words. Well, the demand, we are told, is for a gospel of legs in this later day. That explains.

Sunday was a high day with this veteran (?), preaching in Ellisville at 11 a. m., and at Galloway Memorial, Jackson, at 8 p. m., and if the messages were not helpful, those people needn't have said so. I was disappointed at appearances down the G. & S. I. R. R.; instead of flourishing farms or great herds of cattle grazing upon these cut-over lands, there was not the evidence of thrift of ten years ago; paint would help even the railroad stations. The wet season had left its blight upon the crops.

By 12 o'clock, noon, I was back on the old farm, astride of old Charley, inspecting what the sons of Ham had done, or had not done, in my absence, and lo, I found they had caught the contagion of Congress and other great bodies—marking time. At least, that's what I heard a politician say of Congress while on my journey. The Negrophilist may find much in him to admire, but it will take more than two generations of freedom to teach him the lessons of frugality and thrift. "A little more slumber, a little more sleep, a little more folding of the hands to sleep," seems to be the acme of his conceptions of freedom; and to beg he is not ashamed. From Sagamore Hill, Mr. Roosevelt could sing their virtues, but if he had owned and operated a Delta plantation he would have found greater virtue in his Big Stick. Anyhow, I'm back from my scamperings, as Sam Steel calls it, making the record of travel of more than 500 miles by train and auto, having baptized 3 babies, married a couple, officiated at a funeral and preached twice on Sunday; and I'll leave it to Sam to say if that wasn't "going some" for a "worn-out man."

Well, the fields of cotton are white to harvest, the ripening corn is rustling on the stalk, the cotton gins are humming, chinquapins and muscadines are getting ripe, the squirrels are barking on the limbs, the bob-whites are just waiting for the season to open, sweet potatoes are coming in, 'possums are fat, the hens have called off the summer strike, and everything's lovely on the old plantation. Come out, Henry, and bring Sam Steel with you; I promise no watermelons nor pumpkin pies, as these crops were rained out. Good-bye; again, good-bye, or this thing will get like Tennyson's brook "on and on forever." But hear the conclusion of the whole matter: "Ain't we been going some?"

P. S.—Lest I forget in my boasting, I would express my gratitude to Brothers N. B. Harmon and C. W. Crisler for all courtesies; Harmon for giving me right of way among the old friends, and Crisler for letting me preach in that big, fine church. "Everybody says they are both all right."

A LEAGUE OF BIBLE SOCIETIES.

By Frank A. Mann.
General Secretary, American Bible Society.

If the time has come for nations to league themselves together to secure universal peace, and for churches, widely differing in many respects, and as far separated as Asia Minor and America, to confer on matters of faith and order, is it not time for the Bible Societies of the world to unite in mapping out a world program of translation, supply, and distribution? For, after all, they believe that peace must come through the acceptance of the great Biblical precepts, and certainly Christian faith and order has no higher authority than the Sacred Scriptures. The times are alive with new ideals, new plans, new movements, and there is urgent need that these shall all be influenced and shaped by the message of the Bible.

All of this was fundamentally in the minds of the managers of the American Bible Society when they recently proposed to their older sister, the British and Foreign Bible Society, an association of the national Bible Societies of the world. There had always been co-operation, but it has not completely prevented duplication. There has always been common counsel on international matters, but it has never resulted in a completely unified program. The time has come for some organization of these societies which have a world outlook, in order that there may be more complete and efficient prosecution of the work of world Bible supply.

There are a number of important matters which can be dealt with adequately only as the societies take joint action. There is, first of all, the question of the fields in which the various societies shall prosecute their work. It is obvious that in an undertaking of this character, duplication should be avoided. In large fields, such as China or India, there may be plenty of room for several societies to operate, in which case the territory might be so subdivided that large and easily accessible centers may not be overdeveloped while distant and difficult places are poorly covered or neglected altogether. A united study must be made of the entire world and a program mapped out indicating the most needy fields and the relative urgency of the work in each. The recent war, which has changed the map of all Europe, has also created many problems in regard to Bible supply. In the Near East, for example, hardly a Bible has been printed in the last four years. The whole work of Bible supply must be rehabilitated there. In other places the need may be as great. No one society can determine the wisest policy for adjusting the Bible program to the new world order.

In the second place, there is a great need of joint action in the matter of the translation and revision of the Scriptures. The Bible has been printed and circulated in about 650 languages and dialects, but the whole Bible has never been translated into each of these languages. Should it be? If not, why not? What new people are there in distant and isolated places who have never had any part of the Scriptures printed in their peculiar dialect? Who will search out and provide for these, unless there is some great joint effort? It must be remembered that the missionaries have reduced some of these dialects to writing as a part of their pioneer work, and the Bible is the first book that these tribes have ever known in their printed language. Sometimes, under these circumstances, the work is quickly and perhaps crudely done. There has been development in these tribal languages which may now call for revision of the original translation. Who knows just where revision is required? Even in some of the major languages, translations were hurriedly done in order that the Christian propaganda might be promoted without delay, and perhaps revision is needed even there. Also, in the course of the years, languages are modified, and even in the normal processes of things revisions are required. Who can find an answer to all these questions unless there is joint action of the great societies concerned?

In the third place, a determination must be made of the various agencies to be employed in the distribution of the Scriptures. Many methods and devices have been set up with a view to circulating the Scriptures to the farthest ends of the earth. Have these been adequate? Have they always been wise? May it not be possible to discover new and more effective methods? Uniform policies should be established in the use of colporteurs, in the mapping out of their fields, in their methods of handling business, in the matter of their remuneration. Much may yet be learned from the modern methods of salesmanship which will be readily applicable to the Bible program. Joint consideration is imperative if the most effective and far-reaching policies are to be discovered and put into operation.

In the fourth place, there should be considered the relations to governments in undeveloped countries. Would there not be greater opportunity for the Bible Societies in association to press forward into new territory, rather than to attempt separately and independently to establish individual relations with governments in undeveloped areas?

In the fifth place, could not there be presented a joint appeal to the whole Christian world for the support of Bible supply and distribution, if the societies could act in unison? Would not such an appeal make stronger impression than at present upon Christian men and women everywhere? And would not the people of non-Christian lands, among whom Christian propaganda is most largely promoted, be greatly influenced by the joint action of these several united bodies?

The American Bible Society is firmly convinced that the hour has struck when there should be concerted action in all of these matters. The churches in America are in the grip of a great movement looking to a consolidation of all the Protestant missionary movements in this country. Its vision is world-wide. Its momentum is gathering force daily. With the vision, purpose, and spirit of this movement, the American Bible Society is in most cordial sympathy.

Already surveys are being laid out to attempt to discover the needs of continents and nations, and these surveys call for knowledge concerning the need for the Holy Scriptures throughout the world. When these surveys are completed, the Society then stands face to face with the question involved in supplying these needs, questions of new versions and revisions, greatly increased production and widespread distribution. It prefers not to undertake this alone, and for this reason it has invited the joint action of the other great Bible Societies of the world. By associated action in each line more might be accomplished, or a multitude of new friends might be raised up in every land who will be awake to the spiritual needs of the world and rejoice to participate in this service.

WELCOME TO THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

In behalf of the Methodists of Ruston, I desire to welcome in advance, Bishop Kilgo and the members of the Louisiana Conference, both preachers and lay delegates.

The Ruston church was organized in January, 1885, soon after the birth of the town, and entertained a session of the Conference two years thereafter, January, 1887. Bishop W. W. Duncan presided. There were then eighty clerical members of the Conference in full connection. Only thirteen of these are members to-day, and of these only five are on the effective list. Six others who are now active members were then on trial in the Conference.

For the second time, Ruston entertained the Conference in December, 1896, Bishop E. R. Hendrix presiding. Again the Conference convened here in the recently erected new church, December, 1907, Bishop Seth Ward presiding.

After a lapse of twelve years, the Conference will meet in Ruston for the fourth time. In the meantime, the church has been enlarged by the construction of an annex.

We are looking forward to the occasion of your coming with keen satisfaction, and trust that copious showers of blessings will descend upon us.

For the first time in our history the names of a number of women will be called on our roll of lay delegates, to whom I extend most cordial welcome.

The Conference will take special interest in visiting the Orphanage plant, which has been constructed since it met here, in inspecting the splendid work being done there, and also the plans for its great enlargement in the near future.

Any information or suggestions that will be of help in planning for the comfort and convenience of our guests will be appreciated.

"WORK DAY" FOR THE ORPHANAGE.

For several years it has been the custom of the people in Louisiana, and in most of the States of the South, to observe a designated day as "Work Day," for the Orphanage. The plan is simply that every individual, man, woman and child, give a sum equal to a day's wages to the Orphanage. If working already, contribute the regular wage; if unemployed, secure work for the day and give the earnings. It has been estimated that if all our Methodist people were to do this, we would secure enough to care for the Orphanage the entire year without the necessity of further appeal for help. Although all do not observe the day, the returns from this effort have been most gratifying.

The usual custom is to select the second Saturday in October. Sunday after "Work Day," is "Harvest Day," when collections in all the churches and Sunday schools are taken for the Orphanage. Then the earnings from "Work Day" are paid in, and such contributions to the work as may be made. The money is then sent by the various treasurers to the Orphanage.

This year, Saturday, October 11, is "Work Day," followed by "Harvest Day," on Sunday, the 12th. It is hoped that every Sunday school and church in the State will observe these days and the returns will be greater than ever before.

We depend on the returns from this effort to carry us through the expensive winter months. Everybody knows how terribly expensive it is to live. The high cost of clothing, shoes, groceries, fuel, school material, in fact everything necessary to life and the caring for children, makes the expenses of running our institution practically double that of normal times. Then we are under the necessity of doing part of our teaching in our own building this year, and have three competent teachers employed. Eighty of our children attend school at home, twenty-five go to the city high school, and ten to the Industrial. In order to carry on this most important work we must depend on our people for the necessary means. "Work Day" and the collections on Sunday, is our only chance.

We therfore urge that every Sunday school in the State and every church in the Conference make their plans now to observe this occasion and do their utmost for our cause. Appreciating all the interest and help of the past, and looking to the future with the utmost confidence, I am,

Faithfully,
ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent, Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

ATTENTION, PRESIDING ELDERS AND PASTORS.

Under God, the Centenary movement has been a great success—so far. The work ahead is just as important, even more important, than the work already done.

Please see that every effort is made to collect, before the Annual Conference, all Centenary pledges due.

Each pastor should learn from the local church Centenary treasurer what amount has been collected on the Centenary pledges. This does not include what is paid by Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues. Those items should be reported on the Sunday school and League pages form under the item "Other purposes." The pastor should write "Centenary" and give amount paid to date on pledges, thus making a distinct report of the Centenary money. This is important, as each Conference Journal will carry an extra column showing what has been paid on Centenary pledges, and if it is not distinctly reported, as outlined above, an injustice will be done to the charge in the record.

Sincerely yours,
JNO. E. EDGERTON,
Centenary Treasurer.

THREE KINDS OF CHURCH MEMBERS.

Some one has remarked that there are three kinds of church members, besides the right kind. And he describes them as "the dead," "the injured" and the "missing." Every pastor finds among his membership all three kinds. The "dead" ones are just dead—that's all. Their names are on the roll—and they have a name to live—but they are dead. The problem of every conscientious pastor is what to do with them. Some of our churches have what they call "dropped lists" for the benefit of these cases of suspended animation. Whether this be the proper course or not, for the present we must leave their names in this ecclesiastical Limbo to wait identification in the case of the resurrection of the persons to whom they belong. They are "dead!"

Ordinarily the "injured" class is much larger than the "dead." In some way they have received a mortal wound. Something the pastor said "hurt" them; or they were not "made enough of" when they attended the meetings; or they have been "slighted" by some members of the Aid Society or the deacons "insulted" them by insisting that they contribute for the support of the church; or they suffered some sort of "undoing" in some one of the numerous "collisions" which seem to be unavoidable in church life. And so they stay away from all the services and spend all their time nursing their wounds—usually making them worse all the time by the wrong kind of treatment. They are a difficult class to "get at." Usually they hold the whole situation at arm's length, and positively refuse to have their "injuries" interfered with.

Then there is the "missing" class! How much perplexity and discouragement they cause the pastor! He goes over his church roll, and his heart leaps for joy and a smile comes upon his face, as he counts the names of the "faithful few." As for the "dead," he can do nothing more for them than pray; sympathetically he runs over the entire list of the "injured" ones and resolves that he is going to do his utmost to heal every wound. But what can he do for the missing ones? He has every reason to believe they are alive and in the best of health. He knows they are capable and might be useful. But invariably when he counts on their presence and help they "turn up missing." May God save our churches, as much so as possible, from these three kinds of undesirable members.—Baptist Witness.

It is dangerous to abandon one's self to the luxury of grief; it deprives one of courage, and even of the wish for recovery.—Amiel.

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

READ THE FOLLOWING PROPOSITION.

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a Teacher's Bible if you will send us 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate by November 10. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather and has a concordance and all the usual helps in a Teacher's Bible; it is printed with large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help you persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 each will earn the Bible.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $2.00 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, but secure five, we will give you a copy of "Alpheus W. Wilson—A Prince in Israel," by Rev. Carlton D. Harris. This book contains the life and labors of the late Bishop Wilson. It is bound in cloth and has 210 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. We are about to lose nearly 1000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will be greatly helped.

This offer will hold good until November 1, after which date it will be withdrawn.

LESSONS FROM THE LIFE OF THE LATE REV. H. P. LEWIS.

By Rev. L. Carley.

Eleven days after I had celebrated my twentieth birthday, namely, April 1, 1869, I saw the late Rev. H. P. Lewis for the first time. He was the presiding elder of the Paulding District of the Mississippi Conference and had come to Columbia, Miss., to hold the second quarterly conference of the Columbia circuit for that year. I had just emerged from a mental and moral struggle the like of which I have not experienced since. Questions of doctrine and duty had agitated me for more than two years. Reared in a community where Calvinism was the dominant faith, I had easily accepted its tenets as Scriptural and unquestionable. Early in my youth I had felt that my vocation in life was to be that of a preacher. This amounted to a conviction that never left me as I grew older. As far as my capacity allowed, I knew what St. Paul meant when he wrote to the Corinthians that "necessity is laid upon me; for woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." The struggle with me was over. From being a Presbyterian Calvinist I had become an Arminian Methodist and had surrendered to the call to preach.

On the occasion referred to, after the usual examination, I was voted license to preach. Brother Lewis was kind and considerate. He presented my name to the Mississippi Conference for admission on trial the following December and was my presiding elder in 1870, the first year of my itinerant ministry. Consequently, I have always felt close to him and have felt an interest in the events of his life. I think I have read everything he ever wrote for the public and from association with him I have known a good deal about his career. As I have been requested to do so, I desire to present some thoughts suggested by his life.

1. A good ancestry is a valuable asset in any man's life.

It is true that Christians have always been those "who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." Nevertheless, a long line of honorable parentage is not without beneficial results. Lives thus produced are more easily influenced by divine grace than those that come from irreligious and dishonorable ancestors. And they are capable of higher attainments in the field of ethics and of other spiritual experiences. Brother Lewis was the fortunate beneficiary of such a favoring providence.

2. A divine call to the ministry is more distinctly heard and more easily responded to in a Christian home than anywhere else.

Brother Lewis was born and reared in a decidedly religious home. Everything in that home was conducive to the development of Christian character and responsiveness to the leadings of the Holy Spirit. This fact is strikingly illustrated in the remark of his young friend who was converted at the same time he was. On being asked how he was getting along religiously he replied: "Mighty bad. If I had such parents as you have, I could be religious." Brother Lewis' call to the ministry was unmistakable and such was his religious environment that in after years he was able to say as the Apostle did: "Straitway I conferred not with flesh and blood." Fortunate are those who hear God's call to this important vocation through the pure air of a Christian home. Often it is otherwise, and sometimes there are fatal delays in responding to the voice of the Divine Spirit

3. The value of good religious books in the home is beyond calculation.

The home of Brother Lewis' boyhood was not provided with many books, but the few it had were the best. The Bible, Clarke's Commentary, Fletcher's Checks, etc., enlightened the mind and molded Christian character. The lucidity and unmistakable Arminianism of Brother Lewis' preaching in after years were no doubt traceable, in some degree at least, to these valuable books. Leaving out the Bible, which is indispensable for all time, the books referred to were the best for Methodists of that day. If there are better books to-day, they should be found in every Methodist home. The value of other books and other forms of literature is not to be decried, but every home should be supplied with the best kinds of religious literature. Not the least in importance is the church paper. No Methodist home should be regarded as well furnished, or even half furnished, without some representative of the Christian Advocate family making thereto its weekly visits.

4. Hardships in the preacher's life are not without rich and enduring compensations. (1) They serve to keep him humble. God can not use the man who is puffed up with worldly pride. Paul told Timothy that a bishop was not to be "a novice, lest being puffed up, he fall into the condemnation of the devil." (2) They serve to keep him in close touch with God. Nothing in the preacher's life is more important than this. Most people, others as well as preachers, need this kind of discipline. David said: "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now I observe thy word." The great Apostle knew the place of afflictions in the development of Christian character. Hear him: "Now I rejoice in my sufferings for your sake, and fill up on my part that which is lacking of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church." He told Timothy to "suffer hardship with the gospel according to the power of God." (3) Even that particular form of hardship that grows out of small and inadequate salaries serves to keep him at the post of duty. Ordinarily, no matter what the temptation may be to turn aside from his sacred calling, there is nothing for him to do but to keep on. Brother Lewis knew and felt keenly the pressure of this kind of hardship. Compensation was awarded him in a consciousness of duty well performed and in other fruits of the Spirit, such as "love, joy, peace," etc. He had "a conscience void of offense toward God and men always."

Let no one regard the fact just noticed as a justifiable reason for providing the pastor with a small and inadequate salary. It might be well for those who are thus minded to ponder what the Savior said about "occasions of stumbling." He said to the disciples: "It is impossible but that occasions of stumbling should come; but woe unto him through whom they come." So it is impossible but that small salaries will sometimes be unjustifiably assessed, but if his voice could be heard, is it not likely that he would say woe unto the board of stewards through whom they "come?"

5. The success of the ministry of any church is largely dependent upon the adaptation of the pastors' wives to their husbands' calling.

Whether 1 Tim. 3:11, "Women in like manner must be grave, not slanderers, temperate, faithful in all things," applies to the ministry or not, it remains true that pastors' wives should measure up to the standard therein set forth. Many a preacher has been handicapped through life by the unfortunate marriage of a woman unsuited to her husband's calling. On the other hand, thousands have been successful beyond their apparent ability to succeed by the intelligence and godly consecration of their wives. If any of the pastors whom it has been my privilege to know had ideal preachers' wives, Brother Lewis most assuredly belonged to that number. Her children rise up and call her blessed. Whatever rewards her husband has entered upon in the heavenly world are doubtless shared by her who adorned, and beautified his home for so many eventful years.

The life of this good man furnishes many other lessons that might be profitably pondered by us, but these will suffice. What has been said, and much more, finds emphasis in the useful lives of his five preacher sons and devoted daughters whose resplendent characters adorn the ministry and membership of our beloved Methodism in Mississippi. The present generation of preachers, looking back upon the godly and heroic lives of such men as Brother Lewis, may well say that they have labored and we have entered into their labor.

SOME RANDOM NOTES.

By E. N. Evans.

Some people have more religion than sense, and some have more intelligence than religion; neither are teachable, principally because they are satisfied with themselves as they are—the one without sense and the other without religion.

If God were made by our conceptions of him, he would be as bad as David's man—"fearfully and wonderfully made."

The difference between faith and superstition is chiefly in the fact that faith has, and must have, a correspondent reality that falls within the range of our senses, while superstition, having no such correspondent, seeks not light or knowledge. God is known by the manifestations he makes of himself to man through the material, through the intellect and through the Spirit.

The Incarnation materialized the spiritual, and the Transfiguration spiritualized the material. The Coronation crowns the glory of his power.

When Jesus came in the flesh, the Jews knew him not; and when he now comes in the Spirit, the church is almost as blind. "He came unto his own and his own received him not." He is in the world to-day, and not many people know it. Waiting for him to come? Better look about you and see the ten thousand tokens of his presence. He is in the hearts of his people. "The Kingdom of God cometh not by observation, but is in you."

Isn't it about time the church was going out of the immigration business and getting about the allotted task of making a new earth and a new heaven? Straighten out this old world and make it fit for Him to dwell in, and behold he is here. And, moreover, the work makes men of the workers—men fit to dwell with him.

Many of the things for which we devoutly pray are not in the stars above, but are to be dug from the earth on which we walk with unworthy feet. The prayer for daily bread should always be accompanied by a mule and a plow. Works are a mighty bulwark to faith.

Might we not pray for a more intelligent faith, devotion and service? Might we not learn to be good for something? Jesus wants a man under the other end of the yoke. We really don't do much, but it helps us to try. Don't lie down on your partner.

It is as hard to believe in the humanity of Jesus as it is to believe in the divinity of the son of Joseph and Mary. "We know from whence he is," but they didn't. Could God come in human form? Can God get inside of man?" "I am in the Father and the Father in me." "I will be in you." "I am the vine, ye are the branches."

WHY I AM NOT A BAPTIST.

THE MINISTER'S DAY AT HOME.

By Mrs. Julia M. Ten Broeck.

It is a very unusual occurrence for the minister to have any time at home, but once in a while he does take a day off. He has some new books and has been trying for a week to get a chance to read them. He has fingered them lovingly and read a page here and there, standing all the time that he did so as a tacit apology for spending the time or too fool himself into thinking that he is going right along. Now that he is to have a day at home he hopes to read at least two books and enjoy them.

The minister's wife is pleased that her husband is to have an easy day. She knows that he needs the rest. Besides she has been planning for some time to have three bedsteads changed and this will be just the right time to have it done. She gets the dear man right at it. Nothing like beginning bright and early with a piece of work like that. The work proves to be a bit heavy and the parts do not assemble themselves readily. The minister waxes warm and discards his coat. By the time the second bedstead has found itself he removes his collar. Now a minister without a collar is always a fearsome spectacle, to his wife at least. She is convinced that it is positively wicked of him so to present himself. She knows that it is hard to sift ashes, see what makes the furnace act so contrary, or make a garden, and always look as though one were about to pronounce a benediction; still she thinks it should be done. She tells her husband that he does not look like a minister. He retorts that he would look more like one if he were allowed to sit down in his study in peace. The minister's wife has tact, but she does not always use it. She says that he must uphold the dignity of his office. The minister replies that it is about all that he can do to uphold the foot of the bed, and will she please put in the castor and postpone her discourse on the proprieties of dress until a later time.

When the later time arrives he escapes to the study and takes from the shelf the treasured volume. It is interesting, too interesting to be read alone. Intellectually the minister is a lonely man. In the average church there are few men who can in any way share their pastor's literary pleasures. The hard wear and grind of business leaves them little time to read of the Shepherd Kings. They cannot feel an interest in the vagaries of Henry the Eighth. Night finds them too tired to do anything but look over the evening paper. But the minister must have some one to share his enjoyment and interest. He seeks for his wife, and finds her as usual, in the kitchen. Now a discourse on the admission of laymen to the Annual Conference is very interesting to any one in the itinerancy, and copious extracts from the book on the subject both exciting and helpful, and everything goes very well if the minister's wife is ironing, or looking over beet greens, or doing anything which requires no thought whatever, but its effect is bad on cookies and positively deadly on layer cake. It is disconcerting, too, to be followed from kitchen to cellar and cellar to backsteps, and the meatman is likely to get by when he should have been bailed and stopped, and the child running around under foot is likely to take advantage of its mother's preoccupation and lay hands on something it should not have, and more or less brain fag is usually experienced by the audience. There are days when the tired and harassed wife loses her patience and declares she cannot listen to a dissertation on the religion of Buddha; that her husband need not take the trouble to show in what way it is wrong; she will take his word for it; she cares not a rap whether his followers call him the essence of goodness or the essence of peppermint. She resents her husband's very frank intimation that his reading will be good for her brains. She expresses a doubt as to whether she has any brains, and is doubtful if they would be of any use to her if she had. What she needs, she says, is some one to tell her how to make Johnny a new suit out of his father's old trousers, and the best way to compass a new high pair of shoes for the critical Jenny. The outbreaks are the exception, however. On this particular day the wife listens patiently, and the minister goes back to his study happy in the thought that he has discovered a fallacy of the author's and set the whole matter right, and at the same time, stimulated his wife's rusty mind. He settles himself comfortably in his easy chair and enjoys life until he hears the doorbell ring, and the bore presents herself.

Now the minister loves folks, else he could not hold his sacred office, but he has met a few bores in his time, and has learned that the female of the species is more deadly than the male. But he receives his caller kindly and makes sure that they both have comfortable chairs, for he knows the session will be a long one. His caller has come, as he soon learns, to persuade him to advise her to leave her second husband. She begins a recitation of the man's enormities which leads her to dwell on the virtues of his predecessor, the happiness of their married life, the occasion of their meeting, his purchase of a farm, his illness, and finally his lamentable end. Sandwiched in between these interesting details are sundry references to the relatives of the deceased, and considerable time is given to a description of a carbuncle which at one time clouded the life of her one-time mother-in-law. By the time the narrative has returned to the second husband the minister finds his judgment growing lenient. He will not be trapped into advising a separation. He admits that the ungodly husband merits punishment, but privately feels that he is getting it. The disappointed visitor rises and proceeds to the hall, but turns as she grasps the doorhandle and rehearses the whole matter over again, until a providential call to the telephone releases the weary parson.

An entirely different problem presents itself when next the minister is summoned from his study. A young couple desire to be married. Time was when such an announcement was pleasing to the good man. He performed the ceremony with alacrity, enjoying the stately phrases of the ritual as they rolled so easily from his tongue, and giving no more thought to the future than did the young people themselves. But long years spent in pastoral work have sobered the minister. He has seen many a couple brought up in the bosom of the church lost to it forever as the cares of life settle down on them. He has listened to many a story from a young but heartsick wife. He thinks of the last bride who stood before him, the eighteen-year-old girl who rode to the door on a motorcycle and who chewed gum all through the ceremony. He wishes all weddings were held in a church and that the sanctity of the building and the pomp of the ceremony might convince all spectators that matrimony is not by any to be entered into unadvisedly. But what can he do? There stands the happy and self-confident young man. He has the license, he has the girl, he has the nerve. The minister reads the ceremony impressively and adds a fervent prayer for the spiritual well-being of the young adventurers. He waves them a kindly farewell as they ride away, and wishes them the happiness of Isaac and Rebecca. He recalls that even these have their trials.

It is after dinner that the next caller comes and the minister forgets his book and all his plans as he grasps the hand of his caller. For it is a man in sorrow who has come to tell his grief to one on whom he has learned to depend. The heart of the minister is wrung as he listens and tears are in his eyes as he speakes of faith which alone can comfort one in the time of crises. He knows whereof he speakes, for the minister has known sorrow. He has seen a little child wasting away with disease and stood by helpless to stay it. He has seen nights of anguish and days of dread, and so he can with understanding point the visitor to one who was "a Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief." When the minister returns to his study his interest in his book has gone. He sits thinking for a while and then he takes pen and paper, for an outline of a sermon has come to him and he sees in imagination his people looking toward him, and he longs to comfort them with the comfort which he himself has received from God.

And now comes the man with the hard luck story. Dr. Buckley once advised his readers to investigate carefully each applicant before giving any money to a stranger. But how can one investigate the tale of a man who appears suddenly in a little country place in the middle of the afternoon unknown to a person within forty miles? And where shall the investigated stay pending the investigation? It is easier to give him a dollar and say, "Depart in peace, be thou clothed and fed." Besides, wonderful stories have been told of bread cast on the waters. The minister thinks he may be about to hear one himself, for he recognizes his caller as a man whom he had befriended in a former parish. The recognition is mutual. The caller's face shines as he asks if he is not in the presence of one who helped him n a time of trial. He learns with joy that it is indeed his benefactor, and on the strength of past acquaintance he requests another dollar.

The last caller is a mother of a wayward boy. He will not work, he will not study, he will not mind, and she is completely discouraged. She has come to tell the minister that she has done everything she could for Henry and is thinking seriously of presenting him to his country to see if the navy cannot make a man out of him. The minister is wise. He knows the heart of a mother. He says there is much good in Henry. That he is but an overgrown boy and it is unreasonable to expect him to act like a man. He recounts the adventures of his own boyhood and stretches the truth until it cracks in his endeavor to prove that he was the epitome of recklessness. And the mother cheers up immediately. Henry is not bad at heart, she says. Yes, he is really an affectionate lad. She gains courage as her pastor talks and is greatly cheered by his promise to try to find a place to the boy's liking. "If we can only find out Henry's bent, we'll make a fine fellow out of that boy," he declares optimistically as he shakes the mother's hand at parting. And the poor woman goes home with a lighter heart and the added patience which she sorely needs when she finds out all that Henry has done during her absence.

If the minister kept a diary, which of course he never has time to do, he would have written when night came, "An uneventful day." But perhaps the recording angel may not think of it as one, for the minister has touched and influenced other lives, and, who knows, the good man may some time learn in heaven the results of the minister's day at home.—The Central Christian Advocate.

IMPORTANT NOTICE, LOUISIANA PREACHERS.

Radical changes have been made in the forms for the Pastor's Reports to the Annual Conference. In order to conform with the new statistical forms, new report books are absolutely necessary. No reports from preachers can be accepted by the Statistical Secretaries unless turned in on the new forms. It is necessary, therefore, that each pastor be supplied with the new forms. Please order in ample time direct from the Publishing House, so you can have your report ready to hand in the first day of Conference. Do not wait until you come to Conference to get your blanks, but come to Conference with your reports made out and ready to turn in. This will be a relief to you and a great help to the Statistical Secretaries.

Cordially,
ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

BIG THINGS AND LITTLE THINGS.

I cannot do the big things
That I should like to do,
To make the earth forever fair,
The sky forever blue;

But I can do the small things
That help to make it sweet,
Though clouds arise and fill the skies,
And tempests beat. —Exchange.

THE COURAGE OF ROBBIE ROBIN.

Many and many a time, even when he was a wee, featherless nestling, his mother had warned him. "Beware of cats," she would say. "Small dogs will bark and snap at you, but if you have any sense you will get away from them. Big birds are dangerous sometimes, but especially look out for boys."

"What are boys?" they all peeped in chorus.

"I'll show you one some time."

And one day, when Robbie Robin lay dozing after an especially full meal—even for him—she nudged him with her wing, and chirped softly:

"Look! There's a boy."

"Where? Where?" they all twittered; and they crowded up to the nest's edge until Robbie almost lost his balance.

"Careful," their mother cautioned, "there's plenty of room without crowding that way; and besides, he might see you."

They were more careful then, and peering down from the top of the big maple, they saw standing, at the foot of one of the willow trees a monstrous creature in blue waist and knickerbockers, with a freckled face and bare-footed. He looked very ferocious.

"Mamma," they cheeped, "what do boys do?"

She knew it would frighten them (in fact, they all had bad dreams that night), but she told them two or three dreadful stories; about birds hurt by stones thrown at them and nests from which eggs had been taken, although the father and mother robins were right there, scolding all the time as hard as they could scold.

"And so," she ended, "remember what mother tells you: always look out for boys."

Robbie Robin had never forgotten it. Those stories would have fixed it in his memory forever, but when once he was able to fly he began to feel so care free and independent that sometimes he was quite reckless.

The boy seemed to live in a big brick nest on top of the hill and Robbie used to watch him. He never saw him throw a stone at a bird or climb a tree to disturb a nest. Though he could climb trees and he knew where the nests were; Robbie was very sure of that.

"I don't think he is so very dangerous," he said one day to his mother.

"Never trust boys," she answered, and Robbie promised he would be careful. But one day when the boy was hoeing, Robbie was so hungry that he hopped quite close for worms. First thing he knew one dropped right down near him. Worms did not fly, he knew that, nor live in trees—not that kind. But it was very good. Another fell, and then, though he could hardly believe his eyes, he saw where it came from. The boy had tossed it to him. He snatched it up and off he flew to the maple.

"Mother," he chirped, excitedly, "come down and look. I don't believe the boy—"

But he did not stay to finish. Instead he sped back to the garden and mother Robin after him, fast as her wings could carry her.

"He isn't bad," he called. "Watch me."

And before Mother Robin could stop him he was down among the clods. The boy tossed him a worm and he ate it, another, and then another—there was simply no bottom to Robbie Robin's appetite, as his mother had long ago found out—and presently he was so near that the boy could have touched him with the hoe.

Mother Robin expected every minute that the boy would throw a stone, or pull out a slingshot or let fall some trap over her toohardy son, but nothing dreadful happened.

"Come back," she screamed, as soon as she found her voice, and obediently Robbie came back and perched on the fence beside her.

"You get the next one, mother," he urged. "It's just as easy. Go on. I'll dare you."

Mother Robin did not intend to, but to her own amazement, she did it; and then darted back as fast as if a hawk were after her.

"Well?" piped Robbie.

"It was most extraordinary," she twittered nervously, for she was still very much fluttered. "I simply can't understand it. In all my long life of four years I've never before seen a boy like that. But, then," she reflected, "maybe there are different kinds of boys, just as there are different kinds of birds. Maybe the bare-footed, freckled-face kind aren't boys of prey." THE COW'S CONTRIBUTION TO ART.

"Why do you clip the cow's ears?" asked an interested observer of an employee in a large meat packing establishment. The plant was a model of cleanliness and great care was exercised in handling the meat, but in what way the clipping of a cow's ears could aid in maintaining conditions was a mystery to the onlooker.

"That," said the worker as he snipped the hair from the inside of an ear, "is the cow's contribution to art. Until recently when some one discovered that the hair in a cow's ear is the most delicate, yet strong and soft hair known, it was believed that the best substance for the making of high-grade brushes for water-color painting was camel's hair.

"And so," said the man as he passed on with his shears, "practically all the 'camel's hair' brushes are now made from the hair of cows' ears, and they are said to be better than those made of real camels' hair."

The scarcity of camel's hair, due to the difficulty of importing it, brings to mind the fact that shortly before the Civil War an attempt was made to introduce the raising of camels in the southwestern section of the United States and using them for transportation purposes in the deserts of Arizona and New Mexico.

Jefferson Davis, then Secretary of War, secured an appropriation of funds for this purpose and two herds of camels, numbering about sixty animals, were brought here from Algeria, but, after having proved their usefulness, during the period of unrest at the time of the Civil War, they were allowed to perish at the hands of Indians and Mexicans or become the victims of wolves, cougars and rattlesnakes.

It is possible that a few wild survivors of the two herds still exist in northern Mexico, but the belief is based on nothing more definite than the tales of prospectors who, in their search for gold, frequently are rendered somewhat visionary through suffering for the want of water.

Besides supplying a substitute for camel's hair brushes, other "waste" portions of slaughtered cattle furnish material for many useful articles. It is, of course, well known that cowhide makes a very durable leather. The hair which is shaved from the hide is used in wall plaster. Some portions of the bones and horns are used in the manufacture of buttons and the remainder is ground and used as a fertilizer, as is also the blood after it has been dried. —A. H. Dreher, in Kind Words.

DOG SAVED MANY LIVES.

Various incidents have been reported concerning the wonderful keenness of the dogs used in war.

A letter from a young Harvard man in the American Ambulance Service in France, which is quoted in the New York Sun, gives an interesting glimpse of another of these wise dogs. He says:

"Last evening, a couple of fellows came around to see us, bringing with them two of the famous Red Cross dogs. We were anxious to see them work, so I ran off and hid in some bushes.

"Lying down, I placed my cap under me so that the dog could not find it. They sent one of the dogs out to find me. He finally discovered me; and as he was unable to find my cap, he put his nose in my pocket and pulled out my handkerchief, which he took back. A few minutes later he led his owner to the place where I lay.

"They told us that this dog saved one hundred and fifty lives in one day during the battle of the Marne." —Exchange.

I am the now and now. Yesterday and to-morrow are undesirable relatives.—Erier.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

THE REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION ON TRIAL.

One of the most perplexing questions confronting the church to-day is the securing of a sufficient number of adequately prepared candidates for the ministry to supply the increasing needs of our work. Our impression, based upon the reports of district conferences which have come under our observation, is that the number of applicants for admission on trial into our Annual Conferences this fall is smaller than usual.

One explanation of this shortage in the ministerial supply is that our requirements for admission on trial are too strict. We have no means of determining how far this explanation is correct; our own opinion, however, leans to the view that it does not at all explain the situation. Just as a matter of argument, we should prefer to take the position that even more stringent requirements would result in more candidates.

Certainly we are not willing to admit that our present requirements are too strict. When a man has been appointed to a pastoral charge, he has been put in a position of responsibility and large influence. He is expected to be, in a very real sense, a leader and teacher of men. Yet we require of such a man only such educational equipment as a boy or girl fifteen or sixteen years old possesses—that is, if the boy or girl has taken advantage of the courses offered in the public schools. The Discipline says: "The educational requirements for admission on trial into the traveling connection, so far as academic training is concerned, shall be equivalent to the requirement set by the Educational Commission for admission into the Freshman Class of a standard college." Even this requirement is weakened, for the proviso is added: "Under special conditions clearly recognized as unusual, the Annual Conference may by a two-thirds vote admit a candidate who does not meet the academic requirements."

We do not expect a man to have reached his full intellectual development by the time he has applied for admission into an Annual Conference; but we do believe that the significance of such a step should be so clearly understood that no man would presume to take it who had not made use of every opportunity to secure proper educational preparation. We have known a good many college Freshmen, even, who were not especially well qualified for the exacting work of the pastorate.

INTERESTS OF THE CHURCH.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a great ecclesiastical organization which reaches throughout the world in its efforts to extend the Kingdom of God and to hasten its coming on earth. It has stood from the beginning, and it still stands, for a personal religious experience on the part of its membership that will make it a tremendously vital force in the spiritual uplift of the world. In carrying forward its work, it has found it necessary, as that work developed, to divide its activities into departments. These departments, ordered by the General Conference and administered under its direction, have constituted General Boards, which look carefully after the interests committed to them.

The Board of Missions.

The Board of Missions, which has charge of the missionary operations of the church at home and abroad, has developed a program in keeping with the greatness of the task which confronts the church in the evangelization of the world. The inauguration of the Centenary Movement and the marvelous financial success of that Movement show how well that Board is functioning in the present crisis of world need. We are not rash enough to say that our missionary work has been provided with money enough, through the Centenary pledges, to meet all its needs; but the pressure has been greatly relieved, and we may look forward to the proper enlargement and the increasing success of that part of our work.

The Board of Church Extension.

The Board of Church Extension has done a remarkable work of the kind suggested by its name. An examination of the latest edition of the Church Extension Handbook shows that this Board, from 1882 to 1919, has invested $6,250,695.96, by loan or donation, in helping 10,066 churches and 2,823 parsonages. These figures, striking as they are, do not measure by any means the full value of the work of this Board in making possible the permanent establishment of our church in its many difficult fields. The Centenary Askings included $2,140,000 for the Board of Church Extension, to be used in its distinctively missionary operations.

The Board of Education.

The Board of Education has in charge the great educational interests of the church. It would be difficult to over-estimate the importance of this work. Education affects directly and vitally all the activities of the church, material and spiritual. We have failed somewhat, perhaps, in our appreciation of this work in the past, but an awakening has come, and we are now making preparations for a campaign that will give adequate resources to our educational institutions. A movement will be undertaken early next year to raise at least $23,000,000 for our colleges and universities. That amount is none too large to meet the needs as they exist to-day.

The Board of Finance.

The Board of Finance is charged with the duty of making provision for the needs of our worn-out preachers, and their widows and dependent orphans. This is a cause that lies very close to the heart of the church. More and more our people are beginning to realize that the men who have given their lives to the service of the church without the possibility of laying up treasures upon earth, are entitled to some consideration at the hands of the church in their old age. It is not a matter of sentiment only—though the sentimental considerations are weighty—but of simple justice. It is a reflection upon a great Christian organization that its most faithful servants should be left to shift for themselves, practically, when they have passed the period of activity.

The time has come for us to do something that will show the appreciation which we so freely express. More than sixteen years ago we proposed to raise a fund of $5,000,000 for our superannuated preachers; yet to-day, that fund amounts to a little less than $500,000—about one-tenth of the amount that was needed then, and not a "drop in the bucket" to what is needed to-day. Other causes have been provided for, but this sacred cause seems to have been side-tracked again and again. We cannot excuse our neglect; but we can make amends by taking up this matter seriously now and doing something worth while to meet this urgent need. In our opinion, the time has come for us to act—our people are expecting it, and we believe they are ready to respond enthusiastically and generously to a definite appeal for this cause.

FAR-FETCHED.

One of our esteemed exchanges, the Central Christian Advocate, gives currency, in its editorial pages, to the charge that the blacks who incited the stock yards riots in Chicago by setting fire to numerous cottages were not negroes, but white men disguised by the liberal use of burnt cork. The presumption is, according to the Central, that they were I. W. W. miscreants, who chose that method to escape accountability. We can imagine the possibility of such an occurrence. But when the Central goes further, and cites an instance of which it had "heard," in which a Southern school trustee blacked his face and attempted to rob himself of school funds committed to his keeping, and then makes the application that "both the Chicago Stock Yards and the Southern trustee are types of by no means isolated cases of burnt cork blacks putting their crimes on the negro race," we have the feeling that dangerous supposition has given place to the statement of well established fact. The situation is too serious for mere rumors to have place in the discussion.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. B. D. Watson, of Clinton, La., writes that satisfactory progress is being made on the Olive Branch charge, which he serves.

The General Committee of the Interchurch World Movement of North America is in session at Cleveland, Ohio, this week.

Rev. J. F. Owens, of Amory, Miss., reports that the Smithville circuit has been blessed with some unusually good revival meetings this year.

A good meeting was held recently at Anding, Miss., by the pastor, Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth. A helpful feature of the services was the singing of the Millsaps College quartet.

The bishops will hold the Fall Meeting at Shreveport, La., Oct. 31-Nov. 2. Good things are in store for the Methodists of that progressive city in North Louisiana.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, Conference evangelist, began a meeting with Rev. W. B. Alsworth at Meadville, Miss., last week. There was every indication of a successful meeting.

Rev. J. H. Grice, of Vancleave, Miss., requests us to announce that the New Prospect Camp Meeting will begin on October 15, and continue through the following Sunday.

Mr. Porter McFerrin, connected with the Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn., spent several days in New Orleans recently. He paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Thursday of last week.

Rev. S. L. Riggs, our pastor at Lake Arthur, La., is planning to begin a tent meeting on October 5, assisted by Rev. Lovick P. Law and wife. The work on his charge has made good progress this year.

Mrs. J. M. Henry, of Ruston, La., has written a most interesting and suggestive leaflet, "What More Must We Do for Our Dependent Children?" in the interest of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. It is worthy of a wide circulation.

Rev. Burke Culpepper has just closed a great meeting at Newport, Ark. He is now in a meeting at High Point, N. C.

Rev. J. E. Selfe, Rev. A. J. Gearheard and several out-of-town laymen attended the Centenary meeting at Rayne Memorial Church last Friday evening.

Rev. U. G. Foote, D. D., of Rayne Memorial Church, this city, is this week assisting Rev. A. J. Gearheard in a meeting at Bogalusa, where he will remain through Sunday.

Mrs. N. D. Sears, of the Kentwood charge, Louisiana Conference, represents the third generation of her family who have been readers of the Advocate. We are always glad to hear from these old friends.

Rev. Rob't A. Clark, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, but now pastor at Covington, Tenn., has recently been visiting his old home at Kosciusko, Miss. Brother Clark has made a splendid record in the Memphis Conference.

The formal opening exercises of Centenary College, at Shreveport, La., will take place on Monday, September 29, although school work was scheduled to begin to-day, Sept. 25. The prospects are unusually good for a successful session.

Rev. Roy H. Kleiser has been transferred by Bishop Denny to the Kentucky Conference, and appointed to Scott Street Church, Covington, Ky. This church is the largest of four churches in Covington, and one of the strongest in the Conference.

Dr. Sawyer reports having been in Brother Freeman's pulpit at Parker Memorial Church, this city, preaching morning and night last Sabbath. Two good congregations greeted him, and he noted that the Sunday school was a large one, and it is said to be growing larger steadily.

A brother who sent us a club of ten subscriptions made the following remark: "This club was very easily secured. The only thing that is necessary to do is to let the people know about your offer, and they will subscribe for the paper at once." The plan is worth trying, anyway.

We acknowledge our appreciation of receiving an invitation to attend the laying of the corner-stone of the new Times-Picayune building, Wednesday, September 24. The new home of this leading newspaper of the South will be directly across Camp Street from the Advocate office.

Mrs. Mary A. McCants, of Wilson, La., in renewing her subscription a short time ago, wrote as follows: "I never want to be without the Advocate. In my youth it brought light, and now, in my old age, it brings sunshine." Would that all our Methodist homes received the church paper!

Rev. W. H. Mounger, who served our church at Charleston, Miss., for four years, has recently returned from a year's service with the Y. M. C. A. in Scotland and France. He is now engaged in State "Y" work, with headquarters at West Point, Miss., but he expects to apply for work in the North Mississippi Conference in November.

Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, Louisiana Conference, in sending the announcements for his fourth round of quarterly conferences, states that the work of the district is moving along splendidly. The revival meetings throughout the district have had gracious results.

The New Orleans District Group Meeting, to consider the Centenary conservation program, was held at Rayne Memorial Church last Friday night. Rev. J. L. Neill and Rev. W. G. Cram, of the Centenary force, were present to give information and inspiration. The attendance was unusually good. Fourteen of the seventeen local church treasurers of the district were present.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan has spent the greater part of the summer canvassing in the interest of Millsaps College. He writes that the recent opening of Millsaps has been one of the most encouraging in the history of the college. Almost every available space about the campus is occupied, and it is hoped the use of one wing of the new dormitory will give more room by the lattor part of October.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, of the Franklinton circuit, Louisiana Conference, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call one day last week. He was returning home from a meeting at Wesley Chapel, on the Ponchatoula charge, where he assisted Rev. T. D. Lipscomb. The meeting was a good one, both in attendance and results. Brother Sweeney has already held five meetings in his own charge, and began the sixth last Sunday at Waldheim, where he is being assisted by Rev. J. B. Fulton.

Rev. E. M. Allen, pastor on the Americus charge, Miss. Conference, has recently organized a church of twenty-three members at Hurley, Miss., as a result of a gracious meeting there. He expects also to erect a church building soon. Brother Allen was assisted in the meeting at Hurley by Brother M. R. Jones. Brother Allen has also recently conducted revivals at other points in his charge which comprises six churches. At Tanner's Chapel he was assisted by Rev. D. W. Ulmer; at Pleasant Hill by Rev. C. P. Jones; at Rosedale by Rev. P. H. Howse, and at Roberts Chapel by Rev. Van Landrum. These meetings were attended by good results. The last revival in the charge will be a camp meeting, in which Rev. D. E. Kelley will do the preaching.

Meridian Methodism has recently had two marriages that are of interest to a great many readers of the Advocate. The first was that of Miss Edith Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Brown, to Mr. Charles Ide, on September 11, at the residence of the bride's parents. The young couple will make their home in New York City, where Mr. Ide is prominent in business affairs. The second marriage was that of Miss Maggie Barefield, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. K. Barefield, to Mr. Frank Whitfield, on September 16, at the new Central Methodist Church, this being the first public wedding to be celebrated in the new church. The couple will reside in Meridian, where Mr. Whitfield is engaged in business. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to all concerned.

At the recent meeting of the War Board of the M. E. Church, South, in Dallas, Texas, a donation of $20,000 was made to the Algiers Church, this city. The proximity of this church to the Algiers Naval Station made such a splendid assistance possible, and we who have long been familiar with the needs of the Algiers church, and its untold possibilities for service, not only to the town, but also to our sailors, rejoice in the clear understanding of the situation reached by the members of the Board. Most of our readers will remember how the Algiers church was completely demolished by the great storm of 1915. Since then the congregation has been working hard to secure a sum sufficient to erect a commanding and suitable building; and the fact that they now have $40,000 is a triumph of faith and prayer. Rev. C. C. Wier is the able pastor of this congregation.

The many friends will be interested in the following announcement, which appeared in the Jackson, Miss. papers of September 21: "Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Sullivan announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Pattie Magruder, to Mr. Nathaniel J. Golding, of Columbus, Miss., the wedding to be celebrated quietly in the home on Millsaps campus some time in October. The pretty romance of these popular young people has been watched with growing interest during their college days and later when the lovely bride-elect had enlisted as a teacher among Mississippi's educators. Mr. Golding is one of the most beloved of Millsaps College men and has many friends who will at once shower him with congratulations upon his good fortune." These young people were both graduated from Millsaps College in the class of 1917, and Mr. Golding is now a member of the North Mississippi Conference. We rejoice in the prospective happiness of these servants of the church.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. J. F. Dring, Ringgold, La., 2; Mrs. T. S. Randle, Shreveport, La., 2; Rev. A. L. Harper, Sibley, La., 3; Rev. D. M. Floyd, Waterford, Miss., 4; L. C. Jones, Norris, Miss., 10; Rev. J. F. Owens, Amory, Miss., 3; Rev. B. D. Watson, Clinton, La., 3; Rev. C. A. HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONSERVATION GROUP MEETING.

To the Pastors: Brother Hull, our Conference Missionary Secretary, has announced the date of our Group Meeting for Thursday, October 2, at Hattiesburg. The time of the first session will be arranged so that those coming on the morning trains will get the essentials; and he desires especially to have the pastors and the local church treasurers present. I trust that as many as can do so, will come. The pastors will please remind their treasurers and insist on their coming. All can return on the evening trains. Others are members, as announced in Brother Hull's statement in the Advocate of September 11, and all who can are invited to come, but the above are especially urged to come.

W. B. JONES, P. E.

A CORRECTION.

Dr. D. C. Hull, Missionary Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, requests us to state that the Conservation Group Meeting announced for Port Gibson on Friday, October 10, will be held at Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, on the same date. Let all concerned govern themselves accordingly.

Out of the woods my Master went,
And he was well content;
Out of the woods my Master came,
Content with death and shame.
When Death and Shame should woo him last,
From under the trees they drew him last;
'Twas on the tree they slew him last,
When out of the woods he came.

The subject of this sketch, Prof. [illegible] was born in [illegible] and died in Lexington, Miss., on June 5, 1911. His mother having died in his early childhood, he was reared by an elder brother, Dr. A. M. Davis of Lexington, Miss. He graduated from the High School of Lexington and later took his degree at the A. & M. College of State of Miss. He chose teaching as the work in which he could be of most service to his fellowmen. His ability as an instructor and his faithfulness in his work caused him [illegible]

Services to be much in demand. He was also at one of the leading educators of the State. He had been principal of the Lexington High School for two or three years and was elected for another session. A movement was on foot to have the school under the supervision of the State. In November 1910, he was happily married to Miss Bertie Porter who was his devoted and faithful helper until he was called to a higher life. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church in Lexington, Miss., in 1897 and remained a faithful member of that Communion until the day of his death. He was interested in the deeper things of life and had discussed the [illegible] experience with the writer. He had charge of the Sunday school at Lexington and had proved to be an efficient superintendent. When he realized that the end was near his faith was triumphant as [illegible] he expressed himself as ready to go.

His cheerful and sunny disposition made him many friends who were numbered by his acquaintances. His character was unsullied and his name untarnished. While his work on earth is done the world has been made better by his having lived in it, for his noble character is an inspiration to those who have been left behind. To the heartbroken wife, the devoted father and the affectionate brothers and other relatives we extend our sympathy and prayers. They sorrow not as those who have no hope.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas our beloved friend and faithful member Mrs. A. C. Williams was translated to her heavenly home on Saturday, August 26, 1911, we wish to express our very great sorrow at her loss although we can but rejoice at her eternal happiness where all sorrow or pain or tears may come.

For many years we have loved Mrs. Williams for her faithful Christian character always true to duty always trusting and helpful, always taking willingly the hard place where others shirked. Wherever poverty or pain or sorrow was known to be Mrs. Williams was sure to be there helping and though herself a sufferer and her work lessened during the last few years still her life was one of cheerful service to the very end.

In the Missionary Society we shall miss her deeply as one of our most faithful members always in her place always ready with the part assigned and we feel that her going away forms another link drawing us nearer to our Heavenly Father. May each of us be ready for the final summons as was she.

We extend to the aged sister bereaved children and other relatives our deepest sympathy and commend them to our Heavenly Father in sweet memory that they may rejoice and be exceeding glad for great is her reward in Heaven.

Signed: Mrs. E. M. Howorth, Mrs. S. E. White, Mrs. John Davis, for the Methodist Missionary Society of West Point, Miss.

A Godsend to Rheumatics.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood. The cause of rheumatism is uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of your rheumatism. Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Sunday School Institute for the Durant District will be held at Goodman, September 25.

The Elementary Sunday School Institute for the Sardis District will be held at Coldwater, September 30.

There were nine charges represented at Okolona from the Aberdeen District, five pastors, five superintendents, and thirty-one teachers. Of this number Tupelo sent fifteen. Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Brooks, pastor, and Mr. Fred McDonald, superintendent of the Okolona school did all that we could ask of them. Mrs. W. W. Jack, superintendent of elementary work, Miss Linnie Barcroft, superintendent of Missionary Education, and Rev. E. M. Shaw, superintendent of teacher-training, district officers, rendered fine service on the program.

At Sardis there were five superintendents, five pastors, and fourteen teachers in attendance, one district officer. The Sardis ladies served a delightful lunch to the visitors. Brother Mohler, the pastor, did his full duty in making the institute a success.

The institute for the Winona District was held at Itta Bena. There were two pastors, two superintendents, and ten teachers in attendance. Mrs. P. C. Wall, superintendent of elementary work for the district took part in the program. Brother Campbell's church served the visitors to a dollar dinner at the principal hotel of the town.

Mr. Brabham, superintendent of Rural Work, delighted and instructed all that heard him. This was his first visit to our Conference. Mrs. L. G. Fant, superintendent of elementary work in our Conference, gave what some good judges said was the best talk they ever heard on Sunday school work.

Here are a few questions that are being answered: Have you ordered the graded lessons for your beginners? Have you observed Sunday School Day? Do you want to be a better equipped teacher? Do you desire to help dependent, helpless childhood to receive the impress of Christ? How have you answered these questions?

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The schools are responding to the special request to send an offering to the Conference Sunday School Board. We will make a list of all our schools which support in this special way. Many thanks to our faithful pastors and superintendents. We will soon have every school in our Conference looking to our Conference Board for help, and when we, as a Board, give the necessary help, there will be no question about the schools supporting our work.

Our Efficiency Conferences for each district will have the following program:

Morning Session.

1. Why a District Organization?
2. Duties of District Officers and members of Conference Sunday School Board.
3. District meetings—
   (a) District-wide meetings. How many? What kind of program would be best?
   (b) Sub-District meetings. How many? What kind of program and what officers would be needed?

Noon: Dinner.

Afternoon Session.

1. Elementary Department, presentation and discussion.
2. Wesley Bible Class and other departments, Rev. Alonzo Early.
3. Rural work, etc., M. W. Brabham.

Closing of Efficiency Conference.

Night Session.

8:00—A popular program will be given where requested and the leaders of the Conference can reach the next meeting in time.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The first Sunday was spent at Edwards. We had a good day. This is a nice church. I trust that a forward step will come to them. They have much to be proud of, and thankful for. May they have more.

Tuesday and Wednesday were spent at Brookhaven in a District Institute, September 9-10. Rev. S. U. Turnipseed, of the Alabama Conference was with me, rendering invaluable service. One-third of the schools of the district were represented. I thought this very fine, indeed.

Sunday and Monday, September 14 and 15, were spent at Anguilla in an Institute. Four Sunday schools were represented. It was a good Institute in many ways. On the 16th, I was in an institute at Gibson Memorial, with four Sunday schools represented. I feel that this institute will result in much good.

How about Sunday School Day? We are counting on the offering of Sunday School Day taking care of a large per cent of our work. If it falls us, we will be in bad shape.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.
1528 W. Capitol St., Jackson, Miss.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY — NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We are trusting the pastors and superintendents to push Sunday School Day during October. Give it the right of way at the eleven o'clock hour. Use what part of the official program you can. Make an appeal for the Sunday school. It is no longer the "nursery of the church." Bishop Vincent put it this way: "All the church in the Sunday school; all the Sunday school in the church, and everybody in both."

Let the offering go promptly to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Treasurer Sunday School Board, New Albany, Miss.

If you fail to have the program, take an offering for the work anyhow.

E. S. LEWIS,
Chairman Sunday School Board.
Greenville, Miss.

SOME THINGS UNCLE BILLY SAID AT THE TEACHERS' MEETING.

"Of course, my mother knew I'd have to select a wife for myself if I ever got married; but she tried to help me make the right choice, by teachin' an' guidance while a child. Just so, our children has got to choose Christ for theirselves some day; but it's our business to help 'em make the right choice, through our teachin' an' livin'."

"Lots of good folks I know has two suits of clo'es—one for week-days an' one for Sundays. Some of these folks seems to take off their religion when they take off their Sunday suit. It'd be bad for them if Gabriel was to come for 'em on a week-day."

"Some teachers think they must get a 'great truth' outen ev'ry verse in the lesson. Most of us'll do well if we impress one 'great truth' outen the whole lesson text."

112 Hens—1800 Eggs.

Mrs. Harper writes: "I wouldn't be without 'TWO for ONE' for the world; my 112 hens laid 1800 eggs in December." Mrs. Calman writes: "Your tonic is just what I needed for my flock—I never got so many eggs." Mrs. Butler writes: "Please send me another box of 'TWO for ONE.' I am now getting 119 eggs instead of 11." All poultry owners can do as well. Now is the time to insure yourself an ample egg supply for the coming winter. Eggs will sell at 75c to $1.00 a dozen. Give your hens "TWO for ONE," the scientific tonic composed of every beneficial ingredient known to poultry experts—it doubles your egg supply and increases your profits. It has produced more eggs and healthier chickens for others than anything known and it will do the same for you.

Send $1.00 to the Kinsella Co., 2926 Le Moyne Bld., Chicago, for a trial box of this wonderful tonic, or $2.00 for a full season's supply. Make every chicken you own a greater money maker. Your order will entitle you to a free entry in our big $5,000.00 egg-laying contest which starts September 1. Double your egg supply and win a big cash prize besides. If you have ten hens you have as good a chance as the owner of one thousand. Order to-day and get full particulars of contest which are enclosed in every box of "TWO for ONE."—Adv.

BITRO-PHOSPHATE IS GOOD FOR THIN NERVOUS PEOPLE

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Frederick S. Kolle, M. D., Editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says that weak, nervous people who want increased weight, strength and nerve-force, should take a 5-grain tablet of Bitro-Phosphate just before or during each meal.

This particular phosphate is the discovery of a famous French scientist, and reports of remarkable results from its use have recently appeared in many medical journals.

If you do not feel well; if you tire easily; do not sleep well, or are too thin, go to any good druggist and get enough Bitro-Phosphate for a two weeks' supply—it costs only fifty cents a week.

Eat less; chew your food thoroughly, and if at the end of a few weeks you do not feel stronger and better than you have for months; if your nerves are not steadier; if you do not sleep better and have more vim, endurance and vitality, your money will be returned, and the Bitro-Phosphate will cost you nothing.

"The Gods we worship, write their names on our faces."—Anon.

Fellow old Folks:

I want to have a plain talk with you about your liver and bowels. In the first place let me tell you that I'm over seventy, but just as hale and hearty and spry as a young boy.

The thing that has kept me this way—that has kept the rheumatism and stiffness out of my joints, kept my blood pure, and my liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels just as healthy as when I was young, has been my own constipation remedy and liver regulator—Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets.)

Yes, indeed I do take my own medicine—take it two or three times a week, or oftener if I think I need it to keep my liver active, my bowels, my blood pure and my stomach sweet. It is true that every one of us old folks do need something that really will do this. I just can't get sick or rheumatic with all these organs in perfect order, and neither can you.

I'm only one of millions who use Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) regularly, for there is not a drug store in a big city in America but what sells Nature's Remedy, and the same is true of most of the smaller towns.

Perhaps you already use NR Tablets—if you don't, I want to send you a sample packet so you can try it yourself without cost; please send me your name and address as well as the name of this paper and I will mail you this free sample at once. THE HUMAN LIFE DIVINE.

Patience; kindness; generosity; humility; courtesy; unselfishness; good temper; guileness; sincerity—these make up the supreme gift, the stature of the perfect man. You will oberve that all are in relation to men, in relation to life. In relation to the known to-day and the near to-morrow, and not to the unknown eternity. We hear much of love to God; Christ spoke much of love to man. We make a great deal of peace with heaven; Christ made much of peace on earth. Religion is not a strange or added thing, but the inspiration of the secular life, the breathing of an eternal spirit through this temporal world. The supreme thing, in short, is not a thing at all, but the giving of a further finish to the multitudinous words and acts which make up the sum of every common day.—Henry Drummond.

MARRIED.

At the Methodist parsonage in Lula, Miss., on September 15, Miss ANNE BESS BRYAN, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Bryan, of Carrollton, Miss., was married to Mr. T. ESTILL TOPP, a successful young druggist of West Helena, Ark. The ceremony was said, by Rev. W. W. Jones, in the presence of a few intimate friends of the contracting parties. Little Martha Carnathan, whose mother was formerly a Carrollton girl, was ring-bearer. The happy couple left immediately after the ceremony for their future home in West Helena. The bride and Mrs. Jones became the warmest of friends during the years that Mr. Jones was pastor of the Methodist Church at Carrollton, so it was a great pleasure to have this beautiful wedding take place at the parsonage in Lula.

MISSION STUDY.

The first meeting in October has been set aside as Mission Study Day. Are you planning to organize your mission study class then?

New Books.

The general theme for the year 1919-20 is, "The Conservation of Human Life." The word "conservation" is filled to-day with new value and carries a practical note which makes a strong appeal. The sheltered women at home must realize the need for conservation in non-Christian lands and in the outlying districts of our own country. The women at home must prove themselves worthy. The whole church must be mobilized. The world must be brought to know Jesus Christ. His principles must be incarnated in the life of the individual and translated into the life of all races and all nations.

The books for the year have been carefully selected, have been written by experts, and may be studied with profit by any mission study group.

A list of books recommended for the year has been published in the Prospectus, which may be had from the Home Base Secretary, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

The membership drive held in Lake Charles in the early part of the year was so successful that the following account of same is printed, hoping it may inspire others to larger and better work in their auxiliaries:

Very early in the year, at one of our meetings, an enthusiastic member of the Lake Charles auxiliary wrote the following on the blackboard:

"Our Aim—To Lead the Laffayette District."

Some folks were greatly amused at the misspelled Lafayette, but all joined enthusiastically in "We will do it," and now we have come to believe that those two f's were prophetic, meaning "getting there with two feet," and unless the other auxiliaries of the district do very much better than they have ever done, we will lead!

How will we do it?

Early in the year we divided our membership into circles, with the officers, President, or Leader, and Secretary-Treasurer. These circles meet the third Tuesday of each month, using our Mission Study as their program. On the first Tuesday of each month, all circles come together, bringing their reports, and quite a bit of friendly rivalry is shown in making these reports; new members received, amount of dues and pledges paid, number of members present, etc., being reported. At these meetings the programs suggested in the year book are used, and a music committee, always ready with one or two numbers, adds to the attractiveness of these programs.

Our financial report is the best we have ever had, and we believe that at the end of the year our total will be little less than $800. (Last year's total, $225.)

Through the Centenary, through our Mission Study Class, and through the splendid programs carried out at each meeting, our women have gained a wider knowledge of missions and are more keenly alive to the responsibilities and privileges that are ours.

Not only have we a deeper interest in missions, but the spiritual lives of many of our women have been quickened and more than one has said, "Give me something to do. Let me have a part in this glorious work for our Master."

The prayers of many were answered when at the close of our Centenary Drive, after a very earnest appeal for the consecration of lives by our pastor, Miss Julia Reid and Mr. Frank Collins offered themselves for foreign service. We women claim Miss Julia as our very own, and at a called meeting of our auxiliary, decided to start what is to be known as "The Julia Reid Fund," the money to be used for her wardrobe as long as she is in preparation for her chosen life work. One of our most splendid men has asked the privilege of paying all other expenses, meaning board, music, and, in his own words, "whatever she will need that will make her a more efficient missionary." She will enter Mansfield College on the 10th of September. Miss Julia is blessed with mental and physical strength above the average, and has for several years been a leader in the Sunday school and Epworth League of our church. Her spiritual life is a most splendid example for every young man and woman with whom she comes in contact. Her decision to give her life in service to her blessed Master has already brought untold blessings to our entire membership, and what an inspiration she will be to us in the years to come!

But do not think that all has been smooth sailing. We have had discouragements, disappointments, many of our women who should be interested are not, giving their lives to things of little value when the world need is so great. Pray for these that they may catch the vision, and enter the great field of service.

HOW TO SECURE THE HOLY GHOST.

By Rev. Isaac L. Peebles.

Much is said and something is written about having the Holy Ghost with us in our present Centenary campaign, and one of the conditions emphasized is that dancing should cease among our people; and, unfortunately, more emphasis is placed on that than anything else.

Of course dancing will have to cease, and also other things that are much worse than dancing. It does not require the ken of a Solomon for one to see that greed is worse than dancing; and, also, sneaking unfairness; and, therefore, if dancing has to discontinue in order to secure the Holy Ghost, then greed and sneaking unfairness will have to cease also.

More than these are in His way of coming. Sabbath desecration is one of them. It is becoming common for some of the most enthusiastic church workers and even preachers to board Sunday trains and street cars with apparently no more conscience than a hog of the fact that God commands: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Ex. 20:8. The plea that they are attending to God's business is not just, overlooking the truth that they thereby brand the Lord as being so straitened in His business that He is forced to break His own commandments to carry it on. Let all such workers never forget that the Lord does not need them at all, and that His business will flourish well without them, for their lives are an active contradiction of His commandments.

Women as well as men are ignoring God's commandments in order to attend to the Lord's business, but let them remember that the Lord does not need any of them in His business at all. His business is not only hurt by them, but it is neglected and not really done at all.

Another interference with the coming and abiding of the Holy Ghost is egotism and self-conceit, two very incompatible elements; but likely one of the greatest hindrances to the Holy Ghost is an ignoring of law and its enforcement. God is a God of law. This is seen clearly in its requirement of all necessary to meet the demands of the law Adam broke. It is further seen in the following Scriptures: "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination." Prov. 28:9. "Wherefore the law is holy, and just and good." Rom. 7:12.

From the above, what use have churches for the Holy Ghost, since His coming and abiding depend on respect for law and its enforcement, and they do not desire either?

It grieves me to know that our Methodism that I love so well has reached that decline in spiritual life that her discipline and its enforcement are not only as nothing, but she has not a place for a preacher who believes in her discipline and its enforcement. Now if we really desire the Holy Ghost—all of His needed offices—let our discipline be enforced properly, and dancers, profiteers, sneaks, the dishonest ones, Sabbath breakers, law breakers, etc., will have to cease their wickedness or leave the church, and the Holy Ghost will come as needed, and then true conversions, reclamations, high attainments made, obedience to God in all matters will follow. Let us serve Him that way.

GOOD MEETINGS ON THE HOLCOMB CHARGE.

I am just letting the Advocate know we have held four revivals on our charge, two being conducted by the writer and one by our presiding elder. If I remember correctly, we had fifteen professions and additions. Brother J. H. Holder, our presiding elder, did the preaching at the Holcomb church, and the sermons he delivered were the best I have heard in many a day. He is in great favor with the people of the Holcomb charge.

Our good people presented us with a purse to cover the expense of a trip to Kentucky, where we are visiting our folks. Ours is a great charge, doing nothing niggardly, but generously, delightfully.

We started for Kentucky in our Ford. On reaching Memphis, it broke down and we came on by rail.

Fraternally,
S. CURTIS YATES.

FROM BOSSIER CITY, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few lines to let you know how things are moving along on the Bossier City-Lake End charge. Last December I landed in Bossier City to find I had been sent to a mission field. When I located the church register, I found a membership of about twenty was recorded; about one-half of that number I never did see. There were a number of discouraging features to face, but my faith was in God, and I knew if I had God on my side, everything would work out all right; so we closed the year's work with an enrollment of about forty-five members.

We were sent back this year with somewhat brighter prospects, but a number of problems to solve. We set our goal at one hundred members for Bossier City church. I believe we will reach that number before Conference. Pray for the folks—we are going after them—and don't forget me. You will remember the Baptists had a membership of two hundred. Their preacher is giving full time and is receiving a salary of $1800.

We have had some good meetings on the work. Brother F. R. Power held our meeting here at Bossier City. There were sixteen additions to the church. The church and community were greatly helped. Brother J. W. Lee held our meeting at Powhattan, and I never saw such interest taken in a meeting; standing room was at a premium at the evening services. Powhattan is the church that has grown this year from five to sixteen members. What percentage increase is that?

I had the pleasure of visiting my home people this summer, and was fortunate enough to be there during their revival, which was held by Rev. J. V. Bennett, the Conference Evangelist. This was over in the Mississippi Delta, on the Anguilla charge, Rev. J. E. J. Furguson, pastor. Brother Bennett did some mighty good preaching and a world of good was done. They liked him so well he is booked to go back next year. I hope I can meet with him again over there.

I believe my year's work is going to close out in fine shape. I hope to be able to report everything in full at Conference.

My prayer is, Brother Carley, that God's richest blessing will be with you and yours, and that you will continue to give us as good paper in the future as you have in the past.

Your friend,
J. M. BOYKIN, P. C.

THE MIDWAY MEETING ON OXFORD CIRCUIT.

The second week in August, I went to Midway church, ten miles east of Oxford, Miss., to hold a meeting with Julian Duncan, pastor of the Oxford circuit. It was hot weather to count, dinner on the ground, and two sermons, one in forenoon and one in afternoon. Ordinarily these are the hardest meetings to do things worth while, but we had a genuine revival in the church. The people are in great love toward their young preacher. They say Brother Duncan has done them the best service they have had in a long time. I was delighted with the spirit of both the people and the pastor. The pastor made his appeal last January that I help him in his meeting, on the ground of the friendship between his sainted father, Perry Duncan, and myself; now I shall feel that there will ever be a closer bond between Brother Julian and myself. He has a great future before him.

Loss of Appetite is commonly gradual; one dish after another is set aside. It is one of the first indications that the system is running down, and there is nothing else so good for it as Hood's Sarsaparilla—the best of all tonics.—Adv.

A NOTE FROM REV. H. N. HARRISON.

Dear Brother Carley: I have just returned from Pleasant Hill, La., where I had the pleasure of holding a week's revival for Rev. P. O. Lowrey. The church was very much revived. The writer received many expressions of appreciation from the members, and we left them with a very high sense of esteem for them and the pastor. We were most delightfully entertained at the home of Brother T. W. Hardee and wife. We shall long remember them and the good people of Pleasant Hill.

I found Brother Lowrey most highly esteemed by the church and the community. There never was a more tireless worker than Brother Lowrey. He is true as steel and has a knack of attaching his people to the doctrines and discipline of the church. Whenever the authorities move him from Pleasant Hill, he is going to leave behind him a truly loyal membership. He emphasizes Methodist doctrines. Sister Lowrey is a rare spirit, and to my notion has brought up a most remarkable family. I have never had a more enjoyable time than the week that it was my privilege to spend in revival work with him and his people.

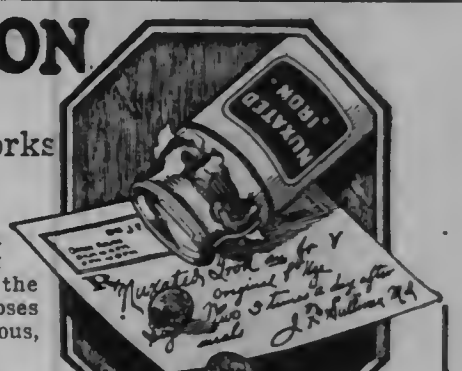
NUXATED IRON



"Say, Doctor, This Prescription Works Like Magic."

Physician Says Nuxated Iron Quickly Puts Astonishing Strength and Energy Into the Veins of Men and Brings Roses to the Cheeks of Nervous, Run-Down Women.

Ask the first hundred strong, healthy people you meet to what they owe their strength and see how many reply "Nuxated Iron." Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "Thousands of people suffer from iron deficiency but do not know what to take. There is nothing like organic iron—Nuxated Iron, to enrich the blood, make beautiful, healthy women, and strong, vigorous iron men. To make absolutely sure that my patients get real organic iron and not some form of the metallic variety, I always prescribe Nuxated Iron in its original packages. Nuxated Iron will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time in many instances."

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sullivan can be obtained from any good druggist with or without a physician's prescription on an absolute manufacturers' guarantee of success or money refunded.

You Do More Work

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine. It is simply IRON and Quinine suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength - Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same to-day, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle. —Adv.

YOU NEED NOT SUFFER FROM CATARRH

But You Must Drive It Out of Your Blood.

Catarrh is annoying enough when it chokes up your nostrils and air passages, causing difficult breathing and other discomforts. Real danger comes when it reaches down into your lungs.

This is why you should at once realize the importance of the proper treatment, and lose no time experimenting with worthless remedies which touch only the surface.

To be rid of Catarrh, you must drive the disease germs out of your blood.

Splendid results have been reported from the use of S. S. S., which acts on the catarrh germs in the blood. S. S. S. is a splendid system cleanser; it is not sold or recommended for venereal diseases.

If you wish medical advice as to the treatment of your own individual case, write to Chief Medical Adviser, 42 Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

SPRINGFIELD (LA.) CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: During this year I have served half of the Springfield charge, composed of Springfield, Huff's chapel and Maurepas. The Lord has blessed us and we have met with a good degree of success. We began our revival at Huff's chapel on the second Saturday night in August and continued a week, and thence to Maurepas, commencing on the third Sunday, continuing until the fourth Sunday night. Brother G. W. Huff, of Hattiesburg, Miss., did the preaching. He is a splendid revivalist and an able preacher—preaching the old-time gospel with power. Both churches were wonderfully blessed. Quite a number professed conversion and 45 joined the church on profession of faith—23 at Huff's chapel and 22 at Maurepas. I baptized 4 adults and 16 infants. It was a great time of rejoicing and the Holy Spirit was poured out on us.

We began our revival at Springfield on Saturday night, September 6, and closed Friday night September 12. Brother T. D. Lipscomb, of Ponchatoula, did the preaching except at 11 o'clock Sunday, when he filled his pulpit in Ponchatoula while Sister Lipscomp conducted the services in our revival. She delivered a great message with power which was well received and far-reaching. During this revival more than seventy professed conversion and the spiritual lives of many were deepened. We received thirteen on profession of faith and one by certificate and baptized four young people and nine infants. Brother Lipscomb is a Bible preacher and preaches the old doctrines in an able manner accompanied with the power of the Holy Ghost. He preaches with authority. Some people said his sermon on "The Crucifixion" was the greatest sermon they ever heard. I was divinely led in securing Brothers Huff and Lipscomb, for both honor the Holy Spirit, and our Father honors their honest efforts. No one will make a mistake in securing their assistance in revival work.

I am closing out a happy and most successful year. Pray for us. May the Lord bless you and all who read these words. Yours in His name,

E. D. FAYARD.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THREE ESSENTIALS.

Three things, at least, are essential qualifications for personal evangelistic service. The first is knowledge—knowledge of the sinner's ruined condition and of how it may be remedied; the second is the experience of having been lost as a sinner and of having been found by the Savior; the third is a heart for this kind of work—a heart of sympathy and love. The extent to which these characteristics dominate our lives will determine our interest, and maybe our success, in evangelistic endeavors.

AN AGELESS ALCHEMIST.

Bending over his crucibles, alternating between hope and despair, the strange old alchemist of the Middle Ages sought in vain to transmute the baser metals into gold, to bring forth gold from that which was not. But evil fortune is a cruel alchemist which often transmutes gold into quicksilver which soon eludes the grasp. How truly does the great Book warn us against the uncertainty and the danger of riches. Happiness does not consist in the abundance of what a man posesses, but it is found forevermore in what he is.

TWO GREAT CROSS-BEARERS.

Nineteen hundred and nineteen years ago a great throng surged through the gates of the ancient city of Jerusalem. Prompted by that vulgar curiosity, the love of seeing the horrible, the bloody, the repulsive, they had crowded through the gates of the city to behold Jesus of Nazareth crucified between two thieves. And there, midway between the gate and the brow of the hill called Calvary, two great cross-bearers met. Overcome with sheer exhaustion, Jesus staggered and fell beneath the weight of his cross. "And they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross."

And but for that no word would tell
Of him who hailed from Cyrene's shore
While he who willed to bear, but fell,
Has a name that waxes more and more.

GREATNESS IN LITTLE.

The writer knows a kindly Christian woman who never forgets the sacred days in the lives of her friends, and such a day cannot dawn without a message and a token from her. Only a little thing, some would say, but it makes the day all the brighter. We sometimes need to learn the lesson Naaman learned when he traveled to the man of God to be healed of his leprosy. We usually feel that the man who is ready to do a small thing will be ready to do a great thing, but the wise servant of Naaman put it even more strongly when he tactfully inquired: "My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing wouldst thou not have done it? how much the rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash and be clean?" The man who is ready and eager for great things ought to rejoice in the opportunity of little things. But how often do we find that the condition of some in the church is illustrated by the story of the big, strong tramp who applied at the back door for something to eat. The lady looked at his ample proportions in indignation, and inquired why such an able-bodied fellow as he should ask for help. "Wandering Willie" smiled pleasantly, and said, "You see, ma'am, the trouble is, I'm an unhappy medium." "Unhappy medium?" "Yes, ma'am, I'm too heavy for light work, and I'm too light for heavy work."

HONEST ADVERTISING.

We notice that the slogan of the Advertising Clubs of the World, which held a great convention in New Orleans last week, is "Truth." This is a significant thing. We can remember the time when fraudulent advertisements were not uncommon. Several years ago the stationery of a little "two by four" weekly newspaper and printing establishment in a small Southern town bore the words, "Largest Printery in the South." The fact was that the whole establishment could have been put within the offices of some printing houses in the South. Such a statement showed an utter disregard for truth, and was clearly intended to mislead the man who had no opportunity of learning of the establishment except through the mails. It was only one of many such fraudulent statements found in advertisements only a few years ago, and it is significant of the fact that the world is not growing worse after all, and that higher ideals are prevailing in many activities of life when the Advertising Clubs of the world have "Truth" as a slogan. If there were no higher motive, truth in advertising would be wise because it is a form of that honesty which is the "best policy." Fraudulent advertising will defeat itself in the end.

KEEP THE RECORD CLEAR.

We have seen this title used with reference to other matters, but it would sometimes be pertinent toward church registers, for they are often like the man who makes them and keeps them, and often fails to keep them. "Fearfully and wonderfully made." During a pastoral experience of some years the writer has learned the truth of the foregoing statement. Some one has said that the trouble with Elijah, when he stood in the entry of his cave, and lamented that he alone was left in Israel to worship Jehovah, was that he did not know the statistics. If memory is not at fault, the statistics of the Louisiana Conference several years showed an actual loss in membership, when it was found later to be an error in reports. Then what may seem a small matter to some is grave indeed when it may prostrate a church under a juniper tree. Keep the record clear, and get your reports in good shape for the statistical secretary of your Conference and his assistants. Their task is a hard one, and they are seldom able to enjoy the Conference at all until Saturday. Do not add to their burdens by carelessness and negligence in making reports. Then there are equally good reasons why the record of the individual church should be kept clear. Last week the pastor of a New Orleans church was appealed to for help in finding the record of a marriage performed in 1864. It was the only hope of perfecting the record whereby the infirm widow of that marriage, now past ninety, might secure a pension.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER.

On Wednesday, September 24, there was laid with appropriate ceremonies, the cornerstone of the new Times-Picayune building, which will occupy the spot directly across Camp Street from the Advocate office. If the Editor of the Christian Advocate will miss some of the light that was formerly his on account of a long-vacant lot, he will have a compensation in the gaining of a great neighbor. It is a commanding and inspiring situation for one of the South's leading newspaper. It is located on Lafayette Square, only a short distance from the new marble post office, a short distance from the City Hall, and almost directly across the square from the old and historic First Presbyterian Church, the influence of which was so magnified by the long ministry of the celebrated Dr. B. M. Palmer. The old church has passed through the ravages of fire and storm in its lengthy history, but it still lifts its height far above the square, and looks (as some do not) every inch a church. Mr. Moore of the Times-Picayune presided. Bishop W. P. Thirkield of the M. E. Church led in prayer. In beginning the ceremonies Mr. Moore spoke briefly of the growth of the Times-Picayune, which at length made the construction of such a large, commodious and modern building necessary. There were present the distinguished editor of The Herald of Mexico City and a representative of a newspaper of Buenos Ayres. These gentlemen were in attendance upon the Advertising Clubs of the World. Both made fine addresses in perfect English. The Mexican editor referred to the efforts of some of the New Orleans gentlemen present to develop a "continental friendship" between the United States and countries further south. He said that he and his friends had not come to this country to buy firearms, but to bring peace. Mr. D'Arcy, retiring president of the Advertising Clubs of the World laid the cornerstone. In his address, he made the significant statement that a city does not make a newspaper, but a newspaper makes a city. There is a large measure of truth in that. It may be trite, but the pen is still "mightier than the sword." We crave for the periodicals of our church the large circulation which will enable them to be a greater power in the life of our people.

If you wish your neighbors to see what God is like, let them see what he can make you like.—Kingsley.

THE SONG NOT SUNG.

By Ulysses Grant Foote.

To some of those who sing the Hymn of Peace.
There comes a clutching paln about the heart;
For silent yonder lie some who had part
In former fetes. Their lusty basses cease;
So that the music lacks a soul's release;
And guests are bland to us ere they depart.
Forgetting for the moment's time, they start
To sing his favorite song; then, weeping, cease.

Our sorrows need a song of strength to lift
The eyes that fail to see to heaven's gate;
A song that wings its faith beyond our ken.
For God knows best the meaning of his gift;
'Tis far less paln to us if we but wait
The purpose of his ways like patient men.

BISHOP BASHFORD ON "HOW TO BECOME THE BEST POSSIBLE PREACHER."

(We commend this address by the late Bishop Bashford, which was dellvered before the students of Drew Theological Semlnary, Madlson, N. J., on Commemoration Day, October 18, 1900, to a careful reading by our younger ministers especlally. We copy it from the New York Chrlstian Advocate.—Edltor.)

This ls Commemoration Day. I know no better way of hallowing the memory of the founder of Drew Theological Seminary, and of the men whose labors here have made her name known round the world, than to help the young men within her walls to become the best possible preachers.

Eloquence, as the word implies, is the speaking out the thought which is within one. Herbert Spencer, in his remarkable essay on "Style," thlnks that style consists in the conveyance of the thought of the speaker to the hearers with the least possible effort upon the hearer's part. But the preacher is somethlng more than a mental postal carrier. He is not content to carry his thought to the minds of other men and leave it at their disposal. He aims, rather, to make his purposes enter lnto and become part of the persons to whom he speaks. His success ls measured by the degree to whlch his thought and feelIng and purpose become incarnate in other lives. Preaching is the art of spiritual reproduction. God ls the supreme preacher. He bodies forth His wlsdom and His power in the physlcal universe. He expresses Hls truth and His love for us in revelation. But revelation culminates ln the incarnation, and the supreme aim of Christ is to help us to become chlldren of God. The scientist thlnks God's thought after Him; the preacher does God's work with Hlm.

I

The Mastery of Truth

The first requisite of preaching is the mastery of the truth. We occasionally hear some declamation against doctrinal preachlng. If doctrinal preaching means simply that parrot-like repetition of truths whlch the speaker never comprehended, then the sooner we are rid of it the better. But doctrine, as the word itself indicates, means teaching, and the preacher must be a teacher. Emerson says that man will be best heard upon a public occasion who knows most upon the subject in hand. Old Dr. Emmons was accustomed to say that the greatest fault in delivery is not having anything to deliver. "Fill up the cask, young men," was the advice whlch this profound theologian was constantly givng to his students.

The reason why truth is essential to a sermon is because truth is simply an expression of the laws of the universe. However much the speaker may lack in art, or even in personal character, if he utters the truth upon the subject in hand, the world must heed his message, because the laws of the universe are on his side. Newton possessed little art and Bacon was lacking in character, but the world and the church were forced to accept the teachings of these men, because their truth was but an expression of the thought of God, and the universe was constantly confirming it.

Reading

Perhaps the first condition for the mastery of truth is the reading of good books. Frederick Robertson, the most helpful preacher of this generation, was a profound student of Plato and of the Bible. Socrates was accustomed to say that "every man is sufficiently eloquent in that which he clearly understands." Do not try to master all of the books which are published, even in theology. Dr. Latimer was accustomed to say that Germany during the last thirty years has given us only three great books, Dorner's Person of Christ, Rothe's Ethik and Muller's Christian Doctrine of Sin. Master these three great works and you can neglect a hundred lesser volumes. I began reading Demosthene's "Oration on the Crown" as a college student, with the vague conception that eloquence was some ethereal quality by which men were constrained to accept the will of the speaker against their judgment. The "Oration on the Crown" was a revelation to me. Demosthenes knew the entire history of Greece; he had mastered the principles underlying Greek development, and he presented the real philosophy of history in that marvelous oration. One day, in my surprise and enthusiasm over the fresh discovery, I said to the professor: "There is no trick at all in Demosthenes's eloquence; I could make as good a speech myself if I only knew as much." "Doubtless you could," replied the professor, "if you only knew as much." While the young preacher should master a few great volumes he should be steeped to the lips in the Bible. Be, as John Wesley said, a man of one book, and let that book be God's Word.

Meditation

But reading must be supplemented by thinking. The curse of modern life is that we read the daily newspapers and think in flocks and herds. The prophet is a solitary thinker. It was to the everlasting credit of Emerson and Darwin as students that they consented to poor grades in their classes rather than attempt to memorize and repeat like parrots the lessons prescribed for them. They would not take mental food more rapidly than they could digest it. The secret of Newton's discoveries of the laws of nature was, in his own language, "Thinking, thinking, thinking." As well call a mere recruiting officer a great general as to reckon a mere encyclopedist as a great orator The great preacher may, like Shakespeare, borrow materials from various sources, but he will so assimilate his truth and recast it that it will come forth with the stamp of his imperial genius upon it.

Openness of Mind

But next to reading and meditation the third condition for the mastery of the truth is openness of the mind. Did you ever think that you probably learned more during the first five years of your life than during any subsequent ten or fifteen years of your experience? The child learns an almost complete use of his mother tongue and the complete use of hands and feet and all the organs of the body before he is five years old. The reason many of us cease to grow early is because of our intellectual laziness and our love of conformity. We do not keep our minds open to new truth. We do not give expression to the fresh impressions which truth makes upon our minds. We strive to conform to the standard set by other people, until we lose our freshness and originality. Most men's minds have crystallized by the time they are fifteen years of age. They seldom change their political convictions after boyhood. They often select their professions before they are twenty years of age. Even prayer, which should be supremely an act of standing before God with open mind, saying, "Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth," is rather an attempt to persuade the Almighty to accept our ways of thinking. You have heard of the young minister who told the bishop at a Conference very confidentially that the Lord had directed him to select a certain young lady whom he had met at the Conference as his future wife. The bishop looked puzzled and presently replied that he felt sure there must be some mistake, for he was the third young man who had told him during the week that the Lord had directed him to select that woman for a wife. Even praying in such cases, if I may use the expression, becomes an attempt to "log roll" the Almighty.

Does it not strike you as strange that during all the wrestling in prayer which occurred on both sides during our Civil War no man changed his convictions? Stonewall Jackson was so strenuous in his praying that God took him up to heaven in a cloud of war in order that His servant with a breaking heart might see that the heavenly Father was answering his petition in a vastly wiser manner than the Southern general dreamed. Nothing so impresses me in studying the development of Jesus as His openness of mind. He has not the slightest regard for consistency. One moment He discourages His mother in regard to a miracle and a few minutes later performed the miracle. He refuses to go up to Jerusalem with His brethren and a little later goes up in secret. The reason for His sudden change and rapid development was that His eyes were always upon God. "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." Openness of mind, the scientific spirit, a fine judicial candor is a crying need of the young theologian. There is yet new light to break out of the Word of God.

The Obedient Will

But more important for the mastery of the truth than broad reading and deep thinking and openness of mind is the obedient will. The most striking fact to the student of anthropology is the chasm existing between our conduct and our convictions. The great work of the preacher is not so much to give the world new light as to show men how they may find power in Jesus Christ and through the indwelling Spirit to live up to the light which they have. This high living is essential to the prophetic spirit. You will never be called to be prophets of your age, you will never see visions and dream of the undeveloped possibilities of human nature until you live up to the light which God has already vouchsafed to you. Truth is not a commodity to be put up in packages called sermons and dealt out to your people, in return for which you are to receive their applause and support. Traffic with the truth and you lose the truth. Instead of striving to possess the truth, be content rather to let the truth possess you. Be God's mouthpiece, His messenger, emptying yourself of self-will and becoming a mere hollow tube through whom He speakes to men. Be possessed of the passion for truth and of a passion for souls.

Interpreters of Truth

In concluding my words upon the truth let me assure you that it is possible for you to be doctrinal preachers in a deep and high sense of that term and yet not indulge in a mere parrot-like repetition of the contents of theological encyclopedias. Every age must think out its theology for itself, and it is your peculiar privilege, young men, to interpret freshly, in accordance with the scientific spirit, the great truths of revelation to the men of the twentieth century. I know no better earthly pattern of what I would have you be as preachers of the truth than was John Wesley. Wesley did for Christianity, in some measure, what Bacon did for science. Bacon found the scientists busy with abstract theories and indulging in a priori speculations. He taught the philosophers to submit their speculations to the practical test of experiment, and thus he became the father of modern science. Wesley did for theology what Bacon did for the philosopher of his day. Wesley's appeal to experience exactly corresponds to Bacon's appeal to experiment. Wesley overthrew the Calvinistic theology, not through The Arminian Magazine, but by demonstrating that Calvinistic theology could not quicken the conscience of the nation and give rise to a great spiritual awakening, such as he desired to produce in England. It was by the test of experiment in revival work, not by the logic of the articles in The Arminian Magazine, that Wesley gave our Anglo-Saxon peoples the Arminian theology — the golden mean in philosophy, a theology exactly adapted to our practical genius and fitting us for the moral leadership of the world. The Britannica may, indeed, say that Wesley does not deserve to be ranked as a philosophical thinker. But, like Newton and Bacon and Augustine, Wesley becomes one of the great leaders of the world because he applied, in part at least, the scientific method to the solution of theological problems. Wesley's unfinished task remains for completion at your hands. God grant that you may be deep readers, profound thinkers, men of open mind and obedient will, so that God may be able to use you as the prophets of the twentieth century.

II

The Art of Expression

The second requisite of successful preaching is art. By art I mean, in the first place, the expression of the truth in its ideal form. If you simply spoke your own message, young men, you could not then afford to come into the pulpit with a slovenly manner. I have known a strong man to prove wholly unacceptable to his people because of his unbrushed boots or his soiled necktie or his neglected cuffs. How much less can we afford to offend in manner when we appear as messengers of the heavenly Kingdom. But by art I mean not simply attention to personal dress and manner, but the aim to make your language the most perfect embodiment of your thought and feeling and purpose. If your character is only pure, the highest art is found in perfect sincerity. Art has done its utmost when it has perfectly revealed that which is within. Water is transparent and faultless when it reveals pearls, if there are pearls at the bottom, and mud, if there is only mud at the bottom. But, strange to say, perfect naturalness is one of the rarest arts in the public speaker. Indeed, few of us have a voice like Spurgeon's, which will reach five thousand people, and yet sound entirely natural. Few of us have the silver tones of a Phillips, on which our messages may ring out as if flung from heaven. With even the Greek language, a more perfect medium of expression than our English tongue, Demosthenes recognized that it was difficult to make the oration express all the varying shades of thought and feeling, so that he said the great speech must be as it were "carved in brass." Browning sings:

"What hand and brain went ever paired,
What heart alike conceived and dared,
What act proved all its thought had been,
What will but felt the fleshly screen?"

Every great work in literature consists of the truth of the age from which the work sprang, embodied in the highest literary form. The great works in literature, like the writings of Homer, Virgil, Dante, Milton, Shakespeare and so forth, have usually been poetry, because the poet has been willing to labor over the form as well as over the message which he has for the world.

"In the elder days of art
Builders wrought with patient care,
Each unseen a hidden part;
For the gods see everywhere."

But art is not simply the ideal embodiment of the truth. It consists in the adaptation of the truth to the persons to whom you speak. Mrs. Wesley was asked one time why she told a certain lesson to her boys over and over again, twenty times. "Because," replied Mrs. Wesley, "they had not learned when I had told them nineteen times." So the preacher must give line upon line and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little, because he loves his people and cannot rest until they accept the truth.

The secret of art is love of the truth and love of the people. Love endureth all things, hopeth all things, believeth all things. Such love is sure to make one practical and also hopeful.

If you are a pessimist in your philosophy, first correct your digestion. If your pessimism still persists, then go to Wall Street and become a bear on the market, or at least get out of the ministry. No man has any right to become a messenger of the Kingdom, to attempt to tell men of the hopes of the new humanity in Jesus Christ, who does not see the unpicturable possibilities of human nature.

I am told that one of our ministers saw in Professor Bowne, of Boston University, when he was a lad simply a good express agent at the best, and advised him to continue driving his cart, and that another minister saw in him the possibilities of a scholar, and encouraged him to go to college. The very fact that multitudes of people can read the poetry of Shakespeare or the psalm of David or the Gospel of John and appreciate these marvelous products shows that they have the same generic qualities which the creators of these great literatures possessed. If Shakespeare passed from a puling babe to the greatest genius our English literature has produced in the short space of fifty years, what, think you, are the possibilities of the dullest man in your audience after he has had a thousand years of development on the other side?

The reconciliation of the real and the ideal in art arises from the fact that art, in its highest form, is the expression of the divine mind, and that the men to whom we minister are created in the divine image. I never think of art in its ideal form and of art as adaptation without two pictures rising in my mind. I see, in the first place, Wendell Phillips, the prophet of freedom, standing upon the mountain heights of liberty and summoning the people either to climb these mountain heights or else warning them that they would perish in the valley below. Sometimes, when the people seemed deaf to his entreaties, the prophet's exhortation turned to cursing. I see, on the other hand, another man going down into the valley where the people lived, not that he might win their votes and be popular and abide with them in the valley, but that he might lead them step by step from their lower position up the mountain heights to freedom. God pity the American people if the time ever comes when we cease to honor such prophets as Wendell Phillips. But while I honor Phillips as the prophet of freedom, I love more Abraham Lincoln, who was not content to stand upon the mountain heights and curse the people below him, who was not content to go down in the valley and abide with the people like a demagogue, but who, like a shepherd of the nation, led us from the lower planes of slavery up the mountain heights of freedom.

The best picture of the preacher's adaptation to his people is found in Goldsmith's lines:

"A man he was of all the country dear;
And passing rich on forty pounds a year.
Unskilled he to fawn and seek for power
By doctrines fashioned to the varying hour;
Far other aims his heart had learned to prize;
More bent to raise the wretched than to rise.
But in his duty prompt at every call,
He watched and wept and prayed and felt for all
And, as the bird on fond endearment tries,
To tempt its new-fledged offspring to the skies,
He tried each art, rebuked each dull delay
Allured to brighter worlds, and led the way."

III

Personality

The third and highest condition of the preacher's success is personality. Your character is your capital as a preacher. A young teacher asked Carlyle how he might succeed in his profession. Carlyle wrote: "Young man, be that which you would have your pupils be. All other teaching is unblessed mockery and apery." A young man asked Demosthenes the secret of eloquence. "Action," replied the orator. The young man did not clearly understand Demosthenes, and repeated the question. Again Demosthenes answered, "Action." A third time the young man asked the question. And again Demosthenes thundered, "Action." Some of the commentators have stumbled over Demosthenes's reply as much as did the young man. One exegete thinks Demosthenes meant to say that gesture is the secret of eloquence. Only a dancing master could have dreamed of such an exegesis. Demosthenes had spent his year in toil for his beloved city. He sacrificed his fortune and at last his life itself for the liberty of Greece. And the word which Demosthenes used in reply to the young man's inquiry is the word which indicates conduct, life, action. In a word, Carlyle simply repeated the direction of Demosthenes.

At the outbreak of the Civil War I was permitted to go to the county town and see the boys enlist. We desired to raise one company in our county that day and excitement was running high. Two prominent lawyers were candidates for Congress and one of these men was asked to address the meeting. He became very eloquent, in the common acceptation of that term, but the conclusion of his remarks was, "Go, boys, go!" In some strange way this speech chilled the enthusiasm of the audience and no one responded to the call for volunteers at the close. His rival was then introduced to the audience and in his paroxysms of eloquence he made the American eagle scream, but the conclusion of his speech also was, "Go, boys, go!" and at its close not a man responded to the summons for volunteers.

THE FIRST GREAT LABOR MOVEMENT.

By Rev. John A Rice, D.D.

That is, the first of which we have any detailed, authentic account. For if there were no other source that could be tested, the fact that the Prophets and all the after history of the Exodus are based upon the historicity of that event is enough to attest its truthfulness. People do not invent slavery for their ancestors, nor do they generally point back to it as a thing to be proud of. Yet Israel's greatest boast was God's deliverance of their fathers. He called them out of Egypt to make of them a people peculiar to Himself.

We can, therefore, with confidence trace their ancestry and our spiritual lineage back to Moses in Egypt. But we look upon the Captivity and the Exodus as a far-away thing, with which we have now no immediate contact. It has not occurred to us, perhaps, that this was the first great labor movement of which we have any reliable record, and that it runs a close parallel with some things we have to-day.

In the first place, there were two classes—the employer and the employee. Entrenched power wielded the big stick and by autocratic methods settled all issues involved. The Government would have said with Baer in the coal strike: "The public be damned." This spirit produced an under-class whose lives and living were determined by those on top. Democracy in control would have been laughed at.

And the people, most of them, took it as a matter of course, not supposing that there was anything better for them. A sort of fatalism prevailed. So, perhaps, most accepted their lot as sent by God and were content. They got bread, and why complain? Why talk about theoretical matters of freedom?

One day two walking delegates appeared on the scene. There were better days ahead, there was a promised land a few hundred miles away, a land flowing with milk and honey, they learned later. It was an ungracious thing to do. These people were not rebelling against conditions. They were satisfied. Why disturb them? It was no business of an outsider, anyway. These walking delegates only make trouble for all concerned. Why should they create discontent? Should they not be arrested as disturbers of the peace?

The trouble with these ungrateful people was that they did not know how to use their leisure. They got into trouble when their hours were not full. Better give them more to do. Give them more work. Make conditions harder, to keep them out of mischief. There was no thought of teaching them how to use leisure, if they had any. There was no sense of responsibility on the part of the bosses for the incapacity of the people for using off hours. Would it not have been more human to have taught them how to play? If long hours destroy the play instinct and make us incapable of leisure, the cure is not longer hours—but shorter, and better training.

But the employers were slow to yield. They could not see what was ahead. So they answered with blunt refusal and tighter terms. They finally tried to compromise by consenting to a short trip for a picnic, "Only ye shall not go far away." "Only let your herds be stayed." They resisted the inevitable until the very last, in spite of the distress that followed.

And when the Israelites finally felt their power, they showed themselves unscrupulous. All they could get from the Egyptians was theirs. Despoiling was no sin, because their masters had mistreated them. False pretenses were divinely directed, because it was only getting even with their masters. "Direct action" was proper.

Under the first provocation they turned against their leaders. They wanted to take the reins into their own hands. "Let us alone that we may serve the Egyptians," they said they had begged at first. The leaders out of sight, they turn to new ones and to their old frolics—even making a religion to suit themselves. Pandemonium was loose in a little while. They gave way to their own propensities and passions, they were bent on their own way.

Organized force went to pieces before their very eyes, yet they had failed to get the lesson. The force of the ideal, rather than the ideal of force was their only salvation. They did not have the courage to wait. God was so slow. He is always slow in doing a great thing with life. Life is slow. It cannot be hurried, bustled, bamboozled, bribed, buncoed. The big stick gets quicker results than the big heart. Therefore the big stick. Although they had seen the Egyptian army go to pieces before their very eyes, they yet believed in force. They could compel their leaders to do their way. The promised land could not pay their present bills and satisfy their immediate hungers. They were as unreasonable as Pharaoh had been.

Ruskin has said somewhere that for every thousand that can talk there is but one that can think, and for every thousand that can think there is but one that can see. Yet without vision the people perish. The danger of all mass movements is that those who cannot themselves see will refuse to follow those who can. Fleshpots are mightier than faith. Yet we are now witnessing the pain of many, suffered for the sake of those who are to come after. This is the greatest sacrificial hour the world has ever seen, and there are tremendous issues before us. They must be settled at any cost, and settled in line with the kingdom purpose of Jesus or not settled at all. Labor and Capital—Employer and Employee—must learn to look ahead and walk in the light of the inspired eye.

It was an awful ordeal for these parties, the Egyptians and the Israelites both, to readjust themselves to the new day. Egypt had to learn to get on without Israel and Israel had to pass from the life of Bedouins to agriculturalists. Dangers and difficulties confronted them on every hand. The risk of being alive was infinite. Yet there was no escape from that risk. Suffering—dire and long-drawn-out—was inevitable. And those then living would share but little, if at all, in the benefits of the struggle. Ages waited upon their coming.

It was the first great strike. It was a strike against autocracy and for freedom. It was a strike for human welfare. It was a strike that was called because the overlords forgot to be human. It was a strike in line with the deeper movements of history. There is a stream of things we may deny, defy, ignore, temporize with, honestly miss, use and be used by. Which of these we do determines our place and the place of our cause in the far future. History has the last word. We spell it out—and to-morrow pronounces it.

God was then and is now on the human side of things. He has no other final concern. He has set out to make a people like Himself, who think as He thinks, feel as He feels, act as He acts. Whatever conflicts with the establishment of a perfect community of perfect human beings living in fellowship with Him and in loving service to each other, must go at last. It has no chance in this world or any other. That condemns all that is unbrotherly, all that puts business above manhood and happiness, material prosperity above soul welfare.

Between Pharaoh and the people, God was then and is now with the people. He never turns them back. Forward is His watchword. The authority He gives us is in to-morrow with its issues. Jesus Christ is His will for us. And Jesus Christ is far on in front. We have not yet even taken Him seriously. We are afraid to demand Him in all our relationships.

The fundamental question of the Exodus was how to secure the human welfare of the largest number in the best way for the longest time. That question tore Israel loose from her old ways and sent her out through the wilderness to try herself in a new world. There were no precedents. The promised land was out of sight. No one of them had ever seen it, and no one knew the way. But they must all go. There would be a pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night. That was the signal for every advance. And that was enough. Light for the next step is all we need. God will give us that for this new Exodus, as He gave it to His people of old, if only we have the wisdom and courage to follow on.

CONCERNING UNIFICATION.

At a largely attended gathering of Methodists, preachers and laymen, of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, held at Senatobia, Miss., on September 10, 1919, the present status of the nogotiations concerning the unification of American Methodism was given consideration. The meeting was presided over by Hon. Herbert Holmes, one of the foremost lawyers of North Mississippi, and formerly a leading member of the Mississippi Legislature. H. Grady Johnston, County Attorney, of De Soto County, served as Secretary. After prayer by Rev. A. T. McIlwaine, of Senatobia, several brief speeches were made, following which there was a general discussion of matters pertaining to the unification movement. Upon motion, a Committee on Resolutions was named, with Dr. L. L. Minor, of Horn Lake, as chairman. This Committee reported the appended paper, which was unanimously adopted, along with a request that our church and secular papers publish it. By motion the organization effected at this meeting was made permanent, future meetings to be held subject to the call of the chairman. The assembly adjourned with the benediction by Rev. J. B. Conner, of Longtown.

H. GRADY JOHNSTON, Secretary.

THE SENATOBIA STATEMENT.

"Having been reliably informed that at the late meeting of the joint commission on the unification of American Methodism, held at Cleveland, Ohio, a number of our commissioners (perhaps a majority) were strongly inclined to agree to a plan of union that would dismember the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and leave the Northern Methodist Negroes in the new united organization with full rights and privileges, including representation in the General Conference, and that the present indications are that such an agreement may be entered into at the next sitting of the commission in January, 1920, we, the undersigned preachers and laymen of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, assembled at Senatobia, Miss., on this the 10th day of September, 1919, moved by a deep sense of devotion to the cause of God and our church, feel constrained to give expression to our convictions concerning this momentous matter.

Protest Acceptance.

"First—Against the acceptance by our commissioners of the proposal to leave the Negroes of the Northern Methodist Church in the suggested new organization, with full rights and privileges, we desire most earnestly to protest, for the following reasons:

"(1) It would be in open contravention of the specific recommendations of our last two General Conferences. The General Conference of 1914, in session at Oklahoma City, in dealing with this question, expressly dissented from the report of a former unification commission in the following language: 'However, we recommend that the colored membership of the various bodies be formed into an independent organization holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united church.' This position was emphatically reaffirmed by the last General Conference in Atlanta, as the Daily Advocate of 1918, containing its proceedings, will show.

"(2) It would be in conflict with the entire history of our church since the War between the States, as it relates to our work among the colored people of America. In 1870 our church gathered its Negro membership into an independent, self-governing organization, known as the C. M. E. Church. That church has prospered and made an honorable record. Its percentage of growth has been greater than that of the Negro contingent of the Northern Methodist Church, though vast sums of money from the rich North have been poured into the treasury of the latter. After nearly 60 years of aggressive effort the Negroes in the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, number only about 350,000, while those in the independent Negro bodies number not far from 1,500,000. Why reverse our method and take up a policy that has yielded results so meager?

Would Make Privileged Class.

"(3) The proposed arrangement would make a privileged and favored class of the Negroes in the Northern Church, while our own colored people, who have been so true and devoted to the traditions and ideals of the South, would be left outside the pale of the new ecclesiastical organization. We might, to be sure, continue to assist them with gifts of money; but they would not be so vitally related to us as would our newly adopted Negro brethren, nor could they exercise like prerogatives and privileges. In view of the appealing memories and obligations born of close association and co-operation in the past, we do not feel that we can afford to permit ourselves to be thrust into such a position.

"(4) To accept a plan of union that would place colored delegates in the General Conference as lawmakers and on the judicial tribunals of the united church would be, in effect, to cast the weight of Southern Methodism's influence against the position that the people of the South have been forced to take to safeguard their social and political welfare—this, too, at a time when our perplexing race problem, as a result of the great war from which we have lately emerged, seems to be more complicated than it has been for decades. Numerous as the Negroes are in some of the commonwealths of this section, there is not to-day a colored representative in the Legislature or on the judicial bench of any Southern State. It is its felt need of security at this point that has kept the South solid politically for half a century.

Standard of Usefulness.

"To serve any people successfully, the church must be in right relation to them—it must not be antagonistic to their ideals and institutions. The necessity of this led to the division of American Methodism in 1844, and but for this separation Methodism would have been destroyed in the Southern States. The same consideration within recent years has led to the formation of independent churches in foreign countries, as the Japanese Methodist Church, for instance. Mr. Wesley's unwise attempt to intrude British political notions into the councils of American Methodism came perilously near wrecking it. It was later recognized by him that only a self-governing American church could effectively do the work that needed to be done in the new republic.

"We respectfully and earnestly appeal to our commissioners not to put our church in the attitude of having repudiated this dominating principle for which the Southern people have stood, and now stand, and of being in accord with the North on this great issue. To imagine that the two churches are in accord concerning this question would be to deceive ourselves. Their positions, so far as the great majority of their members are concerned, are irreconciliably different. So true is this, that there were even clashings at the late Centenary Celebration at Columbus, O., which was designed and expected to be a continuous love-feast.

"If Southern Methodism should be placed out of harmony with the Southern people with respect to this great question, direful consequences might follow. It is far easier to kindle a conflagration than it is to stop it when once it is started. Concerning no other question of a social or political character do the plain people of the South, those who constitute its bone and sinew, feel so strongly as they do concerning this one. Negroes are nowhere better treated than they are in the heart of the South, as has recently been testified to by a committee of investigation from Chicago; but racial integrity and white supremacy in government the citizens of this section are resolved to maintain. However our members in the West, along the border, and in the mission fields might vote on such a scheme of union, there can be, in our opinion, no reasonable hope that it would command the support of a majority of our membership in the central part of the South. We think that we are conservative when we express the belief that 90 per cent of them would be against it, and we fear that an attempt to force such a form of union upon them against their will might result in the disruption of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in a considerable portion of its territory.

"Chop Church to Pieces."

"II. We, furthermore, wish to express our disapproval of the regional conference scheme which would chop to pieces the M. E. Church, South, in the very heart of its territory, separating States and Conferences which have long been bound together by the most sacred and tender ties. To

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

READ THE FOLLOWING PROPOSITION.

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a Teacher's Bible if you will send us 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate by November 10. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather and has a concordance and all the usual helps in a Teacher's Bible; it is printed with large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help you persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 each will earn the Bible.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $2.00 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, but secure five, we will give you a copy of "Alpheus W. Wilson—A Prince in Israel," by Rev. Carlton D. Harris. This book contains the life and labors of the late Bishop Wilson. It is bound in cloth and has 210 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. We are about to lose nearly 1000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will be greatly helped.

This offer will hold good until November 1, after which date it will be withdrawn.

leave such States and Conferences without any governmental connecting bond except that found in a quadrennial general conference, which might meet a thousand miles away, would, we think, entail upon us irreparable loss. Under such an arrangement the strength of the Southern Church as a minority would be greatly reduced, all that is distinctive in the Methodism of the South would be wiped out, and its complete obliteration would soon follow. We cannot but believo that all the commendable ends sought to be achieved by unification could be attained without our having to pay such a price as this. The Oklahoma City plan of union contemplated no such dismemberment of our church. This deviee had come as an afterdevelopment, and it carries with lt consequences upon which we cannot but look with anxiety and alarm.

"We heartily believe in the spiritual unity that our Lord prayed might exist among his diseiples, and that we stand ready to promote among all believers to the full extent of our ability. We are for fraternity and proper eo-operation in Christlan work, and if some form of adjustment could be effected among American Methodists that would prevent overlapping and needless frictlon and waste, while leaving the main territory of our church substantially intact and its autonomy unimpaired, we should cordially welcome it. But to a plan of union carrying such objectionable features as those we have mentioned we cannot subscribe, and we appeal to loyal Southern Methodists everywhere to join us in defeating it. There is not the slightest doubt that our church is in the gravest peril, and it behooves those who share the sentiments that we have expressed to make themselves heard. Continued silence In this time of extreme crisis is liable to bring upon us irremediable disaster within the next few months. It is freely predicted by some in a position to know that a special session of our General Conference will be called for next spring, and that a determined attempt will be made to put through during the year 1920 such a scheme of organic union as that to which we have referred.

Would Foment Controversy.

"We importune our commissioners not to consent to such a programme, which would undoubtedly plunge our church into a storm of hurtful, if not ruinous, controversy. In our judgment, no plan of union should be accepted to and submitted to the church that would not almost certalnly command the approval of at least nine-tenths of our people. This matter will inevitably be discussed in our congregations. Two and a quarter millions of Methodists are not going to allow 10,000 or 12,000 persons in the General and Annual Conferences to dispose of this far-reaching question, involving the very life of their church and the control of its vast property interests, without having something to say.

"Our commissioners have wrought energetically and persistently to mature a plan of union. They have surrendered much and have gone much more than half way in their endeavors to come to terms with the Northern commissioners. That they have not been able to do so is not to their discredit. As we see it, it would be far better for them to part from the representatives of the Church, North, In good fellowship and with love, resolved to wait for time and Providence to remove barriers that now seem to be insuperable, than lt would for them, in a spirit of impatience and haste, to try to rush through a scheme of union that would be unacceptable to large numbers of Methodists in the South, at the risk of stirring up discord and strife that would act through generations. May the God of our fathers, who has so signally blessed our beloved church In the past, guard and gulde her in this fateful hour!"

MILLSAPS COLLEGE OPENING.

Dear Brother Carley: I have been so busy during the opening days of the college that I have not found time to give you anything concerning the splendid opening on the morning of September 17. That opening morning seemed more like those we had during our days here than any we have had in the last few years. The citizens of Jackson were out in larger numbers than in reeent years; then, too, I think there were more students here on the openlng day than usual.

The matter of enrolling ls a much more complicated process than In our day. Now you must go, first, to the Registrar and present a certificate from your High School principal showing that you have fourteen units for full Freshman, or twelve for conditioned Freshman. If you succeed in showing him that you come from an accredited high school and have the number of units indicated above, you will he asked to fill in a card with something of your life history, which becomes a part of the record of your work at the institution. This having been done, the Registrar will indicate on the reverse of the card the classes that you are supposed to attend. Another card will be given you which has the same subjects indicated on the reverse, which serves as your admission card when the president and treasurer have signed it. How different is that from the process when we entered twenty-five years ago! Then, as you remember, "Ole Doc" (affectionately remembered as such) enrolled you, took your money, and assigned you to your class with the approval of the several professors. Then a Carnegie unit was unheard of; a Commission on Education in the M. E. Church, South, was not in existence; the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States had not been formed. Each college admitted students according to its own pleasure.

Two years henee the writer's son will, God willing, with fourteen units, knock at the same door through which his father passed twenty-seven years before, not knowing what a unit was. Those good old ungraded country schools taught you some things, however, that are not contained in text books as well as the three R's.

Let me get back to the subject. Yes, it was a great opening and the enrollment is growing each day. This bids fair to he the most successful session in the history of the college. Every one seems to realize at the outset the seriousness of the situation that confronts him. The war has shown, as nothlng else has ever done, the fact that the world relies for its leaders In this perlod of world reconstruction upon the trained man.

The college has the largest Freshman class in its history, with the exception of last year during the S. A. T. C. One hundred have registered in Freshman Mathematics. The Department of English has the largest enrollment, with the Department of Romance Languages a close second.

Professor A. G. Sanders, of the Department of Romance Languages, has been transferred to the Mississippi Committee of Selection for Rhodes' Scholars from the same Committee In Virginia.

Mr. W. P. Bales, the new athletic coach, is planning to have all the students engaged in some form of athletic sport during the session. To encourage physical training along this llne, the faculty recently passed a resolution granting a credit of one hour per year for work of thls kind.

Mass athletics will be stressed to a large extent, thus bringing every student out for physical training, so essential to the development of a well-rounded being, and not confining the sports to a few teams and thus leaving the great mass of the student body to be onlookers.

Rev. J. L. Ferguson, the new Headmaster of the Preparatory School is rapidly getting things In running shape in his institution, with the assistance of Professor G. W. Huddleston, Mr. D. S Dearman, a graduate of 1919, and Mr. W. P. Bales.

Professor Ferguson was just discharged a few weeks ago from service as a chaplain in the army.

Dr. Nolan Stewart has been selected as College Physician, a new position in the faculty of the institution. Each student except those living in Jackson was required to pay a medical fee, for which he will have the attention of the college physician except in prolonged hospital cases.

Dr. Mitchell, of the Department of Mathematics has returned from Y. M. C. A. service in the army.

Dr. Kern and Dr. Noble were engaged in teaching in the Summer Terms of Tulane and North Carolina, respectively.

Professor Lin divided his vacation hetween visits to Chattanooga and Atlanta.

Professor Hamilton spent the early part of the summer In the wheat fields of the West in charge of a group of boys sent out by the Y. M. C. A.

Dr. Key and Professor Harrell remained at home in charge of the work during the summer school.

Dr. Watkins and Dr. Sullivan were in the field canvassing for students until late in the summer.

Professor Huddleston was at his desk in the Old Capitol, where he serves in the State Department of Education as President of the State Board of Examiners.

Carley, you should have been here on College night, Friday, September 19. That occasion, like other things, has undergone a wonderful transformation since our day. This particular occasion was a real live one. The three upper classes and the faculty furnished entertainment for the Freshman.

The particular feat that the faculty performed was to take a wild man whom Dr. Sullivan had discovered in the confines of "Tishowamba" County, and, by concentrating the efforts of the faculty upon him, make of him a polished college graduate in short order. Judging by the way the individual members of the faculty have been kept busy bowing to compliments, it must have been a success.

I could go on and say many other things, but this matter reads as if it were more fit for a college weekly than for a church organ; then, too, I am taking too much of your space and time for one communication. G. L. HARRELL.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

"Nothing is ever settled until it is settled right," says Thomas Carlyle. We are having the time of our lives and the living of our time. Red paint is the prevailing color- everything glows with it. There is a storm on all the commercial seas, and the ship of State is plunging and creaking amid the waves. Men are rushing hither and thither, and a thousand dissonant voices are shouting their woes.

Much of the trouble is imaginary, but Imagination rules the world. Misrepresentation, exaggeration, sometimes downright lying, are seen and heard on every side. Apparently every one wants all one can get, and all manner of getting-devices are seeking whom they may devour. The devil of avarice ls abroad in the land, and he ls swinging in a mighty circle. The price of everything is out of sight, so that past reckonings of values are useless and futile.

There is only one remedy. It is a reassertion In thunder tones to the people of this country of those eternal, changeless principles of right, truth and justice which are the foundation upon which life and living is possible. Men must learn to be fair and honest in their dealing with their fellow-men. The hope now lies In pulpit, press and social intercourse, ringing the changes, again and yet again upon all fraud, deception and lying about prices, expenses, rents, etc. The saving grace of a better day will come when the reform begins within the hearts and consciences of men. There is where the evil lies, and there only can it be corrected. An honest man ls truly the noblest work of God, but men shut God out of their lives, so that He may not work on them.

One of the great, outstanding traits of Jesus' character was his consideration for another; and his fiercest anathemas were leveled against fraud, deception and hypocrisy. For he knew full well that these maleficent devices of Satan could sap the very heart of life and blight the prospects of his coming Kingdom. The love of money, confessedly the root of evil is working more ruin of character in the world to-day, and is doing more to shut the gates of mercy on mankind than anything else: This is the Frankenstein, the heartless monster which must be curbed before we have an end of the present era of uncertainty and worthlessness. Let all the ministers of Christ's saving grace preach against its full influence In no uncertain tones.

No Shrinkage But An Increase

¶ This is the slogan for the Conservation year. It is true that every amount subscribed will not be paid. Sickness, misfortune, or death will prevent the payment of some pledges. But new members, additional pledges, over-payment of subscriptions will provide against such emergencies.

No Shrinkage but an Increase.

¶ The people who undertook to raise $35,000,000 and in an outburst of patriotic devotion subscribed $53,000,000 will never repudiate that pledge. Methodism will not fall short of her self-appointed task. The Church that promised more than she was asked will pay more than she promised.

No Shrinkage but an Increase.

¶ Do not relax effort when you have redeemed your pledge. Increase your subscription, secure a new pledge. In this way the total in cash will exceed the total in pledges. Methodism's big job calls for Methodist measure—"heaped up, pressed down, running over." Remember the slogan.

No Shrinkage but an Increase.

THE HEART GARDEN.

By Ella Ashworth Weld.

Keep your heart clean and it shall be
A garden fit and fair,
In which shall flourish plant and tree
With fruit and blossom rare.

Keep your thoughts pure and they shall be
The seed that may sow,
And in good heart-soil you shall see
Them soon take root and grow.

Speak true, kind words and they shall be
The beauteous blossoms rare,
Shedding rich fragrance full and free
Within a world of care.

Do deeds of love and they shall be,
Each helpful, loving deed,
The perfect fruit of plant and tree
That shall His hungry feed.

A DAY OF DISCOVERY.

By Susan Sunshine.

"Never again will I take two servings of peas!" declared Millicent Chase as the last pod in the basket was emptied. "I had no idea that it took so much time to prepare a dish of peas for dinner."

"I wouldn't let that deter me," laughed her friend, Mary Long, very recently Mrs. Mary Long, wife of John Long, farmer. "It's a good thing for you city folk to find out, just the same, how much work it takes to get ready the food that you buy so carelessly, with grumbles over the prices."

"Never again!" affirmed Millicent bravely. "These peas and beans are worth any price. I thought my back would break bending over those vines this morning. I'll never grumble again."

"I should not have let you work so long at it when you are not used to it. Poor Millicent, to come out to the country to visit, and then be made to work so hard!"

"I'm glad to know how hard it is. I'll have more sympathy with farmers' wives after this. Just let me help you all I can."

Millicent was one of the white-handed toilers—a typical, well-set-up, well-dressed stenographer. When she received an invitation to spend her holidays at the home of the girl for whom she had, a few months before, been bridesmaid, she accepted eagerly. How fragrant had been the cool sitting-room of the old farmhouse, fresh with multitudes of sweet peas and red clover, and glowing with the earliest blooms of goldenrod. That first evening of her arrival John and Mary and she had sat down to a supper of sweet corn, hot biscuits, honey and milk. That first impression of rich simplicity and quiet would endure through many pickings of peas and beans.

The next morning Millicent had appeared with an apron on, and after breakfast offered assistance.

"You might help me make the beds first, and then we'll see," assented Mary gladly. "With two hired men it is quite a task."

After beds they tackled dish washing, and Mary asked:

"Would you like to see what it is like to wash a cream separator?"

"Are all those things in a separator?" the novice gasped, and she began to count. "Fifty parts to scald and dry!"

"We'll have to pick some raspberries. It will be about the last picking of them. We'll make pies with them when we come in. Men insist on pies. Pudding doesn't go with them. But we'll keep some berries to have with cream for supper. Here's a sun-hat for you."

"Isn't a berry-patch the sweetest place!" exclaimed Millicent, gazing around with a smile of ecstacy on the thick leaves of the vines on which the sun shone with its accompanying shadow, and from which warm fragrance rose. "I had no idea it was such a pleasant task picking berries."

"I have learned to love farm work," answered Mary. "But you will get tired at first."

"I don't feel tired in the least! Just try me out! I might make a farmer's wife yet."

"Very well! We'll see what your story is about five o'clock this afternoon."

When they returned to the house with full pails Mary made a fire and began pie-making. Millicent, a little glad to sit down, in spite of the glories of the berry patch, was set at potato scraping.

It was a big bustle getting table set and dinner ready. And it was such a good dinner and such a long time since breakfast that Millicent felt very quiescent afterwards.

"The worst part of being your own cook and bottle washer," she declared, "was getting up and doing dishes when you felt like sitting at ease on the front porch."

"No ease for the farmer in summer time!" countered John. "By the way, girls, if you can get ready some carrots and beans and any other vegetable you like, I'll take them into Millicent's mother when I go to the city this afternoon."

By the time the dishes were done, floor swept, a cake made for supper, and other odds and ends of work attended to, Millicent was for reposing in the hammock for an hour, but when she saw Mary starting out to pick sweet peas she decided not to go back on her resolution to help all day.

"I must be learning a lot to-day," she confessed fifteen minutes later, as she bent over the vines. "I never dreamed that it could be work to pick sweet peas. I supposed nothing about sweet peas could be other than poetry and wafts of heaven; but I discover it to be possible to think more of tired shoulders, or too dry hands, or backache, in the face of these sweet 'butter-flies ready for flight.'"

"Come, Millicent, you have done enough. I would not sour your love of flowers. We have plenty now. Let's stretch out in the hammocks."

Half an hour later John's voice inharmoniously broke in upon the slumbrous quiet of the verandah.

"Hi, girls, got those vegetables ready for town? It's time I was off. You can't expect the men to look after things like that with all the work we have to do."

"John Long," answered Mary with spirit, "you just look at us as if we had done nothing all day but lie here in the hammocks, whereas we sank into them tired to death about five minutes ago."

"Well, if you don't want to send any vegetables in it's all right."

As he turned to go Millicent jumped up.

"Wait, John; I can dig in ten minutes all the carrots and beets mother will want, and throw in a head or two of lettuce, too. Just lie still, Mary; this is my job."

When John was gone and Millicent back in her hammock, Mary crept quietly out to gather the day's fall of apples, to peel for sauce ready for breakfast. They were small and wormy, and oh, so hard on the hands. At first Millicent pretended not to notice, but soon she was peeling away, too.

"All in the day's work," mused Millicent philosophically. Then, aloud: "Let's peel enough of the miserable little sinners to last for to-morrow's supper, too, and then we can take time to-morrow to enjoy ourselves."

But Mary answered: "Something different will come up instead. It always does. Every day is full."

"In that case we might as well laugh as look so glum and tired."

So they did.—The Christian Guardian.

"HOW OLD MUST I BE?"

"Mother," a little child once said, "how old must I be before I can be a Christian?"

The wise mother answered: "How old will you have to be, darling, before you can love me?"

"Why, mother, I always loved you; I do now, and I always will. But you have not told me how old I have to be."

The mother replied: "How old must you be before you can trust yourself wholly to me and my care?"

"I always did," she answered; "but tell me what I want to know," and she put her arms around her mother's neck.

The mother asked again: "How old will you have to be before you can do what I want you to do?"

Then the child whispered, half guessing what her mother meant, "I can now, without growing older."

Her mother said: "You can be a Christian now, darling, without waiting to be older. Don't you want to begin now?"

The child whispered, "Yes." Then they both knelt down, and in her prayer the mother gave to Christ her little one who wanted to be his.—Exchange.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is hereby called to meet in regular annual session on Thursday, October 9, at 11 o'clock, a. m., at the Advocate office, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La. A full attendance is desired.

JNO. F. FOSTER, Chairman.

THE EXPERIENCE MEETING.

It is said that during the time of persecution in the early days of the church a fleeing Christian, when challenged by another, would stoop and draw a fish in the sand. Such was his testimony of his faith, and his passport among friends. The word of testimony and of experience has a power in it and if some of our people have been inclined to assume an apologetic attitude toward the old-time Methodist "experience meeting" so often blessed of God. Christian Scientists have liked the method very much. And if they find it helpful to their propaganda to claim to be healed of burns on the hands, we Methodists might still find it of value to tell others of how God has healed the scars in our souls.

The pastor of a large city church recently asked his people to be ready at the next prayer meeting to recite a verse having in it the word "deliver." Nearly every one of the fifty who were present was ready with a verse of Scripture. It is good to find how many times the Book tells of how God will deliver his people from trouble, deliver them from sin, and above all, deliver them from themselves. At the close of his talk the pastor asked any who had an experience of this word in their own lives to speak. The ready responses on the part of many were a great blessing, and a number afterward said, "We had a good meeting."

We are convinced that the experience meeting is not out-of-date, that the majority of our people would love to "testify," and that the word of testimony and of experience should still be a blessing and a profit to the people called Methodists.

THE CHURCH AND ADVERTISING.

This is the greatest advertising time the world has ever known. It could not be otherwise. The increase of newspapers and periodicals of every kind, the multiplying of billboards, the electric sign, and the development of the science of advertising have all made this a time when no man who has anything to sell fails to let it be known, also the kind of goods, and all about the goods, he has to sell. This great growth of advertising has been brought to notice by the big convention in this city last week of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which was largely attended by men from all parts of the United States and from other countries as well.

There is great effectiveness in advertising otherwise it would not be so extensively carried on. After you have been met a thousand times, somehow, somewhere, with the question, "Good morning, have you used Blank's Soap?" you reach the state where you feel it would be almost a crime to begin the day without using Blank's Soap.

Query—should not the church advertise more? In reality the life of the church has been in its advertising. We do not usually think of it in that way, perhaps, but the last command of an ascending Lord is a very good commission to the followers of that Lord to advertise the most priceless thing the world has ever had. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." You say the gospel is proclaimed from pulpits far and near. But the problem is to bring men to hear that gospel. The pastor may grow discouraged at the dreary expanse of empty pews before him, and have something to say of the poor attendance upon divine worship, and those to whom his words would apply are not present to hear them. A revival meeting is announced, and the men who need it the most do not come. Our problem is to inform the public about our services. Sensational and objectionable methods of advertising should not lead us to discount its value. An advertisement in the street car the other day contained an anachronism that reduced its value—a reference to the world war as if it were going on at the present time. Such seldom happens with the business advertisement, but it is often true of the little advertising we do in the church. Here in New Orleans our church notices in the papers and in hotel directories have sometimes still carried the names of pastors who had been gone from the city for months, and also the announcements of services which were no longer conducted. Strangers have sometimes spoken of the difficulty they had in finding the church of their choice. This is true because so little is given out as to where we are and what we are doing. We may advertise special days and special services, but we neglect the interim, while every morning we are met at every turn by the query, "Have you used Blank's Soap?" An item for judicious advertising in the budget of any church anywhere would prove a good investment.

AN ANOMALY OF GEOMETRY.

It is related that a certain pastor, in his enthusiasm over the lessons of nature all around us, exclaimed, "There is a sermon in every blade of grass!" The pastor was an industrious man. He kept his own lawn. And one day during the week following one of his members passed and saw the preacher mowing the lawn. "Good morning, Doctor," he said, "I'm glad to find you engaged in cutting your sermons short." That is seemingly a "consummation devoutly to be wished" by many who sit in the pew. They would like the sermon to be an anomaly of geometry. It must have height of course—scintillate with bright constellations, and be sprinkled all over with star dust—it must have depth of course, be profound, and pay tribute to the intelligence of the man who proposes to listen for fifteen minutes—but it must have not length. Peculiar parallelogram.

Queer way to judge a sermon, isn't it, just by the amount of time it consumes? One man in a given time may say twice as much as another man, but their sermons must be as two yardsticks. So the good brother in the "Amen corner" should consult his watch at the close of the sermon to find whether he should say Amen! or not. And if all the clocks should go on a strike some day a few minutes after eleven, the hearers that day would go home from church tormented with the insoluble problem as to whether they had heard a good sermon or not. On the other hand, the brother who insists that a sermon should consume an hour would have the same problem, he would not know whether he had preached a good sermon or not.

We incline to believe the blades of grass should be cut short. And as it is harder to cut the grass short than it is to let it go long, it is harder to preach a good short sermon than a long one. But we do object to the clock as the first, final and supreme standard. It might run down some day.

And we know that the man who sits in the pew divides the responsibility of the hour with the man who stands in the pulpit. If there is upon the man who stands there the awful responsibility of preaching, there is upon the man who sits there the awful responsibility of hearing. And his eye should not be upon the clock, but his ear should be open to the message, and his heart responsive to the Holy Spirit.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook writes that he is having among the good people of Silver Creek, Miss., the best year of his ministry.

Several meetings attended by gracious results have been held recently in the Heidelberg, Miss., charge, of which Rev. J. H. Jolly is the pastor. As a result of these meetings, thirty-six have been added to the church.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., writes that he has been busy with meetings throughout the summer, and that a number of persons have been added to the church. Since September 1, he has received 21 into the church, 19 being received upon profession of faith.

In sending the money to cover his subscription for the Advocate during 1919, Rev. C. M. Morris, of Greer, S. C., writes kindly of this periodical. We thank him. Brother Morris was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, and before transferring was pastor of the Epworth Church of this city.

A note from Sister T. S. Randle written from Shreveport, La., states that she is happy in the possession of her own home in Yoakum, Texas. This home has been released from debt by a friend, to whom Sister Randle is very grateful. She writes, "Praise the Lord for friends," and we concur in her sentiment, and rejoice in her good fortune.

We learn through his pastor, Rev. R. H. Wynn, of Ruston, La., of the death there of Brother W. G. Hancock, a member of the Board of Stewards, and a member of the church at Ruston for thirty-four years. He died on September 22. The termination of such a faithful stewardship as that can not be otherwise than a great loss to the church so long blessed by it.

In sending in his fourth round of appointments, Rev. Albert S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe District, Louisiana Conference, writes that this has been a busy year among all the churches in his district, and that the prospects are good for the closing out of a most successful year. Brother Lutz, in addition to his regular work, has helped in ten revival meetings. New territory in the Monroe District has been developed, and some old churches have been revived.

The following statement of the fine opening of Scarritt has come from Dr. Ed F. Cook, president: "The Scarritt Bible and Training School opened its twenty-eighth session on September the 18th, with an enrollment which taxes the building to its utmost capacity to accommodate. All but four or five of the students have qualified under the standards for admission set by the Council. This indicates that the student body is of exceptionally fine material. With the addition of Prof. A. M. Trawick as the head of the department of sociology, Deaconess Mary Ora Durham in the home-life of the School, and in the department of applied Christianity, and Miss Gilberta Harris as director of the courses in elemental medicine and nurse-training and supervisor of the health of the young women, the teaching staff of the institution has been greatly strengthened. The prospects are for a very successful year."

Rev. A. Joe Beasley of Camden, Miss., has recently conducted two good revivals at Millville and Forest Grove. Rev. B. H. Williams of Florence, Miss., did the preaching.

According to an exchange, the largest contribution yet made in the campaign of the Baptist Church for $75,000,000, is by a full-blooded Indian of Oklahoma. He gives $200,000.

We regret to learn that Mrs. J. E. Wimberly, of Port Arthur, Texas, one of the old-time readers of the Advocate, has recently suffered a severe illness. We are glad to know, however, that she is on the road to recovery.

Dr. John T. Sawyer reports that he preached to a large congregation of attentive listeners at Parker Memorial Church, this city, last Sunday night. This church will be dedicated by Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo in the near future.

Rev. W. G. Evans, a local preacher of New Orleans, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, has been appointed to serve the Slidell charge until Conference in place of Rev. T. J. Embree, recently transferred to the Kentucky Conference.

Rev. E. H. Cooley, of Raleigh, Miss., is anxious to get into communication with Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference. He will esteem it as a favor if any one who possesses the desired information will communicate with him at the above address.

After we had closed our forms on Tuesday, we received a telegram from President W. R. Bourne, of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., stating that Centenary had opened with a full attendance, the dormitory being taxed to its capacity. We hope to have a full account of the opening for next week's issue.

At Surphur, La., where are the great sulphur mines which are said to be the largest in the world, our Methodist people are erecting a handsome brick church which, with its furnishings, will cost $17,000. Rev. Louis Hoffpauir is the enterprising young pastor of this active congregation.

Rev. S. D. Howard writes that the work on the Winnsboro charge, Louisiana Conference, is making satisfactory progress. Meetings have recently been held at Crowville and at Boeuf Prairie, in which good was accomplished. Rev. A. S. Lutz, the presiding elder of the Monroe District, did the preaching.

Mr. C. S. Bennett, of Yazoo City, Miss., a prominent layman in our church at that place, honored the Advocate office with a call on Tuesday of this week. He gave a fine report of the activities of the preachers in his section of the State, and of the prosperous condition of various local church enterprises.

Dr. Beverly Carradine, who was injured in an accident in Tacoma, Washington, more than a year ago, is critically ill in Wesley Hospital, Chicago. We have been informed by a close friend of Dr. Carradine that substantial tokens of appreciation would minister greatly to the comfort of this godly man who has been a means of blessing to thousands.

Mr. William McD. Hunt, with Smith Bros., Ltd., of Monroe, La., while attending the Ad. Men's convention in New Orleans last week, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He is a steward in our church at West Monroe, where Rev. J. R. Roy is pastor. Brother Hunt stated that they are now engaged in the splendid enterprise of building a church which is to cost $31,000.

A World's Christian Citizenship Conference, under the auspices of the National Reform Association, will be held at Pittsburgh, Pa., November 9-16. Among the American speakers on the program are Charles Evans Hughes, Henry Van Dyke, Charles E. Jefferson, Nicholas Murray Butler, P. P. Claxton, Henry W. Temple, Gifford Pinchot, Frank J. Cannon, and Arthur Capper. Many prominent statesmen and social reformers from abroad are expected to be present.

Rev. W. H. Nelson, Editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, began his ministry in Louisiana. He went from old Burgundy Street Methodist Church of this city to Centenary College, then at Jackson, La., as a student. Rev. P. O. Lowrey was pastor at that time of Burgundy Street. This congregation was afterward combined with Moreau Street to form Second Methodist Church. Brother Nelson acquired fame as debater while he was in college. Since then he has risen to a place of responsibility in the West.

We acknowledge with pleasure the receipt of an announcement which will be of interest to many readers of the Advocate—that of the marriage in Atlanta, Sept. 15, of Mr. Julien Lee Lipscomb and Miss Hester Lillie Johnstone. The groom is the eldest son of Rev. L. M. Lipscomb of Winona, Miss., and the bride is the daughter Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Albert Johnstone of Atlanta. She is an A.B. graduate of Converse College, S. C., and one of Atlanta's most beautiful and accomplished young women.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, President of Port Gibson Female College of Port Gibson, Miss., announces two recent additions to the faculty of that institution. One is Miss Bamma Glidewell, who takes charge of the department of Home Economics. Miss Glidewell has had special training of seven years for her work. The other teacher added is Miss Georgia Lyons of Kentucky, who has a diploma from Kings's School of Oratory of Pittsburg, and has studied several years in the Cincinnati School of Expression and in the University of Cincinnati. She has taught two years, and has had experience in Lyceum and Chautauqua work. She is highly recommended by some of the most distinguished educators and platform speakers in America.

The pastors of New Orleans have planned special revival efforts in their churches during the month of October. Systematic work will be done to increase the number of persons interested in the several departments of the church, while a campaign will be made to bring the rank and file of the membership to a more vital interest in all the work of the church. Following the plan of the great Centenary Drive, appointed visitors will call upon all the members of a church for the purpose of getting better acquainted, and of cultivating a larger interest in all the activities of the congregation. Similar efforts will be made in the interest of the Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society. Several of the pastors also plan special services in their churches.

A FRIEND, INDEED.

The editor of the Advocate was absent from the office all of last week. In his absence, Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of First Church, New Orleans, very kindly consented to keep the work going. He is entitled to credit for practically all the editorial contributions in this issue. We thank him sincerely. "A friend in need is a friend, indeed."

OPENING OF MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We believe it will be gratifying to you and to all other friends of Mansfield Female College to learn that the old institution has opened with an enrollment exactly 25 per cent greater than the largest number in attendance last year. There are now 115 boarding girls; and about 75 from the town.

It may be of interest to know that there are 14 daughters of ministers here; and we are delighted to have this unquestioned evidence of support and esteem. We have three girls who have offered themselves for service in the Kingdom. Another evidence of widening influence is that we have 35 in the Junior class, which corresponds to the Freshman in the full college course; and, too, there are 22 Seniors. In all, there are 57 students of college rank.

We are happy to say that of the 13 graduates of the Mansfield High School last June, seven are with us; while of the same High School class of a year ago, there are likewise seven.

Our faculty is larger by three than last year and a fourth member is needed. The new members have begun with enthusiasm and with the promise of efficiency and high standards. It seems a shame we have had to turn away nearly a score for lack of room.

We must have $100,000 in buildings and equipment by the opening in September, 1920. We simply can not wait until the Educational Drive of 1921. We must have help NOW, or the church must answer for her failure to provide for the hundreds who are asking for their daughters the ideals of life the Christian college alone can give.

With all our big and rich territory from which to draw patronage we should easily have 500 students here in five years, if we provide the room. No other school in all the Southwest has such a fruitful field as has Mansfield College; and we are not even playing at the game, but rather "lying down on the job" and just "letting things happen."

Here is an opportunity for investment unequaled in the size and character of its dividends; and we present it for immediate and urgent acceptance on the grounds of its productive values in terms of girlhood and womanhood.

Cordially yours,

R. E. BOBBITT.

Mansfield, La., Sept. 25, 1919.

GLADNEY LELUS GREGORY, son of Rev. and Mrs. T. E. Gregory, was born in Pontotoc County, Miss., on August 22, 1906, and died in Columbus, Miss., on May 24, 1919. He joined the Methodist Church at Tyro when he was about eight years of age, and throughout the years which followed he was sober and solid. At the time of his death he was president of the Junior Missionary Society, had made his own contribution to the Centenary Fund, and often led the family devotions. Thus through an increasing seriousness of purpose he gave evidence of the genuineness of the experience upon which his church relationship was founded. But his course was not to be as developments seemed to indicate, and as love had planned it. For, while love and hope saw the prospect of a beautiful harvest in the innocence of childhood and the promise of unwasted years, God called him from his little tasks here to the higher and holier ministries of heaven. It was hard to say good-bye, for hope and love had become intrenched. But faith in God dissipates the shadows; and the hope of the resurrection bids us go joyfully on in the assurance that we shall find the sturdy and manly little fellow in the land where sorrowful surprises, disappointments, and heartaches never come.

W. L. DUREN.

Columbus, Miss., Sept. 20, 1919.

HATTIE A. WESTBROOK — On August 23, 1919, one of the brightest stars of our Sunday school and church crossed over the river to live with Jesus. Our darling Hattie was only twenty-one years of age, and had been in the Sunday school from a little girl; she was secretary of the Sunday school; one of the loveliest characters in town and had a smile for all she met. The only daughter of a family of nine children, she joined the Methodist Church when about fourteen years old and has always been faithful to her Sunday school and church, until she had the influenza last spring, then she began to fail in health. Her hopes were bright and she said to her Sunday school teacher, "I leave all with God, he knows best." So grieve not, dear mother and brothers, for Hattie has only joined on to the chain that is linking in "Our Heavenly Home." Rev. L. A. Darsey was her pastor and officiated at her burial.

HER SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER AND CLASS.

Ocean Springs, Miss.

Mrs. LAURA B. FELDER, wife of Wade H. Felder, born in Holmesville, Miss., June 9, 1855, departed this life, near Summit, April 25, 1919. Her going was as one sleeping, and without a murmur; but in great peace, as she had lived. Joining the Baptist Church in early life, she remained a member until 1875. Some time after, she and Brother Felder were married. Her husband and five daughters, and many other relatives, are left to mourn their loss, their only son having preceded her to heaven. Sister Felder was a quiet, unassuming Christian, always sacrificing for others. Her husband and children were all to her, and for them she helped make a home indeed, in its truest sense, and this gave her a joy that only comes to those who truly serve. Her life was fashioned after the type that helped to make the nation strong with high Christian ideals. She loved the church, and was never happier than when at her place of worship. She was a great sufferer, but bore it with Christian fortitude—always looking to that day when she should reach her heavenly home. Her only regret was leaving those she dearly loved, knowing the loneliness that would follow. The best testimony to her life is written in the lives of those left behind. Her works do follow her. She was buried in a beautiful spot, Felder's Cemetery, on a hill overlooking Topisaw Camp Ground—where she loved to go and enjoy the good fellowship of the saints annually. Brothers King, Cassels, and Brother Anding of the Baptist Church, assisted the pastor when she was interred. Bye and bye we shall meet her.

W. T. GRIFFIN.

UNSELFISH PRAYING.

"'When ye pray,' said Jesus, 'say, Our'—'our Father,' 'our daily bread,' 'our debts,' 'our debtors.'" Mark the fact that this prayer is not given simply for public use when many are praying together; it is directly related with the injunction to go into one's closet, shut the door, and pray in secret. (Matt. 6:5, 6.) Even when in solitude an individual is communing with God, he is to say not merely I and my, but our. The degree to which this social spirit in prayer will take possession of us depends on the vividness with which we perceive the intimate relationships that bind all men together, until each individual is seen not simply as a separate thread, but as an inseparable element in the closely woven fabric of human life. * * * No two persons can be selected, though one lived on Fifth Avenue, New York, and the other on the plains of Arabia, between whom, by many a circuitous route, live-wire connections might not conceivably be traced by a mind sufficient for the task. Subtle influences run out from each and sooner or later come to all; no blessing and no disaster ever can be strictly private; common needs, common perils, and common possibilities bind all mankind together. 'When ye pray, say, Our.'"—Harry Emerson Fosdick, in "The Meaning of Prayer."

DOUBLE WEDDING.

On September 21, at Lake Camp Ground, Miss., Rev. R. E. Rutledge officiated at an interesting double wedding, when Mr. T. F. ATKINSON was married to Miss VIRGIE DENNIS, and Mr. D. W. THOMAS to Miss WILLIE LOIS POWELL. All are of Newton County, Mississippi.

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

IS YOUR BLOOD STARVING FOR WANT OF IRON?

Iron Is Red Blood Food—It Helps to Put Strength and Energy Into the Veins of Men and Roses Into the Cheeks of Women. Why Nuxated Iron so Quickly Builds Up Weak, Nervous, Run-down People.

Who Should Take Nuxated Iron

Thousands of men and women are impairing their constitutions, laying themselves open to illness and literally losing their grip on health, simply because their blood is thinning out and possibly starving through lack of iron. Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly robs him of the virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life. It may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable.

Iron is absolutely essential to enable your blood to transform the food you eat into muscular tissue and brain. It is through iron in the red coloring matter of the body that life-sustaining oxygen enters the body. Without iron there is no strength, vitality and endurance to combat obstacles or withstand severe strains. Contrary to general opinion, lack of iron in the blood does not necessarily mean you do not have enough blood, but it means your blood is not of the right kind. To help make strong, keen, red-blooded people there is nothing better than organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. No matter what other tonics or iron remedies you have used without success, if you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have increased their strength and endurance in two weeks time while taking iron in the proper form. Nuxated Iron is now being used by over three million people annually, and the manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE
Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put On Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

Conference will be here in a few weeks, and will all pastors and superintendents of schools see that every school is reported to me? If you have no blanks, write me for them. They will come in two days to the farthest part of the State. Report all your classes to me under the head of Wesley Bible Classes, but remember your Conference report can only include Registered Bible Classes as Wesley Bible Classes. This is our first attempt at a blank and will do better next year.

Sunday school anniversary meeting at the Annual Conference will be on Saturday night. We are going to give a lively program, with a noted speaker, if arrangements can be made with him.

The success of our Efficiency Conferences will determine our success in the Louisiana Conference for next year. These officers of the districts are the real Board of Directors, and everything should be done to make this meeting the most helpful.

Your Field Secretary visited the Mississippi Conference Institutes last week at Centreville and Fayette. Brother Jno. Chambers is a good secretary, and is doing good work. Glad to have the chance to help you, Brother Chambers.

This has been one of the hardest years in my ministry. I have worked harder. We have not shared each other's burdens in the Conference-wide Sunday school work. It must be done, and, with the co-operation of the presiding elders and district officers in our Efficiency Conferences, we will shape things up for a great work in the Sunday schools of the Louisiana Conference in 1920.

ALONZO EARLY,
Field Secretary.
306-15th St., Alexandria, La.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Institute held at Centerville was very fine in every respect. About half the Sunday schools that should have been there were represented. At Fayette, seven-eighths of the schools were represented. Brother Early of the Louisiana Conference was with us and gave a fine and effective service.

Mrs. W. W. Hopper and Mrs. Olive Millsaps rendered good service. They are both living examples of what godly workers may do in small and difficult fields.

Spent one night at Stevenson. This congregation is ready to build a nice, commodious church. They are building to care for the development of the children.

Sunday was spent at Port Gibson. This Sunday school is doing mighty good work in many respects. There are some fine workers here.

Sunday night I had the opportunity of speaking to the student body at the College. President Hunt is starting off well. He has a large student body. The buildings have been renovated and they make a nice appearance. Blessings upon this worthy institution.

To any Sunday school that will get as many as ten to pledge to attend the class, the Board will furnish a teacher for five or six days and complete one unit of the training course; the school to entertain the teacher and pay traveling expenses. Those who are interested, please make your requests.

Pray for the work and workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN.

The Sunday School Field Workers in Conference at Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 23, 1919, adopted the following paper:

"Realizing the need of a periodical of principles and methods for the Sunday school, we pledge our co-operation in an effort to extend greatly the circulation of The Church School during the month of October, 1919."

It was voted that a goal of 15,000 new subscriptions be fixed and the apportionment made to the Annual Conference Sunday School Boards on the basis of the number of officers and teachers in the several Conferences.

The quotas for the Conferences of Louisiana and Mississippi are as follows: Mississippi Conference, 356 new subscriptions; North Mississippi Conference, 372, and the Louisiana Conference, 303 new subscriptions.

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and Quinine suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.
The Strength - Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same to-day, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

We began our Membership Drive as requested one week ago. Our little band of missionary workers of 24 members have already doubled the number, all our own church members, too. We hope to get just as many more the following week. I am so glad this drive was put on, as it's so hard for our women to see that it's their Christian duty to help in this great cause.

MEETING AT HOULKA, MISS.

The last week in August I helped Brother O. P. Armour in his meeting at Houlka, where we had a most excellent meeting; not a dull service from start to finsh. Some of the services were attended with a great spiritual power. One beautiful thing about the meeting was the co-operation of the other churches, both the Baptist and Presbyterian. The Baptist preacher resident in the town gave genuine brotherly co-operation. All seemed to take equal interest; and the weather was splendid. There had been a rain that settled the dust, and the weather was much cooler; the moon was beautiful, and the country people attended well. Personally, I enjoyed the spirit of the people greatly. Three joined our church on profession of faith; others will join by letter. This was my first time to hold a meeting with Brother Armour, and I enjoyed him and his family greatly; and, not the least thing of interest, a new boy came into the parsonage home during the meeting. So the pastor is doubly happy.

W. M. YOUNG.

Wonderful Egg Producer.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3257 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

TO THE EPWORTH LEAGUERS OF LOUISIANA.

Was there ever an organization worth while that did not have a Standard of Efficiency? True there may be some, but how much better are those that have something to work for, and why should we not be efficient in all our undertakings? When the call came from Uncle Sam, was everyone who answered accepted, or just those that measured up to the standard?

The standards of efficiency in most organizations are very hard to attain, and are made so for various reasons. Just suppose our standard for the Epworth Leagues was very easy to acquire, we would have no doubt a number of Epworth Leagues with the 100 per cent efficiency chart, and then without a doubt the Leaguers would think themselves perfect and would run along smoothly, instead of striving to get higher and do better work. Then again suppose all the departments were not expected to be active. The first department superintendent would not care whether he missed having a leader some Sundays or not, and would not worry about meetings other than on Sundays. The second superintendent would visit the sick once in a while maybe. The third department superintendent might be asleep and have a program for the Leaguers once during the term of office. The fourth department superintendent, it is needless to say, would have no Mission Study Class, or would not attend to the African Special work.

We have a high standard to work for and we should be glad. If a League receives the 100 per cent chart it is doing good work. No League can be a dead one and still receive the gold seal.

Last year in our State there was only one League which received the gold seal. Several other Leagues received the other seals, but not enough. At the next assembly the State officers earnestly hope that there will be a large increase. The fault is, somewhere, but where? Did we fully understand the standard? This year we want you at least to know about the Standard of Efficiency, and then we will have to place the blame somewhere else. The writer will do his best to give or get you any information you wish.

The requirements for a standard Epworth League can be found in our handbooks or upon request from the Central office at Nashville, or from the Vice President. After we have them, what are we going to do? Will we go forward, keep still, or step behind? Let's "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Yours for an efficient League,
EDGAR E. CAYARD,
Vice President.

REPORT FROM DOUBLE SPRINGS, MISS.

We wish the readers of the Advocate to know what great things the Lord has done for us. This is a new field of labor. When husband and I moved to this neighborhood eight years ago we placed our membership with the Purvis Church, nine miles away. We found it inconvenient to attend church services regularly, so about two years ago we organized a little family Sunday school, not only for our good, but to give spiritual training to the three little children which had come to our home. It was not long until some of our neighbors began meeting with us for Sunday school. Soon after this our pastor, Rev. H. Mellard, established a mission work out here. As we had no Methodist church, he preached in the schoolhouse, but the house was soon locked. We then built a brush arbor, but after a few months found it more convenient to have preaching in our home. Brother Mellard had so many appointments he was unable to come to us each month, so he was assisted by his laymen and by Brother Linton L. Harger, who later gave up the work with us to join the army. It made us sad to hear that Brother Harger had fallen on the battlefield in France.

This year when our faithful pastor arranged for Brother P. H. Howse to assist him in a revival meeting out here, we arranged for a lot on which to build a church, and put up a tabernacle or temporary church building. They began a series of meetings on September 7 and continued five days. Through the able preaching of Brother Howse, the prayers and fasting and help of our pastor, Brother Mellard, and of the Christians who were burdened for the unsaved the neighborhood was stirred, and quite a number of precious souls gave bright testimonies as to being saved or reclaimed. A church was organized with eleven members, but before the meeting closed the number had reached thirty-three. Bless His name, the Lord does great things for us when we have faith in Him. Pray for us that we may trust Him for yet greater things.

Mrs. ANNIE L. HAGAN,
Church Conference Secretary.

BRUSH ARBOR REVIVAL AT SENATOBIA.

Dear Brother Carley: Please allow me space to report the greatest revival I was ever in. As soon as I noticed from the papers that Chaplain W. B. Hogg had landed in this country, I spoke to our people about securing him for our revival, and this was done. He was to have reached us Saturday, September 6, to begin the meeting September 7, but was delayed and reached us Monday the 8th, preaching his first sermon Monday night. Believing that Brother Hogg would draw large crowds, our people voted to secure a large tent to be placed on a vacant lot near the business section of the town. When the order was placed for a tent we found that tents were scarce, and we were unable to secure a tent from any tent concern in the United States. We heard from the last concern Thursday before the meeting was to begin Sunday. No tent — what could we do? Some of the brethren said, "Let's build a brush arbor," and we got busy erecting a brush arbor 70x100 feet, with a seating capacity of about 2000. Naturally the old fashioned arbor drew people that would never have gone to a church. The crowds were large from the very beginning. Brother Hogg preached to from 1200 to 2000 every night.

Our original plans were to have not only a town-wide, but also a county-wide revival, and we surely had one. People attended from all parts of this and adjoining counties. People who have lived in Senatobia a lifetime say it was the greatest revival in the history of Senatobia. I never saw such deep-rooted conviction as was felt here throughout the second week of the meeting. Men who persisted in not attending the services admitted that they could feel the effects of the meeting in their own hearts.

Brother Hogg believes in the old-time mourners' bench. A good, consecrated woman said it was the first time she had had an opportunity to talk to penitents at the mourners' bench in 20 years. Not a single hand-shaking proposition was made to sinners, but each time it was "Come to the altar, confess your sins, and ask God for mercy." There was not such a large ingathering of members, as most of the people belong to some church, but fully 200 went to the altar, confessing their sins, and pledging themselves to a new life. There were 29 additions to the Methodist church and about 20 joining the other churches of the town. The people of Senatobia and Tate County presented Brother Hogg with a purse of something over $500 and the local pastor with $200. The meeting closed Friday night, September 19, and Sunday was victory day, as we received the new members into the church. If we could have gone on for another week no doubt much more good would have been accomplished, but Brother Hogg was not physically able to continue.

Soundly Cured
At the Age of 81

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Less than a year ago I sent to you for an appliance which came promptly. I at once put it on and it fitted perfectly. I have worn the appliance not quite 10½ months. It has cured my rupture.

I tried the other day while the appliance was off, to see if I could force anything out of the opening to make a break there but I could not, though I tried hard.

Now I think this quite remarkable as I am in my eighty-first year. I am an old veteran of the Civil War, born and raised in the town of New Boston, State of New Hampshire, from which place I enlisted in the 10th N. H Vol. Inft. in Co. C, commanded by Col. M. T. Donahue.

I cannot feel but that I owe you this testimony for I had never expected to be cured. However, thanks be to God, I found a cure through the valuable appliance you made for me.

Your friend,
E. A. RICHARDS.

Cured Without Operation

"WAS SURE HE WOULD BE A CRIPPLE"

Ada, Minn.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Enclosed is a pleture of my children, and the little man you see seated on the chair is the one who was cured by your Appliance.

He had been ruptured quite a while before we wrote you, and I was sure that he woul be a cripple the rest of his life. However, some helping hand showed me an ad. in a newspaper, with the result that he was in perfect health through the wearing of a Brooks Appliance for just three months.

The doctor advised an operation, which I would not consent to. Your advice was to put an Air Cushion Appliance on him, and I must say that it is worth ten times what it cost.

I wish you could have seen him before we used the Appliance and now, when he is fully as sound as anyone could be.

I cannot thank you too much for what you have done for my boy.

Yours respectfully,
OLIVER HANSON.

The Above Is C. E. Brooks, Inventor of the Appliance. Mr. Brooks Cured Himself of Rupture Over 30 Years Ago and Patented the Appliance from His Personal Experience. If Ruptured Write Today to the Brooks Appliance Co., Marshall, Mich.

Cured in Three Months

Salem, Ohio.

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Mr. Brooks:—

I am sending you a small picture of my son who is now five years old.

We ordered your Appliance for him when he was only two months old, and yet want to say in about three months all signs of rupture were gone, and he is some boy today.

I shall be very glad to say a good word for you whenever the opportunity presents itself.

Yours very truly,
T. A. McCLAIN.

Veteran Cured

Mr. Wm. McAdams, of Kansas, Ill., is a veteran of Co. "H" 59, Regt. Ill. Vol. of which he was Second Lieutenant.

He has fought against the suffering and torment of Rupture for years and has finally won the victory as the following brief letter ells:

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—I laid your appliance aside March 2nd and have not worn it for twenty-five days, for I think that I am cured. I hope that I may never have to wear it again.

Yours truly,
WM. McADAMS, SR.

Doctor Pronounces Him Cured

119 Towle Avenue,
Mishawaka, Ind.

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Mr. Brooks:—

Answering your letter, will say we need no more Appliances, as our son has been completely cured by wearing your Appliance.

We recently had him examined, and the doctor said the opening was entirely closed and that it wasn't necessary to wear it longer.

Thanking you for your kindness, I am,

Yours very truly,
MRS. H. TOLLMAN.

Remember

We send our Appliance on trial to prove what we say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail today.

Ten Reasons Why
You Should Send for Brooks Rupture Appliance

1. It is absolutely the only Appliance of the kind on the market today, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
2. The Appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
4. Unlike the ordinary so-called pads, used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
5. It is small, soft and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
6. The soft, pliable bands holding the Appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
7. There is nothing about it to get foul, and when it becomes soiled it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
8. There are no metal springs in the Appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.
9. All of the material of which the Appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe Appliance to wear.
10. Our reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and our prices are so reasonable, our terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon today.

Pennsylvania Man Thankful

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your Appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Roptore Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it.

My rupture is now all healed up and nothing ever did it but your Appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself I will say a good word for your Appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am,

Yoors very sincerely,
JAMES A. BRITTON.

GET A GOOD GRIP ON HEALTH

Look out for the unnatural weakness that indicates thinning of the blood and lack of power. It means that your bodily organs are starving for want of good nourishment; that the red corpuscles are fewer, unequal to demands of health. Hood's Sarsaparilla increases strength of the delicate and nervous, restores red corpuscles, makes the blood carry health to every part, creates an appetite.

If you need a good cathartic medicine, Hood's Pills will satisfy.

Where Drugs Fail.

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from Shivar Mineral Water. If you suffer from chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer as printed below. His records show that only two in a hundred on the average, have reported "no beneficial results." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful spring. Simply sign the following letter:

11 EGGS A DAY FROM 17 YOUNG PULLETS

Mrs. Niles Started Her Pullets Laying at 6-months Old. Tells How.

"Early in November, I bought a package of Don Sung and started giving it to 17 May pullets. In the first 30 days, they laid 138 lovely eggs, and I got 5 cents apiece for them. All through December I got 11 to 13 eggs a day."—Mrs. E. S. Niles, R. F. D. 2, Lucerne, Ind.

Mrs. Niles, like thousands of others has found how to start young pullets laying and keep them laying all winter. The same method gets the eggs from moulting hens. Whether or not this seems possible to you, try this plan at our risk.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, helps her through the moult, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

Great Believer In Black-Draught

Oklahoma Lady Tells How Her Husband Believes In Black-Draught and Uses It For Many Ailments.

Nowata, Okla.—Mrs. W. B. Dawson, a resident of this place, says: "My husband is a great believer in Black-Draught and thinks it cures about everything.

It is splendid for headache, constipation (which usually causes headache), indigestion, or any kind of stomach trouble, and we just keep it for these troubles. I don't know when we haven't used it, and we always find it satisfactory.

I know it has done us both a lot of good and saved us many dollars. I use it in teaspoon doses at first and follow with small doses, and it sure does make a person feel like new.

It cleanses the liver better than any other liver tonic I have ever used, and after taking a thorough course nature asserts itself and you are not left in a constipated condition that follows a lot of other active medicines. This is one thing I like especially about it."

For over 70 years Thedford's Black-Draught has been in use for many simple ailments and to-day is a recognized standard remedy in thousands of family medicine chests. It will pay you to keep Black-Draught in the house for use when needed.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE TEST OF CHARACTER.

The testimony of character witnesses in a trial in court may influence the jurors in bringing in a verdict; but the real test of character is a man's self-consciousness of his own rectitude. Other men see our acts; we know what our thoughts are. And thoughts come nearer to revealing the true man than acts do.

RELYING ON EXCUSES.

A strong tendency of human nature is to take a chance and then depend upon a plausible excuse in explanation of the failure to attain the desired end. There were indications that some saloon keepers intended to begin selling intoxicating liquors on October 1, relying upon the plea, in case they should be apprehended, that they thought the war time prohibition law expired on that date. Unfortunately for them, officials of the Department of Justice made it perfectly plain that the law is still operative and that any violation of it will be prosecuted promptly and vigorously. Doubtless some of the saloonmen will take a chance anyway, with the hope that they will be lucky enough to escape detection. The history of their business shows that they have very little regard for the law as such. Their usual policy is to put private gain ahead of public good.

THE ILLNESS OF THE PRESIDENT.

The whole country—and the whole world, for that matter—has been greatly concerned about the illness of President Wilson, which forced him to cut short the speech-making tour he had planned throughout the United States in behalf of the League of Nations, and to return to the White House under the constant care of physicians with the hope of recovering from a serious attack of nervous exhaustion. The wonder is that the break-down did not come sooner than it did. Few men in the history of the world have carried heavier burdens or weightier responsibilities than President Wilson has carried during the past few momentous years. Placed by his position in the eyes of the world, the world looked to him for counsel and leadership; and, in obedience to the call of duty, he gave himself unsparingly to the work of winning a world war for righteousness, and of solving the world problems that came with peace. His motives have been maligned and his policies misunderstood; but he has had the courage of his convictions, and has held tenaciously to his views in spite of the determined and powerful opposition of men who differ from him on questions of policy and expediency. The strain was too great for him to maintain continuously, and he has been forced to seek quiet and rest. Good people everywhere will sympathize with him in his affliction, and pray for his speedy recovery. His entire consecration of all his powers to the accomplishment of the task set before him may well be a lesson to all of us.

GAMBLING AND DISHONESTY.

If gambling were not wrong in itself, the mere fact that it so often leads to unequivocal dishonesty should be enough to condemn it in the eyes of all right-thinking people. The recent arrest of a trusted bank clerk in New Orleans on the charge of having embezzled $29,000, proves to be, by his own confession, the sequel to an extended period of betting on horse races. Many other similar instances of the downfall of highly respected young men occupying positions of responsibility have come to light in this city in recent years, and in nearly every one of them gambling has been a chief cause of the humiliation and disgrace. Yet reputable business men, leaders in the commercial life of the city, persist in maintaining that horse racing is an invaluable asset to the city. In doing so, they shut their eyes to its inevitable moral effects and think only of the money they may have a chance to make from the visitors who come to the city during the racing season—and among these visitors are many disreputable characters. It is a bad business looked at from any angle, and we hope that public sentiment will soon become educated to the point where our legislative assemblies will be compelled to protect the people against all institutions that demoralize industry and undermine character.

THE INDUSTRIAL UNREST.

Some of us may betray a tendency to become pessimistic over the prevailing industrial unrest. The newspapers are full of strikes and rumors of strikes. Violence is resorted to in many cases, and loss of life is reported almost every day. The military authorities are frequently called upon to suppress disorder, and rioting is a common occurrence. The outlook, we confess, is discouraging. But we are not of those who believe that a violent revolution is at hand that will bring about an entirely new order of things in the industrial world. We do believe that a process of re-adjustment is going on, which is difficult to understand in some respects, and which is hard to control as conflicting interests come into immediate contact. But we have not lost faith in the essential fairness of the laboring man, or in the willingness of the capitalist ultimately to adjust his views to the changed conditions in which we live. Progress is written into the constitution of man's nature, and a bright star is leading him onward and upward to the attainment of better things. God has not abdicated the throne of the universe, nor has he let fall an impotent arm before a massed assault upon the strongholds of righteousness. He is still in his heaven—yes, and in his world, too—and his law will sooner or later be vindicated and established. We do not mean that we are unmindful of the serious meaning of current events; but we have an invincible faith in the triumph of right over wrong. The age-long prayer for the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth will not remain unanswered forever.

WHERE PARTING SHALL BE NO MORE.

A pathetic incident recorded in the local press recently, was the meeting of a brother and a sister after a separation of fifty-six years. The simple story of their joy at seeing each other again strikes powerfully the chords of sympathy in every human heart. We cannot avoid separations here—and, pehaps, it is best that we cannot—but it makes all the more attractive that home beyond the skies where we shall never have to part from all that we hold most dear. Death loses its sting when we remember that it is the event which ushers us into a world which is incomparably fairer than this one, in which past sorrows are blotted out by the prospect of never-ending joy. Heaven, like a pearl of great price, is not to be had for the asking; but it is worth all it costs.

A BETTER UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN THE RACES.

Difficulties between whites and blacks have recently been eported from various places. In some instances, the outbreaks have been serious, and bloodshed and loss of life have resulted. In our opinion, these difficulties have not been due to race hatred as such, but to local misunderstandings which have developed into violent antagonism. It is greatly to be desired that some means should be discovered by which the leaders of both races in a given community might have the opportunity of learning the exact facts in connection with threatened trouble. We are convinced that, in many cases, wild rumors and exaggerated reports are responsible for disorders that could easily be quieted if there were a thorough understanding of the situation. Friendly conferences before suspicions develop into acts of violence would be very likely to minister to peace and quiet.

THE POET AS A MAN OF ACTION.

Poets are usually thought of as dreamers. They have the power to see things that are imperceptible to the ordinary observer, to hear voices that are inaudible to ordinary ears, and to feel forces that are too tenuous to make an impression upon ordinary mortals. It is their mission to interpret these hidden things in terms of everyday speech and make them a part of the possessions of mankind. They draw the charts by which other men steer their course aright over the tempestuous sea of life. They are the philosophers of the unseen, the exponents of the unattained. They dream the dreams of progress and of power—other men translate those dreams into action. But now and then a poet arises who is a doer as well as a dreamer. The vision that he enables other men to see inspires his own soul, and he bends his energies to the realization of his own glowing ideals. What if he fail as a man of action? He has done no worse than many a poorer mortal who plods the well-beaten and painless paths of mediocrity.

KINDLINESS.

By Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

God is a God of kindness, and he is represented as looking upon the people of Israel in Egyptian bondage and through his loving-kindness delivering them. The Israelites were frequently reminded of this, and it was set before them as the ground of their obedience. They were not to press or to vex the stranger, but to love him; for they knew the heart of the stranger, having been strangers tthemselves in Egypt.

Saul, in the beginning of his reign, showed special kindness to the inhabitants of Jabesh-Gilead. Throughout the checkered career of that strange monarch, they never forgot this generous act, and when, in the darkest hour of his history, he and his sons had fallen on the battlefield, and their bodies had been exposed to gross indignities, these people rushed through the enemy's lines, recovered and gave them an honorable burial. True friendship shines brightest in the darkest hours of the night, and this was a time for it to assert itself in the history of this fateful family. Saul's star had set, to rise no more. Certainly it was the hour of all hours for the inky blackness of the night to be penetrated by at least one ray of kindly light. No one would ever have thought that those obscure people would come to the front so manfully as they did in the hour of the King's supreme desolation, and yet occasions like this afford the best opportunity for real friendship to assert itself.

There are people who never forget a kindly act. Mean and desperately wicked as Nero was, amid the curses and exclamations of an outraged people some one strewed flowers on his grave. Bloodthirsty monster that he was, somebody loved him and dared, the day after his interment, to show this kindness. Possibly Nero paused a moment amid his unparalleled wickedness to do somebody a kindness in life's way.

When the centurion appealed to the Lord for the healing of his servant, the Jews joined in the request because, they said, "He loveth our nation, and hath built us a synagogue." This Roman officer in exhibiting such freedom from racial and religious prejudice had touched the heart of the most secluded of all peoples.

St. Paul took the matter of brotherly kindness for granted: "Concerning brotherly love you have no need that I write unto you, for you yourselves are taught of God to love one another." He exhorts: "Let brotherly love continue." Religion is and ought to be determinative of human life in general, and so, in particular, it molds the grace of heaven-like kindness.

But we need not tax our mind in searching the pages of history for illustrations of this kind. We need only review our own lives—and what precious memories of kindly touches here and there to make us glad and happy! "He that hath friends must show himself friendly." It pays, both with regard to ourselves and also to others, to be on the lookout for opportunities to do some one a real kindness. I once heard of a hard-hearted criminal, who, at the risk of his own life, stopped a runaway horse and saved the lives of the occupants of the buggy. While in his cell awaiting the day of execution, it was the one bright spot in his memory. He had done some one a kindness and his heart was warmed at the thought of his kindly deed. It will impose no hardship on us to be kind, but it will help us to play the game of life successfully.

Men have begun their careers as tyrants by the practicing of little cruelties here and there. By tiger-like tastes of blood they have aroused their inhuman passions till they have become almost madmen in their devilish rage for the fiendish gratification of their savage lusts; but, on the other hand, men may begin with small kindnesses, stimulating the nobler passions of the heart, until they become veritable angels of mercy, and, like their Master, continually going about doing good. We should never forget that the best thing any of us can do for God is to be kind to his other sinful and sorrowing children. We should live in the spirit of Sam Walter Foss's little poem:

Let me live in my house by the side of the road
Where the race of men go by.
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, foolish—so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat
Or hurl the cynic's ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

Lincoln said, "Die when I may, I want it said by one who knows me best that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower where I thought one would grow." This is the secret. How many opportunities have we missed for showing a kindness by permitting ourselves to get cross, peevish, suspicious and critical! Instead of handing people a flower, we have pierced them with a thorn; instead of leaving a benediction, we have left a curse; instead of doing them good, we have done them harm; instead of helping them on to heaven, we have made it easier for them to go to hell.

A chaplain on the battlefield came to a man who was wounded, lying on the cold ground. "Would you like for me to read you something from this book—the Bible?" he asked the soldier. "I am so thirsty," replied the man, "I would rather have a drink of water." Quickly as he could the chaplain brought the water. Then the soldier asked, "Could you put something under my head?" The chaplain took off his light overcoat, rolled it and put it gently under the soldier's head for a pillow. "Now," said the soldier, "if I had something over me! I am very cold." There was only one thing the chaplain could do. He took off his coat and spread it over the soldier. The wounded man looked up into his face and said gratefully, "Thank you." Then he added feebly, "If there is anything in that book in your hand that makes a man do for another what you have done for me, please read it to me." The chaplain read St. John, 3:16. Men are ready to hear us read the Book only when our lives interpret what the Book says.

Let us cultivate a friendly spirit. Join the society of "helpers," be a true friend to man, and every act of kindness will be like bread cast upon the waters. If it be forgotten by those to whom it was done, it will return with a blessing upon your own soul, and in many, many instances it will become the center of a little garden of benevolences in the heart of some one else.

What is life without some one to cheer us
With a word or a smile on the way?
With a friend who is faithful and near us,
And heeds not what others may say?
Remember, a word of complaining
May blight every effort and plan;
But a kind word life's hardships may soften;
Then say a kind word when you can.

Each one of us owns to some failing,
Though some may have more than the rest;
But there's no good in needlessly railing
Against those who are striving their best.
There's no word so easy in saying;
So begin if you have never begun,
And do not in life be delaying,
To say a kind word when you can.

DETERMINED OPPOSITION TO THE WILL OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon,
Chairman, Southern Commission on Unification.

This is a time when every Christian should be quiet and unafraid. Any effort on the part of any man, or any group of men, to prejudice the minds of good people against a great movement, any attempt to array section against section just now, is likely to do harm to the cause of Christ which will not soon be cured. The whole of society seems to be in a state of unstable equilibrium. No, that does not properly describe conditions. All equilibrium seems gone. Men anywhere just now who become so frightened as to lose their poise, are sure to add to the confusion the world is in the midst of. Always the church has been the great stabilizer. Always the men of faith have brought peace and order to the world. Nervousness and fear may spring from several sources. They may come from ill health—in that case one should seek the advice of a Christian physician. They may come from a lack of information as to what is actually going on in the world—in that case one should seek for larger knowledge of affairs. They may come from lack of faith in God. There is beyond doubt what one has called "the atheism of fear." Let us confess that we all break down sometimes just here. May God pity us and help us.

It appears from certain communications published in the church press, that the brethren who have all the while been opposing the unification of American Methodism on principle, have, since the Washington and Chicago race riots, become very active in their opposition to the will of the General Conference. These race riots have excited them. They are ready to believe things about certain members of the commission on unification which those members do not believe about themselves. The impression has somehow (since race riots have occurred up North) gotten hold of them that the majority of the commission representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are ready to admit that the colored man is intellectually and morally and religiously on a footing with the white man, and that he should now be admitted to social equality. It is feared that we are now to have the colored man riding in the same Pullman car, stopping at the same hotel, and worshiping at the same church with our wives and daughters. It is urged by private letter and in public print that the majority of the commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have gone over completely to the historic Northern Methodist position. That the honored brethren who write these things are perfectly sincere, I do not for one moment question. They are among the best Christians in the world and the most distinguished ministers of the church. But I shall ask pardon for saying it (and I trust that my saying it will give no offense to my dear brethren) my brethren are excited. They are needlessly alarmed. And they are just using the tense feeling now existing between the races, in an endeavor to defeat the great plan for the unification of American Methodism—a movement to which they have all the while been opposed.

Unification is going to come about some time—in God's good time. If laymen and preachers who are leading in the movement to make the clock of human progress run backward, would only move to some State like Oklahoma or Missouri and see the folly of a divided Methodism in a united country, and see also that members of the Northern Methodist Church are after all good Christian people, and in addition see just what the attitude of the man from the North is to our brother in black—well, I am inclined to think that they would not be quite so greatly alarmed. Meantime, brethren of my dear old Southland, trust your commissioners. They will not lead our great church astray.

As for the unfortunate colored man, may God help us to remember that Christ died for him also; and may God make us ashamed of having done so little for him. This is no time to be widening the chasm between the two races, in God's providence placed side by side in this country. This is rather the time to ask how to reach out to him a brother's hand. If the colored man ever needed Christian sympathy and help, he needs it now.

Dallas, Texas.

STATEMENT BY THE COMMISSION ON TEMPERANCE AND SOCIAL SERVICE OF M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

Adopted by the Commission at its Session at Lake Junaluska, N. C., August 19-23, 1919, and ordered to be Sent to the Several Annual Conferences and to the Church Press for Publication.

The church of Jesus Christ must face all the facts of life, everywhere and always, honestly, courageously and with unwavering faith, hope and love. She knows that the teaching of her Master gives the only adequate, final answer to all the problems, including those of class and race, which perplex and disturb the peoples of all lands.

Individual Salvation Necessary.

It is undoubtedly true that the preaching of the necessity of personal repentance and faith—personal salvation—was never more greatly needed than it is to-day. Men cannot be saved from sin in the mass, or by any man-made social program, no matter how elaborate or carefully wrought out. Selfish materialism, which recognizes no law but might, and no good but things, which perish with the using, is thoroughly unChristian whether advocated and practiced by the German Kaiser, Wilhelm, or the German Socialist, Karl Marx. Tyranny and injustice are equally as sinful and as destructive of human rights whether practiced by capitalistic trusts or by labor unions. The disciples of Jesus must proclaim the dominance of the spiritual in all the relations of life. "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul." "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." This is and ever must be the dominant note of the church's message.

Jesus Christ Emphasized Social Duties.

But while repentance and faith are absolutely fundamental, how narrow, inadequate, even unfaithful, is that preaching which ignores or fails to emphasize the vivid, realistic, positive teaching of Jesus that in the Final Judgment the genuineness of our repentance and of our faith in Him will be tested by the dominance of love in our relations with our fellowmen. We must manifest an active, loving concern for the hungry, the thirsty, the sick, the imprisoned, the needy, and meet our full responsibility for social and economic conditions in the world about us. The social gospel of Jesus is adequately expressed in His own sweeping "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," or as further amplied, "Therefore, whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." This is the leaven of love which Jesus hid in the mass of the world's life twenty centuries ago, and this leaven will continue its irresistible work till the whole is leavened, until there shall come the new heaven and the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. No church organization is truly Christian which does not recognize, accept, preach and practice this social gospel, and whose members do not let their light so shine that men will see their good works and glorify their Father which is in heaven.

Present Day Strife.

The present day unrest, turmoil and strife are not surprising. The social gospel of Jesus declares that all men, whatever their race or color, shall have their fair share of the necessities, opportunities and joys of life. The appeal, aye the irrepressible demand of the present hour all over the civilized world, for higher wages, shorter hours, better sanitary working conditions, better food, more freedom, a larger participation in the management of the work they are doing, although it sometimes becomes extreme and manifests itself selfishly and destructively, is in essence simply a demand for the application of His teaching to the life of every man, of every race, in every country and in every sphere of activity.

Failure of European Churches.

It is too true that the church has not led in the movement in Europe during the past century for the deliverance of the people from the galling yoke of autocracy and the servitude of class distinction and rule, but every genuine, unselfish reformer, no matter how hostile to the established autocratic, class, State churches, must admit that the simple rule of "Love to your neighbor," laid down by Jesus, gives the only platform upon which can be built the stable government of the future.

Responsibility of Christian Citizenship.

Having stated these broad, unchangeable Christian principles, we shall not attempt to develop or advocate a special program or propose particular remedies. It is not to be expected that the church as an organization should legislate for the nation. But the church can and should proclaim her Master's teaching with such persistence and power that the Christian citizenship of the nation will not only demand legislation which will correct such abuses and wrongs as are at present protected by law, but will also demand and practice fair dealing in all the business relations of life.

Present Day Plans.

Many plans of economic readjustment, even reconstruction, have been proposed and some are receiving the test of experiment. The industrial order is not a fixed one, and we may expect changes to occur in the future as they have occurred in the past. We have heard with special interest of the experiments which have been made in what is called Industrial Democracy. We believe that any satisfactory, permanent plan must be the result of free, frank conferences; of sympathetic, voluntary co-operation of the majority of all those engaged in any way in any industry. No industrial system can be permanent in which the methods and conditions of production and distribution are unfair to any of the parties concerned, whether they be employers, employees, purchasers or ultimate consumers.

Justice For All Demanded.

It should be clearly recognized, that in the present-day strife between wage-workers and manufacturers, the rights of salaried and professional workers have frequently been selfishly ignored, so that untrained, unskilled workmen are given better support than highly trained, experienced accountants, teachers and ministers. No adjustment is fair which fails to provide that the third party, the innocent public, shall not suffer because of disagreements between capital and labor. Production and service should not cease because of industrial disputes. Work should continue while a fair settlement is being wrought out.

For an admirable statement of principles we call attention again to the Social Creed which was ordered to be printed in the Discipline of the General Conference of 1918. The keynote of that Creed is struck in the first article, which declares: "Equal rights and equal justice for all men in all stations of life."

Must Clinch Prohibition Victory.

The ratification of the Federal Constitutional Prohibition Amendment is a cause for great rejoicing by all lovers of human progress. The nation has branded the liquor traffic as an outlaw, as the enemy of the economic, social and moral welfare of the people. But the outlaw is still insolent and defiant, declaring openly the purpose to nullify and then repeal the law. Our warfare is not yet ended, but our people under the wise leadership of the Anti-Saloon League of America and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union must clinch the prohibition victory by the adoption of effective law enforcement legislation and the election of officials who will detect and punish all violations of the law.

World League Against Alcoholism.

We, furthermore, rejoice that a great World League Against Alcoholism has been founded. Our own church through its Commission has had a very active part in this great movement, and the Chairman of our Commission has been elected Chairman of the Executive Committee of the World League. The United States, as the first great prohibition nation of the world, must of necessity take a leading part in extending the frontiers of sobriety throughout the world. The World League Against Alcoholism will be the efficient ally of every Mission Board.

Racial Strife.

We view with great concern the evidences of racial strife between the white and negro races, both in the North and in the South. We must endeavor as Christian patriots to face the facts as they are. With wide-open eyes, and, if possible, without prejudice, we must recognize the existing serious conditions. These two races with differing characteristics, capacities and possibilities of development are here in this land side by side in the ratio of about ten to one. They must live together under such laws and with such limitations, privileges and responsibilities as experience shall demonstrate to be for the higbest interests of both races. While we believe that socially they must walk in separate paths, both in the North and in the South, they can and must help each other in every possible way.

White People Must Help Negroes.

The negroes as a people are still a child race—immature and not capable to-day, whatever may be their future development, of bearing the responsibility of American citizenship unaided. There is a small percentage of the race considerably in advance of the great mass, but these are not sufficiently strong themselves, or sufficiently numerous to bear without help the responsibility of properly leading so many millions. The white people of America must actively, with a genuine, unselfish friendliness continue to help the negroes industrially, intellectually and morally, not only for the sake of the negroes, but for the good of the whole nation of which they are a constituent part. The white people cannot render this help if they hold themselves aloof from the negroes.

Conferences Needed.

In order to obtain the best constructive results, there must be real sympathetic co-operation between the leaders of the two races: national, state and neighborhood conferences should be held, at which there should be frank interchange of opinions concerning travelling, housing, educational, moral and religious conditions; followed by an honest effort to understand the causes of bad feeling and open friction, the prompt and positive condemnation of all acts of injustice, as well as violence, by whomsoever committed, whether white or black; and the determination on the part of the law-abiding element of both races to bring all offenders of both races to justice by the orderly methods of the law. All good citizens must condemn the lawlessness of the mob which takes into its own hands the punishment of evildoers. Lynchings are not only criminal, but we believe the regular processes of the law are in the end far more effective in the discouragement of crime.

Strong Must Help the Weak.

In its attitude toward the negroes the white Christian citizenship of the nation must be dominated by the Scripture teaching, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak." As the weaker, less highly developed race, the negroes natnrally make many mistakes and commit many excesses, which cannot be ignored, and which often require severe punishment. Yet it should be a prime consideration that the ignorance and weakness of the negroes should not be made an occasion for the perpetration upon them of fraud or any kind of injustice, but their comparative helplessness should rather be an appeal for the most charitable treatment. The thoughtful Christian leaders of the two races must not permit the excesses of radicals and extremists to prevent the development of plans for larger sympathy and closer co-operation between the white people and the negroes. Threats, riots, bloodshed cannot solve the problem. Such methods contain no hope of betterment. The religion of Jesus is the only hope, and it can settle this, as well as every other question.

Annual Conferences Boards.

We respectfully call the attention of the Annual Conferences to Paragraphs 415 and 421 of the Discipline of 1918, which direct the Annual Conferences to organize Quadrennial Boards of Temperance and Social Service to plan and to direct the work in the Annual Conferences, and to report concerning said work to the General Conference Commission. We regret to state that no Annual Conference Board made any report the past year. Reports and communications generally should be addressed to the Chairman of the Commission, 30 Bliss Building, Washington, D. C.

Social Service in Local Churches.

The attention of pastors and Sunday school superintendents is called to Paragraphs 113 and 320 of the Discipline, which provide for the organization and the carrying on of social service work in local churches, especially in connection with the Sunday schools and church conferences.

Conference for Social Workers.

In accordance with the plan announced a year ago, a Conference for Social Workers was held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., August 17-24. It was an exceedingly stimulating, thought-provoking conference to those in attendance. A similar conference will be held in the summer of 1920. The Commission would urge the Annual Conference Boards to emphasize the value of attendance upon this conference, and, if possible, to pay the traveling expenses of the Chairman and Secretaries who can attend.

The General Conference did not authorize any assessment for the carrying on of the work of Social Service, and the expense incident upon any work must be met by voluntary contributions, and, therefore, it has so far been impossible for the Commission to develop any literature. We suggest that those desiring literature write to the Federal Council, United Charities Building, New York; the Anti-Saloon League of America, Westerville, Ohio; and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Evanston, Ill.

Desiring that our great church may do its full part in the reconstruction of the economic and social order by the application of the teachings of Jesus, we are your brethren in Christ Jesus.

ANOTHER VIEW OF THE UNIFICATION DISCUSSION.

By Rev. J. E. Godbey, D.D.

I have read in the New Orleans Christian Advocate Bishop Kilgo's letter, copied from the Atlanta Constitution of August 4, entitled "Unavailing Discussion," in which the Bishop assumes that there is no possibility of the Commission agreeing upon any plan of unification of the two great Methodist Churches which the people of the churches will accept.

Evidently the Bishop thinks the discussion of this subject is holding up the activities of the church at a time when every energy should be directed to our own specific work. But we think every issue which demands especial effort at this time equally urges harmony of action on the part of all our Methodist forces, and that the argument drawn from the present condition of affairs speaks most loudly for the unification which our General Conference, at two quadrennial sessions, has by a very strong majority, affirmed to be desirable and possible, declining to relieve the Commission of the task of working out a plan to effect what the church desires.

The suggestion is made that the people—our church members generally—do not desire unification, and that the Commission can not evolve a plan which they will approve. But some who desire the defeat of any plan manifest fear that if the matter of ratification be left wholly to the preachers and laymen, who shall compose our Annual Conferences, the ratification may be secured against the sentiment of our people generally; therefore, they suggest that the matter should be carried to the congregations.

All this is indicative of a troublous state of things, and its real argument to thoughtful, patient men, who can keep their nerve when dealing with a perplexing problem, tends only to the conclusion that the course ordered by the General Conference ought not to be interrupted, but that the voice of all the leaders of our Zion should be to that effect, and so instruct the church at large; otherwise confusion and disintegration are likely to result.

The matter assigned to the Commission is not to debate the desirability or practicability of unification, but to test the possibility of it in some plan to be submitted for the church's acceptance. The government of our church is severely conservative. In any effort to effect a constitutional change, one-fourth of the official representatives of the church opposing change are as strong as three-fourths who favor it. The non-progressive, uninformed man, stayed in conventionalities, opinions or prejudices of the past, is as strong to prevent a change as any three men to effect a change, no matter what their qualifications may be. We find a striking illustration of this when we recall the facts involved in the case to which the Bishop alludes, and which seems to us very unfavorable to his conclusions. The Bishop says, "Not even the opinion of the General Conference can be taken at all times to express the convictions of the church, for in every instance except one in which the questions approved by a two-thirds vote of the General Conference have been sent down to the church the vote of the General Conference has been reversed, and especially has this been in every effort to change the name of the church." The Bishop's memory betrayed him here as respects the facts, for "laity rights for women" have been granted and lay representation was adopted long ago; but we take up the reference to a change of name of the church as serving our purpose to show the power of the minority to prevent a change.

At the General Conference of 1866, a vote was taken to change the name of the church to "Episcopal Methodist Church," and it prevailed by 86 to 38. Several days later, the dissatisfied minority raised the issue that the change proposed was constitutional and should be sent down to the Annual Conferences. A great number of the delegates did not believe that the change of the name of the church could be construed as affecting the constitution of the church in any way, since all its government machinery would remain intact. Nevertheless, to satisfy this minority, a substitute for the original motion was adopted, referring the case to the Conferences. The vote on the substitute stood 102 for it, 42 against it. The proposition thus got a constitutional status by an effort to defeat it. It went to the Conferences and there were 1168 for the change, and 409 against it. It thus failed by 15 votes out of more than 1500 cast of receiving the constitutional vote. It is worth while to state, in this connection, that the proposition to establish lay delegation, which was clearly a constitutional change, was submitted at the same time, and received for adoption 1199 votes, only 31 more than were cast for a change of name. But, one proposition was adopted and the other rejected. Now, when the Bishop tells us that "the church" rejected the proposition to change the name, what does he mean by "the church?" Evidently, the 409 members of the Annual Conferences who defeated the will of 1169 members of the Annual Conferences, and a two-thirds vote of the General Conference.

This is not the place to enter upon a discussion of the wisdom of our church constitution, but it is the place to point out how a sectional sentiment or prejudice, or even a local condition, may be asserted in a way to defeat the judgment and weary the forbearance of the great majority of the church. If what we call "the church," when legally tested, is one-fourth of its representatives, entrenched behind constitutional safeguards, then we must appeal, in all reason, to the "solid South"—if that term is admissible—to consider what situation we are in, and to put aside, as far as possible, all that is local or sectional, since they have power to defeat any change which the majority may desire.

Bishop Kilgo evidently sees that there is still in our church, under constitutional guards, a ruling center with which not all are in sympathy; therefore, he says, "Nothing hinders the Methdist Episcopal Church, South, from coming out of Illinois and Indiana, and out of the far West, and this can be done in thirty minutes, so that we will have no responsibility for this wickedness"—of altar against altar. Here the real issue is struck. So long as our church accepts the idea of accommodation to a locality, where conditions are peculiar, or accommodation to sentiments which are sectional, there will continue to develop the same demand for withdrawal from work here and there. The readjustment by withdrawal will, ere long, leave us a "bed shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it."

The unification with "protected rights," of which some talk, has in view still two bodies, jealous of individual integrity. This is not unification. We do not want that, but we want one church, the result of unification in the true sense—one church in which mutual counsels, as provided for by the constitution, shall be accepted and trusted. Only the lack of confidence demands that there shall

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

READ THE FOLLOWING PROPOSITION.

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a Teacher's Bible if you will send us 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate by November 10. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather and has a concordance and all the usual helps in a Teacher's Bible; it is printed with large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help you persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 each will earn the Bible.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $2.00 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, but secure five, we will give you a copy of "Alpheus W. Wilson—A Prince in Israel," by Rev. Carlton D. Harris. This book contains the life and labors of the late Bishop Wilson. It is bound in cloth and has 210 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. We are about to lose nearly 1000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will be greatly helped.

This offer will hold good until November 1, after which date it will be withdrawn.

be any other guide to our action in tho future, and we would better trust to God's guidance and to brotherly love to shape future development. We have only to believe that those who direct affairs in the future, as needs may arise, will be reasonable Christian men, more competent to deal with conditions as they arise than we are now to anticipate them and make provision for them. "Unification at any cost?" Certainly, at any cost that is possible to be demanded in the godly counsels of Christian men, seeking under better conditions than prevail to-day the greater glory of God in all the plans of the church. We shall pay a far heavier cost against anything we ought to attain by trammeling the church with influences which are local and temporary, than can result from leaving the church free to meet conditions of the future. We should not project our present jealousy or distrust into future conditions.

As to the Negro problem, it belongs to the nation and to all the people. To the church it is the problem of fulfilling Christian duty to a race whom only the united sympathy of the churches can guide into the ways of peace, obedience to law and right development, whom only the churches can protect from wrong and manifold forms of oppression—a race inferior, and destined to remain so, isolated from the mass of our citizenship by an antipathy which is destined to be persistent, and burdened, even in the competitions essential for existence, with handicaps which will remain. If the churches quarrel about them, it will be far worse. Their social status is fixed, and would be what it is if there were no church in existence; and it will remain what it is. The religious welfare of the Negroes and the disposition of the white people to protect them in the rights guaranteed them by law are the things for which God and the Christian would hold us responsible.

It is manifestly to the interest of the Negroes to be organized separately in their own churches. This is asserted by themselves in the fact that five-sixths of all the Methodist Negroes in the United States are, by their own choice, so organized. That shows us the direction of development which their own predilections establish; that is the way the stream flows. There is no more danger of its being reversed than there is that the Mississippi River will reverse its course. The few Negroes now in the M. E. Church are, among their own people, as "a speckled bird." They have been drawn into that relation by earnest missionary work on the part of a white church at immense cost. The thought that all the Methodist Negroes might press into the reorganized church is a nightmare, only possible to the man who is asleep, and who has gone to sleep with out digesting existing facts.

Some of the Conferences are being called upon to express their preferences, between different forms of unification. Last quadrennium, the opposers of unification said, "Let the Commission settle it." Now, if they can got us each to set himself to a particular view and stick to it, nothing can be done, yet all may say, "We were in favor of it had it been possible."

The Missouri Conference discerned the situation and passed, unanimously, a resolution worthy that noble body. Here it is as presented by C. C. Grimes: "Resolved that the Missouri Annual Conference hereby affirms its unanimous action in favor of unification, and that we refuse to tie the hands or embarrass the deliberations of our Commissioners by endorsing any particular plan before the Commissioners have roported it to us."

The last plea against unification is that we have old prejudices still to deal with. Shall we then repent of the sin which we confess, or return to the lines of battle and accuse and oppose one another until Christian faith and fellowship are established?

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

So Dr. Meek thinks I am mistaken, and tho unification rooster is only shamming defeat by the lull in the fight. He may be right, and certainly has a better knowledge of the way things are going than a rural parson in the pines. I hope my error will show how kindly I feel toward our opponents, and how ready I am to believe they are actuated by honorable desire to promote the best interests of the church. Two things have seemed clear to me: first that the policy of the Methodist Episcopal Church in dealing with the negro is diametrically opposed to the policy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The South believes in the separation of tho whites and blacks; the North believes in treating all alike. The South believes in separate churches, separate schools, separate coaches, separate hotels, and so on; the North believes in abolishing all laws that separate the colored people from the white people. President Warren, of Boston University, in an article to Zion's Herald recently, explained the Washington City race riot as the result of Mr. McAdoo's failure to revoke separate coach laws when he had charge of the railroads. This is perfectly consistent with the doctrine and the sentiment of his church about the negro. For the Methodist Episcopal Church to hold any other position concerning the negro would be for it to go back on its whole history from the first, and to alter its fundamental creed. The man who denies that the Methodist Episcopal Church stands for negro equality with the whites simply denies facts that are as clear as the day. Of course they don't practice it down here now. That would be to shut the door of their church against white people in every community. I think their practice in the South a flat contradiction of their doctrine and their practice in the North. They are not consistent. Up North negroes mingle with the white people, sit in the same pews and attend the same schools. In the South, northern Methodists are as much opposed to it as we are. And here is my point: As this is contrary to their creed, a house divided against itself is bound to fall. The M. E. Church has no mission in the South. To have any standing at all it has to conform its practice to our doctrine of the separate treatment of the negro race. I dare them to deny it. I double dare them.

I said there are two points clear to me. That is one; the other is that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, believes in, and practices, a policy toward the negro race that is in accord with the settled purpose of the South in dealing with the race problem. We are consistent in our practice with our creed. We are willing to help the negro to attain to the best that is in him; but we are not willing to put ourselves in a relation to him that will either make our practice contradict our creed, or end our mission to our people by practicing equality with the negro. It is suicidal to put ourselves in antagonism with the universal and profound instinct of race preservation which dictates the Southern policy of dealing with the negro.

In a recent communication to the Nashville Christian Advocate, Dr. J. H. Light, of the Baltimore Conference, scouts the idea of social equality with the negro as a bogy, a scare-crow, a spurious, if not ridiculous, survival of baseless prejudice. I would like to reply to him in the Nashville Christian Advocate; but when I ride up to the castle gate, booted and spurred, and with my lance and shield glittering, and wind my horn, Brother Ivey, the warden who keeps the gate, looks down from his serene seat on the wall, and says, "No, no! You cannot enter here," and down goes the portcullis. Lucky Light! Never was a man more mistaken than the man who thinks the danger of our becoming a mongrel people is an imaginary peril. Has Dr. Light read the book written by the negro, Scott, on "The Negro's Part in the War?" Has Dr. Light read the recent utterances of the Northern Methodist press, and will he deny that they demand that a cultured, refined negro shall have the same recognition as a cultured, refined white person? Does Dr. Light not know that this social recognition is the goal of negro ambition? If he does not, he simply does not interpret the signs of the day. The Methodist Episcopal Church is behind the propaganda. It will spare no effort to break down what it holds is our false doctrine on the subject. If we unite with them, we endorse their views.

Carley, why don't our bishops speak out, as Bishop Kilgo has done, and set this matter at rest? They know that unification by any of the plans so far submitted means the disruption of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. They don't believe in it any more than I do. Even Bishop Mouzon, who is regarded as very strongly in favor of the union, does not want it at the cost of a disrupted Methodism in the South. I know where most of our bishops stand; but our people do not. And this is no time for official red-tape to seal their lips. Oh, for Hoss now! He would snap the withes of officialism, and speak out in meeting. If, as Dr. Meek thinks, the unification rooster is not dead, let me stick another pin in him.

I'm opposed to union with the Northern Methodists and in favor of the League of Nations. I would be in favor of a "league" with the Northern Methodists, but that is not what they want. They want to swallow us whole, and blot us out. Carley, is there no way to "reform" Lodge, and his crowd? They are playing the part of peanut politicians in this greatest crisis in the world's history, holding up the pacification of a war-troubled world for the petty interests of their party! Was there ever a sadder spectacle for men or angels to behold!

That question I asked about spiders has brought me some mighty interesting letters. One from a girl in Alabama tells me they are God's weather-prophets. Another from a Louisiana boy informs me that "they tell you when to cut your hay!" And here is one from a Mississippi boy, eleven years old, who tells me that among other things, "they are made to sharpen the patience of some kinds of STEEL!" Did you ever! Next. I notice, Carley, you are dodging the question, "What are spiders for?" I wish spiders were fond of chiggers, for these invisible bandits have made me scratch this summer, and marred the repose of Camp Idlewild by their thirst for blood.

Bobbitt's college booms. It is full to the brim. The lawn is alive again with the merry maidens. Oh, that somebody who has it to spare would erect a dormitory to provide for the girls he has to turn away.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Presiding Elders and Laymen of the Mississippi Annual Conference.

Dear Brethren: Inasmuch as our Conference Missionary Secretary, Rev. D. C. Hull, recently re-elected Superintendent of the Meridian Public Schools, has found it impossible to serve our Board longer than October 1, the Executive Committee has employed Rev. J. A. Smith, of the Mississippi Conference, to serve as Brother Hull's successor until Conference. Brother Smith is a gifted, cultured, and zealous-hearted young preacher, and has entered upon his new duties with much enthusiasm. We bespeak for him the hearty and prayerful co-operation of all our brethren in the important cause he represents.

The retiring Secretary, Rev. D. C. Hull, has rendered our Board and the church highly efficient and appreciated service, and we greatly regret the necessity of releasing him for other duties. Our prayers and best wishes accompany him in the work of education, to which he has devoted many years.

THE PRICE OF POWER.

By Rev. J. L. Greenway.

The world problems of to-day are largely problems of power. This applies not only in the realm of the natural, but the spiritual. How to bring men to Christ and build the Kingdom of God on earth are problems of power. On the human side we were never better equipped than now. The church has become rich in material things; and in numbers we exceed any previous age. Viewed from this standpoint, we should be making rapid progress in evangelizing the world, but the facts are against us. Some churches are but holding their own. Our church, having, in response to the call of her leaders, laid on God's altar her gifts as never before, is being called to win a million persons for her Lord and King. If the winning of these were only a question of men and money, the solution would be promising, but it is not. Needful as are men and money to the success of the enterprise, one most essential factor is lacking, and that is the necessary power. The power to reach and save men is of God. Our sufficiency for this work is not in money or men, but in God. Just before Jesus gave the great commission He said, "All power is given me both in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and preach the gospel to every creature." The, "therefore" connects the "all power" of Jesus with the commission. What we need, and without which we will fail, is this divine power.

This power the Apostles and Church Fathers had, and men were won to God. This power is freely offered us who are willing to pay the price. Jesus said, "Ye shall receive power, the Holy Spirit coming upon you." Thus we see that this power is lodged in and with the Holy Spirit. God does not give the Spirit of Power to men promiscuously. A well defined price is to be paid, not in money as Simon the sorcerer thought when he offered to pay for the gift of the Holy Spirit, but something we too often shrink from more than the giving of money. This price is more than the unconditional surrender of the life to God. It is nothing short of a complete consecration of oneself. Surrender is one of the conditions of salvation and citizenship in the Kingdom. Consecration is the act of a child of God, whereby he gives himself a living sacrifice for His service. In that act we practically say to God, "Make out the program of my life and I will follow it to the end." When this is done, the Holy Spirit hallows the living temple with His presence and gives the needed power to do His work. The Scriptures, we think, very clearly distinguish between receiving and being filled with the Holy Spirit. Doubtless the disciples received the Holy Spirit before Pentecost, but they are said to have been filled at that time. With this baptism came the enduement of power.

God will not trust some with the full measure of power. Did He do so, He would invite injury to His Kingdom on earth. Even earthly power is a dangerous thing in the hands of scheming, ambitious, and selfish men. Germany has just given us an awful example of this very thing. Self is sure to appropriate everything possible to its own use. Had it the fullness of power, it would attempt to prostitute it by making it minister to its lust and ambition.

There are those who for years have been asking God for this power and have not received it. Some are discouraged, others are perplexed. May it not be that if such persons were to probe their petition to the bottom, they would find some of the "Simon" nature lurking there? They want the power, not so much for the glory of God, as for self-glory. "Lord, clothe this church with mighty power," is a prayer often offered. What for? Well, to be honest, that we may get ahead of the other churches in the community. Men may thus pray for the fullness of power with all the frantic zeal displayed by the prophets of Baal at Carmel, and with no better success, so long as any selfish motive lurks at the bottom of their prayers.

When we give ourselves in full consecration to our Heavenly Father, and seek His glory only, the Spirit of Power will come and dwell in us. We want the Holy Spirit to use Him; but is it not more a question of the Spirit getting us? In response to the call of the church as well as the call of God, are we willing to pay the price? We ought to be. Shall we not enter our closets, and there on bended knees consecrate body, soul and spirit to God? Touch bed-rock in your dealing with God, and sink down in utter helplessness at the foot of the Cross, and its radiance will flood your soul and "Ye shall receive power."

Lucedale, Miss.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

Dear Brother Carley: We dedicated our beautiful church yesterday, and it was a great service and an event that will linger long in the memory of the people of Natchitoches. Brother Harper was at his best and delivered a masterly sermon, which not only delighted the vast concourse of people who heard him, but stirred them profoundly and lodged some great truths in their hearts that are bound to bring rich fruit to the glory of God and the good of his kingdom. What can be as potent for good as a great sermon from the lips of a man who knows God and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent? And yet the many diversions and attractions of modern society are turning aside the people from the house of God, to the irreparable and eternal detriment of their souls.

In keeping with the splendid sermon and the spirit of the hallowed occasion, was the music which, with the assistance of the Normal School faculty and members of choirs of other churches of the town, could hardly be surpassed anywhere. It was, indeed, a great treat to the large assembly, and the whole service throughout was a feast of fat things, and we were lifted to higher planes in the kingdom of our Lord.

This happy occasion marks the crowning triumph of the agony and the struggle of this little band of Methodists here, who have labored and sacrificed through a period of years to build this church under the ministry of Brother R. H. Harper, and to clear it of debt, which goal was reached on the first day of July, 1918. It is true, the two boards of church extension gave us great assistance in the building and paying for this handsome edifice, but beside this help the task upon these faithful few was a heavy one. Methodism is now housed in the most commodious and artistic church edifice in the town and we have the largest auditorium in Natchitoches. Brother Harper, who built this church, deserves the thanks of Louisiana Methodism for this splendid achievement; for through the student body of the State Normal School here the whole State is benefited.

To God be all the praise. Fraternally,

J. W. LEE.

TO THE BISHOPS, MINISTERS, AND FRIENDS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Dear Fathers and Brothers in Christ: At the regular meeting of the Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church, South, held in Louisville, Ky., May, 1919, Dr. H. A. Boaz, Secretary of said Board, asked the Board, in order to help that church whose membership remained loyal to his church during their darkest days, to allow him to issue Annuity Bonds to any one who found himself inclined to help his brother in black. I am glad to say the Board unanimously adopted the recommendation of Dr. Boaz.

Now that he has the authority to receive money and issue Annuity Bonds for the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America. I am appealing to the membership of the entire Southern Methodist Church and especially to those who can remember the loyalty and friendship exhibited by the black man during the Civil War—how their homes, wives and children were protected by my race in a way that should claim the admiration of every Southern white man—to buy an Annuity Bond and help us extend the borders of our church.

If it please you to help us in our struggle, kindly notify Dr. H. A. Boaz, 1115-4th Avenue, Louisville, Ky., Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church, South, of your intention, and he will gladly explain to you.

Thanking you in advance for your promptness in this matter and assuring you that you will have no occasion to regret whatever you may do for us, I beg to remain,

Yours for the spread of the Gospel,

R. S. STOUT, General Secretary,
Church Extension Department, Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 22, 1919.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas this, the last, quarter of 1919 concludes four years of service of Rev. W. W. Mitchell as presiding elder of the Durant District, North Mississippi Conference;

And whereas his whole-hearted service and unceasing labors among us during this quadrennium for the interest of God's kingdom and the church which we love have borne much fruit, as evidenced by both the material and spiritual advancement in the district, and give also promise of even richer fruitage in the days to come because of his faithfulness and unswerving fidelity to the highest and holiest and truest interests,

Therefore be it resolved by the Board of Stewards of Kosciusko Station this day assembled, That it is not only the sense of this body, but of the membership of the church as a whole, that we appreciate the efficient leadership of our presiding elder, his wisdom, clearness and zeal, and hereby extend to him our sincere thanks and pray God's richest blessings upon him and his family wherever their lot may be cast.

Resolved that a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes and a copy given Brother Mitchell.

Signed: R. U. Galloway, Chairman; C. C. Taylor, F. C. Jenkins, M. T. Boswell, S. C. Commander, B. G. Weff, T. H. Morgan, J. H. Cain, J. M. Knotts, for the Board.

DANNY'S RAINY DAY PLAYMATE.

By Helen M. Richardson.

It was a rainy afternoon, and Danny was lonesome. He was tired of playing alone. But what else could he do since there was no one at home except Grandfather Damon?

Of course a grandfather is not much interested in children's games; and grandfathers do not have any games to play. They 'most always are reading, so—

This was as far as Danny had thought it out when Grandfather Damon suddenly folded his newspaper and laid it on the table.

"Lonesome?" he asked, peering at Danny over his glasses.

"Y—es—kinder," replied the little boy.

"I wonder if there is a needie—a very small one, on Grandmother's cushion?" was the next thing Grandfather said. Grandfather Damon always did ask such funny questions.

Danny ran to see and soon rushed back with a very fine needle held carefully between his chubby fingers.

"A glass of water would now be very handy," Grandfather observed with a smile.

What could Grandfather Damon be going to do? Danny's eyes were wide and questioning.

"Did you ever see a needie go sailing?" Grandfather queried.

Danny never had; and he watched with interest as his Grandfather held the needle very carefully in a horizontal position, bringing it as near the water as he could without touching the water. Then all of a sudden, he dropped it.

Danny laughed aloud and clapped his chubby hands as the little needie boat floated safey on the surface of the water.

"Now," said Grandfather, "I am going to wet this needle and we will see what will happen."

Down it pitched into the water. If there had happened to be a crew on board, all would surely have been lost.

"Suppose we try to launch a wire boat now, sonny," Grandfather Damon suggested, producing a piece of wire. "We will have to launch this from a fork," he remarked.

Danny's little feet carried him to the dining-room and back in a twinkling.

The piece of wire was laid across the tines of the fork Danny had brought, and lo! a boat of wire took the place of the needle boat that the wetting had capsized.

Grandfather took pains to remind Danny that only very fine wire and very fine needles can be set sailing, and that both must be perfectly dry or they will surely sink.

"By looking through the side of the glass at the surface of the water, you would see that the floating object rests in a little hollow with sloping sides," Grandfather explained.

"Rainy days are not lonesome when you are learning to do something," Danny confided to his mother at bedtime.

And he also confessed that a grandfather could be a good playmate even for a little boy.—The Child's Hour.

WONDERS OF BIRD MIGRATION.

A great deal of information about birds has been gathered by the Biological Survey of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the past quarter of a century. Some highly interesting data have been gleaned in relation to the migrations of birds, the routes traversed, the times and speeds of their journeys, and published in one of the many bulletins.

A few birds, notably the grouse, the quail, the cardinal, and the Carolina wren are non-migratory, while the arctic tern, which nests in the frigid regions only a few degrees from the north pole and migrates to the borders of the antartic continent, is a wonderful traveler. The 22,000-mile journey from one place to the other requires barely twenty weeks. This means that the bird must cover 150 miles a day. Undoubtedly it averages considerably more than this, for its side flights in quest of food must be taken into consideration.

It would seem that the arctic tern is a lover of the light. At any rate it manages to secure more hours of daylight and sunlight every year than any other living creature, for during at least eight months of the year it lives in a region of perpetual daylight and during the other four months it lives where the daylight period is much longer than the period of darkness.

The average weather, rather than the weather which appears to prevail in a migration period of any particular year, determines the dates of migratory movements. That is to say, migration is more a question of climate than of weather. When the travels once begin, however, the weather encountered has some effect in retarding or accelerating the advance more or less. The time of flight appears to be little affected by winds.

The different species do not follow the same route in migrating. The favorite course extends directly across the Gulf of Mexico. It has generally been believed that after such long-continued flights as this most birds are exhausted and are obliged to seek the ground as soon as possible, but evidence submitted to the biological survey tends to disprove this suggestion.

As knowledge concerning the flight of birds increases, their marvelous efficiency as flying machines becomes more and more apparent. The golden plover, which in favorable weather is able to cover the 2,400 miles over the ocean between Nova Scotia and South America without stop, remaining forty-eight hours on the wing, is spoken of as "an aerial machine that is more economical of fuel (energy) than the best aeroplane yet invented." The application of power in the to-and-fro motion of the bird's wings appears theoretically to be uneconomical, since the power required in bringing the wing forward is wasted and at the same time it increases the friction against the air and retards motion forward. The screw propeller of the aeroplane, with no lost motion, would seem a far more efficient form of mechanism, yet in covering the 2,400 miles of its migratory flight the golden plover uses only about two ounces of fuel in the form of body fat. If a 1,000-pound aeroplane could be made as economical of fuel as this bird, it could make a 20-mile flight on a single pint of gasoline instead of a gallon as it actually requires.

The question of how migrating birds find their way has always been a puzzling one. Birds are known to return unerringly year after year to old nesting places after spending the winter thousands of miles away, flying a large part of the distance by night and crossing large bodies of water which are devoid of guiding marks. Various theories have been advanced to account for this wonderful faculty. One of the latest is that the birds are a sort of natural compass and are peculiarly susceptible to the earth's magnetic lines of force. It is suggested in the department of agriculture bulletin that they find their way by means of a peculiar sense, a sense of direction, which is more or less noticeable in human beings.—Our Dumb Animals.

DID IT PAY?

When Queen Victoria was a little girl, her mother purposely left the papers containing the line of succession to the throne of England where she would find them. After a while the little queen-elect came to her mother with the question: "Mother, who is to be the next heir to the throne after Uncle William? It looks as if I am."

"Yes, daughter," said her mother thoughtfully, "you are."

The little princess answered not a word, but stood thinking deeply as she saw the responsibility of the nation upon her young shoulders.

Suddenly she turned, and lifting her sweet, young face up to her mother's she said earnestly: "Then, mother, I will be good!"

The childish resolve was never forgotten and Queen Victoria's long reign was one of unusual blessing and happiness.

You may never be called upon to be a ruler of nations, but every day you will have to be ruler of your own heart, and no resolve that you can sincerely make will bring more peace, happiness, and blessing into your life than Queen Victoria's motto, "I will be good."—The King's Own.

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

The reports that have come to us of the attendance at the opening of the fall sessions of our schools are most gratifying. We are glad to know that parents are realizing as never before the value of an education in equipping their children for life, and that they are taking advantage of the opportunity afforded them of patronizing institutions that propose, under the auspices of the church, to give an education that is thoroughly Christian in method and content.

It is sad to think, however, that there are some gifted young men and young women who are not able to take advantage of these opportunities because they have not the means with which to meet their necessary expenses while at school. They are ambitious, hard-working young people, who would respond quickly to the broadening and uplifting influences of college life; but they are compelled to deprive themselves of these privileges for the lack of funds.

We have been thinking how easy it would be for the way to be opened for some of these young people to have the advantages they desire with all their hearts, if those who have been blessed with material prosperity could be brought to realize the situation. We have known cases where as small a loan as twenty-five dollars has enabled a young man to spend a year in college when, otherwise, he would have been denied that privilege. We are not in favor of giving a young person the money with which to go to school—it smacks too much of charity, and it has a tendency to undermine manhood. But the establishment of loan funds avoids the dangers of the gift and secures all the benefits that such help may secure.

We venture the assertion that the presidents of all our institutions receive more requests for loans every year from deserving prospective students than they can possibly comply with. In many cases, a small loan would meet every requirement, but even the small amount needed is not available. We happen to know that many a time the president's heart has been made heavy because he was compelled to refuse the modest loan asked for.

Here is a great opportunity for individuals and groups of individuals, such as Sunday school classes, Epworth Leagues, and even congregations, to do an immense amount of good. With the hope that some who read these lines may be disposed to take advantage of this opportunity to do good, we take the liberty of suggesting that they write to the presidents of our colleges for such information as will enable them to make an investment that will yield gratifying dividends throughout time and eternity.

WORK DAY FOR THE ORPHANAGES.

The Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi should not forget that Saturday, October 11, has been set apart as Work Day for the benefit of the orphanages maintained in these two States by our church. No cause lies nearer the heart of our people generally than that of the dependent children who are entrusted to the care of the church as a sacred obligation. Few, indeed, are those who can remain unmoved in the presence of the appealing need of these helpless ones who have been deprived of the nourishing care of father and mother.

More than ever before, perhaps, it is important that the contributions on Work Day this year be numerous and liberal. The high cost of living bears heavily upon our benevolent institutions. From necessity, their expenses have always been kept at a minimum figure, and it is very seldom, even under normal conditions, that there is an appreciable surplus from one month to another to meet the constant needs. Now that the cost of everything that is necessary for the support of these institutions has increased greatly, it is highly important that we take this state of affairs into consideration, and make our contributions correspondingly liberal.

We should not depend upon haphazard giving, either. This matter ought to be brought to the attenton of every member of the church, every member of the Sunday school, and every friend of this great cause, in every pastoral charge in our three Conferences, in a very direct and urgent way. We believe that practically every individual in a community will respond to an appeal of this kind if it is brought to his attenton. Even those who are not usually concerned about the other interests of the church frequently express pleasure at being given the privilege of being asked to contribute to a cause like this.

Sunday, October 12, has been designated as Harvest Day, for the gathering in of the gifts made on Work Day. It ought to be a great day in every congregation. We are confidently expecting to hear that the offerings this year for the support of our orphanages at Ruston, La., and at Jackson, Miss., have exceeded the records of all previous years. The cause is worthy and the need is urgent—let us not fall of our duty.

DEATH OF MRS. I. W. COOPER.

The readers of the Advocate will learn with very great sorrow of the death of Mrs. I. W. Cooper, wife of the distinguished president of Whitworth College, which sad event occurred, after a sudden and brief illness, last Sunday night about midnight. Mrs. Cooper was greatly beloved by the college family and the entire community. The grief-stricken husband and children will have the sincere sympathy of their multitude of friends throughout the connection, and earnest prayers will ascend that they may have the comforting and sustaining presence of the Heavenly Father in this hour of trial. We hope to have a suitable memoir in due time.

THAT SPECIAL OFFER.

We desire to call attention to the fact that our special offer of a Bible or a copy of the Life of Bishop Wilson for new or renewal subscriptions will expire on November 1. A good many of our friends have already taken advantage of this offer to secure for themselves these valuable premiums, but there are still many delinquent subscribers whose renewals could be secured by proper effort. We hope that just as many as possible of these will be secured before the expiration of our special offer on November 1. Brethren, help the Advocate during these next three weeks by a diligent effort to secure a large number of subscriptions to the official church paper. It will mean much to us and it will mean much to your people and the work of the church generally.

DEDICATION OF PARKER MEMORIAL.

Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo will dedicate Parker Memorial Church, this city, next Sunday morning, October 12, at 11 o'clock. This church has made a noble record in the work it has accomplished in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles. A succession of faithful pastors, in connection with a faithful and loyal membership, has steadily emphasized the necessity of maintaining our work in this choice residential section of the city, and, after years of effort, the splendid building has been erected and all financial obligations have been met. The dedication services will mark a great day in the history of Parker Memorial Church in particular, and of New Orleans Methodism in general. The Bishop will doubtless have a great congregation next Sunday morning. Rev. F. M. Freeman is the popular and efficient pastor of the church.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"We expect to have a full report for Conference," writes Rev. W. A. Mangum, of Bernice, La.

Rev. A. Floyd Vaughan is assisting Rev. F. M. Freeman in a meeting at Parker Memorial this week.

Our church at Satartia, Miss., has been greatly beautified by the addition of a new coat of paint. Rev. S. N. Young is the pastor.

The American Bible Society has appointed November 30 as Bible Sunday, with the hope that it will have nation-wide observance.

Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo spent last Sunday in Baton Rouge, La. He was due at Lake Charles, La., on Tuesday, and at Alexandria, La., on Thursday.

Birmingham-Southern College has let the contract for a new dormitory to cost about $65,000. A great forward movement is on in our educational work.

The director of the Baptist $75,000,000 campaign has announced that the will of the late J. Thomas, a wealthy Baptist layman of Dallas, Tex., gives $1,000,000 to the fund.

Rev. S. L. Pope, of the North Mississippi Conference, will make his home at 1428 West Beach Street, Biloxi Miss., until the meeting of his Conference at Aberdeen, Miss., on November 19.

Rev. W. M. Young, of Pontotoc, Miss., recently assisted Rev. D. R. McDougal in a meeting at Calhoun City, Miss. Brother Young, as usual, did fine preaching, and the meeting accomplished much good.

Rev. C. C. Jarrell, Commissioner of Emory University, announces that Mrs. Annie Jones Pyron, of Cartersville, Ga., has given $2000 to begin a foundation for the Sam P. Jones Lectureship on Evangelism.

Mrs. S. C. Stone, of Belen, Miss., a long-time reader of the Advocate, and a devoted member of the church, has recently had to endure great physical suffering; but her interest in the church is unflagging.

Dr. T. B. Holloman was recently called to Vicksburg, Miss., to be with his daughter while she underwent an operation in a sanitarium in that city. We sincerely trust that the ordeal was safely passed.

Rev. John C. Chambers, the wide-awake Sunday School Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, requests us to call attention to his changed address. He is now living at 145 Adams Street, Jackson, Miss.

Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo will dedicate our church at Philadelphia, Miss., on Sunday, October 19. All former pastors are cordially invited to be present on that occasion. We thank the pastor, Rev. C. M. Crossley, for an invitation to join with his people in celebrating the happy event.

A series of revival services was announced to begin at First Church, Shreveport, La., last Sunday. Rev. Clovis Chappell, pastor of the Representative Church, Washington, D. C., was to do the preaching.

The recent meeting at Waldheim, La., in which the pastor, Rev. F. N. Sweeney, was assisted by Rev. J. B. Fulton, resulted in fifteen accessions to the church, and the reorganization of the Sunday school. A fine meeting!

The Louisiana Conference Epworth League cabinet will be in session at Alexandria, La., during the latter part of this week. The object of the meeting is to make arrangements for the Summer Assembly at Mansfield next June.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine, of Eunice, La., has been busily engaged in a house-to-house visitation which will give him complete data as to the population and church membership of the community. Such work cannot fail to be helpful.

Rev. J. Alonzo Early, the efficient Sunday School Field Secretary of the Louisiana Conference, honored the Advocate office with a call on Monday of this week. He will hold a Sunday school institute at Rayne Memorial Church on Tuesday.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., of the Madison Station charge, Mississippi Conference, concluded his round of revival services on September 18. These meetings were fruitful in results, many being added to the membership of the church.

We learn from a press dispatch that Dr. J. W. Lee, who suffered a fractured hip in a fall about two months ago, is critically ill in the Barnes Hospital in St. Louis. Earnest prayers will ascend for the recovery of this distinguished servant of the church.

Mr. James T. Monroe and Miss Alice M. Morse were married at Felicity Church, this city, on Thursday, October 2. Mr. Monroe is a steward in Felicity, and Miss Morse was the church and Sunday school visitor. The Advocate extends congratulations.

Rev. James Healey, a superannuate minister of our church, has been taking the Advocate since 1877. He was converted in that year in a meeting held on the Forest circuit, Mississippi Conference, in which the preaching was done by the late Rev. R. B. Downer.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, of Silver Creek, Miss., was assisted in his revival meetings during the summer by Rev. P. H. Howse, Rev. Jasper L. Smith, Rev. W. D. Barrett, and Rev. W. W. Murray. He speaks very highly of the efficient services of these brethren.

Rev. L. E. Alford, our pastor at Yazoo City, Miss., recently assisted the pastor, Rev. S. N. Young, in two good meetings on the Satartia charge, Mississippi Conference—one at Satartia, and the other at Phoenix. The preaching was of a high order, and the church was greatly edified.

The Sunday school at Lake Charles, La., held its commencement exercises on Friday evening, October 3. An interesting program was given, and certificates of promotion were given to a large number of Sunday school scholars. Our work there is prospering under the leadership of Rev. W. W. Holmes.

The Yearbook for the current year of the General Sunday School Board has reached our desk. It is a fine presentation of the work and plans of this great department of our work. It deserves a careful reading by every Methodist who is interested in Sunday schools—and that ought to mean all of us.

A note from Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., informs us that the college now has 261 students, and that some had to be turned away for lack of room. A new dormitory is urgently needed, and plans are already being made for securing one by the opening of the next session.

As a result of the recent meeting at Lake Charles, La., in which the pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, was assisted by Rev. F. M. Freeman, of Parker Memorial, New Orleans, twenty-three persons applied for church membership. The daily press of Lake Charles commended very highly the preaching of Brother Freeman.

Rev. W. T. Griffin requests us to announce that Pisgah Church, four miles west of Summit, Miss., will be dedicated on Sunday, October 19. The sermon will be preached by Rev. B. W. Lewis, a former pastor, who did much toward the erection of this church. All former pastors are invited to be present. There will be dinner on the ground.

We learn from the Holly Springs Reporter that a community revival meeting was begun in Holly Springs on the last Sunday in September. The services were held in the Methodist church, the preaching was done by a Presbyterian minister, and Christians of all denominations united in the movement. We are sure that much good was accomplished.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Artesia station, North Mississippi Conference, adopted strong resolutions in commendation of the pastor, Rev. T. J. Halfacre, who is completing his fourth year on that charge. The resolutions expressed a desire to have him returned for the fifth year. The church at Artesia has made notable progress within the last four years.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Tupelo Church, North Mississippi Conference, adopted resolutions expressing the great esteem in which Rev. O. W. Bradley and his family are held by the congregation and the community, and voicing the universal regret that is felt on account of the expiration of Brother Bradley's four-year term of service. Such expressions of appreciation mean much to a man who has given himself unreservedly to the welfare of the community in which he lives.

We clip the following from the Mildand Methodist of October 1: "Before these lines reach our readers, Rev. George W. Jackson, of Lenoir City, Tenn., will have been united in holy matrimony to Mrs. W. G. Ventress, daughter of Mrs. Charles B. Galloway, widow of our deceased Bishop. The wedding took place in Atlanta at the home of the bride's sister, Bishop Warren A. Candler officiating. The happy couple will travel through California and other places for a month, after which they will be at home in Lenoir City. Brother Jackson has been a member of the Holston Conference for many years, having asked for a location at our last session. Mrs. Ventress has taught modern languages in Centenary College, Cleveland, Tenn., for a number of years and is much beloved by all who know her." The Advocate joins in best wishes to the happy couple.

DR. E. H. MOUNGER SERIOUSLY ILL.

Dear Brother Carley: I am sorry to announce that Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, and for years one of its distinguished leaders, has been confined to his bed for some weeks, and his health is very precarious; indeed, there is little hope that we may look for improvement. The worst is feared.

He is leaning upon the Everlasting Arm, and, of course, has no apprehension as to the future. Let the prayers of his many friends and brethren go up in his behalf, that the Lord and Savior, whom he has preached so long, may be with him in tender mercies to the end.

CHILD FOR ADOPTION.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, Superintendent of Saint Mark's and Mary Werlein Missions, requests us to state that a beautiful baby girl has been left in his care, which may be adopted into a good home. Persons who may be interested can communicate with Brother Thomas at 1026 Tchoupitoulas Street, New Orleans.

Lord, I strive not to penetrate thy lofty nature, for in no way do I compare my understanding with it; but I desire in some degree to understand thy truth, believed and loved already in my heart; for, indeed, I do not seek to understand in order that I may believe, but I believe in order that I may understand. For this also I believe—namely, that unless I believe I shall not understand.—Selected.

When God is in the office, and the shop, and the market, a new dignity steals into the soul, which manifests itself in the new stride. That new dignity gives the man a new sense of values; and even though there may be many a day when he has not made much money, he finds his success in the glories of spiritual attainment and in the supreme gain of moral rest.—J. In the taking away from the scene of earthly labors of that true man and earnest church worker, W. E. McCORMICK, the church at large has lost one of its most faithful workers, and the church at Clinton its most active member. Because of being always active in business he was not privileged to attend the sessions of this body, but was always at his post in the home church.

Resolved, therefore, that we, the Quarterly conference of Edwards charge. lament his untimely taking and pray the blessings of God upon his family. G. P. McKEOWN.

Edwards, Miss., Sept. 10, 1919.

CODA B. SEALE, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Seale, cut his leg very badly while sawing logs on September 10, and passed away a few hours later. His mother and three of his brothers were with him when the end came. He prayed for himself and asked his mother to pray for him, after which he said he was ready to go home to glory. He was a good boy, whose beautiful voice and smiling face will be greatly missed by our choir and Sunday school. His body was laid to rest in the family burying ground by his two brothers, who preceded him to the other world. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. D. H. Cassels. He leaves a father, mother, four brothers, three sisters, and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. May we all determine, by God's help, to meet Coda in Heaven, where there will be no more sorrow, pain, or death.

His cousin, EMMA STEELE.

O'Neil, Miss., Sept. 24, 1919.

We are saddened to-day by the absence of our beloved brother, T. W. HACKLER, who, since our last Conference, was called hence by death, and whose seat with us is now vacant. Quiet, gentle and unassuming, he seemed to me to have carried with him in every relation of life, whether social, commercial or religious, the innocence and purity of childhood, combined with the dignity, courage and earnestness of true Christian manhood. By those who knew him longest and most intimately it is said that he was never known to have spoken evil of any one, nor was any one ever known to have spoken evil of him. What a comforting heritage this should be to those to whom he was dear! It was my good fortune to number him among my closest friends, and I always found him ready to rejoice with me in my hopes and keenly sympathize with me in my disappointments. I never met him without being strengthened in my desire for a better life morally and spiritually, and I never parted with him without reflecting upon the blessedness of those who at all times and in all circumstances "Dare to do right." Knowing him as I did, I have an abiding faith that although henceforth he will answer no roll call here, yet "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder" he will be of those who answer, "Here am I."

C. N. HARRIS.

Edwards, Miss., Sept. 10, 1919.

ELIZABETH ANN McMILLIAN was born on October 14, 1826, in Amite County, Mississippi, and died near the place of her birth, on September 1, 1919. Her parents were John McMillian and Charity Jones. In 1844 she was married to Elijah Seale, who died in 1875. To this union fourteen children were born, seven of whom are living still. This couple had two hundred and twenty-five, living and dead, descendants, and one sister, Mrs. L. S. Taylor, of Crystal Springs, Miss. When her children were all married, Mrs. Seale divided her estate among them and until the last ten years of her life divided her time among them as well; the last ten years she spent with her youngest daughter, near the place of her birth. At the age of twenty-six Mrs. Seale united with the Methodist Church and was for fifty years a faithful member. She spent many hours alone with God in prayer and song and in a study of the Bible, keeping this up until a very few days before her death. As the shades of evening fall at the close of a day, so fell the shadow of death over the earthly tabernacle of this saint of God, and as the dawn of a new day blesses the world with its presence, so will the morning of the resurrection bring gladness to her soul and to the souls of those who loved her here and hope to meet her there.

FROM GRAND CANE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: For onco In a long while suffer a report from Grand Cane charge. The charge consists of three points: Grand Cane, Stonewall, and Keithville. We are on the graveled road. Tho charge and I own a Ford, so it is a delight to serve them. The chargo has been brought very close together during the last two years. Two arbor meetings and visitations of the Missionary Societies and other things have united the charge very closely. Our Centenary was put over in normal style. Preacher's salary has been raised at Grand Cane. There has been a lot of out-door improvement. New furniture is being put in the parsonage. The dining room has been recently furnished with furniture of the best. Now listen:

Yesterday they gave a kitchen shower. The three churches participated. We received enough to furnish two parsonages luxuriously. Tho material was all high-grade. Think of forty star women being in the parsonage at once! When I looked on the beautiful things, I said, "I can guess who your preacher will be next year."

Within the last two years Grand Cane Church has lost by death and removal five officials. Yet they have raised tho preacher's salary one hundred dollars. It is all paid but the last month. They are going to recover tho parsonage right away, and repaint it at an early date. So, brethren, you need turn no covetous eyes this way. They are already saying that the time limit is moved and that I will not have to move at the end of the four years. I am preaching on the doctrines of Methodism. It lifts my people. They seem glad to hear it. I reeently preached on Methodist demoeracy. A man who can not preach Methodist doctrine, and do it without offense, well, should he be a Methodist preacher? Tho churches on my work are on best of terms with the other denominations. With poor crops we will have to scrap to get the Conference claims. This preacher is happy and expects to be at Conference, D. V., with glad heart to meet the brethren.

ABOUT RHEUMATISM

What Thousands Have Found Gives Relief From This Painful Trouble.

Rheumatism is a constitutional disease, manifesting itself in local aches and pains, inflamed joints and stiff muscles. It cannot be cured by local or external applications. It must have constitutional treatment.

Take a course of the great blood-purifying and tonic medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acid condition of the blood on which rheumatism depends, and gives permanent relief. This medicine combines, with excellent alteratives and tonics, what is generally conceded to be the most effective agent in the treatment of this disease.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed take Hood's Pills. Purely vegetable

Comb Sage Tea in Faded or Gray Hair

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Adv.

After taking two bottles of Foley Kidney Pills I can say my backache is gone, and where I used to lay awake at night with rheumatic pains I can now sleep in comfort and enjoy a good night's rest."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Efficiency Conferences for the Louisiana Conference will begin Tuesday at Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans. Let every pastor in New Orleans attend and bring his workers with him. At the night service, Mr. M. W. Brabham will speak in popular address on the great theme of religious education. Every district will have its meeting.

Do not forget to make report of your school on the blanks furnished by the Field Secretary. Write me for them.

It was a delightful time with John C. Chambers in his institutes at Centerville and Fayette. Our neighbor Conference is doing good work.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The institute for the Greenville District was held at Cleveland. Half of the charges of this district were represented. Rev. E. S. Lewis, Chairman of the Conference Board, took an active and helpful part in the program. Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, District Superintendent of W. B. C. work, gave an address that easily ranked with the best that you can hear anywhere. Mrs. H. L. Tolbert, District Superintendent of the Elementary Division, and Mrs. W. L. Gilliland, Superintendent of the Primary Department, of the Clarksdale school, rendered effective service. The district officers of the Greenville District have promised to bring their district up to the Third Rank Standard by the time of their next district institute.

Brooksville opened wide her doors for the entertainment of the Columbus District Institute. Mrs. Chas. Strong, District Superintendent of Teacher Training, and Mrs. Maude Buntin, Superintendent of W. B. C. work, presented their departments admirably. Mrs. W. B. Howorth, District Superintendent of the Elementary Division, gave out of a full heart things new and old that did the teachers great good. Rev. W. L. Duren, P. E., encouraged his workers by his presence and his ministrations from the platform. The presiding elder counts for more than any one man in the organized effort of the church to go forward. The church needs men who are willing to look after the religious education of her children. Brother McCafferty did no little good by his helpful and pointed questions to the different speakers. This district could be the first in the Conference to attain to the Third Rank Standard if every officer would follow the leadership of the presiding elder. Go at it, men and women.

The institute for the Durant District was held at Goodman. Mr. W. L. Atkins, District Superintendent of Teacher Training, gave an excellent address on his department of the work. Rev. J. M. Guinn, pastor and member of the Sunday School Board, did his full duty to make the institute a success. Mrs. John Donald, District Superintendent of the Elementary Division, presided over her section of the Institute. She is the first to make her chart complete. The Durant District will not be far behind the first in attaining the Third Rank Standard if this consecrated woman gets the co-operation she deserves.

As we were without an elementary superintendent for the Sardis District, we were compelled to hold another meeting at Coldwater the last day of the month. Mrs. Julia Hanley, of Como, Miss., accepted the position of Elementary Superintendent for the Sardis District. Mrs. L. G. Fant, Miss Minnie White, and Miss Mary Ross, of Holly Springs, gave high-class instruction to the teachers that attended this institute.

One more institute for elementary workers is to be held at Corinth some time during this month. This will complete the program of district institutes for the year. Of course one day is too short a time to do the work as it ought to be done. But every one knows why more time was not given. Everybody is so crowded for room you cannot ask for entertainment over night. The main object of this series of institutes was to give the district officers an opportunity to become acquainted with the work by taking a part in the work. This aim was realized to some extent. Not less than twenty district officers attended these meetings and all of them did creditable work. They will do better work in their own schools because of the touch they have had with other teachers and officers.

Sunday School Day and Rally Day make a fine combination, as many schools will testify. West Point observed Sunday School Day some time since, but proposes to give the offering on Rally Day to the Sunday School Board to help spread the kingdom among our own children. This school scores some of the highest points of any in the Conference.

The Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on importsnt business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new snd unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its most distinctive features, ease snd comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, including not only comfort, but style, durahility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven hy the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWesr shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that sll who wish to know about a shoe that combines sll worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

There is an elevator boy in a New York office building who is among a large number of public servants who resent needless questions.

One day there entered his car a rather fussy old lady, and garrulous as well.

"Don't you ever feel sick going up and down in this elevator all day?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am said the boy.

"Is it the motion going down?"

"No, ma'am."

"The motion going up?"

"No, ma'am."

"Is it the stopping that does it?"

"No, ma'am."

"Then what is it?"

You Do More Work

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and Quinine suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength - Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria, or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same to-day, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.—Adv.

Ground for Confidence.

We sometimes want to know how well a man has done when we are asked for an opinion as to how well he will do.

We almost instinctively judge the future by the past; this is reasoning by induction, a process that generally leads to right conclusions.

Certainly, it is reasonable to believe that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has accomplished for others it can and will accomplish for you, provided of course you are afflicted in like manner.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has made thousands healthy and strong, by purifying and enriching the blood, curing diseases of the stomach, liver and kidneys, restoring appetite, relieving that tired feeling—in a word, by building up the whole system. Its record of cures of blood diseases, scrofula, salt rheum or eczema, psoriasis, pimples, boils and other eruptions, catarrh, dyspepsia and rheumatism, is in thousands of letters voluntarily and gratefully written and forming a colossal volume of testimony. Surely anybody suffering from any of these diseases is fully justified in giving this medicine a trial.—Adv.

FROM TEXAS AVENUE, SHREVEPORT, LA.

Conference is just a brief span away, and I thought it might be in order for me to say a few words through the Advocate about the little church which sits out on Texas Avenue, the thoroughfare from which it took its name; what it has done, is doing, and expects to do. There are a number of its members who thoroughly love the little chapel—not so very small either—and delight in every act of progress it takes.

Our pastor, Rev. F. R. Power, has a perfect right to feel spiritually proud of the progress that has been made by this church under his brief guidance. He came to this charge not quite two years ago, and found things in a chaotic condition in several very important respects. First, he was confronted with that much-dreaded condition which preachers regret so much—some of the most prominent members at outs because the preacher they wanted was not sent to them, and they were in no humor to work in the harness that was left for them to pull in. In addition to this untoward condition, Mr. Power found the church and parsonage in debt, and the parsonage in a very unprepossessing condition—not in the least the house that one would voluntarily select as a place of family abode. But Brother Power is of the salt of the earth. He is an extremely hard man to discourage when about his Father's and his Master's business. So, with a smile of encouragement, he went about his task. Full of the right kind of spirituality, Brother Power put on the helmet of faith and went forward to the herculean task which lay before him; so that to-day, the church and parsonage are out of debt, the parsonage being in a very good condition of repair, without one cent of debt being placed on it. And so, as the Conference draws on apace, he feels assured that when his name is called, or his charge is called on to answer, he will say "Everything paid up in full," repeating what he reported last year.

And that is not all. The church has been built up under his pastorate, both spiritually and numerically. He has proved himself a magician in bringing about a cohesive force of workers. His flock recognize in him a man of deep Christian piety, a man who knows the world and the people who live therein. He is an excellent mixer, knows the frailties of the family of man, and can get very close to the one who is in trouble, and ever has the cure for the ill which besets the troubled one.

We have but recently had with us Rev. Leland Clegg, pastor at Zwolle, who preached some extremely strong sermons for the elevation and strenthening of the hearers. Brother Clegg was with us about twelve days, and his stay was one of much benefit. There were not many accessions to the church as the result of his work; but, what was more beneficial, the membership itself was strengthened, uplifted and taught a fuller conception of their duty to the church and to Almighty God. One and all have the very highest regard for Brother Clegg, as a man and as a preacher, and he left behind him many friends who will long remember his earnest, helpful sermons.

With the church in this satisfactory condition, we feel that there is but little doubt, if any at all, that Brother Power will be returned to us next year again. His preaching is continually growing stronger; in fact, he is becoming one of the pulpit powers of Louisiana Methodism.

With kindest regards and best wishes for the Advocate, I remain,

Yours very truly,

CAL D. HICKS.

Shreveport, La., Sept. 25, 1919.

A GOOD BOOK.

A member of the Louisiana Annual Conference asked me to write a few words about the book, "The Christ We Forget." To my mind, no one can read it without being greatly benefited. It is unique, peculiar, wonderfuly suggestive, inspiring, and elevating. It will bear reading, re-reading and studying. Nothing like it has been produced in the past generation or before, to my knowledge.

Wonderful Egg Producer.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3257 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

Three Generations
"When grandmother was young she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some female illness and it helped her. My mother took it during the change of life and it did wonders for her. So when I got into a run down condition and suffered with periodic pains, backache, bearing down pains, I took it and it restored my health."
Thus writes a young woman of the third generation about this great remedy for woman's ills.

THE MOUNTAINS OF JEHOVAH.

By William C. Allen.

A few years ago, when in Korea, I several times enjoyed fellowship with one of the best interpreters I have ever had. He was a native Korean, a devout Christian and a pastor. The spiritual needs of his distraugbt country rested heavily upon him and often he would go up into the mountains adjacent to Seoul and pass the night in prayer. There, under the stars or in the storm, he would hold communion with bis Lord.

Did not this Korean, when thus sacrificing his body, also llft up bis eyes to the eternal hills of God from whence all help comes? Is Jehovah not found by all of us when notbing intervenes between Him and ourselves—when in the sllence of our lnmost souls we pour out our thoughts and entreaty to Him? How vital ls the prayer! how vibrant is the answer! The hills of God are holy ground, yet all of us dally tread them if we will and lay our temptations, our weaknesses, our burdens at His feet. Then, after such a perlod of communion and we perforce return to the valley of commonplace existence, to its enjoyment, its sordidness and its carking cares, we joyously exclaim with that grand old Hebrew prophet. "He maketh my feet like hinds' feet and will make me to walk on my high places!" Even in the somber lowlands of life we may live on the spiritual hills of God.

Those glorious elevations are beautiful to look at from a distance—they seem like exqulsite amethyst ln our quiet moments, like transparent amber ln hours of questioning, like massive battlements in days of fear. But ft is infinltely better to arlse and go to them tban to slmply vlew them from afar. Every slnuous canon wlthln them leads upward, every rugged rock is of immutable strength, every towering peak points to the Son of God. Every flower is refreshed with the dew of heaven, every shrub is redolent with the fragrance of love. The rills of dlvine goodness pour down their rugged slopes—we satlsfy our thirst for Jehovah in their refreshing pools. I ask my readers to set their feet toward those beautlful mountains where they may commune with the Holy One and find strength and rest for their souls.

The sacred charm of the unchangeable mountalns of God is found in the fact that they are all around us. We do not always know thls—our eyes are sometimes holden that we do not see them. How unprotected at tlmes we feel ourselves to be! How the swirl of apparently uncontrollable events threatens to engulf us! How frequently we gaze on the clouds big with darkness and are filled wlth dread lest the rage of the tempest sweep us away! Then we remember the everlasting hllls—we again look up to them because from them cometh our help. We behold them behind the menace of the storm and lts fury ls stayed by tbeir sheltering sides. Over their lofty tops is arched the bow of promlse and renewed confidence in the Eternal Goodness speeds us on our way. We know that God is all about us and we understand the sweetness of the glory of the peace of the prophets who declared:

As the mountains are round about Jerusalem,
So Jehovah is round about His people
From this time forth and forever more.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put On Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

FROM WALNUT GROVE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a good meeting at Zion, on the Walnut Grove charge, where Brother M. L. White did the preaching. Although it was a busy time with the farmers, we had a delightful meeting. Brother White seemed to be at his best and did some good preaching. Besides having the whole church drawn closer to each other and to God as a result of the meeting, we had five accessions to the church and baptized six infants.

We have had good meetings all over the charge, having been assisted by Brothers R. E. Rutledge, J. H. Jolly and J. M. Smith at other places on the charge. All these brethren did good work. Brother J. S. Purcell is to help me at Walnut Grove beginning October 6, and I feel sure we will have a good meeting here. W. N. WARE, P. C.

RENWAR RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanitarium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others. Should anyone doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

Exchange Your Old Body for a New One

You can do it in three weeks and thereby renew your health. This article is written by a physician who has seen it demonstrated in numerous cases and explains how it is done.

Listen: If your weight is one hundred and thirty-three pounds your body contains eighty pounds of water, for according to standard medical books the human body contains sixty-seven and one-half per cent of water. Now, disease is invariably caused by impurities which we call poisons, and these are readily dissolved by the right kind of natural mineral water. Drink ten gallons (eighty pounds) of Shivar mineral water (use no other water for twenty-one days), and you will have exchanged your old body for a new one, so far as the soluble part of it is concerned. The impurities will be dissolved and pass away. If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other curable conditions due to impure blood, accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer which appears below. Read the following letter carefully; then sign and mail it:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-J, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

FROM CALHOUN CITY, MISS.

About 3 o'clock, p. m., on September 27, visitors of the Pittsboro church on this charge, came to the parsonage home—and on their departure, we found our pantry filled with good things to eat too numerous to mention, but all so nice and good we have not the language to express our appreciation. Our hearts just filled up and ran over with gratitude and thanksgiving to God and the good people of Pittsboro. A great people they are, always thoughtful of their pastor and his family. As a charge, no pastor in the North Mississippi Conference serves a better people than this pastor. We are happy on our way and are looking forward with the hope that we may be able to report all over the top this fall at Conference.

FROM THE AMERICUS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: The Americus charge consists of six churches. We have had five of our meetings. We began at Tanner's Chapel, with Brother D. W. Ulmer to do the preaching. He did us some good preaching. The church was revived, but we had no additions. Our next was at Pleasant Hill. Brother C. P. Jones came to us there, and did us good work. His preaching was good. We closed out on Thursday night, with no additions.

Then we came to Rosedale. Brother P. H. Howse did the preaching. Brother Howse is to me a great preacher. No additions. We were next at Robert's Chapel. Brother Van Landrum came to us there, and did us some good work. We had the pleasure of receiving two young men and three young ladies into our church.

We came to Hurley on Sunday, September 14. We had no church at that place, but have organized with 23 members, and we expect to have a home for our people soon. Brother M. R. Jones did the preaching, and every one enjoyed his messages—they were strong and forceful.

We go on the first Sunday in October to our camp meeting at Salem, where Brother D. E. Kelley will come and do all the preaching.

Brother Carley, we invite you to come and be with us. Pray that we may have a revival.

The bridal party left immediately for Amory, where a delightful reception awaited them.

Make More Money With Hogs

An Ideal 900 Lb. Brood Sow

HIS largely involves the feed question, as feed is the principal cost of producing pork. It is not only what to feed, but how to feed, to enable the feeder to get the most out of hogs, in the quickest time at least cost.

It is a proven fact, two or more feeds properly combined are better than any one of the same fed singly. The general farmer, without knowing it, wastes one-fourth of the feed given his hogs, which is a total loss. This is where the balanced ration comes to the relief of the wise feeder. It is not what the pig eats, but what he digests and assimilates that makes the profits.

Expert feeding means success. It teaches you how to cheapen the feed, how to get greater growth and gain over the common way of feeding, from the same feed given, and how to get more pounds of pork from a bushel of corn.

The American Swineherd

is progressive and aggressive. It instructs you in the wisdom gathered by experience, from the greatest experts in their line, being successful, practical feeders, managers and caretakers of the herd. It is a specialist in producing pork from pighood to the pork market. This is the era of advancement and adoption of up-to-date, scientific methods in the hog business. There is a new crop of experience grown monthly.

Special Offer:—For $1.00 we will mail you the American Swineherd for one year. This is the cheapest expert help you can hire. It pays and is economy to take advantage of the experience that brought the other fellow success.

The American Swineherd was founded 33 years ago by the present editor. We have subscribers who have taken the paper for over 25 years. Hundreds of them on renewing say: "Don't let us miss a copy." TO MAKE THIS OFFER SAFE AND FAIR, if you send in the dollar and are not satisfied upon receiving your second month's paper, if you will write us then we will send you the dollar back and take your name off the books.

We give you as a premium for your subscription a copy of the "Hand Book on the Sow." Louis Olin, Peekskill, N. Y., writes:—"I found information, out of a single copy, that, put to practice, saved me more than the cost of your paper for ten years." No matter how many papers you take, you need the money-making information the "Swineherd" gives you. S. A. Love, Supt. Mountain Orchard Farm, Johnstown, Pa., writes:—"I believe the Swineherd the most valuable publication on our list, which includes 16 of the best, dealing with all branches of stock raising, dairying and farming." Why Suffer from It?

Sufferers Should Realize That It Is a Blood Infection.

Doubtless like other sufferers, you have often asked yourself this question, which continues to remain unanswered.

Science has proven that Rheumatism is caused by a germ in your blood, and the only way to reach it is by a remedy which eliminates and removes these little pain demons.

Try it to-day, and you will find yourself at last on the right track to get rid of your Rheumatism. S. S. S. is a splendid system cleanser; it is not sold or recommended for venereal diseases. THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION GETS A TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR CHECK FROM TEXAS OIL FIELD.

Dr. H. A. Boaz, Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, recently accepted an invitation from a Conference classmate, Rev. S. J. Vaughan presiding elder of the Cisco District to visit him in the interest of several new churches. He spent seven days going over the district, a good part of which is in the famous oil fields of Texas. Nine new churches are now in prospect in the Cisco District, two of them costing about $70,000. Each is already in process of construction. About $70,000 was pledged on three new churches during the trip. Much more will be secured in the near future, as two of them are to cost about $75,000 each.

The Trustees of the Pleasant Grove Church hold three acres of land which is now in a proven oil field. The well on this church property is now making for the church about $500 per day. Two others are nearly down to the oil sands.

The quarterly conference to which the Pleasant Grove Church belongs has appointed a committee of three to act in co-operation with the presiding elder, Rev. S. J. Vaughan, and instructed them to deposit the proceeds from these wells with the Board of Church Extension to be loaned for the building of churches and parsonages, and to be known as the Cisco District Loan Fund.

At the close of the visit through the district, the Treasurer of Pleasant Grove Church, Elisha Roper, handed Dr. Boaz his check for Twenty-five Thousand Dollars ($25,000) as the first amount coming from this source. Other checks will be coming from month to month.

Rev. S. J. Vaughan and the Pleasant Grove Church are to be congratulated on this wise decision.

A SUCCESSFUL MEETING.

On Sunday night, September 21, we closed, in Rolling Fork, Miss., a very successful meeting. Rev. D. E. Kelley, Mississippi Conference Evangelist, did the preaching. Brother Kelley is indeed a great preacher. He makes no pretense at oratory, though some of his oratorical flourishes would do credit to the most pretentious orator. He makes no attempt at technical theology, but is thoroughly orthodox. He seems to be averse to modern theological criticism, and the so-called advanced biblical studies and interpretations, and elegant, up-to-date presentations. He makes no effort to display knowledge of any science save the science of divinity, or of any philosophy except the philosophy of right living, or of any sociology but the sociology taught and fostered by the Christ; but with sledge-hammer blows he batters the ramparts of sin, making his attacks from unexpected angles, and maneuvering by tactics peculiar to himself; and never relents till hell's foundations tremble. Then with the skill of a master, he swings to the mellow, comforting description of the joys that await the people of God, and the sure compensation that comes from service rendered to the Lord and the reward of a life of righteousness.

The meeting was good from the beginning. The first two services were held in the Methodist Church. Then we moved to the courthouse, which has a large, well-seated audltorium. At times this audltorium was filled, and many, many were blessed.

But to be sure, the devil works in many ways, his evils to perform. Hardly was the meeting going well in the courthouse, when the bugs came up with the sons of God, whether to worship or otherwise, I know not, but one thing I do know, "their power was to hurt" and annoy. Oh, those bugs! My right hand may forget its cunning, but I will never forget those bugs. I have seen lady bugs, and unlady bugs, and betsy bugs, and humbugs, and many other bugs; I have chased the bugs, and been chased by the bugs, but never before have I been so badly tormented by any kind of bugs as I was by those bugs that came to our meeting. I wonder if they are not akin to Pharaoh's flies.

We suffered two nights from these pestiferous insects. A few of our peopeople retreated, but most of us had no intention of fleeing the stage before such pesky little demons, so we conceived the idea of turning out all but two of the lights, and placing them near an outside window. This confined the bugs to a very small area in the building, and put an end to the torment that we had been suffering.

As a result of the meeting, we received eighteen into the Methodist Church; three joined the Baptist Church. Several agreed to lead prayer meeting. Quite a number of church members who had grown cold were revived. The pastor's salary was raised from $1350 to $1500. A Church Building Committee is appointed, and I think we will soon begin building a new church. T. J. O'NEIL, Pastor.

What 15 Cents Will Do

It Brings You 13 Big Issues of Leading Illustrated Weekly Magazine of Nation's Capital.

Washington, D. C., Special—Profiteering has no place in the dealings of the Pathfinder with the American reading public. Its red-blooded editor produces a wonderful weekly magazine that already has more than a million readers, and in spite of the increased cost of paper, postage, labor and the advice of his friends, he refuses to withdraw his amazing offer to send the next 13 big weekly issues for 15 cents. He says it pays to invest in new friends.

The Pathfinder is indispensable, because it prints the news of the whole world and every issue is packed with uplift, inspiration, intimate American interpretations of world events and entertainment. Fifteen cents mailed to the Pathfinder, 135 Douglass Street, Washington, D. C., will secure the next 13 big issues.—Adv.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

HOW PROMOTION IS GAINED.

We were struck the other day by an account of the rapid rise of a young man from an insignificant place to a position of responsibility with the firm by which he is employed, within the short period of seven months. In explanation of his promotion, the statement is made, "He found that it paid to be polite, courteous, and painstaking." He did not depend upon a "pull" or outside influence for his success, but he made use of the powers that he had within himself to reach his goal. This is a simple lesson, but it is a difficult one to learn. Courtesy and hard work, coupled, of course, with ability and good character, will invariably win recognition. Those who depend upon "luck" to bring them their rewards, should remember that the determined man can make "luck" do his bidding.

LOOKING FOR THE GOOD.

Somehow or other, it is very easy for us to see the faults of other people, and, having seen them, it is no trouble at all for us to express our opinion in forceful and unmistakable terms. In fact, most of us are prone to criticise even our friends harshly on the slightest provocation. How much better it would be if we would try for awhile to forget their faults and magnify their virtues! A kind word will often do more good in correcting the shortcomings of an individual than a volume of abuse. "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger," expresses a truth that experience taught a good many hundreds of years ago—and it is a truth as much to-day as it was then. We need not shut our eyes to the evil there is in the world—but we need to open them to the good. If we will look for the good in people, we may discover that life, after all, is not the sordid affair we once thought it to be.

THE PROFITS OF PLAY.

Unusual interest was taken this year in the baseball championship contest between the Cincinnati team of the National League and the Chicago team of the American League. The Cincinnati team won the pennant by taking five of the eight games played. According to published figures, the total attendance at the games was 236,928; the total receipts were $722,414; each player's share on the Cincinnati team was $5,207.01, and on the Chicago team, $3,254.36. We do not begrudge these men one penny of what they received; but we cannot refrain from remarking upon the fact that the American people seem to be more inclined to pay liberally to be entertained than they are to support those who teach their children, or to provide for those who minister to them in spiritual things. There is a great shortage of teachers this year because salaries are altogether inadequate; and it is one of the crying shames of our ecclesiastical organizations that the average salary of ministers is far below the minimum requirement of decent living. Measured by material standards, playing is worth more than preaching.

THE SUN IS STILL SHINING.

We recognize the fact that we are in the midst of great problems, critical junctures, momentous events. And we are perfectly aware of the wisdom of facing these things calmly, seriously, and earnestly. But we do not believe that we should flood the world with pessimistic wails, or give way to outbursts of hysteria. The clouds may be black and heavy—but the sun is still shining and its light will break through sooner or later. When the earth was without form, and void, and darkness was upon the face of the earth, God said, "Let there be light"—and there was light. So it will be again.

GIVE AS WELL AS TAKE.

It is a common saying to-day that labor has come into its own. This is taken to mean that the laboring man is receiving something like an adequate wage for the service he renders in maintaining the equilibrium of business and in promoting industry. We are glad that the time has come when men can make a comfortable living by working with their hands, and we hope we shall never again see the day when "starvation wages" will be possible in any occupation. But a full day's pay ought to buy a full day's work. We watched a gang of fourteen men shoveling dirt the other day. At one time, ten of them were leaning on their shovels, chatting pleasantly with one another, or gazing around as if they were disinterested observers of what was going on. They were taking full pay, but they were not giving full service. It is a true saying that "the laborer is worthy of his hire;" it is also true that the employer has some rights in the premises. Our economic problems will not be solved until all of us learn that justice is a fundamental requirement in the proper adjustment of our economic relationships.

A PREACHER LEADS.

A Baptist preacher, Lieutenant Belvin W. Maynard, of North Carolina, finished first in the race across the continent in a flying machine. The distance covered is 2,701 miles, and the actual flying time was 24 hours, 59 minutes, 48½ seconds, in the words of the distinguished Dr. T. B. Holloman, that was "going some." We are not surprised that a minister won the race. There is a tendency in some quarters to think of preachers as "mollycoddles"—an effeminate type of men lacking in physical vigor and inclined to a kind of intellectual insipidity that is as nauseating as it is unbecoming in a man of high calling. But modern conditions are forcing the world to realize that religion makes its strongest appeal to men of big minds and big hearts. There is nothing about it that is suggestive of weakness or littleness. The outstanding hero of the war—Sergeant York—is as heroic in the maintenance of his uncompromising Christian character as he was in repelling the onslaughts of the Huns. Nothing but the grace of God would have enabled him to resist the temptations to make personal profit out of his brave exploit that have assailed him on every side. Sometime the world will recognize the truth that the better Christian a man is, the bigger man he is. Most of us have plenty of room for growth.

THE RED CROSS ROLL CALL.

The Third Red Cross Roll Call will be held this year from November 2 to November 11. This is one appeal that ought to be responded to heartily and sympathetically by every American citizen. Some people may be inclined to feel that the mission of the Red Cross is over, since the great war has come to an end. But a brief survey of the situation will show that there is still urgent need of its ministry, not only with the forces that are still in active service, but also in connection with the reconstruction problems that have arisen directly out of the situation brought about by the war. The good that the Red Cross has already accomplished is incalculable. Its agents were angels of mercy in field and camp during the bitter days of the terrible struggle. No pen can record properly the meaning of all they did for the good of the men who were in the midst of the conflict—but it is indelibly written upon the hearts of the men themselves. It will be a privilege to pay a dollar for membership in this great organization when it makes its appeal a few weeks from now, and to help it in whatever other way may be possible.

THEY KNOW THEIR OWN BUSINESS.

According to newspaper reports, the president of the National Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers stated recently that prohibition has hurt rather than helped the sale of ice cream. A representative of a New Orleans newspaper interviewed several of the leading retail dealers in ice cream with reference to the subject. They were unanimous in their statements that their business has shown a marked increase within the last six months. The increase ranged all the way from 20 to 30 per cent, only one firm putting it as low as 10 per cent. We presume these dealers know what they are talking about—they ought to keep up with their own business pretty well. We are convinced that a good deal of the talk about the losses on account of prohibition is for a purpose. Since Congress has adopted the enforcement code for war-time as well as constitutional prohibition, every effort possible is being made to have it declared unconstitutional or to have it made ineffective in some other way. The liquor forces are grasping at every straw in order to save themselves from the necessity of giving up a business that the public has declared must go. The overwhelming vote by which the enforcement provisions were adopted shows that the members of Congress are in close touch with public opinion. The prejudiced, and oftentimes false, statements of interested persons are not likely to lead anybody astray.

ROADS.

Answer, soul of mine—which way
Hast thou made a road to-day?
Hast thou followed Love's sure chain
Over hill and over plain?
Whichsoever choice thou'st made,
There another road is laid—
Not a transient, fading trail,
But a path that shall not fail.
Evermore some foot shall stray
O'er the road thou mad'st to-day.
Ah, let each of us beware
How his thonghts and motives bear!
Every road that we shall choose,
Other pilgrim feet will use.
Some will follow where we lead
Long as life shapes life, indeed.
Have a brother's care and pray
God to mark thy road each day.

FOUR ASPECTS OF THE SPIRITUAL LIFE AS EXEMPLIFIED BY ST. PAUL.

By Rev. William Wakinshaw.

Our spiritual life is full of surprises. All kinds of foolish and misleading phrases circulate among us. One of them is "the monotony of life." The idea which the words seek to convey is an absolute delusion. Any day may occur a birth, a marriage, a death, a moral resurrection, or some other event that directly or indirectly will transform thousands of lives. Look at the war that has devastated Europe. To our nation, at least, it came suddenly, like lightning leaping from the bosom of a cloud. Millions of lives have been lost or maimed. Myriads of homes have been desolated. The whole civilized world has been involved.

What is true of this tremendous struggle applies continually to individuals. Calvin was passing through Geneva intending to stay there only for a night. A group of Protestants heard of his arrival and prevailed upon him to remain, and from that Swiss city for a generation he dominated the theological world of Europe. Cromwell was forty-two when, in defense of our national liberties, he unsheathed his sword and out of this country squire, this civilian, there emerged one of the most daring and capable soldiers that ever led an army. Gibbon had no definite aim in his studies. It was when he sat musing amid the ruins of the Capitol, while the barefooted friars were singing vespers in the temple of Jupiter, that the idea of writing the story of the decline and fall of Rome first started to his mind. For twenty years he pursued his purpose and at last produced one of our historical masterpieces.

Surprises greater than any of these have often occurred in the spiritual realm. When Paul as a persecutor journeyed to Damascus we are told that "suddenly" there shone round about him a light out of heaven. In a moment the river of his life was diverted from its old bed and poured into a new channel. Augustine in the garden at Milan, Luther on the sacred stairs at Rome, Wesley in the meeting-house in Aldersgate Street, Spurgeon in the Primitive Methodist chapel in Colchester, are all familiar examples of how the Holy Spirit may suddenly accomplish His work in the souls of men.

In one of our most beautiful parks there is what is known as the Surprise View. The visitor is led along a narrow and commonplace path. Then the guide flings open a huge door and a glorious landscape is revealed. A sunlit glade, across which a silver stream is winding, stretches before the eye and the prospect is crowned with the massy ruins of a magnificent abbey. Here is a parable of the spiritual life. Our way for the moment may be dreary and restricted. But we know not how soon or how swiftly our Heavenly Guide may swing open a door that will disclose to us a Garden of Eden sloping up to the very gates of the celestial city.

Think of the resources of our spiritual life. There are wonderful powers of restoration in Nature. Oliver Wendell Holmes has an exquisite description of how she heals a scar on her face. A landslip has occurred. At once the sun and the wind and the rain and the trees and the flowers and the grasses form a beneficent conspiracy. First they spread a thin green veil across the gaping wound. Then they sow it with seeds and cones and roots until at last the blemish is transformed into a forest and a garden. Our bodies have their marvels of renovation. I knew a man who was born with a club foot. He and his doctors and his friends were all convinced that he was crippled for life. Suddenly a young Scotch surgeon appeared with a message of hope and the man was taken to a hospital at Edinburgh. Gradually the rigid muscles were relaxed. Slowly the gnarled bones grew into their proper places until finally the patient was able to walk with his twisted foot almost as well as with the other.

These examples of recovery are far surpassed by the miracles of the spiritual life. Look at Paul when he was struck down on the road to Damascus. He was thirty-six years old. Humanly speaking his character was formed. The bias of his life was decisive and permanent. He was self-righteous, a blasphemer and a persecutor. He became the most striking illustration of his own declaration, that if any man be in Christ he is a new creation. He was intellectually and spiritually regenerated. Every trace and taint of the leaven of his subtle and elusive pharisaism was eliminated from his nature. It is said that the three hardest words in the English language to utter are, "I was wrong." Paul uttered these words distinctly, repeatedly, eagerly. He not only forsook the gods that had bewitched him, he destroyed both them and their shrines.

The re-creation of the Apostle is full of inspiration to us. We look into our hearts and we see there passions, appetites, and prejudices all warring against the supremacy of Christ. The Tempter seeks to persuade us that our enemies can never be subdued. But the grace that enabled Paul to triumph over his foes will make us more than conquerors over ours.

The Apostle fulfilled all the conditions of the spiritual life. He was prompt, obedient, persistent, and intense. No one can dip into his life and his writings without discovering how conspicuously these qualities shine out in his character. We will not linger to cite illustrations. Here many of us are lacking. Our churches are thronged with lotus-eaters. In the Greek legend when the sailors of Ulysses partook of the fruit of the prickly shrub, they lost all their desire to return home. We must be perpetually on our guard against those earthly pleasures that drug the soul. Then we shall never be dazed and torpid and we shall be always looking for the city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

No one has revealed so marvelously as Paul the glories of the spiritual life. Thinkers and poets and painters have often drawn the contrast between those whose ambition is bounded by the earth and those who have set their affections on things above. The great missionary has lent his name to the noblest building in the largest city in the world. Think of the illustrious men who sleep beneath its domes or from day to day pass under the shadow of its cross. However rich or famous or gifted or powerful they may have been, or are, can we suggest the name of one of them who in the influence that he wields and in the reverence that he commands can be compared with Paul?

Look at the direct results of his words. Take the case of St. Augustine. We are told that the struggle in his heart between lust and purity had become intolerable. At this supreme crisis in his career, he snatched up a copy of the Scriptures, and it was by reading the two verses beginning, "Let us walk honestly," that the peace of God entered his soul. The conversion of Augustine, with variations, has been repeated a thousand times in the lives of men.

Think of the indirect influence of the Apostle by the pictures and the books and the sermons and the hymns which his words and his deeds have inspired. For the mement let us think only of the hymns. We have all read the saying of Fletcher of Saltoum, that if he could write the songs of a nation he did not care who made its laws. The wisdom of these words is obvious. During the war, millions of people have been singing the marching song of our soldiers, whatever are its merits or demerits, who would never dream of reading one of Mr. Asquith's speeches or one of Mr. Balfour's books.

Let us apply this test. In our hymn book there are more than a thousand hymns or verses inspired by the words of the Apostle, in his epistles. Take one familiar instance. I have mentioned the figure a thousand. But how can we measure in terms of numbers or weight or size the influence of "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," derived from the verse commencing, "But God forbid that I should glory?" It is impossible. That almost incomparable hymn of Isaac Watts's has enriched the spiritual life-blood of millions of men and women and only the books of the judgment day can disclose the results that it has achieved.

Let us now glance at the direct effects of the Apostle's preaching. After eighteen months of toil in Corinth he wrote to his converts in Christ. He reminds them that some of them were idolaters, thieves, drunkards, revilers. Now they are washed, sanctified, justified. In every city where he labored for thirty years, his sickle reaped swaths of golden grain and we can only imagine how many and how precious were the sheaves that he laid at the feet of the Lord of the harvest.

To many of his contemporaries, Paul was "a pestilent fellow" and not fit to live, and ultimately he was martyred. In our own day, Renan has dismissed him contemptuously as "an ugly little Jew." But the Apostle is the Specter of the Brocken in actual life. In that famous mirage, a person standing on the summit of the mountain at sunrise or sunset, is magnified and robed in the hues of the rainbow. The man of Tarsus has converted this illusion, wrought out of the mist, into a reality. As we gaze at him in the light of history his indisputable greatness more and more asserts itself. Other men by comparison dwindle into insignificance. Every succeeding century, as it silently recedes, increases his imperishable glory. And if we live for Christ, slave for Christ, suffer for Christ, as Paul did, our characters will glow with more than a ray of his unfading splendor.—Zion's Herald.

A LETTER FROM CHAPLAIN ROUSSEAUX.

The work of a Debarkation Port is very interesting. Of course, you are familiar with the fact that here the troops are unloaded, and then they go through a process of inspection and are sent on to the camps nearest their homes to be discharged. They generally remain here about three days, perhaps a day or so longer, before they go. During that time they change their entire wearing apparel. As soon as they get here they change their overcoats and raincoats, and then they line up in the "Bakery Plant." This is a place where they go in and when they come out they are free from all manner of vermin. They have, in the meantime, taken a hot bath, gone through a thorough medical inspection, and even had their blankets and other things in their roll run through an oven with a strong force of steam going through and through for about twenty minutes. It is a delight to see these fellows shed their hot woolen in this warm climate and get into thinner and more comfortable clothing. Still, there is some objection to this, as a number of the men, desiring to come home looking as well-dressed as possible, and after having had their clothing all cleaned and gone over to make it fit, some even having had tailor-made garments, they object to making the change; but no matter how well they look, they all have to go through this process.

While the men are thus in camp waiting to be sent on to their other camps, they come into our office and we have a great chance to work with them. In addition to lining them up and speaking to them by the hundreds, we also have this privilege of private conference with them. We had three men in the office just recently, who had spent some time in France and some time in a French university, and these men were called to the ministry and were consulting us with reference to further preparation for the work, and as to what church offered the best and most efficient means of service.

Our work has been largely instructive, giving the men information on insurance, bonus, discharge, uniforms, medals, farm lands, and jobs. We have become fairly good lawyers, fighting the cases of different men, getting them on their way out of the army, helping them about their liberty bonds and the allotments they had made for relatives. They always hear us gladly when we go before them as they come back to us, and after all these things have been considered, when we take up the serious things of life and speak to them about getting back into their place, and taking hold of their duties—when we venture to speak to them about the church and Christianity, they always have given the most profound attention, especially the men that have been in the great battles. We have had a most wonderful opportunity during these last few months, and we tremble when we think that we may not have gone more after the souls of men than we did, with all the other duties that naturally fell upon our shoulders. Now that the time is drawing near when our work with these heroes will soon be at a close, there is something akin to sadness that we feel, though we are all glad that the war is over and the men are back home again. Back home—with the exception of that 77,422 men, dead from all causes, who now sleep beneath the blood-soaked soil of France! With all our joy at the ending of the war, we still have a sympathetic feeling for those here at home who wait for these heroes who will never return. They died in a glorious cause, but did no more than the rest of us would have done had we been placed as they were.

I wish to say one more thing, Brother Carley, before I close, and that is that I have always maintained the dignity of the pulpit, wherever I have preached in the army. Whether out in the open, or in the huts, or on the deck of a rolling steamship, or down in its hold, I have always felt the presence of God's Spirit, have felt the divine call to preach the old Gospel, and have found no less appreciation, but even more respectful attention, because I refrained from using profanity in the pulpit. I felt that I had no more right to use "cuss" words before soldiers than I had before my congregation back in the pastorate. The fact is, I have found scores of young men who were very seriously concerned as to whether they were ever going to break themselves of certain habits of speech they had formed while among men so long and away from the refining influences of the home.

We have had some really good meetings among the men. I shall never forget one Sunday night aboard the ship. We were singing the hymns men had sung back at home and the lights went out, leaving us in the dark. I started up an old hymn that all knew, and the men sang it through. When we had finished, still the lights had not returned, and those men sang, one after another, those old hymns that have been the comfort and help of so many thousands of God's people. Then they prayed, and I never knew who prayed afterwards, but one after another they prayed, and I had time for only a brief talk. They say there was one local preacher in the crowd, but he did not find me and I did not find him, and I supposed that he was somewhere in the crowd enjoying it as I was enjoying it, and as the others were apparently enjoying it. In the army a man lived his Christian experience without making any loud noise about it, but lived it none the less. I have seen men reading their Testaments calmly while right near them a bunch of men were in a crap game or playing some French gambling game. I shall say this much, also, and that is they always stopped gambling when I got up to hold divine service.

I trust that my service in the army has not been in vain and that some good has been accomplished. I know that I have learned very many things that will be useful to me in after life.

I expect to be given a fifteen-day furlough in the next few days and then I shall return to Logtown, Miss., for awhile, where I can spend a few days in rest. Then I expect to report at the nearest camp for discharge, about September 15. Between that time and Conference, I hope I may be of some service to the church in the way of holding meetings. Any of my friends who desire me to help them may communicate with me at the above address.

In closing, will say that I have had the pleasure of occupying some of our leading pulpits in this section, where Methodism is in a very thriving condition. We have some great churches up here. They treat their preachers well, too. Nearly all of them send their pastors away for a month or more on vacation, and pay all expenses, in addition to salary.

Hoping to see you soon, and with love to all the brethren, I am, Yours fraternally,

J. CUDE ROUSSEAUX.

A CATHOLIC FAKE EXPOSED.

By Victor I. Masters, Superintendent of Publicity, Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

It must take great nerve for the Roman apologists to maintain their confident assurance that they are the only door by which God opens entrance to erring humanity.

They have had their own way in every South American country. Result: Great ignorance and misery among the masses, general skepticism among the intellectuals. Poor Mexico is a sample of what priestcraft can do with generations of unchecked opportunity. The ignorant, groping people seem able to find their way to light and liberty only through long years of bloodshed and misery, but they are not too ignorant to turn their backs on the priests, who have betrayed them and riveted fetters on them.

Catholic France has been forced to throw off the incubus of priestly meddling in her political life in order to preserve her liberties. Austria, the long-time beloved of papal autocracy, is in weakness and misery her folly brought upon her. She has come to the end of a road along which she journeyed as the familiar companion of the autocratic super-plotter of the earth, who sits in his vatican palace at Rome, playing that he is a prisoner, while he schemes to rule the world.

Germany, who made common cause with this papal power, being filled with a like ungodly lust for autocratic world-domination, is overthrown. There being no immediate help from Germany, the papacy now insinuates itself into the counsels of such of the allies as are too foolish to learn by the experience, seeking what advantage it may get through and in the very nations against which it fought by the use of all its so-called spiritual weapons while the great conflict was on.

Truly it must take assurance for Rome to do such things. But Rome's memory is long and experience has taught Rome that the memory of the people is short, and that the average politician on the hunt for votes is as devoid of wisdom as the man of whom Solomon said, "Bray him in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him."

For months past the American press has been passing on the Catholic claim that the Irish in America number 13,000,000. Since the first draft of this article, press reports tell how Messrs. Walsh, Dunne, and other Irish-American Romanists, on August 30, raised this number from 13,000,000 to 20,000,000 in testimony they gave before a congressional committee in connection with the proposed League of Nations. These men are the same persons who won an unsavory publicity through their un American meddlesomeness in the interest of Irish Sinn Feinism in a trip they recently made to Ireland and in their effort to be heard at Paris before the peace congress of the nations.

The obvious purpose of these preposterous claims is to boost the political stock of Irish American Catholics, especially in the interest of the rebellion of Irish Sinn Fenism against England, a friendly nation. The Catholics in Ireland want to be independent of England. The Protestant minority of Ireland, chiefly in Ulster, does not want to be independent of England. The Catholic majority in Ireland is priest-ridden, and therefore poor. Protestant Ulster is wealthy. Irish "independence" would put Ulster's Protestant wealth under the political control of a group of politico-religionists who have the world's record for experness in "despoiling the Egyptians." All this clamor for Independence by Catholic Ireland is a clamor to destroy the political independence of Protestant Ireland.

If not 13,000,000 or 20,000,000, but the half of our entire population were Irish, it would still be indefensible presumption for us as Americans to thrust our views on England concerning what she shall do with Ireland or any of the rest of the countries related to her as political dependents.

The vote in the United States Senate, asking England to look with favor on the independence of Ireland, has only one explanation, the unwarranted political pressure of Roman Catholic influence. That our august United States Senate should allow itself to be used for such cheap political ends is enough to make a real American hang his head in shame. The shame of it becomes the more shameful, when we contrast how our government has winked at this disloyal agitation against England, with the way it shut down on Mexican revolutionary agitators when they crossed into our country.

I have recently taken the trouble to find out how many Irish there really are in this country. In order to make the facts easily apparent I shall set them down with tabular detail. The figures are from the United States census reports, except that those for 1915 are an estimate. The following table gives, first, the entire population of the United States; second, the foreign-born population; third, the foreign-born Irish. The figures cover each ten-year period from 1850 to 1910, and the estimated number in each class in 1915. The value of the artificial number each colum totals is that these artificial totals will establish a ratio or percentage basis for finding the actual number in each class.

	Total Population	Total Foreign-born	Irish Foreign-born
1850	23,191,876	2,210,839	961,719
1860	31,443,321	4,136,175	1,611,304
1870	38,558,371	5,567,229	1,835,827
1880	50,155,783	6,679,943	1,851,571
1890	62,947,714	9,249,560	1,871,509
1900	75,994,575	10,341,276	1,615,159
1910	92,757,702	13,515,866	1,352,251
1915	100,399,318	13,000,000	1,200,000
Totals ...	475,448,650	64,700,883	12,322,670

In 1915 the actual population was 100,000,000. Most of those included in the sum of the various census periods since 1850 had died or disappeared in other ways. The actual total population in 1915 was only twenty-one per cent of the total of the combined census periods. Now, some American Irish surpass other Americans in politics and in stirring up public noise, but there is no reason to believe Irish escape death and other deterrents to growth more than others.

To find the actual number of Irish in the country, we shall have, as in the case of the entire population, to estimate it at twenty-one per cent of the gross total of the same census periods used for the total population. Using this method, we find that there are, instead of 13,000,000 or 20,000,000, or some larger number they may be claiming before this is published, a total of 2,600,000. It may help to set down in parallel columns the figures which set forth the facts.

Total for eight census periods	475,400,000	64,700,000	12,300,000
Actual number in 1915.....	100,000,000	13,600,000	2,600,000

Of course there has been much inter-marriage of races during the period covered. But this makes Irish blood American, as well as American Irish, a thing the group of Irish agitators seem to have forgotten. The inter-marriage of Irish in America has bucked up against a race stream, the volume of which was thirty-nine times as strong as its own. As well talk of a spring branch swallowing the river into which it empties as of the Irish immigrants to America impressing itself predominantly on the American blood-strain

If the Irish have in America now 20,000,000 people of their blood, though the eight census periods show a combined Irish-born total of only 12,300,000, they have increased sixty-one per cent above that combined total. But if the Irish have thus increased, so, we have no reason to doubt, have all the foreign-born persons in America. That is, there would have been 104,000,000 persons of foreign decent in America in 1915, or 5,000,000 more than our entire population at that time.

But what of the native American stock? By subtracting foreigners from our total population, we find there were in the census periods covered 410,700,000 persons to be credited to American stock. If they grew sixty-one per cent, as the Irish testimony before Congress said the Irish boood has grown, we would have 661,200,000 native-born Americans now in the country! Alas! Not even America has anything in it that can equal in growth the fertile imagination of these American Irish, in their zeal to inveigle America into helping the majority elements in Ireland to rebel successfully against England, and to secure political domination over the wealth of Protestant Ulster, for which province these agitators propose not self-determination, but servility.

Romanist press agents "fed-up" the American puhlic on the obvious hoax that thirty to forty per cent of the soldiers in the American armies were Catholics. The Catholic population in America is only fifteen per cent and they could not have had more than fifteen per cent of soldiers in armies made up of the selected draft. Some of these Catholics took refuge under the exemptions allowed aliens. They had fewer than fifteen per cent of the soldiers, rather than more. Yet, with a singular lack of good taste, they not only made false claims as to their number, but everywhere boasted about it, even setting it forth in paid advertisements in newspapers.

We are also familiar with the Romanist claim that they have in America 16,000,000 members of their denomination, over against 26,000,000 in the evangelical and other non-Catholic hodies. If Rome counted as the evangelicals she only has about 5,500,000 members; or if the evangelicals counted their whole population as Rome does, they have approximately 80,000,000 "memhers."

Romanists find it effective with politicians to claim everything in sight all the time. Despicahle as such a course is in morals, it must be conceded that it is effective politics of the cheap kind.

Evangelical ministers and writers in religious papers have an obligation to keep the people informed about these facts. It is not pleasant to critlcize an Institution that—has, by whatever means, attained influential puhlic vogue. But how can one merit the confidence of our people, if he does not apprise them of facts relevant to American religious and civil welfare, which he is in a position to know, and which our people have a right to expect him to Impart? What does the reader think about it?

Baptists accord to Roman Catholics and to all others the same right they claim for themselves, to worship God in their own way, without either special favor or hindrance from any civil or political power. We criticize, not the individual Catholic, who may be a good citizen. We criticize the autocratic hierarchy, which, under the cloak of religion, persistently and in every nation meddles in politics, with the purpose of securing the dominant control of the political powers to further selfishly and by force the ends of the Catholic sect. Some politicians and newspapers are still trying to sidestep thls issue hy accusing patriots of "religious prejudice" when they demand that the political aggressions of Rome be exposed and checked. There are even some evangelical preachers who excuse themselves from the duty of teaching their people on these matters hy a similar reference to "religious prejudice." But such a pose is too patent a cover for timidity or cowardice for the puhlic to be deceived hy it.

No, there are only ahout 2,600,000 Irish in America, not 13,000,000, or 20,000,000. Catholics were ahout fifteen per cent of the army, not forty per cent. Their religious influence is only ahout fifteen per cent of the people In the country, not forty per cent. Counting for them as evangelicals count, they would have 5,500,000 members in their churches, not 16,000,000. And this 5,500,000, man for man, does not equal in moral force and civic stability the membership in the average evangelical hody in America.

Let the reader get hold of these facts, and use them as they may be needed. We have no ill will to any man hecause he is a Roman Catholic. But we love our country and have an obligation to safeguard its life and liberty. We are jealous of religious liberty and would safeguard freedom of faith among our people against deceitful attacks. If we do this, we shall not seldom have to address ourselves to the insidious aggressions of the papacy in America.

IS THE WORLD GROWING WORSE?

By Rev. S. Curtis Yates.

In the piping times of peace there is always to be heard a jarring, discordant note. The discord is not forever from the skeptic's bugle, but from that of some sincere Christian as well. So the optimistic member plays his instrument the louder and longer, himself but little disturhed and his melody practically unmarred by the discord around him. But in this period of national readjustment, following the recent war, with its attending industrial and commercial unrest and political and social fluidity, only the most resolute, long-visioned optimist can maintain his poise as the storm of awful confusion rages ahout him.

There are to-day thousands who actually believe the world is growing worse, and their wail will not be quieted by ridicule. While men may magnify the evils of the day and make mountainous the running wave of immorality and crime, it accomplishes nothing merely to say these men were born in the dark of the moon, or that they are but > "Infants crying in the night,

> Infants crying for the light,
> With no language but a cry."

It is a sad thing for one to become discouraged to the point of admitting that sin is triumphing, predominating. This is no time for us as a church to hang the harp on the willow and sit down to weep. "These are times that try men's souls." These times demand courageous, stalwart, sun-crowned men of God who will look for no avenue of escape, hut meet and deal with the evils of the day, never, never owning or recognizing defeat. And God has in this day his Calebs and Joshuas who will surely carry on against giants and evil reports. The idea some have that the world belongs to the devil is an erroneous one. "The earth is the Lord's and the fuliness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." It is not Christian but Hinduism to long for escape from human existence. The religion of Christ is an institution of service and not a vehicle on which to ride gloriously into heaven, or a door through which to escape hell. If the world is growing worse, then the church is not functioning properly, Christianity is failing in its operation and mocks the programme of Him who came to save. If he is a close student of history or has any knowledge of natural science, the confirmed atheist may see that the tendency of things is always upward. Boh Ingersoll admitted this to be true of the higher animal life in his lecture on "Skulls." Indeed, no student of history will draw his conclusion from isolated facts or abnormal conditions, hut from a whole train of events. For with the exception of occasional dips in the line the scale of righteousness shows increasing returns.

There is no virtue in pessimism. Power in the Christian life and heauty of Christian character are not proportionate to the degree of pessimism possessed. One is not following in the old paths hecause he is a calamity howler. The Christian religion is one of optimism and the standard of life it imposes is not ascetic, lachrymose, but hopeful, confident. It is acknowledging failure and admitting that Christianity is a spent force to say the church is waging a losing fight. In times of crises, God's people must never raise the voice of despair. Rather let the voice be lifted this hour to the martial strain of old Arlington:

> "Thy saints in all this glorious war
> Shall conquer though they die;
> They see the triumph from afar,
> By faith they bring it nigh."

In the end, righteousness shall, must prevail. From the present social and economic struggle, righteousness will arise, its scepter of love and peace high over all. If the world is growing worse, then Christianity is not fulfilling the purpose of its founder. Voltaire was only confused in dates when he wrote "finis" to Christianity. If the saying, "the world is growing worse," is true, and we are making a losing fight against the forces of evil, then are Christian ideals an empty dream, the reality of religion a delusive phantom, and the church a mockery to the yearning souls of mankind.

Wars are intoxicating, demoralizing, debasing, and the subsequent days of readjustment and reconstruction find the equilibrium of multitudes unrestrained. It is false logic to draw one's conclusion from a condition that is both superficial and temporary.

Dr. Steel gives the following illustration, told by Beecher, which is very applicable here. It is a story of a pioneer family moving from Ohio to Nebraska. "For some time," the story goes, "the old man and his wife had studied the geography, located the rivers, and especially the 'big river,' the Mississippi. At length they started and in due time reached the Mississippi. Camp was formed and the old man went down to the river's brink to get a bucket of water, and he was astonished to see the current running in the wrong direction. He called his wife and said: 'Dear, I thought the Mississippi River ran from north to south.' 'That is what the geography said,' she replied. 'Well,' he said, 'the book is wrong or else we are turned around; for this river is running to the north.' They were greatly troubled and actually thought of going back to Ohio. While the travelers were in this distress, a horseman rode up, and they asked him about it. He laughed at their simplicity and told them that what they took to be the current was only an eddy in the stream. 'Look away out yonder in the middle of the river. There goes a big tree. Isn't it floating in the right direction?' So the eddy sweeping through the reeds may confuse or alarm, but look-

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

READ THE FOLLOWING PROPOSITION.

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a Teacher's Bible if you will send us 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate by November 10. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather and has a concordance and all the usual helps in a Teacher's Bible; it is printed with large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help you persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 each will earn the Bible.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $2.00 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, but secure five, we will give you a copy of "Alpheus W. Wilson—A Prince in Israel," by Rev. Carlton D. Harris. This book contains the life and labors of the late Bishop Wilson. It is bound in cloth and has 210 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. We are about to lose nearly 1000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will be greatly helped.

This offer will hold good until November 1, after which date it will be withdrawn.

Does his successive journeys run;
His kingdom spread from shore to shore,

PLAN FOR THE EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The following plan presented by the General Sunday School Board for the co-operation of the Board in the General Evangelistic Campaign has been unanimously adopted by the Ad Interim Committee of the Centenary Commission:

The General Sunday School Board is deeply anxious to forward a widespread and truly spiritual evangelism in the church. It shares in the conviction that the present moment is pregnant with possibilities both for good and for evil, and that there is more than ordinary need at this time for a united Church-wide Evangelistic Campaign. Charged, as it is, with special care for the young life of the church, and realizing the responsibility growing out of the fact that a large majority of our church members in recent years have come from the Sunday school membership, the General Sunday School Board and the Sunday school forces are bound to strive by every possible means to bring those who are already in this school of the church into a conscious personal knowledge of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord.

The Sunday School Board has, therefore, most heartily approved the General Evangelistic Campaign that has been launched by the Joint Committee on Evangelism as a part of the Centenary Conservation Program. It is anxious to relate the Sunday school organization to this campaign in such wise that the forces of the Sunday school may, as far as possible, be integrated with the general plan and operations of the Joint Committee on Evangelism. The Board earnestly desires that the hundreds of thousands of Sunday school teachers and workers make their contributions to this campaign, to the end that every teacher and Sunday school worker may become an evangelist, and that every unsaved person in all our Sunday schools may come to know God as Father and Jesus as Savior, and may become an active member of the church of Christ.

In order thoroughly to articulate the Evangelistic Campaign in the Sunday school with the General Evangelistic Campaign so as to make the organization of the General Campaign available for the promotion of the Sunday School Campaign, and to utilize the Sunday school organization to the fullest in promoting the Sunday School Campaign in harmony with the General Campaign, the following plan was proposed by the General Sunday School Board and accepted by the Ad Interim Committee of the Centenary Commission:

Plan.

1. There shall be a General Committee on Sunday School Evangelism composed of the following: The General Sunday School Secretary, the Chairman of the Sunday School Board, the Corresponding Secretary, the Superintendents of the several departments, and Dr. O. E. Goddard and Dr. W. G. Cram representing the Joint Committee on Evangelism.

This Committee shall be especially charged with the promotion and supervision of the Sunday school campaign throughout the church, which is to be conducted in co-operation and general harmony with the General Evangelistic Campaign.

There shall be added to the Joint Committee on Evangelism the Corresponding Secretary of the General Sunday School Board and the Superintendent of Teacher-training.

2. There shall be an Annual Conference Committee on Sunday School Evangelism composed of the following: The Chairman of the Sunday School Board, the Sunday School Field Secretary, Active Department Superintendents, two other persons elected by the Conference Sunday School Board, or its Executive Committee, and the Conference Evangelistic Campaign Director.

It shall be the duty of this Committee to promote and to supervise Sunday School Evangelism within the bounds of the Annual Conference. The Sunday School Field Secretary shall be the executive officer of this Committee unless determined otherwise by the Committee.

To the Annual Conference Committee on Evangelism of the Missionary Centenary shall be added the Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, or the Chairman of the Conference Sunday School Board.

3. The District Sunday School Executive Committee shall constitute the District Committee on Sunday School Evangelism. The presiding elder is Chairman of this Committee.

It shall be the duty of the District Committee on Sunday School Evangelism to promote and to supervise Sunday School Evangelism within the bounds of the District.

4. The Local Sunday School Evangelistic Committee shall be composed of the following: The Pastor, the Superintendent, the Superintendent of each of the organized departments of the school above the primary, or in schools not departmentally organized, one representative teacher of pupils under twelve, one of pupils twelve to seventeen, and one of pupils eighteen years old and over.

The duties of this Committee shall be to promote and to supervise evangelism within the local Sunday school.

For further information write to Dr. Charles D. Bulla, Director of the Evangelistic Campaign in the Sunday School, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES FROM CHURCH EXTENSION RECORDS.

It may be of interest to the friends of Church Extension to see a statement giving the additions that have been made to the Loan Fund Capital of the Board of Church Extension from April 1 to October 1, for the past four years. They are as follows:

April 1 to October 1, 1916	$ 10,346.35
April 1 to October 1, 1917	32,518.58
April 1 to October 1, 1918	17,013.12
April 1 to October 1, 1919	100,628.84

The Loan Fund Capital, October 1, 1918, amounted to $1,123,339.56. The Loan Fund Capital October 1, 1919, amounted to $1,296,256.48. This shows that during the past twelve months the Loan Fund Capital has been increased by $172,916.92, the greatest increase during any single year in the history of the Board.

No Centenary money is included in these figures, as the Board has not yet received anything from the Centenary Fund.

SOME RANDOM NOTES.

By E. N. Evans.

It is easier to believe what we don't know than it is to know what it is we believe.

The church is the school of His disciples. It has no Alumni association, or Graduates' Club. Requirement for matriculation: "A desire to flee the wrath to come and to be saved from your sins." The curriculum is Christian culture, religious training and applied Christianity. Its term is for life, no vacation allowed. And desertion is punished by a forfeiture of all accrued benefits.

"I am a shouting Methodist and a fighting Democrat." So far, so good; yet you might be both of these and still be neither a Christian nor a gentleman.

"I believe the Bible from Genesis to Revelation." Good! Yet it might be better to believe less and know more. Truth unknown has no saving power. "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Faith is more than a passive consent to a doctrine or creed; it is an acceptance and action on a proposition." To know Him and the power of His resurrection" is more important than to believe that Jonah swallowed a whale. Tradition, faith inherited from a grandmother, the fabled stories of the nursery, and the endless genealogies may be the scaffolding from which the workmen build the walls, but they are not the structure of real Christian character.

The man who drains a swamp or reclaims a wilderness has done something toward making a new earth, which is a part of the program of salvation. Material, social and business regeneration ought to follow conversion.

The best service you may render to God is the good you do to your fellow-man in His name. Charity done with a hope of return in kind, or in gratitude from the needy, is not done in His name, and if you fail in reward, it is not God's fault. God is a better paymaster than humanity. Humanitarianism is on a lower plane, and pays less than real Christianity. There are rewards in God's Kingdom, plus an inheritance. Mansions in the skies get their building material from deeds done on the earth. A cup of cold water or the widow's mite are only rewarded when it's all we have, and is given in His name.

THE AWAKENING OF THE SOUL.

Spiritual awakening—to some it comes so naturally and gently the process is hardly noticeable; to others it is a sudden transition, a sudden arousing to the beauties of the dawn. Would I do all in my power for the object of my love, I with all my limitations, I who could never have conceived of a tithe of the blessings with which that object has been endowed, and doubt that He alone will not continue to bless and save it "who yet alone can!"

Has the divine spark which has been so clear and bright and warm in me exceeded the clearness, brightness, warmth, of the living Flame in which it has its origin, of whose nature it partakes, in whom is its destiny? No assumption could be more absurd. Human love, or rather divine love in the human, indicates divine love everywhere. Human devotion indicates divine devotion. Human care indicates infinite care. So I find God, so I "o'ertake God's own speed in the one way of love." And with this o'ertaking a heaven of new life is opened.

I become aware as never before of the inner meanings of things; I rise superior to material considerations; I am at one with the universe, pitched to its key, in harmony with its rhythm. Troubles are still troubles, friction is still friction, partings are still partings; but space and time become less omnipotent, the spirit walks abroad; thought, love, aspiration, assume their proper functions, and are no longer subject to the old limitations. They bridge all chasms, they run along invisible wires to wheresoever in all the universe of life a soul unto another soul is drawn; they lift us upward to wherever the ideal summons; they soothe us with somewhat of the eternal serenity. All our mistakes, all our failures, become stepping-stones to the highest success; all our trials become disciplines to the noblest achievements of character. Whatever comes to us, we feel the new law.

O my soul, define him or not define him, God is; Thought is; Love is. What has been true and beautiful and good must continue to be true and beautiful and good; aye, must ever grow and brighten in its truth and beauty and goodness.—Frederic A. Hinckley.

A NATION'S BUILDERS.

Not gold, but only men can make
A people great and strong—
Men who for truth and honor's sake
Stand fast and suffer long.

Brave men, who work while others sleep,
Who dare while others fly
They build a nation's pillars deep
And lift them to the sky.

—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By S. A. Steel, D.D.

For one time, Brother Carley, I know what David meant when he said: "My cup runneth over." I had been away from home a few days, and had been back only an hour or two, when a lady called at the parsonage and handed me an envelope. I opened it to find that the good people of Mansfield had, in my absence, presented us with a nice home for our permanent residence here in Mansfield. While a majority of the subscribers to this generous movement are, of course, Methodists, there are also attached to the paper the names of Presbyterians and Baptists, and, indeed, members of all the churches. The gift is "an expression of our love for you, and our appreciation of your work for the church during your long ministry;" and there are no strings to the gift, except those "invisible cords" of affection that will bind our hearts to this people. We want our friends to rejoice with us, and to unite with us, in "thanks unto God" for his goodness to us. Now let "the snows of age" fall! There will be no "winter of discontent" in the pretty home on the hill crest.

I wish you would reprint the letter and editorial of Dr. Nelson, editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, which appeared in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate of September 10. It confirms all I have written about the union of the churches, and is "expert testimony" from one who is competent to bear witness. Dr. Nelson differs from Bishop Kilgo, who suggested that the problem between the two Methodisms could be solved in thirty minutes by the withdrawal of the Southern Methodists in the West and North, and the withdrawal of the Northern Methedists from the South. I think Dr. Nelson misunderstood Bishop Kilgo. No one knows better than Bishop Kilgo the impracticability of such an adjustment. His suggestion was, probably, a hypothetical suggestion, based upon the assumption that there existed a real unification of spirit between these two bodies. There is no such unity of spirit. Dr. Nelson gives facts to show why our people will go into other churches if we unite with the Northern Methodist Church. No matter how much they desire union, I don't believe any self-respecting Southern Methodist would favor it, if they realized the spirit that animates the Northern Methodist Church. Some of these pro-union brethren tell us "the war is over," a thing we have realized for a generation, and honorably acted upon the truth of it; but Dr. Nelson tells us that in California, when the Northern Methodists catch a group of Southern Methodists at church they still sing, "We'll hang Jeff Davis on a sour apple tree." I don't know Nelson, but I understand he is not an old "unreconstructed rebel," like myself, thank God. But he has the genuine grit as sure as you are born. I could throw my hat as high as the Pelican Pines when he says of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the Pacific coast, "WE ARE HERE TO STAY!" The capitals are his. Hurrah for the heroic 35,000 Southern Methodists in California, who stand by the principles and traditions of the church of their fathers and mothers! It is a shame that we, over this way, are negotiating for their surrender to the North. They won't surrender. If the fatal deed is done, they will go into the Presbyterian, and Baptist, and other churches, rather than unite with a church that is at war with all the ideals and traditions of Southern Methodism. Let us stand by them. A home in Mansfield, and these ringing tidings from the dauntless Southern Methodists in the West—ought I not to be a happy chap! And I am, as happy as old Tom Hollonan when he rode "Susanna" in the "perade!"

Mansfield, La.

Recollectedness and a sustained consciousness of invisible things are essential to a steadfast communion with God, and only in proportion as such communion grows and deepens is the soul trained to apprehend the fullness of divine knowledge.—T. T. Carter.

THE BISHOPS' MEETING

In the spring of 1918 the Board of Stewards of Noel Memorial Church passed a resolution inviting the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to hold their fall meeting for that year in Shreveport, and tendering the use of their church for the meeting. At the meeting of the Bishops in Atlanta in May, 1918, during the General Conference, this invitation was accepted, and the meeting fixed for November 1-3 1918. The epidemic of influenza so disarranged the schedule of Conferences that it was found necessary to postpone indefinitely the fall meeting for that year. In the spring of 1919, the Noel Memorial Board renewed the invitation and it was accepted, the date fixed for the meeting being October 31-November 2. It is proposed to make this a great occasion in the life of Shreveport Methodism, and a cordial welcome is extended to our chief pastors by all the Methodists of this section as well as the citizens of Shreveport. It is expected that all our city pulpits will be filled by the bishops on the Sunday of their visit.

The bishops on their coming visit will find Shreveport Methodism alive and active. In all our churches here, the Missionary Centenary program was carried out successfully, Noel Memorial and First Church raising about fifty per cent over their quotas without credits. All of our local churches are prospering and planning forward movements.

Centenary College has just recorded the largest opening in its history since coming to Shreveport, and indeed since the Civil War; and is projecting a plan for future development that will place it alongside the best colleges of our section in equipment and service.

POWER OF CONTINUOUS EFFORT.

By Arthur Barner.

We see this principle demonstrated in nature so frequently that it is a wonder we do not adopt it more generally in every department of our life. The continuous washing of the water wears off the rough edges of the stones. The continuous accumulation of vegetable matter forms the soil on the rocks. A scientist was telling me the other day that the continuous washing of the river waters flowing into Lake Winnipeg, with their accompanying silt, is slowly but surely decreasing the depth of the water in the lake, and that some day much, if not all, of the lake bottom will be rich land suitable for agricultural purposes.

We know that in spite of ourselves we are forming habits by continuously doing the same thing or thinking the same thought. We know that these habits of life are surely making character, which in turn will affect the life of the universe.

There is an important sphere in which this principle is particularly at home, and in which it must be more intelligently and faithfully used if we are to appropriate in an adequate way the gift of God. I refer to the prayer life.

We are not without examples worked out so that we may look at them. The instance of Israel contending with Amalek will never be forgotten. "But Moses' hands were heavy, and they took a stone and put it under him and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun. And Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword. And Moses built an altar, and called it Jehovahnissi, or Jehovah is my banner." Think of that striking testimony in the New Testament where the Gentile, Cornelius, is astonished when told about the result of his faithful practice of the prayer life and of kindly deeds. "Thy prayers and thine alms are gone up for a memorial before God."

Probably the greatest deficiency in the prayer life of Christians is lack of continuity and a vision of its cumulative power. We must cultivate system in our praying as well as in our philanthropy, our commercial enterprises and our statesmanship. Having made sure that the things for which we pray are in accord with the general plan of God for His world, we must never grow weary. We must remember that there are great obstacles to be removed, minds and wills to be changed, forces to be brought into operation before the finished answer may come. Prayer is the barrage in spiritual warfare, and its cumulative power is tremendous.—The Christian Guardian.

THE CAUSE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS.

In the long fight for righteousness the watchword for all of us is, "Spend and be spent." It is of little matter whether any one man fails or succeeds; but the cause shall not fail, for it is the cause of mankind.—Theodore Roosevelt.

The Home Circle

MY KITE.

My kite is playmate to the wind,
And brother to the birds.
The baby cloudlets race with him
In gaily scampering herds.

Sometimes he seems a lonely ship
Upon a wide, blue sea,
When there are neither birds, nor clouds
To bear him company.

I love to lie upon the grass
While he is sailing high,
And feel him tug against my hand.
That he may higher fly.

And then I love to wind the string
That draws him back to me,
Home to his place on cupboard shelf,
Safe from the wide blue sea.

LITTLE WORRIES

By F. E. C.

It was a hot day. The screen door had been left ajar, and a couple of bluebottle flies buzzed about, hitting against the ceiling and evading all efforts to be put out or end their merry-making.

At breaktast Johhnie upset his cup of milk, not only over the freshly-ironed table linen, but his own clean white suit, ready for school. Just as the bedroom work was assuming order out of chaos the 'phone rang. It was not soothing to the nerves, after hastening down the long flight of stairs, to find the call was, "Pardon, I have the wrong number."

So it had gone on all morning. Now a basket of clothes was waiting to be ironed before dinner preparations began, and as I adjusted the board and iron, what housewife does not know the thoughts that entered and rankled, and caused two stralght lines between the eyes! Then my attention was caught by a little verse on a scrap of an old Sunday school "Onward" I had placed on the ironing board:

"The little worries which we meet each day
May lie as stumbling blocks across our way;
Or we may make them stepping-stones to be
Of grace, O Christ, to Thee."

"Little worries"—my iron kept time to the words and the thoughts it brought. "Little worries"—I surely knew what they were. Breakfast had not been a cheerful meal. My little laddie had tears in his eyes when he started for school clad in a dry sult, and his "Good-bye, mamma," was said in a very minor key. The ice man looked surprised at my tone when he placed the ice in the refrigerator, and I remarked on its size; whllo the vegetable man asked, "Are ye no weel the day, ma'am?" feeling the atmosphere charged with—something.

"Little worries." How they had gripped me all morning! Life seemed humdrum and a prosy routine; nothing to be accomplished really worthy or beautiful; just the simple round of duties the passing hours brought each day. Commonplace, homely duties, with little tantalizing worries—"Or we may make them stepping-stones to bo of grace, O Christ, to Thee." Was the little couplet really preaching me a sermon?

"Giving way to worry is selfish. No selfish life is lovely. The rarest of all the graces is not faith, not courage—which the world rates so highly—but love. What is love but the holding of one's life at the service of others?"

Some one has pictured our days as coming to us with a veiled face, bearing only the commonest gifts in his hand; but when he passed beyond our recall, the draped figure became radiant, and the gifts we rejected were treasures fit for a King's house.

No day is commonplace if we only have eyes to see its splendors; no duty comes to our hand but brings to us the possibility of kingly service. What more acceptable service to the King whom we serve, than being a loving, patient, unselfish wife and mother, doing one's prosaic work diligently and cheerfully, adorning the home-life?—and, presto! the ironing is finished, the lecture over. But as I went about preparing for dinner it was surprising how much cooler the day appeared to be; the buzzing flies had gone, and there was even time to change the work-dress for a cool, white one, and I gathered a bouquet for the table. Best of all, I found myself singing cheerily:

"There is a secret, tried and true—
When you with trouble meet,
You may have peace you never knew
If you just keep sweet
This is the way to win the day,
If you just keep sweet."

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

Esther and Kitty were dressing their dolls in one corner of the room.

"She has red hair," Kitty was saying, as she tied her doll's sash, "and a temper to match."

"Who has?" asked grandmother, putting down the newspaper and looking at the little girl over her spectacles.

The answer came rather slowly: "Lucy French; you don't know her, grandmother."

"Hasn't she anything but red hair and a temper?" said grandmother, putting up the paper again.

Grandmother had such a queer way of asking a question and then not waiting for anybody to answer it.

The next day was Sunday. Esther and Kitty and Lucy were in the same Bible school class. This afternoon the superintendent put a new scholar in with them.

"We are so many," thought Kitty, "She makes us sit so crowdy. I wish she hadn't come."

Kitty was by no means the only one that wished it. After school all the other girls hurried on, in a friendly bunch, leaving the new scholar behind—all but Lucy. She waited, and those in front heard her say politely:

"Don't you think our teacher is lovely?"

"Can't you just see grandmother's eyes twinkle at us?" whispered Esther to Kitty. "She would say that Lucy has been the most real lady in the class."

"The only real one, I guess," said Esther, meekly. "The way we behave doesn't look much like studying things out of the Bible, does it, Kitty?"

On Tuesday, at school, Miss Young began to give out pieces of poetry to be learned for Exhibition Day. One of these was shorter than the others, and nobody thought that it was pretty.

"I am sorry," said Miss Young, "that you don't like it. Who will be unselfish and offer to take it?"

There was a little silence, and then Lucy French said, "I'll take it."

Kitty was at one end of the bench and Esther was in the middle. They leaned forward and looked at each other, and their eyes twinkled.

After school Miss Young said, "Lucy will you put a letter in the postoffice for me before a quarter of an hour has passed?"

"Yes'm," said Lucy, smiling. She liked to do errands for Miss Young

Miss Young smiled back at her. "Lucy never forgets to keep her promises," she said.

"Esther," said Kitty, "by Saturday we will have a whole lot of things to tell grandmother."

They did. And grandmother was very much pleased to hear them. She laid one soft, wrinkled hand on each brown head and said, "My little granddaughters must try to remember that God loves to see what is good in all of us, and loves us to see the good in one another." —Susan Berry.

THE STORY OF A LITTLE KOREAN GIRL.

A little street child in Korea was interested in a small Sabbath school in her village and persisted in looking in at the door, listening to what the teacher was telling her little friends, although the others made fun of her, and teased her by asking whether she wanted to go to the foreigner's heaven.

Finally, she went in and sat down next to a little girl who was in the habit of coming to Sabbath school. This little girl had clean hands and face and was dressed neatly, and all this attracted the little girl more even than the ways of the foreign teacher.

Then for a few moments her attention was drawn to the words of the teacher, but again and again the difference between her hands and those of her neighbor's came to her notice and she slipped quietly out of the room and ran to her home.

When the children were singing the closing hymn, she returned and sat down in triumph near her little friend. Her hands were washed as well as she could do it, and also her face.

When we get near our Savior, we wish to become clean.—Jeane Noordhoff.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in the office of the Advocate in annual meeting on October 9.

After reviewing the management of the paper for the twelve months expiring, and planning for the conduct of the paper for the next year, they elected an editor and a manager to hold office for the next four years.

It is with pleasure that I state that the election of Rev. H. T. Carley to the office of editor for the next four years was unanimous. Many kindly things were said concerning his conduct of the paper, expressive not only of the wishes of the Publishing Committee, but as an echo from the readers of the paper as their wishes had been made known to the members of the Committee.

The present manager of the paper, Brother C. O. Chalmers, a layman of the Carrollton Avenue Church, was re-elected to manage the paper for the ensuing four years, his election likewise being unanimous. Brother Chalmers has supervised the publishing of the paper for fourteen years and enters the present term of office with the full support of the entire Committee.

A more detailed account of the meeting of the Committee will be furnished by Brother Davies, a member of the Committee.

JNO. F. FOSTER, Chairman.

WORSHIP IN THE HOME.

Under the above caption, the editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate ably discusses a subject that is of the utmost importance to the church in these days of growing laxity in the observance of those practices which make for Christian character. We take the liberty of reproducing his words, with the hope that all our people may be brought to a realization of the tremendous responsibility that rests upon them in helping to fix the destiny of their children.

"The home that is built upon any other foundation than that of religion cannot stand. Isolated homes where there is no profession of personal salvation may, indeed, continue during the life of the inmates; but such homes are held together by the force of public sentiment created by homes of a different type. We are not speaking of exceptions, but we are announcing a general principle. Where the Christian religion is not known and practiced, the home in its highest and best sense is not known. The reason for this is not far to seek. There is no other source of sufficiently high ideals, and of sufficient power to attain those ideals, which are necessary to create and maintain the home. Exceptional men may have a far-off vision of the home as it ought to be, but even they do not realize it apart from the Christian religion.

"The heart of religion is worship. We know that the expression of it in righteousness of life in social relationships is essential, and this expression of it is thrust more prominently under the observation of the world. We are not unmindful of the statement of James: 'Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.' This is religion described in the outward expression of it, and to claim the inward reality when the outward expression does not exist is but a travesty. Still it remains true that the inward reality must exist before the outward expression can be maintained for any long period of time. We repeat that the heart of religion, the source of its inspiration and power, is the worship of God. It is in this that the soul lives and feeds and grows. It is there that God does His work of transforming the nature, destroying the dominion of sin, and empowering the soul for that higher life that finds expression in works of charity and relief. Worship is the hidden dynamo that generates the power without which the life is hopelessly vicious. We must not neglect the element of worship.

"And the occasional observance of public worship, though this serves a necessary purpose, is not of itself sufficient. Worship is not the repeating of a ritual, nor the observance of outward forms. These may be an aid to worship, but we fear they are also often a hindrance to it. And worship is not simply an occasional act wedged in between the secular concerns that occupy the largest part of the average man's time. Worship gets down into the hidden sources of life and has to do with the relations of our essential being to God. It is a state rather than an act—a state out of which all actions spring; and it shapes and fashions all the relationships of life that we sustain.

"Now it is clear that a matter of such supreme importance must not be ignored in the home life. It ought to be daily nourished and fed there, and it needs to find expression in some form that will impress itself upon every inmate of the home. The child should not be uncertain about the father's and mother's attitude toward it. In this worship the Word of God ought to be honored, and the easiest way to do this is to read a portion of it at stated intervals. It should be read as the Heavenly Father's message to his children and as the final authority upon any subject about which it speaks. Prayer and thanksgiving should accompany this worship in the home. If this thanksgiving can express itself in song, it is well. This service ought not to be hurried over, as if it were encroaching upon time that ought to be given to more important matters. There are no matters more important. Religion is, or ought to be, the chief concern of mortals here below; and the family worship ought not to be conducted in a way that would seem to contradict that idea. We are aware that life is rushed, but the rush should not set aside the most important thing. Honor God in the home, and that honor will redound to the home a thousand-fold.

"And do not let this family worship become a ritualistic form. Books are published that contain a Scripture selection and a form of prayer for each day in the year. Sometimes a hymn selection is added. We do not say that such books may not be used to profit, but there is a serious danger of allowing the use of them to drift into a mere formal thing that will only be a mockery of the spirit of worship. The language had better be broken and faltering and come from the heart rather than that it should be couched in the most elegant form and trip only off the end of the tongue. Be sure to make this family worship a heart worship, and then it will impress itself upon the home and upon the life of each inmate. The importance of this cannot be emphasized too strongly.

"Our church is wisely moving to put a new emphasis upon this matter of family worship. There never was a time when it was more needed. We are told that it is difficult to get the family together at any one time in order to hold this service, but this very fact only emphasizes the need of holding it. If the family is thus broken up and scattered, that is all the more reason for using this strongest possible influence to weld it into essential unity. We must take time for religion. If the things of the world, however good in their way, are to crowd out religion, what is to become of us? Soon we will find the forces of manhood and womanhood weakening, and then we shall be crippled in the effort to accomplish any worthy task. Put your family worship into the program of the day's life whatever else may have to be put out. You will be the gainer by it—and so will the world. Let the altar be established in every home of Southern Methodism."

BISHOP KILGO IN NEW ORLEANS.

Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo spent last Saturday, Sunday, and Monday in New Orleans. The occasion of his visit was the dedication of Parker Memorial Church, which happy event took place on Sunday morning. The Bishop preached a great sermon, in which he emphasized the spiritual nature of the church. This congregation, after years of faithful and persistent effort, was able to present the building for dedication, free of all encumbrance. The debt had been fully paid in advance; so no collection was necessary at the dedicatory service. A large congregation was present, and the occasion was a memorable one in the history of New Orleans Methodism.

On Sunday evening, Bishop Kilgo preached a soul-stirring sermon at First Church. His great theme was the Saviorhood of Christ. His simple but powerful exposition of the fundamental things of the Christian religion made a profound impression upon the minds and hearts of those who heard him.

The Bishop attended the Methodist Preachers' Meeting on Monday morning. It was not our privilege to be present, but from reports reaching us we judge that it was a gracious occasion.

A delightful social feature of the Bishop's visit was the luncheon given in his honor on Saturday by Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Snelling. All the ministers of our church in the city were invited to be present. All but two or three, who were unavoidably kept away, accepted the invitation, and the rare pleasure of intimate, informal association with one of our chief pastors was greatly enjoyed by all.

Bishop Kilgo left Monday afternoon for a round of church dedications in Mississippi, after which he will return to his home in Charlotte, N. C., for a few days' rest before the strenuous season of Annual Conferences sets in.

THE PASSING OF DR. E. H. MOUNGER.

The Mississippi Conference, and Mississippi Methodism generally, are greatly bereaved by the death of Dr. E. H. Mounger, which sad event occurred on Wednesday of last week. Dr. Mounger was a rare character. Naturally of a retiring disposition, he possessed those qualities of mind and heart which won the respect and love of his brethren, and which made him an eminently useful and successful minister in whatever field he was called upon to labor. His scholarly attainments made him a man whose opinion carried great weight, and his pure character and unselfish devotion to his work fitted him for a career of great usefulness. It was our privilege to know him from the earliest days of our boyhood, and we pay loving tribute to the memory of one of the best men we have ever met. His name is, to us, as ointment poured forth. We have the promise of a suitable memoir in due time.

"MISSISSIPPI PROTESTS."

Under the above caption, there appears in the Richmond Christian Advocate of October 9, on page 6 of that issue, an article that is credited to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. A reader of the article would naturally suppose that this article appeared as an editorial in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the only intimation of its authorship being contained in the credit-line at its conclusion. We desire to state that no such article, either as an editorial or as a contribution, has ever appeared in our pages, and to attribute it to the New Orleans Christian Advocate is to convey an altogether misleading impression of the attitude of this paper toward the work of the Ad Interim Committee and of the full Joint Commission in their approaching meetings.

We are sure the brotherly editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate will make such correction as will make it perfectly clear that he was in error in attributing the above article to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

On Friday, October 3, the Methodist church at Grace, Miss., was completely demolished by a windstorm. The congregation expect to rebuild at an early date.

A press report states that John D. Rockefeller has given, unconditionally, $2,000,000 to the Ministers' and Missionaries' Board of the Northern Baptist Convention.

Rev. A. R. Kasey, D.D., one of the leading preachers of the Kentucky Conference, will assist Rev. U. G. Foote, D.D., in a meeting at Rayne Memorial Church this week.

Rev. D. E. Keily, the Mississippi Conference evangelist, recently held a successful meeting at Ripley, Miss. Seventeen were added to the church. Rev. J. D. Wroten is the pastor.

Rev. W. A. Mangum, our faithful and efficient pastor at Bernice, La., was in the city last week, attending the conference of Red Cross workers. We enjoyed a short call from him.

That princely layman, Mr. P. H. Enochs, of Fernwood, Miss., has recently added $1000 to his former munificent gifts to the Mississippi Conference Endowment Fund for the benefit of the Conference claimants.

Waynesboro, Miss., held a community service at the Methodist church on a recent Sunday. An interesting program of music and appropriate addresses was prepared. Our pastor, Dr. C. M. Chapman, conducted a "community quiz."

Brother J. E. Gerald, of Summit, Miss., although he has almost reached the age of three-score years and ten, is still actively interested in the work of the church and all that pertains to its welfare. We appreciate his kind words concerning the Advocate.

Rev. and Mrs. T. J. O'Neil have announced the approaching marriage of their daughter, Maggie, to Dr. C. D. Crawford, in the Methodist Church at Rolling Fork, Miss., on November 16. The Advocate extends best wishes in advance of the happy event.

Rev. S. D. Howard, of Winnsboro, La., writes that he is busily engaged in getting his Conference collections. Although the amount is considerably in excess of that of last year, he is hopeful of being able to report, "Everything in full, Bishop."

The board of stewards of the Tchula Methodist Church, of Tchula, Miss., recently adopted resolutions expressing their appreciation of the services of Rev. W. W. Mitchell, who is completing his fourth year as presiding elder of the Durant District.

Brother D. S. Harmon, a consecrated layman of Poplarville, Miss., and the efficient treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, honored the Advocate office with a call on Wednesday of last week. He was in the city attending a meeting of Red Cross workers.

Rev. G. S. Harmon, our pastor at Poplarville, Miss., has accepted the position of State Superintendent for Mississippi for the Interchurch World Movement of North America. Rev. Marvin Miller has been appointed junior preacher at Poplarville, to assist in the work of the pastorate until Conference.

This issue of the Advocate has been brought out under difficulties. Extensive repairs are being made on the building, and painters and paper hangers have monopolized most of our office space for several days. The work will soon be finished, however, and we shall then be able to pursue the even tenor of our way.

Rev. E. M. Shaw, of Houston, Miss., writing under date of October 6, says: "We are holding our revival now, with Rev. L. P. Wasson, of West Point, Miss., doing the preaching. We have just begun, and are looking for a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit." We sincerely hope that the meeting met all expectations.

Somebody who likes to juggle with statistics has figured it out that every twelfth person you meet in the United States is a Methodist. There were five hundred and twenty thousand Methodist boys in the war. The Methodists earn more money, give more, spend more, and buy more than any other similar group in America. They are a great folk.

Mrs. J. N. Hall, wife of the very efficient superintendent of education in Sharkey County, Mississippi, who is a local elder in our church, recently undewent an operation for appendicitis in a sanitarium at Vicksburg, Miss. We are glad to learn that the operation was successful, and that she is convalescing at her home in Rolling Fork, Miss.

The American Bible Society has requested the churches of America to set apart the last Sunday in November as Universal Bible Sunday, and has sent forth an appeal throughout the country, calling upon the ministers of all denominations to arrange for the appropriate observance of this day, emphasizing the priceless worth and marvelous power of the Christian Scriptures among the peoples of the world.

The meeting of the Publishing Committee last week was a pleasant gathering of the representatives of the Conferences who have the direction of the affairs of the Advocate. It was a source of great regret that Rev. J. W. Dorman, a member of the Committee from the North Mississippi Conference, was not able to be present on account of a meeting which he had planned for before the date of the Committee's meeting was announced.

The General Sunday School Board has adopted the plan of the Ad Interim Committee of the Missionary Centenary for a campaign of evangelism in the Sunday school. The Board has outlined a program which includes a Sunday school membership campaign to be conducted from November 1 to January 4, 1920. Dr. Charles D. Bulla, Corresponding Secretary of the General Sunday School Board, has been elected Director of the campaign of evangelism in the Sunday school.

Sister T. S. Randle is now visiting friends in Louisiana. She expects to attend the Annual Conference at Ruston. She is greatly interested in securing members for "Tripie C," an organization for the benefit of our Superannuate Endowment Fund, and she hopes that every preacher and layman in attendance at the Conference will be prepared to give her a dollar for membership. Sister Randle is also bringing the Advocate under obligations by soliciting subscribers among her acquaintances. She has adopted as her motto, "For Others"—a beautiful expression of her unselfish life.

It will be a surprise to many of his friends to know that Rev. J. Loyd Decell, who has made a splendid record during his pastorate at McComb City, Miss., has been transferred to the Pacific Conference, and that he has already left for his new field of labor. We understand that he has been appointed to Fresno, California. Brother Decell was one of the most popular and successful pastors in the Mississippi Conference, and he will be greatly missed by his brethren of the Conference and by Mississippi Methodism generally. We unreservedly commend him to the love and esteem of our church in the Far West.

Dr. James W. Lee, after an illness of eight weeks, resulting from a fall at Rye, N. Y., in which he sustained a fractured hip, passed away in Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, on October 4. The funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon at St. John's Church, where he had served as pastor through three separate quadrenniums. The services were in charge of Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, the present pastor of the church. Bishop E. R. Hendrix delivered the principal address, in which he characterized the career of Dr. Lee as the "Road of the Golden Heart." Many ministers of other denominations were present, some of whom took part in the services. The board of stewards of St. John's were active and honorary pallbearers. Other distinguished citizens of St. Louis were honorary pallbearers. Dr. Lee was generally recognized as one of the great men of Methodism.

DEATH OF REV. E. H. MOUNGER, D.D.

Dear Brother Carley: Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., a superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. J. Stevens, in Hattiesburg, Wednesday, October 8, and was buried in the City cemetery at this place, October 9. Besides the writer, the following took part in the funeral services: Dr. I. W. Cooper, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. Paul D. Hardin, and Rev. Lyman Carley. Several other ministers were also in attendance. He was buried from the Main Street Church. He died as he lived, in the full assurance that God was with him, and trusting in the saving power of his Divine Lord. We shall miss him much, for his influence among us was great. He had reached the advanced age of 81, lacking only about one month and eight days, and was doubtless the oldest member of the Mississippi Conference. One by one our older brethren are going, and are leaving an increased responsibility upon us younger ones. A suitable memoir will be prepared. W. B. JONES, P. E.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Oct. 10, 1919.

TO THE PREACHERS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Brethren: As treasurer of the Sunday School Board I want to make this final appeal. Never in our history did we order so many programs for Children's Day as we did this year for Sunday School Day. The total cost of these programs is $350. This bill has not been paid and we have no funds to pay with. We have had to borrow $400 to meet our expenses.

Six churches in the Winona District have reported for Sunday School Day; eight in the Holly Springs District; ten in the Greenville District; eleven in the Sardis District; eleven in the Aberdeen District; thirteen in the Corinth District; twelve in the Durant District, and three in the Columbus District.

Now you see where we are. What will you do about it? If you cannot have a program will you not please take a collection? In that way you will at least help us pay for the programs. We will have to pay for them whether you use them or not. This the S. O. S. call and the last word. Take due notice thereof. J. E. STEPHENS Obituaries.

DR. LUBE J. WRIGHT, son of Kemble and Louisa Millsaps Wright, was born on the 16th of September, 1834, at what is known as the Wright Camp Ground, Franklin County, Mississippi. In 1858 he began the study of his profession in the University of Louisiana at New Orleans, and graduated the course in 1860-61. In 1861, on the 30th day of April, he was married to Miss Sarah E. Tate, in Adams County, Mississippi, who died on the 8th of March, 1874. He was married the second time to Miss Sarah E. Black, in 1876, who preceded her husband to the Father's house by 22 years. Mrs. Sallie Mauck, of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Mrs. Margrette Sessions, of Brookhaven, Miss., sisters, survive their brother. Five children came to bless the Doctor's home and still live to bless the world and humanity—Mrs. Lula Wieben and Mrs. Maggie Dunn, of Roxie, Miss., Mrs. Alice Rutledge, of Lake, Miss., Mrs. Cecell Brown, of Memphis, Tenn., and Mr. R. J. Wright, whose address is unknown at this time. Dr. Wright united with the church at Old Pleasant Valley, in Copiah County, when he was 18; he was converted at 21 years of age. He was a member of the S. B. Stampley Masonic Lodge No. 222, at Roxie, Miss. Dr. Wright was a man of deep and sound convictions and an active worker in all movements to improve the community life, and, therefore, he was a man of sound piety and solid Christian character. His high character made him a lover of humanity, and he always threw the force of his life for the social good. He loved his church and pastor and always gave of his time and means to promote the interests of the Kingdom of God. His home was the preacher's home and here he found sympathy, comfort and godly counsel in the work of the church. It is not any wonder that during the days he was confined to his room and ministered to by as kind and loving hands as ever cared for a good father, he spoke often and with great confidence and without the slightest doubt as to the future. The sky was clear and the way was bright and he heard the call of the Father to come up higher. At 9:15 p. m., on July 13, 1919, the spirit of Dr. Wright answered the call to go home, as he was surrounded by loved ones and friends. On the next afternoon in the new church, now in process of construction, the writer, assisted by the pastor, Rev. W. P. Bailey, and that saintly man and preacher, Rev. Ira B. Robertson, and Rev. H. C. Herring, held the funeral services, and, under the simple rites of the church and those of the Masonic order, we laid the body of our friend and brother to rest to wait the call of the trump of God.

W. H. SAUNDERS.

On the morning of August 7, 1919, the saintly spirit of Mrs. MARY ELIZABETH FAULK (nee Clark) left her earthly body to enter the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. She had been in declining health for some time, yet her end came suddenly. Everything had been done for her that loving and skilled ministry could accomplish. She had been in New Orleans for treatment, and had been home only a short while before her departure. Mrs. Faulk was born in Morehouse Parish, on June 18, 1854. At the age of 18 years she was married to Frank L. Faulk, of Ouachita Parish, where she spent the balance of her life. She was reared in an Episcopal home, but united with the Methodist Church after moving to Ouachita Parish. She is survived by nine children. One died in its sixth year. Her life was one of sacrifice. She surely gave her life; therefore, she has found it. For four years I was her pastor, and certain traits of her character were impressed upon me. But few mothers have been more given to her children than she. Left a widow when most of her children were small, her burden was great. She literally threw her whole life into her task. Her five sons and four daughters stand as a monument of her success. I was never long in her presence and he did not mention some matter that was uppermost in her mind, concerning her children. With all her home care, she did not neglect the church. This seemed to unite with her home life. She impressed with the purity of her heart. In this was often her power. "I am the branch, ye are the fruit; he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing." So she could know the modest woman by natural countenance. Her achievements were above the ordinary and she because her whole heart was in her task. Her body rests in the little cemetery at Faulk's Chapel, south of Monroe, to await the resurrection. I think the thought of her Savior's words: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I'll make you ruler over many."

A NOTE FROM REV. W. B. WALDROP.

Dear Brother Carley: The last time I wrote the Advocate, I was coming to the hospital. I was in very bad health. But I am happy to say that, through the skill of a big-hearted surgeon and the prayers of God's people, I am over the operation and think I am going to get well. I am located in Mobile, Ala. I think I will stay here for some time, as I have never met a more congenial set of Methodist preachers than are here. Every courtesy to which a minister has a right at the hands of his brethren has been extended to me, and I can't accept all the invitations extended to me. The presiding elder and pastors have all been exceedingly brotherly.

May God bless the Advocate—I have been lost without it for two months or more. With brotherly love,

W. B. WALDROP.

Wonderful Egg Producer.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3257 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

CATARRH DOES HARM

Whether It Is of the Nose, Throat, or Other Organs, Get Rid of It.

Catarrh of the nose or throat when it becomes chronic weakens the delicate lung tissues, deranges the digestive organs, and may lead to consumption. It impairs the taste, smell and hearing, and affects the voice. It is a constitutional disease and requires a constitutional remedy.

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by purifying the blood removes the cause of the disease and gives permanent relief. This alterative and tonic medicine has proved entirely satisfactory to thousands of families in three generations.

If there is biliousness or constipation, take Hood's Pills.—they are a thorough cathartic, a gentle laxative.

Stiff? Sore?

A lame back, a sore muscle or a stiff joint often is considered too lightly by the sufferer. It should be remembered that backache, rheumatic pains, stiffness, soreness, sallow skin and puffiness under the eyes are symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble—and these certainly should not be neglected.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

It is not my purpose to write a personal or circular letter to the preachers and Sunday schools of our Conference. I shall, perhaps, write a personal letter to the Conference Board members, setting before them the problems of the Sunday schools as I see them from the viewpoint of the Sunday School Field Secretary. I have been thinking that it might be possible that some of our Methodists in the Conference have some valuable suggestions to offer; if you have, write them to me or to the members of the Conference Sunday School Board from your district. The Board will soon be in session at the Annual Conference at Ruston, where all our plans will be worked up and down and some of them out. If you do not know your Conference Board members, look them up in the Annual.

A report from the "Efficiency Conferences" will be given in the next issue of the Advocate.

Reports are coming into my office from the schools, but too slow. Pastors and superintendents, please get behind them and push them on to me.

Mr. Brabham is doing fine work in our conferences, and you should take advantage of his visit if we come to your church. His work is popular and his addresses are of highest value.

ALONZO EARLY,
Field Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Have you seen a copy of the Church School? Ask your superintendent to lend you his copy. It is a beauty. The articles by Tiplady and Margaret Slattery are worth the price of the magazine for one year. Five copies for five dollars for one year. Order of Smith & Lamar as you order your other Sunday school literature, a copy for each teacher that will use the magazine. The teacher that is giving time and thought to the teaching of our children deserves all the help the school is able to give.

Remember that all the topics a teacher would like to have discussed cannot be put into one issue of the Church School. The editors have pledged to give the help that teachers in all grades of schools want. You are at liberty to write to our editor and tell him what you think ought to be discussed; if you do not care to write to the editor, write to your Field Secretary and he will see that you get what help you desire if it can be given. The teacher that is not interested sufficiently to attend the school regularly and get there on time is not informed. Information is the first step to make one interested. Indifference means ignorance of the matter under discussion.

The following teachers have done credit work recently: Mr. Thomas G. Pears, of Water Valley, has two units on Learning and Teaching, and Life in the Making; Miss Annie V. Wilson and Miss Celeste Wilson have each two units on Learning and Teaching, and have a diploma. These teachers are from Oxford. Mrs. Beulah Boswell has one unit on The Teacher. Write to any one of these teachers and ask them if it is worth while to complete one of the books on teacher-training. In a short time we will not consider any teacher unless she has made some preparation for the important work of teaching our children the things pertaining to their life and destiny. It is almost a crime to rob childhood of its rights. May God forgive us because we are so slow to see what we owe our children.

It is not too late to observe Sunday School Day, Rally Day, and Teacher Training Day, all in one. The "three in one" make a fine combination. Several schools can testify to the truth of the above statement. If you are so situated that you cannot carry out the entire program, you may attend to the latter part of the program by sending Rev. J. E. Stephens, Treasurer, New Albany, Miss., a contribution for our Sunday School Board, an amount equal to that you sent as a result of holding Children's Day last year. We need this money to carry on the work of the religious education of the children of our own church and home.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The last Sunday in September was spent with Brother Chisholm on the Brandon charge. The school at Brandon is a mighty good school. I think they will be able to meet all the requirements of the Standard without much trouble.

I went to Greenfield on this same trip and hope the visit will prove to be profitable. These good people were just starting their protracted meeting. Everything looked fine for a good meeting. I hope they will soon start their Sunday school again.

The Standard Training School at Jackson ran the whole week. Dr. Andrew Sledd was the instructor in Bible, teaching the Minor Prophets; Dr. Goodrich White, of Emory University, taught "Learning and Teaching;" Rev. W. C. Owens, Field Secretary of the South Carolina Conference, taught "Organization and Administration;" Mrs. Ferguson, from Little Rock, Ark., taught "Primary Methods."

We regretted that more did not try for credits. We found quite a number who seemed to be shy of the examinations. Some came all the time and made no effort to pass. Some were denied the privilege of attending enough to get the credits. The school was of high type and was not run with the idea of giving as many credits as possible, but of doing as much work as possible.

Ninety-three enrolled altogether, and many times there were more than an hundred present. Twenty-six certificates were granted. There were 50 who signed up to attend the school next year.

The Executive Committee of the Sunday School Board thought so much of the School that they agreed to pay $50 of the expense of such schools wherever they might be held. Meridian, Laurel, Hattiesburg, Gulfport, Biloxi, Brookhaven, Natchez, Vicksburg would be logical places for such schools. The application should be made through the Field Secretary if you desire help, and it must be made at least four months ahead of time, in order to get teachers.

Well, what about the smaller schools? The Sunday School Board of the Mississippi Conference has adopted the policy that wherever any school will get as many as ten pledged to attend, they will send a teacher for five days at least to go over one unit of work with them, the local school to pay traveling expenses and entertain the visiting worker. This will enable us to reach every charge, provided the applications are made long enough ahead for us to get the proper teachers. Who will be first?

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.
145 Adams St., Jackson, Miss.

The Standard School was held in the Galloway Memoial Church. The ladies of this and the Capitol Street Church served lunch each night to the whole school. Visited Galloway Memorial Sunday school, Sunday. It is a fine school.

BITTER TASTE SOUR STOMACH

Pills and Strong Medicines Made This Lady's Troubles Worse, But Thedford's Black-Draught Improved Her Appetite and Took Away Her Bile.

Nancy, Ky.—Mrs. Cora Waddle, a resident of this place, gives out this statement: "I have taken Black-Draught and found it to be the best liver medicine I ever used. It has just been fine for indigestion, sour stomach and a bitter taste in the mouth.

I used to get bilious and constipated and had to take something. Pills and other strong medicines would only tear my stomach up and leave me in a worse fix than before taking. I began to have sick headache.

After learning of Black-Draught I took it and was cured of sick headaches. One or two doses a week, or a pinch after meals, kept the bowels open and took away all bile. I have a good appetite, due to my use of Black-Draught."

If your liver is not acting properly you may suffer from such symptoms as headache, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, etc., and unless relief is obtained serious trouble may result.

In its 70 years of successful use, Thedford's Black-Draught has been found to relieve these ailments and stimulate the liver to do its work.

Less Meat if Back and Kidneys Hurt

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, of if bladder neys aren't acting right, or if bladdor Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up.

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Adv.

ELMORE CHARGE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: As I have not made any report from the Elmore charge this year, I will now give a report of my work for the entire year.

Our first revival meeting began at Wesley Chapel, the third Sunday in July and continued for eight days, which resulted in a most excellent meeting. The membership gave evidence of being greatly benefited, and we had eighteen accessions to the church. Rev. R. T. Ware, of the Mooringsport charge, came to us on Monday and remained with us until Friday night. Our people enjoyed his good sermons very much. I think that Ware will wear well almost anywhere.

Our second meeting began at Longstraw the first Sunday in August and continued for six days. The writer did all the preaching, and while we did not have any accessions to the church, I think that the church was greatly helped. The people expressed themselves as though we had a good meeting. We gathered nearly all of the material into the church at this point last year.

Our third meeting began at New Prospect, the second Sunday in August, and continued for eight days. Rev. T. J. Holladay, of the Plain Dealing charge, came to us on Monday and remained until the following Friday night, and his messages were stirring and helpful and I feel sure that our membership was greatly benefited. We had seven accessions to the church.

Our fourth and last meeting for our church this year, and, I think, a gen- at Vienna, beginning the third Sunday in August. Rev. J. L. Lay, of the Calhoun charge, was with us in this meeting, and he preached good gospel sermons. But the people never did take the interest in this meeting that they should have done, so I feel that our meeting at Vienna was not as good as it ought to have been.

The writer held two meetings at school houses where we have no organized churches, and we had most excellent meetings at both places. Eight persons joined the church as a result of these meetings and their names were added to the Elmore charge.

We have had forty accessions to the church this year, and, I think a general toning up of the entire charge. We have three good prayer meetings, well attended. I believe that our financial report will be equally as good as last year, or even better. Our Sunday school work is considerably in advance of what it was last year. At our last Annual Conference, I reported only two small Sunday schools; we now have four Sunday schools in operation. We have had sixteen accessions to the church this year from our Sunday schools.

Our Conference Sunday School Field Secretary was with us sometime ago and we put him through. I got three good services out of him in one day. He will pull every time you call on him. H. J. BOLTZ, P. C.

NOTES FROM OXFORD, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am happy to say that our Methodist folk are getting along swimmingly here at Oxford. Brother Woollard is back from his vacation in fine trim, and is, as usual, giving us "the sincere milk of the Word."

Since the opening of the university, our Sunday school is flourishing—all classes full and teachers happy in their work. Prof. A. W. Milden, of the university, who has been in charge of our Sunday school for several years, is magnifying his office and we believe the present outlook in Sunday school activity is more flattering than in years. The university is full to overflowing, many being turned away for lack of room.

Doubtless some of your readers may be interested to hear a word from the old Oxford camp meeting, which was held as usual the first week in August under the direction of Brothers Woollard and Hopper, our local pastors, assisted by Brother Ward, of Booneville, who is a magnificent preacher and worker for the Master. The meeting was well attended, much interest being manifested throughout. Indications are that the tents and grounds will be repaired and beautified ere another August rolls around. A committee with an enthusiastic leader has been appointed to prosecute this work. Those who have learned to love this sacred spot in bygone days can ill afford to see it decay and pass out of existence. Memories hallowed and sweet, and as lasting as the stars, linger and whisper of "battles fought and victories won" upon this battleground of our sainted forefathers.

Well, our precious soldier boys, with few exceptions, have been, through God's goodness, returned to our hearts and homes from the awful world war, placing their rejoicing and grateful parents under renewed obligations to our gracious Heavenly Father for his goodness and mercy unto the children of men. I am wondering how many of us will, by our faithful consecration and devotion to the cause of Christ, prove our gratefulness for such miraculous blessings.

Let's not let it be asked of us, as it was of the ten lepers who received such wonderful healing at the hands of Christ, and went away without one word of gratefulness, "Where are the nine?" Let's not be coerced into service, but joyfully volunteer as the call is resounding now from Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria, and even from the uttermost parts of the earth as never before in the world's history.

"We are living we are dwelling
In a grand and awful time
In an age on ages telling—"

(And if we, like the Apostle Paul, are doing our dead level best to pay our indebtedness to Him who laid down his precious life for us.) "To be living is indeed sublime."

Very sincerely,
Mrs. A. FOUNT CALLOWAY.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put On Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN.

Louisiana Conference.

The reports from the campaign are most encouraging. First Church, Shreveport, is making a thorough canvass and hopes for good results; First Church, New Orleans, reports 17 new members; Second Church, New Orleans, held a splendid rally on the evening of the 7th. Are there others?

MISSIONARY CANDIDATES.

The following message from Mrs. Steele regarding this important part of missionary work should be of interest to pastors as well as officers of the Conferences:

"I am sure you will be interested to know the number and names of the young women who have been accepted for the Scarritt Bible and Training School for the coming year. You will be glad to know that these young women, added to the students of last year and the self-supporting students, make an enrollment of between sixty and sixty-five. This is encouraging, as this is by all means the most important part of our work. Why should we build schools, why make collections to maintain them, if we do not have well prepared missionaries to carry the message?

"I am asking your co-operation in the cultivation of young women in your Conference. Many young women apply who cannot qualify. We must stress the importance of thorough preparation. Urge young women to finish high school and to take a college course, or at least two years of college. Many pastors are urging high school graduates to apply for scholarships at the Training School. The educational requirements should be brought to the attention of the pastors in every Conference. Your co-operation in this matter will save disappointment to the young women and will help me in the cultivation of candidates."

SOCIAL SERVICE FOR THE FALL.

Dear Co-Worker: Have you made plans for definite Social Service work in your community this fall? If not, may I make two suggestions to you?

The first concerns "The Community Club for Negro Women." We have talked this all the year, but we fear that few if any clubs have been organized. You will not doubt the wisdom of such a movement as this, especially at this time when race riots are becoming so frequent and a better working understanding between the two races might help in preventing them. The time has come when we can no longer neglect the negro women and children. This is a problem that belongs to the women of the South and they alone can solve it, but perhaps you are still undecided as to the best method of procedure. Let me offer these suggestions: Order from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., "Programs for Community Clubs for Negro Women." These may be had for the asking. Secure the co-operation of the pastor of the Negro Methodist Church, have him call a meeting of the women of his congregation and lay your plans before them. If they are in favor of such an organization, elect a president, vice president and secretary-treasurer. If you decide upon dues, let these go toward providing a playground for the colored children and plan a story hour for them. Many of our periodicals, such as "The Ladies Home Journal," "The Delineator," "The Mother's Magazine," furnish splendid articles that may be used in the programs suggested; and by writing the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., you may get many helpful bulletins.

The second suggestion concerns the Sunday moving picture show. If you have these in your community, you know full well their harmful effects, how they are influencing the lives of our boys and girls, taking them away from God's house and the influences of holy things, and filling their minds with the things that are low and degrading—giving them ideas and ideals of life that tend only to lead them in the downward way.

Prepare a strong petition, provide each pastor in the community with a copy, and for one or more Sundays let them call on their congregation for signatures. If other signatures can be gotten by a house-to-house visitation, do this and then present your petition to your city council asking them for their support and co-operation. And may the Father grant us the victory.

Present these matters to your Social Service Committee at once and have your plans ready to bring before your auxiliary at the October meeting. Let us make the work of this quarter count, and come to the close with the consciousness of having done our best.

Please send me your report so that I may make my report to Mrs. Downs not later than the 10th of October.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. W. W. HOLMES.

MERIDIAN METHODISM.

Two recent meetings in Meridian have demonstrated the fact that it is unnecessary always to go out of town for a speaker to insure a successful revival, Revs. H. B. Watkins and B. L. Sutherland having just completed a series of meetings at Fifth Street and Hawkins Memorial, respectively, nineteen joining the Fifth Street Church and twenty-four the Hawkins Memorial, with good prospects of others uniting with the church as results of these meetings.

In both instances, the preaching was on the fundamentals of genuine religion and was marked by simplicity and power. The churches were greatly revived and the influence of the meetings was far-reaching.

The singing at Fifth Street was led by Mr. Oscar Bell, and at Hawkins Memorial by Mr. R. L. Criscoe, two local laymen of the city who have splendid voices and marked ability in revival work.

The pastors, Revs. W. J. Ferguson and J. A. Davis, are well pleased with the result of the work and feel that their churches have profited a great deal by these series of meetings.

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if Bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.

REVIVALS ON FLORENCE CIRCUIT

Dear Brother Carley: May I have space in the Advocate to give a brief report of our revivals on the Florence circuit?

On the fourth Sunday in July we began a meeting at Wesleyana. Rev. C. H. Ellis, of Harrisville, did the preaching. There were no accessions to the church; but that does not mean that we did not have a good meeting. The preaching was strong and effective.

Three other meetings, Thomasville, Richland, and Sinai, were conducted by Rev. W. H. Lane, of Rankin Street, Jackson. Brother Lane had some hard problems to deal with, but he preached to the point, trusting in God for results, and in many respects the victory came. In these meetings there were eleven added to the church. No pastor would make a mistake in securing his services in a meeting.

At Monterey and Florence there was a complete revival of Christian religion. Rev. J. W. Chisholm, an eminent divine, the beloved pastor of Brandon, did the preaching. At Monterey there were two added to the church by vows. The church took on new life and it is in better shape than it has been for years.

We closed our series of meetings at Florence. Brother Chisholm, an apt student in human nature, at once discovered the odds against which we had to work; so we pitched our tents in that direction, trusting in God for a landslide; and it came, though we had to fight hard. But anything less than a hard fight is not God's. Brother Chisholm is a great theologian and gospel preacher. There were five added to the church, three of whom asked for immersion, which we gladly gave. This is the first time immersion has been given by the Methodists in Florence, and for fear that the pastor could not do the work efficiently, he decided that a more skillful man had better officiate; so Brother Chisholm was summoned. He officiated with grace and solemnity. If the Baptist people were to see him perform, they would congratulate him—the most skillful Baptist divine would tip his hat to him.

God gave us the greatest victory at Florence the church has had in years. We pray that God may send Brother Chisholm our way again.

ARMENIA'S LAST CALL TO AMERICA.

The American Committee for the Independence of Armenia has received from Mr. Aharonian, President of the Delegation of the Armenian Republic to the Peace Conference, the following three cablegrams dated September 12, 17 and 27 respectively:

"Turkish-Tartar threat against Armenia is under way of realization, viz., Kemal Pasha's two divisions assisted by Turks, Tartars and Kurds have started surrounding Armenian Republic. Our soldiers fighting desperately defeated enemy at several points, but were forced to abandon Nakh-Itchevan and Kars Districts, on account lack munitions and provisions, leaving Christian populations at mercy of invaders. Our numerous steps with Peace Conference remain fruitless. * * * No food, drugs or money. Population naked and exhausted. Starvation everywhere. From thirty to fifty persons found dead in streets of Erivan daily. Are absolutely abandoned and without communication with outside world. Turks consider us responsible for overthrow their empire. Words lacking describe horror situation. Will soon be completely annihilated. Our last hope for aid is in America. Armenia makes a last and supreme call to great and noble American people and government for help. Urgent that 10,000 soldiers be sent immediately with necessary equipment for organization Armenian Army of thirty thousand. If acted at once situation can be saved. Very existence of Armenian people depends on America. You may come too late to save us."

Two hundred thousand Armenians fought in the ranks of the allied and associated armies. According to General Allenby, Armenian battalions took a leading part in the defeat of the Turks in Palestine. According to Von Ludendorff the inability of the Turks to reach Baku in time, owing to the resistance of the Armenians, following the defection of Russia, deprived the German Army in the west of essential fuel supply. One million Armenian men, women and children have been slaughtered by the Turks because of their fidelity to the faith and cause of America. And now at this, the most critical juncture of her history, Christian Armenia makes a supreme call to Christian America. If we permit the Armenian people to be exterminated, the Christian church shall be dishonored forever. An Armenian State in Asia Minor is bound to be a decisive factor in the task of civilizing the peoples of Near and Middle Asia, and it is also the best guarantee against the dangers of Pan-Islamism and Pan-Turanianism. Christian Armenia will be a watch-dog of Christian civilization in the East. We must help her. We must save her.

As men, Christians and Americans, we strongly urge every minister of the Gospel to write to the President and to the Senators of his State, urging that necessary steps be taken to save Armenia. We also earnestly ask that all the ministers of the Gospel bring this subject to the attention of their congregations and ask all men and women to write to the President and to the Senators of their States that Armenia must be saved.

JAMES W. GERARD,
Chairman, American Committee for the Independence of Armenia.

Mabel McKinley—Niece of the Late President of the United States—Takes Nuxated Iron for Health and Strength

And Says She Regards It as The Ideal Tonic For All Weak, Run-Down Nervous Women

Dr. George H. Baker, Formerly Physician and Surgeon Monmouth Memorial Hospital of New Jersey, Explains Why Iron Is One of the GREATEST OF ALL STRENGTH BUILDERS

Says: He has found nothing in his experience so effective for helping to make strong, healthy, red-blooded women as Nuxated Iron.

Every woman who wishes to possess health, strength and beauty, should carefully read the statement of Miss McKinley, who, after her personal use of Nuxated Iron tells of the results she obtained.

Miss McKinley says: "While I had often heard of Nuxated Iron I must admit that prior to using it myself I had no idea of its remarkable value for building up the health and strength.

"Following the strain imposed by months of the most exacting work singing for the soldiers in the various army encampments, together with my social engagements and charitable pursuits, I found myself in such a weakened, run-down state that I feared a complete collapse.

"It seemed utterly impossible for me to drop everything and go away for a complete rest, but I realized that as my condition was serious I must either do this or find something that would actually rebuild my waning strength and enable me to continue my activities.

"I had always been prejudiced against tonic preparations which, for the most part, I found only acted as a temporary stimulant and usually left one worse off than ever. However, when my own family physician insistently recommended that I give a fair trial to Nuxated Iron, I consented to begin its use, with a result that after a few days the weakness and exhaustion from which I suffered began to be replaced by a feeling of renewed strength and vitality. In less than three weeks' time my whole system was tingling with energy and power and I was overjoyed to find that I was once more in superb physical condition.

"Nuxated Iron has accomplished so much for me that I regard it as the ideal tonic for all weak, run-down women. As a strength, health and blood-builder, I am convinced Nuxated Iron has no equal."

In commenting on Miss McKinley's statement, regarding the efficacy of Nuxated Iron, Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, says: "It is my opinion that in practically nine times out of ten, unstrung nerves and failing strength and vitality are due to deficiency of iron in the blood. Many a woman who is run-down, nervous and who quickly tires out, suffers from iron deficiency and does not know it. I am convinced that there are thousands of such women who, simply by taking Nuxated Iron, might readily build up their red-blood corpuscles, increase their physical energy and get themselves back to vibrant and vigorous health. By enriching the blood and increasing its oxygen carrying power, Nuxated Iron will often transform the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of nervous, run-down women into a glow of health, and make them look younger within a surprisingly short time."

Among other physicians asked for an opinion was Dr. George H. Baker, formerly Physician and Surgeon Monmouth Memorial Hospital, New Jersey, who says: "What women need to put roses in their cheeks and the springtime of life into their step is not cosmetics or stimulating drugs but plenty of rich, pure blood. Without it no woman can do credit to herself or to her work. Iron is one of the greatest of all strength and blood builders, and I have found nothing in my experience so effective for helping to make strong, healthy, red-blooded women as Nuxated Iron."

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron which is recommended above is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth or make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund the purchase money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Miss McKinley has a voice of unusual quality and it was following her work singing for the soldiers that she became weakened and run-down and had recourse to Nuxated Iron. Once more in superb physical condition, Miss McKinley says she is convinced that Nuxated Iron has no equal as a Strength, Health and Blood-Builder.

FROM MYRTLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: A little over three years ago, God in His infinite mercy led me into the light and liberty of the Gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; and while I may not be so sure about a great many things in this world, I do know that I was really and truly converted at that time, for I was right there when it happened and I positively know that "the great transaction was done."

I have ever since that time had the Bible evidence of my acceptance with my God: God's Spirit bears witness with my spirit that I am a child of God; I love God's people everywhere; I am at all times interested in my Father's business; and I hunger for souls.

God planted in the heart of every one a sense of right and a sense of wrong, but in addition to that, He did plant in the heart and soul of the really converted person the missionary spirit, and I seriously doubt the conversion of any one that is not concerned about the spiritual condition of the rest of humanity; and I fail to see how any one can rest easy and consider himself going to heaven, the place of eternal rest and peace, when neighbors and friends and, perhaps, even relatives are on the road to an eternal hell. Show me a professed Christian that does not believe in missions, and I will show you one that never does enjoy his religion; show me a church that does not believe in missions, and I will show you a church that is dying with spiritual dry rot. The world to-day is dying for Christian sympathy and seems to be getting very little of it.

It seems, also, that the witness of the Spirit and the power of testimony are sadly lacking in our churches. In my meetings I have found great difficulty in persuading men and women to take part in the services by personal testimony, or by quoting a passage of Scripture, or by making requests for prayer for the unsaved; but wherever I have found the people willing and anxious to take part in the services, we have had no difficulty in bringing souls to Christ.

Now, we all need encouragement in our labors, and if we have had a pleasant experience in the service of the Lord, we should be anxious to convey the good news to our fellowmen; so, having been especially blessed this year, I feel that God's people, especially those who read the Advocate, may be interested in what God has done for us.

We had a great meeting here at Myrtle in August, Brother L. A. McKeown, of Iuka, Miss., conducting the same to the edification of the church and the salvation of souls. The church was greatly uplifted, as well as the entire community, and Brother McKeown will always be remembered here as a man of God, an efficient preacher, baptized with the Holy Ghost and a man whom God has especially blessed. May heaven's richest blessings rest upon him forevermore.

This being a five-point circuit, it took of course five meetings to go around. We were fortunate in uniting with the Baptist brethren in two of our meetings, resulting in much good to all concerned. The Baptist pastors and myself would preach sermon and sermon, and the spirit of unity and brotherly love did prevail at all times.

The other two meetings I conducted myself, God being with us in great power, blessing thirty-seven converts, twenty-one of them being added to our church.

Altogether we have had sixty-two conversions on this charge this year, twenty-nine of these being now on our membership roll.

I have found that the only way to bring the unsaved to Jesus Christ is to go down where they live and try to lift them up, and at the same time lift up Jesus Christ to a sin-cursed world. There is a great deal of discussion in this day and time as to the best way to do church work and to save souls, but I can not find anything that will take the place of the Holy Spirit, a genuine Gospel sermon, Christian love and sympathy and a substantial mourners' bench.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ is a power unto salvation for every one that believeth, and if a man believes, there is not much trouble to get him to the mourners' bench, and, with one or two exceptions, I have not failed to bring those to Christ who had sufficient interest in the welfare of their own souls to come that far.

Brethren, let us set the pulpit on fire with zeal for Christ and His cause upon earth and "all things will work together for good" and we will all "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world."

Yours for the "Old-time Religion,"

419 EGGS FROM 20 HENS IN 30 DAYS

Mr. Dougherty Got This Result in October. Plan is Easily Tried.

"I tried Don Sung and the results were far past any expectations. I got 419 eggs in 30 days from 20 hens while moulting. I think this is wonderful, as they hradly laid at all before while moulting."—Frank Dougherty, 5910 E. 11th St., Indianapolis.

Mr. Dougherty bought $1 worth of Don Sung tablets in Octoher and wrote the above letter in November. Figure his profit on 35 dozen eggs from hens that formerly laid little or nothing.

This may sound too good to be true, but it costs nothing to find out. We'll make you the same offer we made him. Give your hens Don Sung and wateh results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

"Good for me to draw near to God." Literally—And I, nearness to God to me is good. That is the ultimate good, the sum of all conceivable good, the "summum bonum" of the ancients—a clear declaration of the unselfish and absolute morality of Bible religion; not a religion of external rewards and honors and of selfish aspirations and longings for paradisaical bliss, but of communion and fellowship with God, whether it be on earth or in heaven.—F. Sage and Sulphur Darkens Gray Hair

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—Adv.

300 Eggs a Day

"Since using 'TWO for ONE' I get 250 to 300 eggs a day instead of 25 to 35," writes J. C. Hoff of Indiana.

This wonderful egg producer has made thousands of dollars profit for poultry owners all over the United States. Now is the time to increase your egg supply for the fall and winter when eggs will be selling at $1.00 a dozen. Give your hens "TWO for ONE," the tonic that makes layers and real money-makers out of every single solitary hen you own. Send $1.00 to Kinsella Co., 2927 Le Moyne Bldg., Chicago, for trial size or send $2.00 for large box which contains three times the quantity of trial box and which is a full season's supply. We guarantee to return your money if not satisfied. Enter our free $5,000.00 egg-laying contest; full particulars are given with each box of "TWO for ONE."—Adv.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

AND AN INCORRIGIBLE ONE.

There is an old saying that "Procrastination is the thief of time." The natural course of treatment for a thief, when he has been apprehended, is to punish him for his crimes and keep an eye on him for the future. But Procrastination seems to be an "artful dodger." We catch him hanging around our office almost every day, though we fail to lay hands on him, and we know that some of our friends frequently suffer from his depredations. This is intended as a warning to those who have not, as yet, received a visit from him. He is sly in his methods and incorrigible in his nature.

NEEDED EVERYWHERE.

A physician, speaking before an association of Georgia nurses, is reported to have said that one of the great needs of the medical profession today is the "human touch" in dealing with patients. Love of humanity is a cardinal element of success in the practice of medicine. The cold-blooded methods of the scientist are largely out of place in the sick-room. Our own experience with physicians has been altogether with those who exemplify the noblest characteristics of big-hearted and sympathetic servants of the public. We hope there are very few of any other kind. But we have been thinking that this Georgia physician struck the key-note, in his address to those nurses, of the need in every department of life's activities. It is the human touch that makes the doctrine of brotherhood a reality, that enables one man to be a blessing to another, that drives away sorrow and doubt and fear and makes the world as beautiful as a garden of flowers. It is needed everywhere, all the time.

WHAT IS HIS TROUBLE?

Such information as the American people are allowed to have concerning the President's illness is reassuring in its nature. The daily bulletins issued by the staff of physicians attending him state that his pulse, temperature, respiration, and blood pressure are normal, that he takes nourishment satisfactorily, that his condition is slowly improving; but the statement is added that he must have absolute rest for an indeterminate length of time. There may be good reason for concealing the nature of the President's illness from the people; but we confess we cannot imagine what it is. Harsh criticism has been made of those who have made surmises as to the trouble, when, as a matter of fact, it is the most natural thing in the world to do. The time has passed when an intelligent public can be expected to take without question such fragments of information as may be vouchsafed them by those in authority. We have been told time and again that the President is a very sick man; why not tell us what his trouble is?

NOT FOR ITSELF ALONE.

The rapid growth of the city is one of the striking features of modern civilization. Along with this growth have come many problems which, in some ways, constitute the strongest challenge that has yet been made of Christianity as a vitalizing and redeeming force in community life. As population is massed around these centers of commerce and industry, the questions of political uprightness and of social purity become acute. We have no disposition to discuss this matter from the standpoint of partisan politics; but we do wish to call attention to one fact which ought never to be forgot by those who are in control of civic affairs in our great cities: such affairs cannot properly be settled purely on local considerations. A city is, in a very real sense, a representative of many sections of the country by reason of its commercial, social, intellectual, and moral affiliations and influences. Take, for example, the moral obligation a city is under with reference to the territory from which it draws a large part of its resources. Thousands of young people flock to it every year. Especially is this true when the city is an educational center, as a great many of them have become. Parents send their sons and daughters to these centers with the idea of equipping them properly for successful careers in various occupations and professions. They have a right to demand that the moral influence thrown around these young people shall be of such kind as will strengthen them in all the qualities of true manhood and womanhood. They have a right, too, to let their desires be known, and to take such steps as will, in their judgment, bring about the results desired. Unless we can make our cities safe places for the rearing of clean-minded men and women, our social order will inevitably suffer a moral degradation. No city has a right to administer its affairs for itself alone.

PROHIBITION IS RESPONSIBLE.

We read the other day that a town in Ohio is greatly perplexed about what to do with its policemen. Arrests have decreased from 400, to 60 a month, and the guardians of the law have very little to do. Of course, prohibition is given as the explanation of this state of affairs. The same condition, doubtless, exists in other places. If no other solution of the problem presents itself, we suggest that the city authorities increase the salaries of these policemen and allow them to retain their positions. Even then, they would be saving money as compared with the days of the open saloon. Criminals are costly as well as dangerous. Anything that reduces crime to an appreciable extent will leave money in the taxpayers' pockets that otherwise would have to be spent for the maintenance of an expensive system of courts and prisons. These idle policemen, however, will probably soon be able to find remunerative employment in the rapid industrial development that is taking place throughout the nation as a result of the abolition of the liquor traffic.

WHERE IS THE FOOL-KILLER?

A miscellaneous assortment of mail comes to the editor's desk. We have recently received the following communication: "Having had the good fortune to discover the truths that the universe contains no real god, that man has no soul and that life ends forever at death, and believing this knowledge to be of greatest importance to all people, I write to offer my services free to the readers of your publication to inform them of these truths being discovered if you will kindly furnish me space for a series of articles or lessons explaining and proving them. Please answer and oblige." The name signed to the communication is one that we never heard of before, and the address given is that of a small town in Kansas. We remember to have read somewhere, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." Without implying aught as to the expediency of his methods, we suggest that the fool-killer is behind with his work in Kansas.

GOING UP!

Some months ago, a good deal of attention was given to a proposed campaign on the part of the Government to lower the present high cost of living. Apart from the fact that some surplus military supplies are being sold at moderate prices, nothing very definite seems to have been accomplished. We are forcibly reminded of the high cost of doing business by a notification within the past few days that the price of print paper has been advanced again. This is merely one of the many items that are essential to the industry of the country that show a constant upward tendency in price in spite of the hoped-for downward tendency. Before we can really become adjusted to one situation, another set of circumstances seems to arise which necessitates a re-adjustment. The process is becoming monotonous, not to say expensive and exasperating. And the end does not yet seem to be in sight. It is a time for careful economy in expenditures and increased diligence in speeding up production.

PARENTAL INDIFFERENCE.

According to a recent report of the truant officer of the New Orleans public schools, "parental indifference" is the chief cause of the absence of pupils from their classes. This is a sad commentary upon the attitude of those most intimately concerned toward the future of our civilization. It is a strange thing that any parent should be indifferent in such times as these toward the educational preparation of his children for the serious business of life. It is even stranger, from our point of view, that so many parents should be apparently indifferent concerning the moral and religious training of their children. Our Sunday schools should be crowded every Sunday with children who have been sent there—or accompanied there—by fathers and mothers who have a real conception of the meaning of parenthood in relation to the destiny of those who are the most precious of all their earthly possessions. "Parental indifference" will explain the sad fate of many a life in the day of judgment.

IS PRAYER IN MODERN LIFE POSSIBLE?

By John Bayne Ascham.

No progress of knowledge, no acceptance of natural law, no development of civilization has destroyed the instinct to pray. At the great crisis of life prayer springs spontaneously from the human heart. In the midst of modern life prayer is not an alien powerless impulse or superstition. It is not merely a soothing or an inspiring soliloquy. It is an unused source of power. It lies at the heart of our personality, an undeveloped resource of greatness, peace and power. Prayer is a normal instinct of human life. Civilization has not silenced it. On the contrary, at those junctures when we are thrown back upon ourselves by some failure of the physical world to satisfy our needs, we grope instinctively for God. An outward check to our ambitions, a sudden turn to our fortunes, an interruption in the smooth flow of our lives, and lo, new, strange deeps of tortured spirit are revealed. It is then that we learn the tragic character of our ordinary life. It is in the hour when the customary supports of life break down that men ever have cried out for God.

Present Conditions Are Acute.

The very nature of our present civilization must force all patriots and Christians to their knees. For a century the course of civilization has been dominated by the idea of material progress. The chief energies of men have been directed to magnify physical comforts. Production, trade, markets have been the great words in our vocabulary. Art, brotherhood, religion—the ideal and the spiritual—have been eclipsed by the ceaselessly rising demands for physical satisfactions. German imperialism has been crushed by the heroic sacrifices of democratic nations. But the larger, more insidious materialistic imperialism which threatens the destruction of all generous expressions of our spiritual life is still with us. To center civilization in the market-place ever will be the swift descent to hell. If the entire social order is not to collapse, the whole of civilization must be infused with spiritual values and goals. Life's emphasis must be shifted from sense delights to the enjoyments of the intellect and conscience; to unselfishness, fraternalism, co-operation, common goals, art, morality and religion.

Therefore the great needs of civilization are going to set us praying. To make life desirable or even endurable we shall have to cultivate the spiritual life. To cultivate the spiritual life is to live life in touch with God. We shall have to learn the methods of prayer. When we have discovered that the chief utility of prayer is not to avert some misfortune of sickness or poverty or business reverse, but that it is to reinforce our lives by getting into vivid and rich relationship with God, we will be anxious to learn and practice the art of prayer. Prayer is our only mode of getting into touch with the ultimate sources of being and making available for our use the vast spiritual treasures of the wisdom and the love of God. If the conviction that God and ourselves have business with each other really dominates the members of the churches to-day, then a new epoch will dawn throughout the world and the progress of civilization is assured.

Who Closed the Door?

There is a door which opens from our conscious lives into the great life of God. Behind that door, on God's side, infinite spiritual riches, ready to transform the whole character of our natures and make us noble, strong, divine, are waiting to pour themselves into our impoverished manhood and womanhood. Ignorance, selfishness, absorption in material interests close this door. What life we do possess streams through the keyhole. It is our privilege to turn the door and enrich our lives with the vast spiritual resources of God. Civilization must be spiritualized. Life must be dignified by noble meanings and enterprises. Only by a vast enlargement of our fellowship with God can we save ourselves and civilization.

Prayer is the opening of the door between ourselves and God. Yet to open this door is not an easy thing to do. There is really nothing in life so difficult. Our habits of life all are against it. Minds that have been trained on the multiplication table do not readily adjust themselves to follow the flickering gleams of intuition. Yet this pursuit of the spirit is far more necessary to civilization than the cultivation of markets and trade. God is here in the unsounded depths of our own being. If life is to become great, if civilization is not to go down in darkness, we must learn the ways of prayer. The church has given great sums of money. Henceforth the streams of wealth will flow freely toward the benevolent and missionary enterprises of the church. But money alone will not save the world. The men and women who have given it must cultivate a new intimacy with God. We must learn to pray. The pursuit of this high art is now our most sublime contribution to civilization.—The Christian Advocate (New York).

REGARDING RETURNED SOLDIERS.

By Elmer C. Gunn,
Ex-Chaplain U. S. Army, A. E. F.

Most of the men who fought for us on the other side of the sea are back home now. General Pershing and the "Fighting First" have recently been reaping the honors richly deserved by those who have fought the fight for freedom and upon whose banners victory shines as a crown of joy. Will it be presumptuous in me, I wonder, to say a few words regarding the soldiers of tho American Expeditionary Forces? You will be tired of hearing about these men, if you are not already, but it becomes necessary to speak a word of protest occasionally at least, in the face of fallacies which so easily arise and which might do grave injustice to the noble men who stood between us and the onslaught of the unspeakable Hun. Conclusions have been jumped at by some; wild statements have been made in which there is only enough truth to work as a sort of cement to bold the statements together.

Such an army as that sent by the United States into Europe was never seen or dreamed of before the breaking out of the world war. It was an army that had to be clothed and fed from base stores, the nearest of which was at least three thousand miles from the ports of debarkation in France. In no sense could it be considered an army of invasion, and it could not hope to find the stores it needed in the land to which it was sent. In this respect it must needs be a more efficient organization than that of Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, Napoleon Bonaparte or William Hohenzollern. For every fighting man, there must be from three to ten other men working to keep the fighting man equipped.

The country into which our army of two million men was sent is fundamentally different from our own land—different in its view of morals; different in its religious organization; different in its very social fibre. Since I returned from that land of which we have heard such striking things, but about which most of know so little save that it was occupied by the A. E. F., I have been asked more than once, "What about the morals of France?" "Can it be that all we hear of conditions there is true?" In reply, one can only say that it is not possible to give a satisfactory answer to these questions in a few words. There are questions, as you know, which need a background of study if they are to be answered intelligently. That is, there is something fundamentally wrong with the question; such is the often-asked question relating to the morals of France. You are in no condition to hear about the morals of that really great country until you know something of her glorious fight for freedom during tho last two hundred years; until you have a sympathetic understanding of her tremendous struggle through the five years just past, realizing, as you will if you do justice to her story, how fifteen hundred thousand of her best young men died during these five years that you and I might be free, and how thousands of her choicest young women have flung themselves into the Maelstrom of sin in order to forget for the moment the cursed skeleton which is, and must ever be, all that is left of the beautiful hopes which beckoned when the world for them was young. You get their viewpoint of life, their traditions, their history, their temperament, as a background, then ask your question about their morals. Yes, it was into a country fundamentally different from their own that your sons and brothers and husbands went to whip the Hun. Arrived there, they immediately began looking around to see whether or not things were being run just right. They found themselves in a foreign land and, naturally, they began to swear at the inhabitants. To this day some of them, as you know, have not left off this swearing. Now the trouble, if you care to locate it, is not so much in the French, nor, for that matter, in our men who went to France, but simply in the fact that two races met in the same land and, being of different ideals and principles, they saw each others' faults because the faults were the outstanding features. So disappointed were some of our men at what they saw, they have not considered it worth while to look for virtues. They have naturally failed to find them.

You have heard, I am sure, that our men were very immoral while they were "over there." As a chaplain I had under my care eight thousand men and will you take this statement from one who thinks before he speaks: I HAVE NEVER BEEN ASSOCIATED WITH A CLEANER CROWD. I am convinced that the men with whom I came in contact were much safer from the dangers that infest the pathway of young men than they would have been had they been at home! I remember how one company of two hundred fifty men in my sub-post boasted that though they had been organized more than two years, and though they were made up of men from practically every State in the Union, there had never been a case of venereal trouble registered against them. Our General kept up with the records made by the men and where he found more than three per cent—including black and white—infected with evil disease, he called the medical men together and gave them a lecture such as only he can administer. Just after the Armistice, some labor battalllons were organized, made up of men from all parts of the A. E. F., who were found to be infected with venereal diseases. It was necessary to organize only a very few of these battallions. Cases which were not placed in battallions were isolated and it was agreed, and an order to that effect issued to every organization, that no man infected with venereal trouble would be sent home until he was clean.

In the face of these facts, I heard a man speaking to a great audience the other day and he made the statement that sixty-five per cent of our great army was infected with venereal trouble and that a much greater percentage than this was found among those who returned from France. One of three things is indicated by such statements: 1. Blindness because of a deep-set prejudice; 2. Malicious mis-statement; 3. Mental laziness which refuses to inform itself before making statements. It was, I am sure, the latter of these troubles that broke out in rash statements of the speaker in question.

The men of the A. E. F. faced such temptations as we ordinarilly have no conception of—far from home, with loneliness always dogging their footsteps, with the people at home apparently more or less indifferent about writing, with the mails coming very irregularly, with the fair sex of that land more than willing to meet them halfway and with the never-ending drag of monotony. But I wish to say that these men, your boys, kept straight a thousand times more often than they fell. I wish to tell you that the memory of home and loved ones was an almost never-failing talisman that kept them true. There were those who would have been entirely in the hands of the devil had they been at home and they, of course, ran true to form in the A. E. F.; but the average man with whom I came in contact was such as can look his people in the face with pride in the record he left in the annals of his country.

It was my privilege to conduct a class on Sunday mornings in which there was carried on a discussion as to what the average man "over there" thought of the church and the future. The men attending these classes were average men and we took their answer as being indicative of the spirit of the A. E. F. We found, naturally, that men were caused to think more seriously of the church because of being hurled into war conditions. They looked around them for a refuge in the time of storm and the only one offered them was in the portals of the church of Jesus Christ. They had their own ideas of the church; some of them felt that it had not done all that it might have done, and that it was itself at fault; others thought that while such was the case, they had been themselves at fault. Practically all of them said, "I am going to get busy in the church when I get home." As a result of these meeting, I have been brought to believe that the average man came back home with his mind made up to do more for the church than he had done in the past. I do not say that this is the case with all of them, but I do believe that if you will give him a chance to work, to do something he knows will help his people, the average man of the A. E. F. will pay the price of a redeeming faith in Christ and will take his place in the church of God.

There is one lever by which the church may always pry the man who went overseas, and that is sacrifice. Every one went over with the idea in his mind that there was at least a possibility, and in many instances this worked itself into a probability, that he would not return. He had heard of the submarine-infested ocean, he knew the mines were there in the way, he knew there was danger from storms, he knew that on the other side disease would stalk his pathway, he realized the danger from the long-ranged German guns, he knew that an air raid might reach him, no matter how far he might be from the actual fighting lines, and because he knew all this he was made to think of the tremendous issues that were strong enough to take him far from home on such a danger-infested pathway. You see the logic in this, I know. Men do some very dangerous things on the spur of the moment and after the danger is over they analyze them. With the men of the A. E. F. it was different in that they had time to think while the trip was being taken, while the guns were thundering, while the air raiders' bombs were dropping. A man can do an amazing amount of thinking from the time a shell comes into hearing until the time it explodes. Our men did much of such thinking, and, while on the exterior they seem rough, there will always be within them the realization that at one time they offered their lives to protect the things they thought worth while. Strive as he may, a man who has calmly laid his all on the altar of a great cause can never again look at life just as he did before the offer was made.

Ours was an army of heroes. The heroic was the commonplace, and while there is no desire on my part to sing their praise to the world while I believe that by far the larger part would simply put off their O. D.'s, put on "civvies," and forget the war and all that was connected with it if they could, there is still in my own heart a certain jealousy for the spirit I know to have dominated the noble hearts of the men who fought for us. I want to see them have justice done them. I don't like to hear orators try to picture them as plaster saints, but I do not, on the other hand, like to hear than spoken of as blackguards. They are heroes in the finest sense of the word. They would be the last to claim such for themselves. They would be willing to fight if you called them "sissy" or "goody-goody," but they are heroes and they deserve all the respect you can give them. They deserve to have you shake hands with them as equals, honor them as friends, trust them as men that will do to tie to.

Let us not make rash statements about these men. Let us treat them the way we should like to be treated under like conditions. Let us give them a hand-shake of sympathy, helping them to feel that the land they fought for, and to which they so often turned their homesick eyes during the months and years of their exile, is glad to have them back in her bounds. The investment of a word of cheer, a smile of sympathy, together with faith enough in their worth to offer them something to do, will bring a thousand-fold interest in these days of the turmoil and strife of reconstruction.

SCRUBS VS. COLLEGE MEN.

By Rev. James H. Felts.

Mr. Editor: Some years since I read an article on "The Passing of the Scrub." It interested me. I made a few clippings. Examining those clippings after making some observations and doing a little reading, I am "moved" to write a line or two.

As a matter of fact, the scrub is not passing. Like the poor, he is with us always, and, when we will, we may use him as an illustration. He is marked by heredity, environment, want of application, inability. The New Standard defines him as "stunted, or stunted looking; of inferior, common or worthless kind of breed. A person who labors hard and lives meanly; a mean, stingy fellow," etc.

The scrub has never wrought well. It is not in him. The men who wrought well in the past were not scrubs. Some of them were well trained, some poorly trained, but they knew men and conditions, and wrought marvelously. There has not been a period in the history of the world, in church or State, when some men were not in advance of others. The present time is no exception to the rule.

There seem to be men who are disposed to relegate to the rear all who are lacking in collegiate training. While it is true that some men seem to be born great, and "slipshod schools cannot deprive them of their immortality," it is also true that some men are born scrubs, and even modern schools cannot reconstruct them. The more you feed a runt, the poorer he gets. The best schools cannot furnish men brains. They only do the best they can with available material. "You can't make a whistle out of a pig's tail." An educated ass is still an ass. He may strut under a "sheep skin," but when he opens his mouth and shows his ears, his dream of supremacy is past. He is something like the boy, told by his mother to keep his mouth shut while the minister was there, else he would discover himself to the visitor as a fool; who, being questioned by the minister as to his name and age, answered not a word. The minister said: "Son, you must be a fool." The boy went running to the kitchen, and said: "Ma, I kept my mouth shut, but he found it out, anyway." It is not education that is leaving the scrub behind—he has always been behind. He has never been, will never be aught but a "hewer of wood and a drawer of water." The educational world is not calling for trained men, but for good raw material that may be converted into the finished product for leadership. The great leaders of business and State, even the church, care not a baw-bee whether a man is college bred or not if he "DELIVERS THE GOODS."

But what of the scrub preacher? Is he passing away? "He may with poor equipment and the fire of God work wonders and save ten times as many souls as his finely equipped brother, but this is by virtue of the power of God and not the poor equipment." Ough! Here is a man ten times as great a soul-winner as the equipped man, but because he is not equipped (?) he is dismissed from service. God can use him, but the church cannot. I have been laboring under the impression that "It is not by might nor by power, but by MY SPIRIT, sayeth the Lord." I have also been taught that a soul-winner is wise. I cannot think that the humbiest soul-winner is a scrub. If he is, THANK GOD FOR THE SCRUBS. Were the poor fishermen our Lord chose, scrubs? I have not been believing that fine equipment makes a man a soul-winner. The best trained man is a soul-winner by virtue of the "fire of God" just as truly as the scrub. Paul was finely equipped, but he said: "I came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, * * * for I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified * * * that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." AND THAT IS THE ONLY PREACHING THAT WILL EVER COUNT. Equipment no more makes a preacher than trappings make a horse. Other things being equal, our college-bred men are our safest, sanest leaders. All honor to them! But no man ever came from the walls of a college educated. He is simply prepared to get an education. Education is not an end sought, but a means to an end. Some men quit courting as soon as they are married—they make miserably poor husbands. Some men quit studying as soon as they get their diplomas—they make mighty poor leaders. Magnify our colleges? Yes. Urge our young men to attend them? Yes. Declare a man fit because he is a college graduate? No. Shut the door of hope to the man who has not been to college? No. "Honor to whom honor is due." We need all kinds of good men for our work. We ought to support the weak, NOT SCRUB THEM.

Let the college-bred men show their "breeding." For men to enter the field at harvest time, despising the producers, calling them "scrubs and has-been's" is—well, NOT POLITE. Let college-bred men go into the undeveloped fields—there are plenty of them yet—and prove their prowess. Let them show their less fortunate brethren how to make good soldiers. Let them remember that increased facilities and ability to do, bring increased obligations. If the college men of to-day meet their responsibilies as well as the untrained (?) leaders of yesterday, THERE WILL BE SOMETHING DOING. To demand the best appointments just because one has been to school, does not look well. The appetite of the drone is the most marked thing about him. I have known, more than once in my ministry, men "fresh from college" who gave more trouble about their appointments, AND DID LESS WITH THE ONES RECEIVED, than a dozen "common men."

If only college men are fit, then indeed is our condition deplorable. It will take many years yet to get only college men in the field. It is still true that the college of Hard Knocks is turning out some mighty fine leaders. Good work is good work, whether a college is behind it or not. All the inefficient men are not uneducated. We need a more brotherly policy than obtains in many quarters. Our need for men of marked consecration is even greater NOW than for college men, great as is the latter need. We seem to forget that practically all the heresy, destructive criticism, rebellion against authority, restlessness, straining after effect, milk and cider gospel, and that diluted with a few isms, ultra worldliness, from a shimmy dance to a sans dress parade, EVEN THE WRESTING OF SCHOOLS FROM OUR HANDS, have come from "college-bred men." Just a little modesty would really look well.

Given college-bred men with a Calvary vision—not just a vision for the other fellow—and the work of the Lord will prosper in our midst. I presume to be thoroughly convinced that we have substituted equipment, training, money-getting, desire for numbers, and other things too numerous to mention, for the work of the Spirit to so alarming an extent that our present is shaken, our future imperiled. We need to hark back to the things that made former days worth while. May the Lord give us a few scrubs (?)—men who are consumed by holy desire. Getting old? Perhaps. What of it? I am just nine years older than I was October 13, 1910. Age is not even making me tired yet. I confess, however, to an utter weariness because of "red tape" and unoiled machinery.

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE MRS. I. W. COOPER.

On Monday morning, October 6, as friends entered with bowed heads the sorrowing Cooper home and sat with strangely beating hearts about the bier that held the precious clay, only a few hours before regnant with love and life, they noted the heavenly calm that had come to the earnest, handsome face, with its halo of snow-white hair—the repose of the erstwhile busy hands. In the presence of the majesty of death like this and its visible triumph over mortality, loving memory began to recall the life Mrs. Cooper lived, the duties so faithfully performed, the mission glorlously fulfilled, the noble character wrought out of the joys and sorrows she had known—that with its influence will live on while ceaseless ages roll, and something of peace crept into the troubled hearts about her.

She slept the last, long sleep clasping in her hand the snow-white blossoms that told of a blameless life throughout the years she loved and labored for her heart's dearest earthly treasures—her husband and her children.

Mrs. Cooper's death was sudden. She was taken ill Friday night; but with her accustomed spirit under difficulties less importunate, forbade assistance and no physician was called. Saturday and much of Sunday passed without grave apprehension. Dr. Cooper, feeling assured of his wife's recovery, left her bedside and filled the pulpit at the Methodist Church, preaching a sermon of great power and acceptance with the people.

But when the shades of evening fell athwart the Whitworth Campus, sorrow gathered with the lessening day and threw its trail over every cherished hope. Just before midnight God touched her and she slept.

Physicians had come from near and far and every aid was requisitioned; but to no avail. Loved ones listened in vain for accents they could no longer hear, and all the world was changed for them since mother had gone home.

Mrs. Cooper was the beloved and honored wife of Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College. Besides her husband, Mrs. Cooper left to mourn her transition two sons, Major I. W., and Lieut. Ellis Cooper, and five daughters, Misses Lois, Mildred, and Virgie, and Mmes. Bessie Hopkins, of Hickory, and Lucile Yon, of Tallahassee, Florida. The stricken husband, the eldest and the youngest daughters were the only members of the family circle present when the precious life went out.

Only three weeks ago Miss Mildred, a graduate of Whitworth of 1918-19, had left her dearly loved home for the first time for a residence away, matriculating at Trinity College. News had come of this dear daughter's illness, a fact which disturbed her mother. And here we are reminded that during the entire period of the war, Mrs. Cooper was greatly harassed by her two sons' absence and that of her eldest daughter overseas. She was as brave and patient and patriotic as a mother so loving and tender can be. But she loved her children with a deathless devotion, and whether they were near or far she gave of her thought, of her strength and her time in their interest and for their pleasure, their comfort and their gratification. Her home was her world. But her love, as love does, brought her suffering and distress, and, perhaps, undermined her physical strength.

One brother, Mr. Ernest Wadsworth, of Meridian, is now the only living representative of Mrs. Cooper's immediate family. Mr. Wadsworth was present at the last rites.

Mrs. Cooper was an alumna of the College over which her husband presides. In recent years she studied china-painting and excelled in this beautiful art to which she was devoted. She loved books and friends and the things of life worth while. She was a kind, helpful neighbor, and when a friend, true and loyal under all circumstances.

Mrs. Cooper died before the decrepitude of age had weakened her splendid strength, and her friends may remember her in the full bloom and beauty of life. "Isn't it grand to go that way?" she had said when the sudden death of a friend was noted. God was kind to her in the death she died.

"Then let the shadow fall upon my face,
So I may go in peace to mine own place
Ere I grow old and helpless."

The funeral services were held at the First Methodist Church Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Tributes to the life gone out were paid by Dr. Chas. W. Crisler, pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church of the State Capital, and Dr. W. H. Lewis, local pastor. Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, offered a fervent invocation. The service was led by Dr. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, and Scripture was read by Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Summit.

The large auditorium was filled with sympathizing friends, to many of whom Dr. Cooper had ministered in hours of sorrow, and magnificent floral offerings expressed more effectively than words the sympathy and loving interest of the community and friends of this State and others.

Out at Rose Hill, the dear, familiar form was laid away and a multitude of beautiful flowers crowned the mound that covered the handsome casket. Then the grief-stricken family and friends reluctantly turned their faces again toward home and the paths that should know the beloved dead no more. But with fuller meaning came the echoes of the old hymn sung by the college girls above the encoffined clay:

"Nearer, my God, to Thee,
E'en tho' it be a cross
That raiseth me."

Some Day—

At longest it cannot be long
I shall with glad impatience wait
Amid the glory and the song
For you before the Golden Gate
After earth's parting and earth's pain—
Never to part! Never again!

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

READ THE FOLLOWING PROPOSITION.

To the Pastors of Mississippi and Louisiana:

Dear Brethren: We will give you or any member of your congregation a Teacher's Bible if you will send us 10 new or renewal subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate by November 10. This Bible is one of the best made, and retails at $3.50. It is bound in genuine leather and has a concordance and all the usual helps in a Teacher's Bible; it is printed with large leaded type, and is fit for a queen. In asking persons to subscribe, just tell them that you are trying to get a club of ten subscriptions for the Advocate for the express purpose of getting one of these nice Bibles, and this will help you persuade them to subscribe. If you will not yourself undertake the job, please get some winsome lady or tactful layman to work up the club. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. Ten subscriptions at $1.50 each will earn the Bible.

If you fail to get 10 subscriptions, we will give you a $2.00 Bible for seven subscriptions. This Bible is bound in genuine leather also, and is a nice book.

If you fail to get seven subscriptions, but secure five, we will give you a copy of "Alpheus W. Wilson—A Prince in Israel," by Rev. Carlton D. Harris. This book contains the life and labors of the late Bishop Wilson. It is bound in cloth and has 210 pages.

The Advocate has always been supported by the efforts of the preachers in Louisiana and Mississippi. We are about to lose nearly 1000 subscriptions, most of them in arrears to the amount of $1.50 each, and consequently we are compelled to devise some way of stimulating interest.

If you will take this matter up for us, and work this plan, or find some one to work it with your assistance and encouragement, we will be greatly helped.

This offer will hold good until November 1, after which date it will be withdrawn.

BOLSHEVISM AMONG NEGROES.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

The above title is not perfectly exact: it possibly should read: "The Bolshevists Among Negroes." It is almost evident that the Negro trouble near Helena, Ark., was hatched by white men. It is probably true of those recently in Washington, Chicago, and Omaha. We, who are old enough to know from personal observation and inquiry, are very, very sure that all the Negro uprisings that occurred in Mississippi in 1874-5-6, were instigated by white men. The evident purpose of these white men was so to stir the anger of Southern white men that a number of Negroes would be killed; and then these cases of Negroes killed in the South were presented as evidence of dangerous disloyalty in the South lest the Democratic party should succeed the Republican. Of these facts we were made very certain.

The menace of the world to-day is Bolshevism, in various allied forms and under sundry names, such as I. W. W., anarchy, extreme or destructive socialism, etc. It is the extreme result of Prussianism. "Extremes meet." The menace of deranged Europe is also felt in America. The methods of the Bolsheviki propaganda are secretive and utterly reckless of results. What do they care if the Negroes are always the chief sufferers in these troubles? They care nothing for the Negroes. They are concerned for nothing but their insane dream of anarchy. They hope to frighten the loyal and sane people, and thus remove some of the difficulties in the way of their wild purpose.

These statements have been called forth by that very sensible and timely article in the Advocate of October 9, by Bishop Mouzon. He says: "There is beyond doubt what one has called the atheism of fear. Let us confess that we all break down sometimes just here. * * * It is feared that we are now to have the colored man ridlng in the same Pullman car, stoppIng at the same hotel, * * * with our wives and daughters." The wise Bishop indicates the cause of this fear: "These race riots have excited them (some brethren.) * * * They are needlessly alarmed. And they (i. e., some of them) are using the tense feeling now existing between the races, In an endeavor to defeat the great plan for the unlfication of American Methodism."

I would say Amen to the Bishop's wise and sane utterances; and I would add:

1. There Is no real ground for excltement, much less for fear.

2. The New Testament is just as authoritatlve as ever. "Love your cnemies." "Love thlnketh no evil." "Love casteth out fear." "Father, keep them In thy name which thou hast given me, that they may be one, even as we are. * * * Nelther for these alone do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word that they may all be one." These things aro still In the New Testament; and they apply to thls case right now.

3 The divlsion of American Methodism Is wrong. Who is to blame if It continues?

4. Brethren, we must not "lose our heads" and turn the poor ignorant Negroes, who are not responsihle for being here instead of in their native land, nor for their ignorance, over to the mad Bolshevists to exploit and ruin. "The rank and file" of these black people have ever been loyal to us, and still are. Let us be just to them.

Utlca, Miss.

AS IT MIGHT BE.

By Sentinel.

At the eleven o'clock service at one of our churches, Rev. Dr. Slowman, the pastor, announced that he was going to visit his members the following week to sollcit their subscriptlon to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. He said that every Methodist home wlthln the bounds of the Mississippl, North Mlssissippi and Louisiana Conferences should receive the weekly visits of tbis paper. He anlmadverted somewhat at length on the duty of his members' taking and reading the paper in order to be informed on church work and said some rather hard thlngs about those who were not subscribers to this excellent Methodist periodical.

The next day he found a llttle company of three or four of his members gathered at the postoffice, when the followlng dialogue ensued.

Dr. Slowman—Brethren, you heard what I had to say yesterday about subscriptlons to the New Orleans Chrlstian Advocate. I thlnk I am fortunate In finding so many of you together thls morning as I would like to make a good beginning today. Of course you are going to take it, Brother Holdback, and I would like to head the list with your name. What do you say?

Brother Holdback—Well, Dr. Slowman, I am not ready to take the paper for the reason that I do not see the necessity for it. I think our church is getting along very well, and I understand that very few of our members take any church paper. We pay the salaries of our pastor and presiding elder, as a rule, and most of the Conference collections. We have a good Sunday school, our prayer meeting and preaching services are well attended, and what more is expected of us? I do not see how the Advocate would help us. Moreover, Dr. Slowman, I am fortified In my position that the church paper is not a necessity by the fact that you yourself do not consider it a necessity.

Dr. Slowman—How can you say that? Did you not hear what I had to say about its value yesterday? I have been taking the Advocate for years and I know its value. I just could not get along without it. For the life of me, I can not see why you think I do not consider the church paper a necessity.

Brother Holdback—Well, Dr. Slowman, I do not mean any disrespect, but I made that remark because you have been our pastor for three years and yesterday was the first time you have ever mentloned the Advocate in public or private, so far as I know. Now if the paper is so important, why have you been silent about it all this time? You have told us of many other things that you regarded as Important, but you have never mentioned the church paper before. I can not see how you could realize its value, as you say you have, and yet do nothing to show us its value. To be plain, "actions speak louder than words," and judging from your actions, or rather your nonactions, I am led logically to the conclusion that you have not regarded the paper as of much importance. It seems to me that if the church paper is as helpful as you now say it is, you ought to have been trylng all along to introduce it into our homes. This you know you have not done. I do not make this complaint against you only. Very few of our pastors since I have been a member have seemed to be concerned at all about the Advocate. I have heard some of them say that they would be glad to take our subscriptions to the paper, but not one of them ever pressed the matter at all. If it is not a legitimate conclusion that you and our former pastors dld not regard the Advocate as of any special Importance, then I confess that I do not know how to reason at all.

Dr. Slowman—Brother Holdback, I thank you for your plainness of speech. Your words have stung me in a sore place. I can not find any fault with your logic; it is simply Irresistible. I confess that I have not been as much concerned about the circulation of the Advocate as I should have been. I have simply neglected my duty. I confess it to you, brethren, this morning. If you and the church will forgive me, I shall make amends as far as I can for my negligence in the past by dlligence in the future. I have regarded the paper as of great importance, but I have let other matters that were pressing upon me overshadow my duty in this respect. I shall do better in the future.

Brother Holdback—Dr. Slowman, I have not Intended to hurt your feelings. You know that we all love you. Perhaps all the blame for the small circulation of the Advocate among the members does not lie at your door. The presiding elder Is partly to blame, for he has only alluded to the paper In an incidental way when here and we ourselves are not wholly exempt from hlame, for we ought to have known the value of the paper without being told. But as it is in everything else, we need to have somebody tell us of our duty. Here is my subscriptlon. "And here is mine," said each of the other brethren present.

At a church conference in Dr. Slowman's church on Wednesday night, six months after the conversation at the postoffice, after the reports were all In, Brother Holdback arose and here is what he said:

Dr. Slowman, and brethren, I am delighted at this unusually large church conference. For years past very few of our members attended the church conference. But to-night the house is full. Most of our members are here. And this is not all that pleases me. The reports show that our church was never in so good a condition. The attendance at Sunday school has doubled, a thing I thought impossible. There have been more conversions and accessions to the church than I have ever known before, and our treasury is fuller than ever before.

"How do you account for the improvement Brother Holdback?" came from some one in the church.

Brother Holdback—I do not know unless it is because we are all more religious than we have ever been. I am sure this is true, and I want here and now to testify that I believe it is largely due to the campaign Dr. Slowman began six months ago for an increase in the circulation of the New Orleans Christlan Advocate. The report to-night shows that every family In our church takes and reads the Advocate, whereas, six months ago just a handful of our people even knew of its existence. As a result of our people's reading that valuable paper we know more, we love the church more and we are doing more in the Lord's vineyard than ever before.

Dr. Slowman Brethren, I feel like praising the Lord for what he has done for us. And I agree with Brother Holdback, that God has used the church paper in bringing about these wonderful results. Our people not only take the paper, but they read it, I am glad to say. In this time of rejoicing, however there is one thing that makes me sad. And that is that I was so neglectful for so many years in trying to place the Advocate in the homes of my people. I feel now that I have lost much and the church has lost much by my failing to do my duty in this respect. Forgive me, brethren, and as I have had my eyes opened to my duty and to this responsibility, they shall never close again.

TO PREACH SEMI-CENTENNIAL SERMON.

At the coming session of the North Mississippi Conference, Rev. J. J. Brooks will preach his semi-centennial sermon. Brother Brooks has been in the active ministry longer than any other member of the Conference now living. Most of this time has been spent in the Delta towns on the Y. & M. V. R. R.; in many of them when they were surrounded by virgin forests. He is truly a pioneer circuit rider of whom there are too few left among us. He is this year winding up a four years' pastorate on the Dublin circuit. Among the towns in the Delta he has served are the following: Shaw, Lyons, Coahoma, Jonestown, Belen, Marks, Lula, Rich, Dundee, Benoit, Beulah, Winterville, Malvina, Gunnison, Deeson, Hillhouse, Boyle, Arcola, Pace, Duncan, Parchman Whitney, Rome, and Dublin. During his time in the Delta he has served five four-year pastorates, one three-year, one two-year, and one one-year. He was in the Greenville District 23 years.

MARY'S MULE.

(With abject apologies to the Lamb.)

Mary had a little mule,
Whose countenance was pale.
Most merrily he wagged his ears
And swung his bushy tail.

He followed her to school one day,
Which made the teacher sore,
He gently caught him by the ear
And led him to the door.

He whispered something to the brute,
And then before the school,
He slapped the jaws unmercifully,
For that poor stupid mule.

He pulled his tail, he pulled again,
Alas, alack, that he Should ever dare to pull it thrice.
That teacher where is he?

Ask of the shining stars that peeped
Down from the wintry sky,
Ask of the silver moon that laughed
To see him whizzing by.

But please, I pray thee, don't ask me,
For I was not at school.
The teacher never has come back,
So you'd better ask the mule.

BIG STITCHES.

By Ida Alexander.

"I want to go out and play!" pouted Helen. "I want to go out and play bad as bad!"

"You may go, Helen, as soon as you finish your sewing," said her mother. "Little girls must learn how to sew. If you don't learn now, you won't be a neat seamstress when you're a grown-up woman."

"I don't want to be a neat seamstress," said Helen.

Mrs. Richards smiled at that.

"But I want you to be a neat seamstress," she said. "Surely, Helen, you're anxious to be what I want you to be. I want to be proud of you."

"Six is too young to learn to sew," said Helen. "Mollie doesn't have to sew, and Jennie doesn't, either."

Mrs. Richards knew by the careless way that Mollie and Jennie were dressed that their mothers hadn't had to sew, either. But she did not say so.

"Finish that piece you're sewing on, Helen," she said, as she turned to leave the room. "Then you may go out and play."

Left alone, Helen threw the bag on a chair. She left it there and went over to the window. She could see all the other children at play. She did not think that she could have been out with them, if she had worked faithfully at her task. Instead she felt like a much-abused little girl.

"I want to go out and play!" she said to herself. "I don't see why I have to stay in all the time."

When Helen heard her mother's step, she picked up her work.

"Mrs. Freeman wants me to come over for a few minutes," said Mrs. Richards. "Finish your work and then run out and play."

Left alone, Helen thought of a way out of the difficulty.

"I'll take big stiches," she thought, "big, whopping stiches. Then I can go right out."

With large, irregular stitches, so different from the tiny stitches her mother had taught her to make, the bag was soon finished. Helen hid it carefully.

"There, you old thing! I won't have to bother with you again!" she said.

Then she went out and played all afternoon.

She was delighted when Aunt Alice came at night. One of the first things she asked was how Helen's sewing was getting on.

"Splendidly," said Mrs. Richards. "Go show Auntie the bag you made."

Helen never will forget the shamed moment when her mother and Aunt Alice saw the big stitches.

They looked hurt and surprised. Neither spoke.

Helen ran and put her arms around them.

"Oh, trust me again!" she cried. "I'll make little stitches after this!"—The Sunbeam.

JEMMY'S MOTHER'S BONNET.

"I want you to put jes' as many vi'lets on as you ken for 20 cents, right there in the front, so they'll stick up an' look kind o' stylish." It was a thin, sickly-looking little boy that spoke. The young girl behind the counter smiled, but there were tears in her eyes as the grimy fingers undid the ungainly newspaper bundle and took out a rusty straw bonnet, which had seen a great deal of service.

"It's fur my mother," he continued, "an' it's fur a surprise. Do you think you ken get it done fur me by the time I take my papers down to the office and git back?"

"Oh, yes," said the girl; "only don't hurry too much. What is your name?"

"Jem," answered the boy, "and I don't. An' there's the 20 cents. I'd wait for it a couple of hours if I had to."

He passed out whistling cheerily. The clerk opened her shopping bag and taking out a bottle of shoe polish, she began applying it vigorously to the faded straw.

"Are you really going to try to fix up that old thing? inquired another clerk, "and take your noon hour, too? catch me! Why didn't you give him the violets and let him go? Twenty cents' worth —humph!"

"Indeed, I am going to fix it up for the poor little fellow," was the earnest reply. "Just think, Mary, I suppose he's saved up 20 cents for weeks! I'm so glad I happened to get this blacking this morning. You can't tell the bonnet when I get through with it; see if you can?"

She hummed a happy little song as she went on puting on coat after coat, deftly turning the straw up here and down there.

"Mrs. Brown, she said as the proprietor of the store entered, "will you give me 35 cents' worth of violets at wholesale? A poor little boy has brought me his mother's bonnet to trim, and I want to add a few violets to what he has ordered, and make it just as pretty as I can."

"Indeed, I will," the proprietor answered, "and good measure, too, at that!" And so it came about that the poor black bonnet was transformed into a beautiful "shiny" one, with bunches of violets peeping out here and there from the ribbons so cunningly arranged that the worn, faded parts could hardly be discerned.

"Oh, you don't mean it; you don't mean that's my mother's bonit, and all fur 20 cents?" exclaimed Jem, coming back just as the finishing touch was being given. "Oh, what lots o' violets! How did you git it so shiny? Oh, she'll be jest tickled to death!"

It was a wonderfully happy little boy who gazed from the bonnet into the clerk's face.

As the door closed behind him one who had been a silent spectator of it all went up to the young girl and, laying her hand on her shoulder, said: "This has been a lesson to me, my dear—a lesson that I can never forget. Out of the abundance with which the Lord has blessed me I begrudged to the poor and needy within my gate. Please God, it shall never happen again!"

In her simple way the girl pondered upon the woman's words, and wondered what her life had been, and what it would be. Ah, who can say? As the circles of a pool into which a pebble has been cast widen and widen until the ripples reach beyond our sight, so the influence of a noble, generous act, though one the world might call a small one, goes on and on through all eternity.'—Exchange.

JUST BEING NICE.

A magnificent lion one time met a little mouse whose home was being attacked by a wildcat. The lion immediately chased the cat into the offing and protected the mother until her brood could be moved to a safer hiding-place. Some time later the lion became caught in a net and would have perished had not the little mouse happened along and gnawed the ropes in two, releasing the lion. A fable, yet one that posseses a mighty lesson for all of us.

No man or woman ever becomes so powerful that he or she can afford to snub or ignore the person who is less fortunate in his accumulation of the material things of this world. Then, too, there is that democracy in America which may make the underling of to-day the lion of to-morrow. From a purely selfish standpoint it pays to be nice to everybody.—Exchange.

Editorial

CONCERNING THE ADVOCATE.

At the recent meeting of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the present editor, as has been officially announced by the chairman of that Committee, was re-elected to serve the full term of four years. We cannot refrain from expressing our high appreciation of this mark of confidence on the part of the Committee, confirmed, as it was, by the unanimous vote of the members present. At the same time, we are aware of the responsibility that rests upon us by reason of this election, and we continue our work in connection with the Advocate with a full realization of the fact that it will tax our utmost powers to measure up to the reasonable expectations of our constituency.

It has been our constant effort to give to the church a paper that would help support its doctrines, maintain its polity, strengthen its spiritual life, inspire its thought, add to its information, increase its activities, and develop its resources. To this end, we have labored diligently and earnestly. We freely confess, however, that we have by no means attained to our ideal of what a church paper should be. We have worked with a constantly increasing sense of the opportunities the periodical literature of the church has for doing good, and a growing realization of the heavy responsibility that rests upon one who is charged with the editorial management of a Conference organ. We, therefore, dedicate anew all the powers we possess to the faithful performance of the task to which we have been called.

We deem this an opportune time to call attention to several matters in connection with the Advocate which we believe to be of the utmost importance at the present moment. We are trying to look at these matters, not from the standpoint of the Advocate itself, but from the standpoint of the church.

Necessity of Publicity for Church Work.

We believe it may be taken for granted to-day that legitimate publicity is absolutely essential for the proper carrying on of the church's work. If our congregations had no interests beyond their own borders, and no obligations except those arising from local conditions, they might be able to get along very well without any means of communication with the outside world. But the very fact that they are part of a great connectional system makes it necessary for them to keep in touch with the work at large. Only a well-informed, intelligent membership can be expected to be interested in and concerned for the larger work of the church as a whole. No better way of developing such membership has been found than the circulation of the periodical literature of the church.

The Circulation of the Advocate.

If what has been said above is true, the adequate circulation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate throughout the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences is a matter that should no longer be thought of as a thing remotely desirable, but as something to be attained in the immediate future. These three Conferences, according to the statistics in the Minutes of last year, represent a membership of 159,396. The average weekly circulation of the Advocate last year was 7,600. If each subscription represents five readers of the paper—and we believe that is a liberal estimate—there would still remain 121,396 members of the church who never read the Advocate at all.

We cannot feel that this is a creditable showing for the great interests of Methodism as represented in these three Conferences.

The Subscription Price of the Advocate.

The Publishing Committee considered very seriously the question of advancing the subscription price of the Advocate to $2.00 a year. The report of the Publisher showed very clearly the fact that every item of expense in connection with printing the paper has increased enormously within the last two years. The whole industrial world is organized upon a scale of prices which has reduced the purchasing power of the dollar by fully one-half. Practically every other article that our people use has advanced in price to keep pace with increasing costs, and it was felt that an increased subscription price for the Advocate would not be out of keeping with the present situation. After thorough discussion, however, it was decided that it would be inexpedient to advance the price. The belief was expressed that a continuance of the present rate will make easier a substantial increase in the subscription list than would be possible if the rate were advanced. The fact was brought out during the discussion that most of the Conference organs now charge $2.00 a year.

A Circulation Campaign.

In view of the foregoing facts, the Committee took action to the effect that the circulation of the Advocate should be brought to a minimum of 10,000 as soon as possible, and March 15 was fixed as the date by which this desirable—we might almost say, necessary—goal should be reached. There was no disposition to inaugurate a mechanical "campaign" that would interfere in any way with the regular work of the church; but there was a determination to bring this matter to the attention of our preachers and people as clearly and forcibly as possible, with the belief that a concerted effort could be made that would produce substantial and lasting results. We ourselves believe that this hope will not be disappointed.

Now Is the Time to Act.

The time for action has come. For a long time the circulation of the Advocate has hovered around the 7,000 mark. But we are in a new era. New life is stirring throughout the church, and great movements are being enterprised and pushed forward. The church is being put to the test of efficiency as never before in its history, and its obligation to render service is becoming increasingly heavy. New opportunities, too, are presenting themselves on every side. In order to measure up to these responsibilities and take advantage of these opportunities, we must see to it that our people are informed concerning the vital issues that are at stake. The Advocate must go into the homes of more of our people if we are to maintain our proper place as one of the aggressive religious forces in this part of the world-wide field of Methodism. The appeal is not for the support of the Advocate as an institution, but for the maintenance of the work of the church upon a scale that will be creditable to preachers and people alike. If we, as a church, are in earnest about developing a membership that is thoroughly alive to the needs of our work in these eventful times, there will be no great difficulty in putting the Advocate into a minimum of 10,000 homes by March 15.

At the beginning of his new term of office, the editor gratefully makes acknowledgment of the many kind words that have come to him from friends, known and unknown, during the past twelve months. They have cheered him beyond measure in his work, and they are an abiding inspiration for that work in the future. His heart is in his work and he pledges all his energies to the faithful performance of all the duties which come to him in the position with which he has been honored. He craves the sympathy and prayers of all his readers.

CONFERENCE DRAWS NEAR.

The Louisiana Conference is less than a month away. The North Mississippi and the Mississippi Conferences follow the Louisiana in rapid succession. Not much time is left, therefore, for us to finish doing the things that have kept our heads and hearts and hands busy during the past few months.

It is probable that most of the revival meetings for the year have been held. We have not at hand the figures to show what the results of these meetings have been, but we are convinced, from the reports that have reached us from time to time, that there has been a gracious ingathering of souls during the revival season. We have been hoping and praying that the reports at our Conferences would show a substantial increase in our membership throughout Louisiana and Mississippi. We cannot tell as to that, however, until the figures are all in. We are convinced that figures, though, cannot show all that has been accomplished. Faithful men and women have been giving themselves to a work that is largely spiritual in its nature, and such work cannot be expressed by statistical tables. Hearts have been renewed, and lives have been enlarged, and souls have been born into the Kingdom of God—these things do not always appear in the records of ecclesiastical gatherings.

This is especially the time when the financial interests of the church are looked after. Conference collections must be secured, and preachers' salaries must be provided for. This should be one of the best years in the history of the church. While the cost of living has been painfully high, money has been in more general circulation than for many years, and the hearts of the people have been enlarged toward all good causes. But nothing should be taken for granted in connection with the financial obligations of the church. The stewards and those whose duty it is to look after such matters should leave nothing undone to secure the full amount of all assessments upon their charges. Especially should this be so with regard to preachers' salaries. These salaries have, in too many cases, been all too small. Many a preacher has spent restless hours wondering how he would meet the obligations resting upon him out of the meager sum allotted for his support. He has been face to face, not with a theory, but with a fact. It would be a tragedy to allow that preacher to go to Conference with any part of his promised salary unpaid. We do not believe that such course is necessary in a single one of our pastoral charges. If the stewards will definitely make up their minds to pay in full, and will go about securing the money in a business-like way, it will be forthcoming. What ought to be done, can be done—every time.

We are looking forward to inspiring and helpful gatherings at Ruston, Aberdeen, and Meridian. Let us all pray that they may be, indeed, seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. T. B. Winstead, of the Trenton charge, Mississippi Conference, is hopeful of being able to report "everything in full" at the end of the year.

Mr. Chas. T. Schaedel, Rev. J. J. Davis, and Rev. Ansie Lynn sailed for Africa on October 8, where they are under appointment as missionaries by our Board of Missions.

Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo will lay the cornerstone of the beautiful church being built at Winnfield, La., on Sunday, November 2. Rev. R. S. Walton is the pastor.

We are rejoiced to know that Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, who was recently confined to his bed by injuries received in a fall, is able to be about his loved employ again.

Rev. J. C. Price, of South Mansfield, La., reports that substantial progress has been made on his charge this year, and the prospects are good for a full report at Conference.

It has been officially announced that, in case of removal, all Centenary pledges should be paid at the charge where the subscription was made. This applies to pastors as well as to members of the congregation.

Mr. H. H. Ahrens, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, and well known to Methodists throughout Louisiana and Mississippi, after spending several weeks in the South, has been recalled to the East on important Government work.

We learn from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate that Dr. Julius Magath, formerly a professor in Emory College, and widely known as a missionary to the Hebrews from our church, recently suffered a stroke of paralysis at his home in Oxford, Ga.

Mrs. J. E. Oakey, of Forest, Miss., recently returned to her home after having spent several weeks in New Orleans for medical attention. She writes appreciatively of the work of Methodism in this great city as it came under her observation while here.

Dr. and Mrs. John Magruder Sullivan, of Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., have announced the marriage of their daughter, Pattie, to Mr. Nathaniel J. Golding, on Thursday, October 16. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to the happy young couple.

We are informed by Brother H. M. Banks that the fourth quarterly conference of the Chatham charge, Louisiana Conference, adopted highly commendatory resolutions concerning Rev. A. S. Lutz, who is completing his fourth year as presiding elder of the Monroe District.

Dr. D. B. Towner, the last but one of the great gospel singers associated with the late D. L. Moody, died suddenly, on October 3, at Longwood, Mo., where he was conducting evangelistic meetings. Dr. Towner composed more than 2,000 gospel songs, and edited 23 hymnals.

Dr. D. L. Munpower sailed for London on October 8, where he went to buy a steamboat for use in missionary work in Africa. After making the purchase, he will return to the United States, where he will remain until February of next year, when he will return to Africa to take up his work again.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Neshoba charge, Mississippi Conference, adopted resolutions expressing their high appreciation of the services of Rev. W. L. Linfield, presiding elder of the Newton District, and Rev. E. E. Flurry, the pastor of the charge, both of whom are completing their fourth year in their respective positions.

Rev. C. E. Downer, of the Hattiesburg circuit, Mississippi Conference, has recently held two good meetings on his charge. He was assisted at Petal by Rev. W. M. Sullivan, of Columbia, Miss., and at Terrell by Rev. J. L. Greenway, of Lucedale, Miss. These brethren did splendid preaching and their labors were very greatly appreciated by all who heard them.

Rev. J. E. Selfe was recently assisted in a good meeting at Covington, La., by Rev. J. B. Fulton, of Franklinton, La. On account of illness, Brother Fulton was not able to hold the opening services, but Rev. J. G. Snelling, the presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Rev. A. Inman Townsley, pastor of Felicity Church, rendered efficient help in the emergency.

The Methodist people of Brookhaven, Miss., are in the midst of a great revival, conducted by Rev. G. A. Klein. The pastor, Rev. W. H. Lewis, writes that a large number have definitely reconsecrated themselves or have given their lives to God for the first time, and that a number have applied for church membership. The meeting will continue to the fourth Sunday of this month.

Miss Eddie Bentley, the newly-appointed superintendent of teacher-training in the New Orleans District, has entered actively upon her work. She is splendidly equipped for such work, being the principal of the Walter C. Flower School of the New Orleans public school system. She conducts a fine class in teacher-training in the Carrollton Avenue Sunday school.

Col. John E. Edgerton, General Centenary Treasurer, and Mr. A. C. Marts, Advisory Director of the Centenary Campaign, have been recently elected to the Board of Directors of the International Church Film Corporation, of New York City. The purpose of this corporation is to furnish a film service that will be suitable for the religious work of Protestant churches throughout the world.

Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Decatur, Miss., writes as follows: "All my meetings are over, and success came as the result of the faithful labors of the following: Brother McNeese, of Wheeler, Ark., Brother Williams, of Collins, Miss., and Brother Jolly, of Heidelberg, Miss. There were 32 accessions on profession of faith, and 14 by letter. The church is in good spiritual condition, and we are expecting to go up to the Annual Conference with everything in good shape."

We learn from the Holly Springs Reporter of October 16, that Hon. W. A. Belk, a leading citizen of Mississippi, and an influential layman of our church, passed away, at his home in Holly Springs, on Monday morning, October 13. The funeral services were conducted at the Methodist Church by Rev. E. R. Smoot assisted by Rev. W. L. Stornent and Rev. J. H. Holder. His name is familiar to readers of the Advocate as that of an occasional contributor to its pages. These will join the Advocate in extending sympathy to the members of the bereaved family.

NOTICE FROM AUDITING COMMITTEE OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Any member of the committee will receive your report the first day. The following are members of the committee: W. T. Griffin; T. B. Cottrell; B. E. Meigs, W. H. Lane.

ARE YOU EDUCATED?

A professor of the University of Chicago has evolved a series of test questions for the educated, which, he avows, are the best evidences of a real education. If you can answer yes to all the questions you are truly educated the professor says. Here are the questions:

Has education given you any sympathy with all the good causes and made you espouse them?

Has it made you public-spirited?

Has it made you a brother to the weak?

Have you learned how to make friends and keep them?

Do you know what it is to be a friend yourself?

Can you look an honest man or a pure woman in the eye?

Do you see anything to love in a little child?

Will a lonely dog follow you in the street?

Can you be high-minded and happy in the drudgeries of life?

Do you think that washing dishes and hoeing corn is just as compatible with high thinking as playing piano or golf?

Are you good for anything yourself?

Can you be happy alone?

Can you look out on the world and see anything but dollars and cents?

Can you look into a mud puddle by the wayside and see a clear sky?

Can you see anything in the puddle but mud? — The Christian News Letter.

Be truthful even in small things. It is much better to tell the truth and stand a little punishment bravely than to be a coward and hide behind an untruth.—Selected.

"Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season." Those words of Holy Writ were fulfilled in the passing away of Sister JULIA HUFFMAN FELDER, aged 73, on the best day of the week, Sunday, October 5, a fitting emblem of her godly life. For fifty-two years Sister Felder walked by the side of her husband. Five girls and two boys mourn her going; one daughter welcomed her on the other shore. She will be missed at the old camp ground, but her influence will permeate and touch each life which goes there. We laid her to rest in the family cemetery at Topisaw, on Monday morning, October 6. The pastor was assisted by Rev. H. C. Castles and Rev. J. Loyd Decell, who preached a wonderful sermon on "If a man die shall he live again?" Sister Felder is not dead, but liveth forever.

McComb, Miss., Oct. 14.

EUGENIA B. HARVEY was born on October 11, 1851, near Rocky Springs, Claiborne County, Miss. Nearly all her life was spent at Rocky Springs. During her early married life she lived a few years at Grand Gulf. She was married to John Coltharp, October 11, 1866, who lived only a few years. On December 13, 1876, she was married to Robert A. Harvey, who died in 1897. She joined the Methodist Church early in life and was a devoted member to the end. Eleven years ago she moved to Vicksburg and soon identified herself with the Gibson Memorial Church, proving to be one of the most faithful and earnest workers. For the past twelve months she had been in declining health, confined to her room most of the time. She was a patient sufferer and was fully resigned to the will of God. It was always a pleasure, as her pastor, for the writer to visit her. Sister Harvey was one of the gentlest and best of women, loved by all who knew her. Her children rise up and call her blessed. She delighted in reading the New Orleans Christian Advocate and greatly loved her church. She was the daughter of a Methodist preacher, one of the sainted dead of the Mississippi Conference, Rev. Daniel A. J. Parker. Her sweet spirit winged its flight to realms above, October 3, 1919. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. N. B. Harmon in the absence of the pastor. A large circle of friends share the loss and sorrow of her bereaved children and brother. Five daughters and one son survive her, viz., Mrs. Kate Harvey Sprott, Misses Sallie, Cornelia, Ella, and Bessie and Mr. William Harvey. She is survived by one brother, Dr. W. L. Parker, and two grandchildren, Dorothy and Harvey Sprott. May the influence of her pure, sweet, consecrated life ever draw her loved ones nearer the Christ she loved and the gates of the eternal city where she awaits their home-coming to the Father's house. O. S. LEWIS.
Vicksburg, Miss., Oct. 14, 1919.

Truly hath "a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel." No finer type of Christian manhood, no more princely character, no more splendid gentleman ever walked among us than FRED J. McDONNELL. He was born in Huntsville, Ala., on March 4, 1852, where he grew to manhood. In 1876 he moved to Ripley, Miss., where he taught school one year. He moved from there to his farm near Okolona, Miss., where he lived for thirteen years. He then moved into the town of Okolona in 1891 into the beautiful and comfortable home where his family was reared and in which he died on July 27, 1919. In 1876 he was married to Miss Corra Gilliard, of Ripley. They reared to manhood and womanhood nine splendid sons and daughters, eight of whom survive, one daughter, Miss Mary, dying six years ago. Four sons, Fred, Archie, Augustus, and J. S., and four daughters, Mrs. L. P. Haley, Mrs. J. R. Buford, Mrs. K. C. Rogers and Miss Elizabeth, and his good wife survive him. Fond of his home and his family, he literally gave himself to them. He did not seek popularity, yet he was a leader of men and every man was his friend. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1890. He cared little for politics and did not seek office. For many years he was president of the City School Board, also president of the Board of Stewards of his church. He much preferred the quiet of farm life. He was very successful. He owned a fine farm in Alabama and two in Mississippi. He was a lifelong member of the Methodist Church, Sunday school superintendent for years, teacher in Sunday school eighteen years, and president of his official board. He was a well informed man in every way. His was a home of culture, a home of piety, a home of hospitality, always the preacher's home. He is gone, but not forgotten. Loved, honored, he will live on nobly in many lives.

FROM MACON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Our revival began on September 21, and ran through the following Sunday. Dr. Andrew Stedd, of Emory University, did the preaching, holding three services per day for the full time. His knowledge of the Bible, together with his sincerity and consecration, enabled him to reach men as but few men can. The result was a reconsecration on the part of many of our people, of all denominations, and the sowing of seeds that will bear fruit in the years to come. His full time was devoted to the building up of the church, and leading its members into the fullness of glory and power as it may be had in Christ Jesus. Very few people in the community are out of the church.

Among the preachers of other charges who attended these services were Rev. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, Rev. Guy Ray, of Mashulaville, Rev. C. W. Baley, of Shuqualak, and Rev. C. C. Norton, of Macon circuit.

We are getting along finely up here. Of course we hear considerable complaint of short crops, but we are so happy that we have thus far escaped the scourge of "flu," such as swept over the country just a year ago, and was predicted would return. We shall be ready for Conference on November 19 with a full report.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. Peptiron is both medicine and food for the blood and nerves. It is in full accord with advanced science as to the proper treatment of anemic and neurasthenic conditions, in which the need of more and better nourishment is so apparent. It combines iron and manganese with nux, celery, pepsin and other tonics and digestives. It supplies the deficiency of red blood corpuscles in anemia, repairs the waste of nerve tissue in nervousness, gives color and stamina, and restores vitality.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Since my last letter, I have had the pleasure of going to Camden, the place of my birth, and being with this good pastor and his folks. It was indeed a pleasure. It is a fine country and Methodism has a chance to do a great work for God here if they will go forward.

This was the quarterly conference occasion and in the absence of Brother Morse, Revs. G. G. Yeager and J. F. Campbell acted for him. It was a fine, brotherly thing to have these brethren visit their neighbor, and it would help if more of it were done. Rev. C. H. Ellis was also present.

Sunday was spent at Deasonville with Rev. G. G. Yeager. This is a fine community and the work seems to be in good shape. It is hoped that a great forward movement for the Sunday school will be made.

Monday was spent at Eden. It was the greatest quarterly conference occasion I have ever witnessed. The work of the church was gone into, and the church standing unfinished was talked of and before the Conference adjourned there was enough money pledged, and help to raise money offered, to assure the completion and dedication of the beautiful building. All praise to the presiding elder and pastor! It is the only quarterly conference in my memory that closed with an altar service. This is Brother Oliver's fifth year.

I have arranged for a Training School at Centerville. Who will be next to ask for one?

Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Rev. R. G. Lord, of Coffeeville, Secretary of the Holly Springs District Sunday School organization, is planning to hold institutes with the help of other workers in the churches near him. Let other secretaries and officers hold such institutes and see the work prosper.

Two teacher-training classes have been organized in the Sardis school, with an enrollment of eighteen. Every teacher in the school is studying some part of the course. Bro. Mohler believes in religious education and he likewise knows that teachers must not only be religious, but they must know how to teach religion. Mr. John W. Kyle, a scholarly young man, has been elected superintendent for the ensuing year.

Four of the teachers in the Como school have enrolled for the study of the special elementary course. This school is making progress under the direction of Rev. R. P. Neblett and Bro. Mark Harden.

Two of the teachers in the Crenshaw school have begun the course for junior teachers. Where even one teacher really studies, it will not be long before other teachers take notice of the interest and improvement in the class of that teacher, and they begin to inquire how it happened. They find out it is simply honest work.

Rally day services were held by the West Point school on the 12th of this month. This school has fifty in the beginners' department, seventy-six in the primary department, seventy-six in the junior department, fifty-three in the intermediate department, fourteen in the senior department, twenty-five in the young people's department, seventy-seven in the adult department, a total of four hundred and twenty-two. The cradle roll, home department, and teacher-training department did not report, but they are well organized and are doing effective work. Misses Gladys Gilmore and Louise Boyd have not missed Sunday school in ten years. Ethel Hines, Frances Miller, Kathleen Boyd, Geraldine Howorth, and Walter Miller have not been absent for seven years. Bro. White, the veteran superintendent, has a right to be proud of such a fine record. The teachers of this school give something worth while to make these young people attend with such regularity. Make a visit to this school and learn how the teachers get these results.

Money is being held by Sunday school treasurers that has been given for the work of the Sunday School Board and for the Centenary. This money is needed. These treasurers just need to be instructed to forward it to the proper parties. Such neglect may not be criminal, but it has a terrible effect on the work of God. "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The series of Efficiency Conferences for district officers and members of the Conference Sunday School Board has just been completed. These meetings had these things in mind to accomplish: first, to set plainly before each district that the responsibility of training the leadership of the church rested in no small way on the people of the district; second, that the Methodist Church cannot evade the responsibility of giving the children of their own household the best possible instruction in religious education; and, third, to plan for a series of meetings in each district that will bring this school of instruction so near to each Sunday school that the leadership of the local school will be instructed.

We had with us on this trip Mr. M. W. Brabham, of the General Board. He was the very man for this task of training the district officers. His addresses were fine and his method the best. He has won for himself the admiration of all who met him.

The presiding elders were with us in each district. Their counsel was most valuable. I will speak of the conferences again next week.

The district officers were present in good numbers and they are on the job and we will do great work in the next year.

See to it that your Sunday school report is made to me.

Letters That Inspire Confidence

I wish very much that every reader of this paper could spend sufficient time in my office to read the thousands of letters which I have received from all parts of the country. I have printed several hundreds of them in a booklet, but I wish you could see the originals, for I would like to have you realize the wonderful results which they report in the relief of dyspepsia, indigestion, persistent headaches, rheumatism, kidney, bladder and liver diseases, uric acid poisoning and other curable conditions due to impure blood.

Before my own health was restored by Shivar Mineral Water and I purchased this Spring, and before I received all these letters from sufferers, I didn't take very much stock in advertisements like this. I therefore cannot blame you if you doubt, but, my friend, I am absolutely convinced that the Shivar Spring is the greatest restorative mineral spring ever discovered, not excepting the famous Spas of Europe. I have shipped this water to thousands of sufferers in all parts of the United States and they almost invariably report either permanent restoration or beneficial results. That is why I make the offer contained in the following leter. Sign it now and mail it.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17L, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten galions of Shivar Mineral Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

DENHAM SPRINGS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: This work consists of six churches. We have held our meetings. Brother Lipscomb, from Ponchatoula, held the first one at Denham Springs. There were eight accessions to the church. Brother Booth, of Keener Memorial, held the next at Live Oak, with thirteen accessions. Then Brother Wilson Brown, of Springfield, was with me at Mangham, Brother Cady, of Natalbany, at Alford, and Brother Akin, of Baker; and then Brother Early in his Sunday school work gave me some most effective work at Palmetto. These brethren all did fine preaching. The Spirit accompanied their work.

We held two meetings apart from our own charge, which gave us eight weeks in revival meetings.

Things are moving on fairly well here. Finances are not up by a great deal, but the people feel hopeful. We have a good people to serve. There is a fine school here, of three hundred pupils, and the village is building up somewhat.

God bless you and the dear Advocate. J. S. RUTLEDGE, P. C.
Denham Springs, La.

FROM BOGALUSA, LA.

It has been a long spell of silence, so far as the harpings of my lyre are concerned. I have been a reader of the Advocate, not a writer for it. But Bogalusa has been and is yet in existence, and something could be said, even in print. Dr. S. A. Steel has been writing as if he were from the pines. He is from the pines, but I am in them, and if pine has anything to do with shedding light on various questions, here is the place to get the pine knots for the business.

Dr. U. G. Foote has been here and we had a meeting. Yes, it is a fact that he is the pastor of that vine-covered edifice on St. Charles Avenue, where mahogany benches support sedate worshipers and the atmosphere of gentle elegance and art surges from pastor to people and people to pastor. And the pastor of that church held a revival meeting and called sinners to repentance and they responded and were converted and joined the church and were happy and have been coming to prayer meeting since the meeting closed. Foote has religion. He got it back in the mountains of Kentucky and brought it with him to New Orleans, where there is a lot of religion. The preacher who thinks that the pastors of high-steepled churches cannot call mourners, may send for Dr. Foote. We had 23 accessions to the church.

This has been a year of many events. Bogalusa is a manufacturing center and this is a year of industrial upheavals. Bogalusa has not escaped. But the church has functioned just the same, with good congregations. There have been 125 accessions to the church. Sunday schools, missionary meetings, prayer meetings, and all other kinds of meetings have been held with profit. Folks love one another and get married. Some die, and most of them pay more attention to their earthly troubles than they do to their eternal welfare. But for a young town, Bogalusa has done pretty well and may yet do better.

Aches and Pains of rheumatism are not permanently, but only temporarily, relieved by external remedies. Why not use an internal remedy—Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acidity of the blood on which rheumatism depends and cures the disease?—Adv.

I have seen so much good from suffering, so much good from pain, that I believe in the good of both. It is pain and suffering that bring out sympathy, self-sacrifice, and strength of character.—Selected.

You Do More Work

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and Quinine suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength - Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same to-day, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle. —Adv.

Sick Women

To do your duty during these trying times your health should be your first consideration. These two women tell how they found health.

Hellam, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles and a displacement. I felt all run down and was very weak. I had been treated by a physician without results, so decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and felt better right away. I am keeping house since last April and doing all my housework, where before I was unable to do any work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is certainly the best medicine a woman can take when in this condition. I give you permission to publish this letter."—Mrs. E. R. CRUMLING, R. No. 1, Hellam, Pa.

Lowell, Mich.—"I suffered from cramps and dragging down pains, was irregular and had female weakness and displacement. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which gave me relief at once and restored my health. I should like to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies to all suffering women who are troubled in a similar way."—Mrs. ELISE HEIM, R. No. 6, Box 83, Lowell, Mich.

Run Down?

Kidney and bladder troubles are not limited to men. Housework, or work in office or factory, causes women to suffer from weak, overworked or diseased kidneys. The symptoms are—puffiness under the eyes, sallow skin, constant tired feeling, lack of ambition, nervous condition, backache, rheumatic pains, sore muscles, stiff joints.

Foley Kidney Pills

get right at the cause of suffering and misery, regulate the kidneys and bladder and restore the diseased organs to sound and healthy condition.

Mrs. Wm. Fischer, 2009 Woodbourne Ave., Louisville, Ky., writes: "I am just getting along fine. I am taking Foley Kidney Pills every other night. You should have seen me before I started I was yellow as gold, now my eyes and skin are all cleared up My kidneys do not bother me at night any more. If it will help some other poor soul who is suffering you may use my name wherever your medicine is advertised."

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put On Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearauce; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

RUSTON AUXILIARY MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

Ruston used a suggestion made in The Voice recently, of placing on a clothes-line stretched across the room, clothes-pins bearing names of women who are members of the church but not connected with the Woman's Missionary Society. As the subject was a patriotic one, "Making Democracy Safe," the little figures were clad in our national colors. The rooms were made very attractive with flags, ferns and cut flowers. At the conclusion of the interesting program, Mrs. J. M. Sims, the leader, announced that the promised souvenirs would be distributed. They consisted of the suspended clothes-pins, two of which were given to each one present, with instructions to use their best endeavors to secure the unenlisted ones as members; if unsuccessful after a month's trial, the pins were to be brought back and given again to some other solicitors. Seventy-five women were in attendance and will work for a doubled membership.

AN APPEAL BY MRS. HARGROVE.

My Dear Co-Workers: Again I come to you as leaders of the forces of Cbrist, and bring to you the phase of services which the church asks of you for the next three months.

September was set as the month for pressing the taking of SPECIALS with the contributions made during the Elght Day Drive by the churches, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues and individuals. You note that I have omitted Woman's Missionary Auxiliaries, for from the beginning of the Centenary Campaign I have striven to make plain to our women missionary members, that AS AUXILIARIES they were not expected to contribute during the Eight Day Drive, but as INDIVIDUAL LAY-MEMBERS of the churcb. So again I would stress the polnt that AS AUXILIARIES you are not expected to assume any CENTENARY SPECIALS, but as individuals, or as teachers of Sunday school classes, or uniting your contributions with the church at large, you are urged to do all you possibly can.

Tbe months of October, November and December are specially assigned to the cultivation of the sense of obligation to God for His gifts; to enlisting our people as signers of the Covenant of Stewardship, of tlme, of life, and of money. The questlon of Stewardship should be discussed in every auxiliary meeting in October, November and December. Some one should be assigned to make a five minute talk, or read a leaflet, on some phase of stewardship, followed by a discussion or testimony service of ten minutes.

Still further, I would urge you to impress upon your auxiliary members the duty of TITHING, of paying faithfully to God the minimum of that which He has reserved for Himself of the substance which He has bestowed upon each of His children. Let each woman determine to record her vow before God as did Jacob of old, when he became conscious of God's presence and God's care in his life—"Of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth to thee." Gen. 28:22b. The goal set in each Auxiliary should be "EVERY MEMBER A TITHER."

Each Auxiliary should pray constantly for a large enlistment of life on the part of young men and young women of our churches. The Kingdom of Christ must have a large force of Volunteers for Life-Service, else its progress will be greatly hindered, and men, women and children will perish for lack of knowledge of His redeeming love. Lay your own children first upon God's altar, should He have need of them at the front, and then pray fervently that He will call forth laborers into His service at home and abroad.

With a prayer for God's blessing upon this letter,

Your Centenary Secretary,
Mrs. M. L. HARGROVE.

THE TEST OF TIME

When an article is without merit public sentiment condemns it. It immediately dies a natural death. When an article has merit, it will be everlastingly in demand. Gray's Ointment has now been used for a full round century. No greater proof can be offered of its effectiveness. One hundred years of honest, good old-fashioned value for money received has made it a family word in every household. Effective for sores, boils, burns, cuts, bruises, stings, eczema and the many forms of skin eruption. Ask your druggist. If he can't supply you send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and a liberal sample will be sent you free.—Adv.

HERMANVILLE CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Supposing that every pastor has a right to occupy a small space in our Advocate, I feel that the time is at hand when I need mine. I want to begin by reporting two meetings that we had on this charge. The first was at Tillman, where Brother M. B. Sharbrough, my well-beloved and efficient elder, came and did the preaching. He brought us eight of his great Scriptural messages, which stirred our hearts to a higher and better life. These sermons were delivered to the glory of God and the edification of our souls. Every one who ever heard him knows that he is an excellent preacher, with a deep spiritual knowledge of the Word of God. We received six applications for church membership at that meeting.

The next meeting was at Sarepta. Brother J. E. J. Ferguson, from Anguilla, came and helped me there. You know, Brother Carley, when you just take the halter off Brother "Jim" and let him graze around as he pleases, he is mighty hard to turn down as a preacher of the best type. This we did, and he did so well I think he really beat himself at good, hard spiritual preaching. His sermons were all full of the Spirit, and at times they were somewhat piercing, but each carried with it the healing oil of joy and gladness which rejoiced the heart. I think we had one of the best meetings that have been held there in a long time. Eleven members were added to the church, three of which came from the Baptist church.

But that is not all. At this same church, just one month from that time, I went down there in my "Ford" to preach, and what do you suppose happened to me there on that day? They just came near "pounding" me to death. I had all of the good things to eat that I could possibly pack in that "Lizzie" and get away with. I made it safely home (as that is characteristic of a Ford) and there my wife and I had a jolly good time unloading those good remembrances and packing them away. I expect if you could have been hidden away in our store-room, you could have told we were of a Methodist spirit from the "shout" we raised. Well, it was simply grand. Just to know we were so graciously remembered by our people did us so much good. Psalm 37:25.

Salts if Backachy and Kidneys Hurt

Stop Eating Meat for a While if Your Bladder Troubles You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

WHY A LOCAL PREACHER?

By Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr.

In this day of moving up in church affairs, I have been interested in it all and wondering if the time would ever come when there would be any place provided for our local preachers. I was one for four years and believe I should have remained one if there had been any way for really doing the Lord's work in the ministry in the local ranks.

I have looked in vain for some place in the Centenary Program, either in the dissemination of missionary information, or in the later plans for the evangelization of the world, in our great plans for a "church-wide" revival, but no one has yet suggested that they play any part. If I may make a suggestion to the "planners" in our church, let's plan to utilize in some way our local preachers.

We notice a paragraph in the Discipline which requires them to make certain reports to the District Conference. I have yet to attend a district conference where many reports were made in any way. I have often thought that if we required these reports, the "fellows" would feel as if they were at least worthy of notice.

Our great sister, the Baptist Church, is outstripping us in some respects, and my experience and observation have been that 90 percent of their work is carried on by what we call "local" preachers. I have known some of their men to serve two to four churches, and go a hundred miles to serve them. Louisiana College at Pineville, as most of us have reason to know, is sending out its students to the remote corners of the State, and they are making Baptists. Of course we also know that the order of preaching by these "farmer preachers" is not the same kind that would be satisfactory to a large majority of our people; it seems to be necessary for them to know only the "fundamentals"—Immersion, Final Perseverance of the Saints, and Close Communion. I have often thought how well it would be for some of our locals to get some of the fundamental doctrines of the Bible and go and teach men the way of life.

There seems to be a serious problem confronting us in the adequate support of our preachers, and, no doubt, there will be some additions to the local ranks for this reason, and unless our people wake up to the fact that preachers are paid less than the day laborer, and that this day laborer gets his regularly, they will have to be supplied with one of these men who will have to make his support, and preach as best he can on the Sabbath.

I recognize the fact that our Methodist people would not be satisfied with some such inefficient men, for they have been accustomed to something of a higher order; but I believe there is a place that the local preacher can fill, and some of them will fill acceptably, if we actually give them some place to preach, and the fellow who will not do some efficient preaching, we would not need to call him a "preacher," but just let him be a good layman.

If the Lord calls a man to preach, he dare not put his business in the way all the time, for I had to go into the itinerancy or lose what little religion I had, and I believe it to be the same way with men who are really called.

Local brethren, let's all get together and go and win men. We need you.

I was pastor in a community where my neighbor, the pastor of a local Baptist Church, had been for twenty-three years. He owned a small farm in the community, and preached once a month for them. The church had a membership of four hundred, and his annual salary was $100. A number of the people had become grown under his ministry and were well grounded in the "fundamentals." It is easy to figure that it cost each member twenty-five cents per year for ministerial support. Perhaps they felt as if they had paid well for what they received. This was near the community where the new pastor came in to preach for one time in the month, and after announcing that he would have to ask them to excuse him from a Sunday night appointment, as he had to ride back to be ready for work on Monday morning, one of the deacons, after cutting him a half-plug of "Brown Mule," remarked, "Boys, I sho am going to pay that man four bits; ho is my kind."

Bonita, La., Sept. 22, 1919.

AN INTERESTING OCCASION AT PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

Monday morning, September 29, the Chapel service in Port Gibson Female College was in honor of Miss Nell Drake, a native of Port Gibson and a graduate of the College, who has been a missionary for some years in China.

After singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers," our president, Dr. Relfe Hunt, told the students of Miss Nell Drake and her work; Mrs. Hunt then led in prayer, asking for a special blessing upon Miss Nell in her chosen mission.

Miss Lillie Hartwell, her fellow-student at Scarritt, told of the sweet influence Miss Nell had over the girls while a student there, and of the love and esteem which all had for her.

Miss Araminta Kennard, who has been Lady Principal of the College for many years, told about the way in which Miss Nell led in all things which tended for the uplift of the girls, and how dependable she always was, especially in religious work, and of the love the girls all bore for her because of her gentle sweetness. It was while a student here that she became convinced of her call to the mission field. Her influence was ever for the best.

In conclusion, Miss Kennard said that Port Gibson Female College had every reason to feel proud of Miss Drake's record as a student here, also in Scarritt, and as a worker in China.

THE MEETING AT CALHOUN CITY, MISS.

I went down on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in September to Calhoun City to help Brother D. R. McDougal, the pastor, in his meeting. We began on Saturday night and continued through the next Thursday evening service. There were many difficulties in the way that would operate to make it almost impossible to have a good meeting. It was court week, just six miles away, at Pittsboro, with an unusual murder case; on Monday morning a show set up for a week's business every night in the public square; some of our church folks were baling hay; others were ginning cotton at the rate of 40 to 50 bales per day. Yet we had fair congregations, with the co-operation of the other churches and the public school officials, and we pressed our work, with increasing heat and almost intolerable dust, and Thursday and night services were a sweeping victory. We closed with a splendid class of ten on profession and two by letter. I feel sure great good was done. I left the pastor in good spirits and hopeful for Conference.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFIES AND DARKENS HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! It Darkens Hair so Naturally That Nobody Can Tell

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days. —Adv.

FROM BROOKLYN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As the Annual Conference is but a few weeks off, and as I am now winding up my four years on the Brooklyn and Bond charge, may I be allowed to give a brief summary of my work? When I came to the charge, I found a membership of upwards of four hundred. For three years the progress of Methodism was good. The church here at Brooklyn has been materially injured this year by the death of Brother J. C. Griffin, one of our strongest layman, and by the moving away of Brother L. E. Gay, another strong laymau. The Sunday school at this church has made considerable progress. It has grown from a small school into a strong missionary school, very well organized in all departments, and is now carrying three specials.

The church at Bond has decreased in membership from two hundred, to about twenty-five, due to the closing down of the lumber industry there. At Maxie we have a small band of very faithful people who believe in looking after their pastor. We have a small country Sunday school there that doesn't know how to go into winter quarters and whose membership will double that of the church. McLaurin is another appointment, situated on the edge of Camp Shelby. While we have preached to thousands of the soldiers, we have had very little visible results.

We have made considerable improvements inside, underneath, and on top, the parsonage. While this pastor has spent a good many sleepless hours moving beds and trying to keep dry, the next preacher will be able to stay in bed and keep dry.

In many respects, our pastorate has been a pleasant one. Morally, our people are as good as any with whom we have ever lived. Religiously, they are very indifferent, and whoever may be the pastor next year will find plenty to do. D. W. ULMER, P. C.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THEY LEFT MORE THAN THEY TOOK.

A recent news item stated that three bandits who robbed a bank took $25,000 in currency and Liberty Bonds, and overlooked $100,000 lying in plain view on the shelves of the vault they hurriedly searched. That was a fortunate circumstance in this particular case; but we have been thinking of a lesson it suggests in every-day life. Too many of us miss the real treasures of life, that we might have for the taking, in our eagerness to seize some temporary and insignificant prize. A famous lecturer entertained and inspired thousands of listeners with his address on "Acres of Diamonds," in which he laid emphasis upon the great truth that practically limitless resources lie at the finger-tips of most of us—all we have to do is to reach out and take them. Even the good may be the enemy of the best.

"ADSUM."

The Third Red Cross Roll Call will be held from Nov. 2 to Nov. 11, which latter date will be the first anniversary of the signing of the armistice. President Wilson has issued an appeal to the American people in behalf of this great cause, in which he urges them to make a generous response to this call for funds with which to carry on the growing and urgent work of this most worthy organization. The membership fee is only one dollar—an amount that is within the reach of practically all our people. Let us pay that amount and thus be able to answer, "I am present," when our names are called.

WORTH MORE THAN MONEY.

A recent news item in a secular newspaper made mention of a successful business man, formerly a minister, who has resigned a position paying him a salary of $10,000 a year, to re-enter the ministry and take charge of a church that will pay him $2500 a year. His explanation of his action is that the church needs men who have business ability, and that he is willing to make less money for the sake of the greater good he can do. In other words, he has discovered that there are some things in life that are worth infinitely more than money, and he has shown the courage to act in accordance with his discovery. We admit that it took grit and grace both for him to act as he did—but with it all, he chose the "better part." We hope his example will cause other successful business men to give serious consideration to the part they are playing in the life of the world. There was never before such demand for competent men in the ministry as there is to-day. There is no field within the range of human activity that offers greater opportunity for doing good. And no greater reward can come to a man than the consciousness that he has done his full duty in striving to meet the needs of sinful men and women in their heart-breaking pleas for deliverance from the "body of this death." Money is worth a good deal nowadays—but there are some things that are worth more than money.

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

The Industrial Conference, called by President Wilson to consider the interests of all classes of our population, has disbanded because the representatives of capital and labor seemed unable to find a common ground upon which they might continue negotiations. In addition to what might be termed this diplomatic break between the parties at interest, the country is facing a strike of the coal miners of the country, called for November 1. It is so well recognized that an adequate coal supply is absolutely essential to the industrial life of the nation, that even a threat to diminish that supply reacts unfavorably upon every line of trade. The prospect of a great shortage of coal at the beginning of winter entails not only such loss by the cessation of productive industry, but also such suffering on the part of those who will not be able to secure fuel even to keep themselves warm, as to make it one of the most serious situations that have developed in the industrial history of this country. President Wilson, in spite of his weakened physical condition, has faced the situation and spoken out vigorously concerning it. He has issued the following statement: "I feel it my duty in the public interest to declare that any attempt to carry out the purposes of this strike, and thus paralyze the industry of the country, with the consequent suffering and distress of all our people, must be considered a grave moral and legal wrong against the Government and the people of the United States. I can do nothing less than to say that the law will be enforced, and means will be found to protect the interests of the nation in any emergency that may arise out of this unhappy situation." Nobody knows what is ahead of us in the industrial world—but this is a time for the utmost seriousness in dealing with dangerously unsettled conditions.

THE CAUSE OF POVERTY.

We have no thought of entering into an elaborate discussion of the causes that produce poverty; we merely want to call attention to some figures that have recently been made public by the Government in connection with the Thrift Campaign. According to these figures, only 108 persons out of every 1000 save any part of their incomes, and of these 108 more than half of them are foreigners living on our shores. A great financier once said that the sure test of a man's ability to succeed in a material way is in his ability to save. If he can save, he will get ahead financially; if he cannot save, he might as well give up all hope of financial independence at once. It is a fine thing to be called "a liberal spender," and "an all-around good fellow;" but it is an entirely different matter to reach old age with nothing laid by for the days of feebleness and diminished earning capacity. We shall be much better off as a nation and as individuals when we learn to save a part of what we make.

BETTER PRISON CONDITIONS.

The American Prison Congress held its annual meeting in New York last week. It is the purpose of this organization to investigate conditions existing in prisons throughout the nation, and to do all in its power to bring about a betterment of conditions where evils are found to exist. Its investigations are conducted by experts in the particular work in which they are engaged. Much good has already resulted from its deliberations and recommendations, and it is continuing its much-needed and valuable work. It will be of special interest to many of our readers to know that the labor system in use in the State prisons of Louisiana was commended as being one of the best in the South. We hope that the public conscience is being awakened in regard to the treatment of convicts, and we trust the time is not far distant when at least humane methods will be used in dealing with prisoners in every State of the Union. Much remains to be done in this direction, but it is gratifying to know that substantial progress is being made.

GOOD MORNING, SUN.

We can imagine that the frown has disappeared from the face of Old Sol, and that he is smiling upon the earth this morning with unusual warmth and benignity. For more than a year, we have been going about our business with little concern for his setting and his rising; but now our timepieces have again been adjusted according to his journeyings, and he is again the undisputed arbiter of our a. m. and p. m. peregrinations. He is now up by the time we are, and we bid him a hearty good morning.

PEACE HATH ITS HARDSHIPS NO LESS THAN WAR.

During the war, we became accustomed to various hardships and deprivations, which we suffered uncomplainingly because they were for the good of the world in its hour of need. We thought, however, that with the coming of peace normal conditions would be restored and that we should, at least, have plenty of food to supply all reasonable demands. But we find ourselves now in the midst of a sugar shortage that is more critical and more trying than it was at any time during the war. As some one has expressed it, there is "sugar, sugar everywhere, but very few grains to eat." In New Orleans, one of the centers of the sugar industry in the United States, there is practically no sugar on the market, and such as can be had is doled out in one and two-pound packages. The prediction is freely made that within a few days there will be none at all available. And yet, there are thousands of tons of sugar lying in the holds of vessels tied up at our wharves which cannot be unloaded because there is a strike of the longshoremen in progress. These longshoremen, who, through their union, have a monopoly of the loading and unloading of vessels, are demanding a minimum wage of one dollar an hour for their labor. We are not qualified to express an opinion as to the merits of their demands, but we do know that this port is receiving a setback that it will take a long time to overcome, and that thousands of people are suffering for the lack of things that are in abundance at our very door. We are willing to concede to labor all the rights it is entitled to; but the public has some rights as well.

THE DREAM OF THE AGES.

Though every day now bears a stain,
Though pride and greed are regnant still.
The dream abides: that right shall reign,
That good shall vanquish every ill.

The men of earth shall grieve at sin
And beauteous shall their vision be;.
All souls shall trust the light within,
In reverence and purity.

What though the years be long and dark,
And men be found of little worth?
Still glows the living, God-born spark
In every God-made soul of earth.

A spark that through the distant years
Shall grow unto a ruling sun:
The Kingdom day by day appears,
The tasks of God are never done.

The dream, the dream! All else shall pass—
The lust for gold, the pomp of kings,
The pride of power, which fade as grass;
The whole wide universe of things.

The dream of God—that dream of light
Which lit the prophet's sacred page—
To-day is vanquishing the night,
To bless the world from age to age.

THE GLORY OF GOSPEL PREACHING.

By George W. Ridout, D.D.

The Christian pulpit is dedicated to the proposition as set forth by Bishop Moule: "That Christianity is a Divine scheme for producing righteousness in men through justification and sanctification" wrought in the soul by the Holy Spirit.

The efficiency of the pulpit depends to an immense degree upon the fidelity of the preacher to this central idea. When preaching is viewed as our Lord's peculiar institution for the sole and sacred purpose of proclaiming the great plan of salvation and setting forth the provisions and claims of the Gospel, then it is that the pulpit is vested with a power that surpasses any other power or agency for the gripping of the conscience, changing of the heart, and the regeneration of life.

The pulpit has always reached its greatest heights when the men who stood in it, in a peculiar and powerful sense, experienced and thrilled with Isaiah 61, 1-2, who, with the prophet, could say, "the Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives and the opening of the prison to them that are bound, to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn."

It was a remark of the great painter Watts, when he was offered a baronetcy with high sounding titles, that "the only title I will take is the one given me, 'The Painter of Eternal Things.'" The preacher of the Gospel is likewise a painter of eternal things; he treats of subjects and themes that are divine and lofty, ageless and eternal. The whole scheme of redemption furnishes him themes that range from the holiness of God to the restoration of the lost soul to the image of God, and he may soar into the lofty regions of inspired thought, approaching

"The living throne, the sapphire blaze,
Where angels tremble while they gaze."

The great Summerfield in his last illness exclaimed: "Oh, if I might be raised again, how I would preach! I would preach as I never preached before! I have had a look into eternity."

There is a very real sense in which the one thing most needed to qualify the preacher for his great task is to take a "look into eternity!" In the light of eternity soul questions loom large and things of time and sense will appear small.

Let us note a few particulars that characterize Gospel preaching.

1. Gospel preaching concerns itself with the great doctrines of grace.

It was said by Dr. James M. Buckley that "any religious body will disintegrate if it allows its fundamental ideals to be discounted, publicly doubted and denied and contrary doctrines taught to the people."

It must be admitted that our age has a peculiar antagonism to doctrine and many pulpits are entirely silent as touching doctrinal preaching, but in this they show a weakness, not strength, and their wisdom is not from above.

When we speak of doctrinal preaching we do not mean polemics; the day of quarreling over a few particular tenets probably has gone by and, in the long run, the majority of Protestant churches are a unit on the main body of Christian doctrine. They are agreed on the doctrines of sin and repentance and saving faith, justification, etc.

It is a singular fact that nearly every great revival of religion has come about through the re-preaching of some neglected doctrine of grace. Nearly every evangelist of note whose work has been nation-wide has had to dig up some old, neglected doctrine and preach it and get it back into its place in the mind and the hearts of the people.

The war has been preaching to us some powerful sermons on human depravity and, as I heard Dr. H. Churchill King say in France, what a sermon it preaches to us on sin and repentance, and what a message it brings to us from the old text, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; whatsoever a man (or nation) soweth that shall he (or it) also reap." Gal. 6:7.

2. Gospel preaching deals with certainties, not speculations or theories.

That wonderful gospel preacher, Dr. Joseph Parker, of London, said some time before he died: "In the past thirty years I have seen enough dead theories and discarded hypotheses to fill a full-sized cemetery. They entered the world like an awakened military band with much noise and swagger and coughed their way out of it like a squad of consumptive tramps. Whenever a preacher is parading a new theory in religion I know the first nail in his coffin has been driven and clinched. The one thing that is forever new and fresh is the old Gospel which is in fact from everlasting to everlasting."

3. Gospel preaching is not limited in its effectiveness to any particular age, but the Gospel is the one thing that is ageless and everlasting.

In the apostolic age it swept its way through the Roman Empire until the banner of the Cross was planted in every clime and the message reached the very ends of the world. In Luther's age it woke Europe to a new consciousness of God and salvation through the merits of Jesus' blood. In the age of the Wesleys it proved to be a savor of life unto old England when, as the gospel preachers went forth calling sinners to repentance, the heart of England got touched and the nation became transformed; and in America it was the gospel preaching of the Methodist circuit riders, of Charles G. Finney, of Moody and others, that caused great religious revivals to break out that spread through the length and breadth of the nation.

Now, with the war over and the age of reconstruction upon us, let not the wisdom of our philosophers, the theories of our economists, the doctrines of the Socialists, deceive us into believing that they have something superior to the gospel message. All these might have their place, but it will be a splendid thing for the pulpit if the preachers do not weaken, but hold steadily to the conviction that in the Gospel of the Divine Christ they have something infinitely superior and potential for the present age.

A friend of mine traveling in California went out on a Sunday evening to attend upon a certain church where an eloquent preacher occupied the pulpit. My friend was weary and in a poor state of health; he felt a peculiar need in his heart of hearing a gospel sermon and felt confident that in this church he would get his soul fed. His disappointment was great when the preacher had a subject that gave him no chance to preach Christ. My friend, after returning home, wrote a kindly letter to the preacher expressing his disappointment. The result of that letter was that the man of eloquence resolved that thereafter he would not fail to put Christ in every sermon and he has a reputation to-day of being foremost as a preacher of the Gospel and he lifts up the Christ in every message.

When Dr. Talmage visited Mr. Gladstone at Hawarden Castle when that great man was guiding the affairs of the British Empire, as they talked over religious and political questions, Mr. Gladstone said: "Talk about questions of the day, there is but one question and that is the Gospel. It will correct everything needing correction."

The Gospel offers light not only on the life that now is, but also on the life that is to come. It is a stay at life's close and a staff to support the pilgrim as he sets out to tread the Valley of the Shadow of Death. When Robert Bruce of Scotland was dying he said to his daughter, "I hear the voice of Jesus calling me. Bring me the Bible." He turned to the eighth chapter of Romans and as his sight was failing he asked them to put his finger on the thirty-eighth verse, and to the words: "I am persuaded." He repeated again and again the words, his countenance denoting great peace and joy; then he passed away.

O ye that mock Christian faith,
And scorn to trust the inspired pages,
What passages would you choose in death
Of all the wisdom of the ages?

The Methodist circuit riders of the early days were powerful and mighty preachers of the Gospel. They also sang the Gospel in a wonderful fashion. One of the favorite verses was Hark! how the Gospel trumpet sounds!

Through all the world the echo bounds;
And Jesus by redeeming blood,
Is bringing sinners back to God
And guiding them safely by his word,
To endless day.

ON THE DEEP.

By E. H. Rawlings.

A day in Chicago, just as the big race was spending its force, two days' delightful travel across the wheat fields of Wisconsin and Minnesota, two days through west Canada, one of these in an open car through mountain scenery no whit less magnificent than the mountains of Switzerland as I recollect them, a day in Vancouver, seven days on the deep, and now within three days of our port at Yokohoma, Japan—this is our record since leaving Nashville fourteen days ago.

And not all the record at that. A part of the story has to do with storm, quite unusual even for this northern route, which we encountered on the second day, and while it does interest, it does not seriously concern my readers. Better men have encountered storms on the Pacific and lived to tell the story, and told it; why should I?

Gathered on the ship are many sorts of people, including many interesting groups. I should say the missionary predominates, going from various Boards and bound mainly for Japan and China. Dr. R. A. Ward, Associate General Secretary of the Centenary for the Foreign Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is on with an interesting aggregation of workers going to China. Among them is Mr. Wood of the New York World. Mr. Wood did splendid feature story work for the Centenary, and the Methodist Board sends him out to get material for special stories about China. That the interest of these stories for a great metropolitan newspaper is a news interest and lends itself to a striking presentation, makes his work not less valuable to a mission board, and, with characteristic enterprise, the Methodist Episcopal Board is using a big newspaper man in this quite unusual way. Dr. Ward is taking out two thousand lantern slides of views made mainly in the Centenary, and last night delighted the ship's company with a stereopticon-lecture.

Some of our passengers are traveling just for the satisfaction of seeing the world. Many are business men representing lumber companies, oil companies, and other great commercial corporations hurrying to seize the great main chance to make money everywhere opening up in this wonderful Far East.

I am especially interested in the foreigners abroad, mainly Japanese and Chinese. In the Japanese company is a gentleman who came aboard in mid-ocean from a ship sailing from Seattle which broke down and had to return. I understand that he is a distinguished member of the Peace Conference. Around him is gathered a distinguished looking group of his own countrymen. Another group is a number of Chinese students, two of them alumnae of our McTyiere Institute that came to America as indemnity students and after graduating at Wellesley College are now returning to their native land. Several of the young men are secretaries of the Young Men's Christian Association, going out for work among their own people. I notice that these Japanese and Chinese groups keep as far as possible from each other. It is hard for people in America to realize how serious is the feeling between these two nations. It makes one pause and wonder for the future of these two nations.

As I am writing, a beautiful young woman enters and begins to read, awaiting her turn at a vacant writing desk. Her striking looks would attract attention in any company, and in her story. A few months ago she figured in a sensational newspaper story that went the rounds in America. An American official in the Philippines, tiring of his wife, was securing a divorce, or she was, in order that he might marry a young woman scarcely half his age. This is the young woman. Very beautiful, but her beauty only emphasizes the scandal of this offense against the high moral sentiment of a Christian country. Let him divorce his wife and marry this young woman and have the papers full of its vulgar features, as the law allows, if he will, but let him have the decency to resign the office in which he misrepresents the best sentiment of this country abroad.

In Vancouver we met Dr. R. A. Hardie and wife, of the Korea Mission. They had come over in this same ship a few days before and were waiting to see us and talk over the situation in Korea. His discussion of conditions in that unhappy country, with no bitterness for the Japanese but an intense love for the Korean people, was exceedingly interesting. He is spending a short time at his home in Canada, but his furlough period he will spend mainly in the South, and I feel sure that his plea for the Korean people will not fail to reach the heart of the church. Dr. Hardie is one of our ablest and best missionaries.

Bishop Lambuth in the East.

In Vancouver we were joined by Bishop Lambuth and our secretary, Brother Emmons. The departure of Bishop Lambuth on this ship was quite in doubt until the very last on account of the illness of Mrs. Lambuth. So serious was her illness that ten days before the date of sailing Bishop McMurry wired Bishop Lambuth offering to go in his stead. It had been understood that Bishop McMurry was to serve for a quadrennium in the East, but on account of his wife's illness, an episcopal assignment was given him by the College that would permit of his remaining in America. In the meantime Mrs. McMurry, though not well, had greatly improved and Bishop McMurry, hearing of Mrs. Lambuth's condition, offered to take Bishop Lambuth's assignment in the East. But at the last Bishop Lambuth felt that he ought to go, even if it should be necessary for him to return earlier than had been his intention of doing, and in Vancouver a letter came to the Bishop from Oakdale telling him "to go on but hurry back," and assuring him as he sailed of prayers constantly ascending in his behalf. With characteristic heroism, Mrs. Lambuth had urged that the Bishop go, telling him that the people in the East needed him worse than she.

It was a great disappointment to us at the office in Nashville and to all the missionaries in the East that Bishop McMurry could not go back a second year. He had made a most painstaking and thorough study of all three fields and his administration had been most satisfactory and heartening to the missionaries. And so, when he could not return, it was peculiarly fortunate that a man was available for assignment so eminently fitted as Bishop Lambuth. Bishop Lambuth was born in China, opened the Mission in Japan, was connected with the opening of our work in Korea, as secretary has been closely associated with the administration of our work in all these lands and will know how to lead in this most promising hour that has come in the history of our work in the East. Dr. G. H. Lambeth, of the Richmond Advocate, quoted some time ago an estimate of Bishop Lambuth given at Columbus by Bishop McConnell. "The most self-sacrificing and heroic missionary with whom I have been associated," was what he said. Southern Methodists will appreciate the testimony and are rejoiced that a man with Bishop Lambuth's faith and vision and his consuming passion for the spreading of the Kingdom is leading the forces of the church across the frontiers in an hour like this, and will affectionately pray that the dear one in Oakdale may be speedily restored and be long spared to counsel and help our dear Bishop in his great work.

UNIFICATION AT CLEVELAND.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

I.

At the final meeting of our Commission on Unification at Cleveland, I stated to the Commission that as I had been appointed a member of the Ad Interim Committee I desired to represent as accurately as possible the views of the membership of our church at the meeting of that Committee in Richmond in November. Therefore, I would be glad to know the sentiments of our preachers and laymen in the sections from which the several members of the Commission came, or of those with whom they came in contact.

Bishop Denny writes me that in presenting the question of Unification to the Illinois and Kentucky Conferences:

"I distinctly stated that the Chairman of the Joint Committee, which is to meet in Richmond on November 3, had said to the members of our Commission that he would be glad to have the opinion of our people in the communities from which the several members of the Commission came or from which they could be learned. I had in mind the statement you made to our Commisson in Cleveland just before we adjourned."

As a member of the Ad Interim Committee I do desire to represent properly our church, and I shall appreciate any information concerning the views of our people on the general subject of Unification and the issues involved. While, of course, there is no doubt as to the right of an Annual Conference to discuss such questions and to vote upon them, yet I would not care to have it thought that such action was taken by any Annual Conference at this stage of the negotiations in response to a specific request from me, for I had no thought that such action would be taken.

And now in view of statements which have been made to me, both oral and written, and in view of articles which have appeared in various papers, I have decided to state my own position at the Cleveland meeting, as shown by the stenographic report. I have no hesitation in making this statement, because I have from the beginning, in 1915, advocated the fullest possible publicity, and at the Cleveland meeting it was voted to admit the editors of the church papers and to permit them to print any part or all of the proceedings.

Two Reports.

As is well known, there were two statements before the Commission, one signed by seven representatives of the M. E. Church, and one by seven representatives of the M. E. Church, South. At the meeting of our Commission, I offered three resolutions for adoption.

(1) The Commission of the M. E. Church, South, prefers the report presented by our representatives on the Joint Committee of Conference. (This was adopted unanimously by our Commission.)

(2) The Commission of the M. E. Church, South, presents the report of our members of the Joint Committee of Conference to the Commission of the M. E. Church as a definite proposal. (This was adopted by our Commission by a vote of 18 to 7.)

(3) In the event the Commission of the M. E. Church cannot see its way clear to accept this definite proposal made by our Commission, we request that a Joint Committee of Reference, an Ad Interim Committee, be appointed, whose duty it shall be to take under consideration the whole matter of the Unification of American Methodism and report at a time to be agreed upon by the Joint Commission on Unification. (This was adopted, I think, with practical unanimity. I do not remember whether a division was called for.)

These resolutions indicate clearly the attitude of our Commission. All preferred our proposal as to the status of the Negro to that proposed by the M. E. members of the Committee; eighteen of our Commission agreed to present our proposal definitely to the M. E. Commission; if our proposal was rejected, then we were willing to make another effort to come to an agreement.

Desire for Unification.

Was our Commission justified in believing that our church sincerely and earnestly desires Unification? There have been some statements and some articles which insist that the Commission should discontinue its work, because the church does not desire Unification or the further discussion of it. But those who have made these statements, so far as I have seen them, were opposed to Unification at the time of the Atlanta General Conference. On this question of the desire for Unification by our church, I made a statement to the Joint Commission at Cleveland, which I believe to be correct. (I give here the stenographic report.)

"When the matter came up before the Committee on Church Relations at the General Conference at Atlanta, the question was very clearly before the General Conference whether we should continue the negotiations, whether it was wise to go further, and, if so, on what basis. And that Committee was overwhelmingly in favor of continuing the negotiations and on the same basis as had already existed. That is to say, when an effort was made in the minority report to instruct the Commission, to tell the Commission it must have regard to certain things, the great majority of the Committee on Church Relations said: 'No, we do not want to do that. We have not done that before.' And when the point was distinctly made that the Oklahoma City declaration did tell our Commission that it must not do certain things with reference to the colored membership, it was very distinctly emphasized that that statement was a mistake, that the Oklahoma City declaration was not an instruction, it was a recommendation. And in the debate that followed on the General Conference floor, in order that it might be very clear, as Chairman of the Committee on Church Relations, I made this statement: 'We stand on the Oklahoma platform. That says that we "recommend." We do not tie the Commission's hands. I was on the Oklahoma committee which shaped that resolution and I think I made the motion to insert that clause. I understood it exactly as inserted, namely, that we 'recommend' that the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies be formed into an independent conference holding independent relations with the reorganized and reunited church. I believed that that was the correct statement of our position. At Oklahoma we simply requested that. We did not go any further. We did not say to the Commission, 'you cannot do this,' but 'there is our recommendation.' Judge Candler has said that he was willing to abide by the action of our Commissioners at Savannah. He intimated that he was willing to go that far, but his words now intimate that he is not willing to go that far. That Joint Commission did not break up or say, 'we have come to an impossible situation.' It said, 'we transmit to our respective General Conferences the statement of those items which have been tentatively accepted by the Joint Commission, together with the statement of those items on which agreement has been reached, and we recommend the continuance of the Joint Commission.'

"The above is the statement which I made on the floor at the Atlanta General Conference. So, brethren—I may be tedious, but I want to state as clearly as I can my understanding of the meaning of our General Conference action—our General Conference did not bind our Commission with instructions any more than it was bound in 1914. And those instructions do contain a recommendation of what we think is wise. As far as I know, there has been no change of view on the part of our General Conference. They reaffirmed the Oklahoma City declaration; but we do not say that that is an ultimatum; we do not tie our Commission's hands. And we come here to-day with the practically unanimous vote of our General Conference saying, as plainly as a body can say, that we desire the unification of the two Methodisms, if it can be accomplished by such methods that there would not be in our judgment greater damage wrought by the unification than by leaving things as they are."

"This, perhaps, is an additional fact which is worthy of mention, namely, that our General Conference by a very great majority (what was it? 194 to 74?) put itself on record as desiring the statement to be made that we desire unification so much that we want to declare to the brethren of the M. E. Church that we would call a session of our General Conference whenever the Commission of our church declared that it was justifiable so to do."

"Mr. Chairman and Brethren, I hardly think it necessary to insist or to emphasize that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, desires the unification of the two churches. Our leaders are men of sufficient vision to recognize that Methodism has a great responsibility in the world to-day, and that God has indicated our duty in the world of Protestant Christendom to carry on aggressive warfare against sin in this country, in Europe and in all the world. I do not think that anything further need be said to emphasize the sense of responsibility which is felt by the members of our Commission on that point. We know, as Secretary Daniels said so forcibly at Columbus on last Saturday, that Methodism is the church which leads in all the great reform movements in this country, and that we are recognized as a militant church against all forms of sin. And we are feared as no other church is feared by the hosts of wickedness. We know, also, that if Roman Catholicism is to be met in this country and in Europe, Methodism must lead the van. And I personally am more deeply convinced than ever, than I was at the Oklahoma General Conference, or at the General Conference in Atlanta, that we ought to go to the extreme limit of our convictions in order to secure unification. I believe, therefore, that there is only one question to be asked by each of us here, and that is 'what will, what policy will, what course will, best advance the interests of the Kingdom of God on earth?'

"In an article that I wrote some years ago on this subject and in some other articles since then, I have stated very frankly that this was a matter of the very highest Christian expediency; that I thought the separation in 1844 was a matter of Christian expediency, and that our fathers acted wisely, for the best interest of Methodism in both sections of our great country when they decided that they could best do the work God had called Methodism to do in two organizations rather than in one. Now to-day the question of expediency confronts us again. What is best for the Kingdom of God? For us to unite or for us to stay apart? And, if we agree that it is best to unite, what plan can we adopt that will secure the best possible results?

THE NEW CHURCH AT WINNFIELD, LA.

The corner stone of this church will be laid next Sunday by Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo. It is of brick and will cost about $20,000 when completed. It will have 18 or 20 class rooms, so arranged that every department of the Sunday school will have an assembly room.

A NEWSY LETTER FROM DR. HOLLOMAN.

Dear Brother Carley: As in the generations past, I begin: "I take my pen in hand to write you a few lines to say that I am well and hope for you the same God's blessings," for after ten days in a sanitarium, seeing the pallid faces and hearing the groans of the suffering, one is better able to appreciate the blessing of health, and to join with the Psalmist, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits," and "Who hath delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears and my feet from falling." For those who care to know, it gives me great rejoicing to say that the daughter is recovering rapidly, and by the grace of God and the skill of the surgeon, will soon join her own circle. I have often said that I would choose as a calling that of trained nurse, last of all; but when one hears the many kind things said of them by the sufferers, there is compensation, after all, above mere dollars and cents (and right here I would say they amply earn all they receive). Street's Sanitarium is as well known in West Mississippi and North Louisiana as is Mayo Brothers to the nation at large. By their skill and energy the three brothers have built up a splendid institution, and gotten to themselves a reputation well deserved. While visiting the institution I met friends and acquaintances from other parts, among whom was a daughter of our lamented Brother Langford, whom I left doing well after a painful operation. During my hours of watching I recalled the reports of the missionaries as to the lack of the hospital, the educated physician and the skilled surgeon where our Lord is unknown, and said if these be but an offspring of our Christianity, it is worth all it has cost the church in money and men. I recalled some things written by Matthew and St. James to say that here their teachings are organized upon a large scale and systematically carried out.

It was gratifying to hear the many excellent reports from Brother Harmon and the high esteem in which he is held by his people. I owe him a debt of lasting gratitude for the use of the prophet's chamber during my stay, and also his kind attention to the suffering one. He will have a fine report to make at Meridian from Crawford Street. It was my great pleasure to take a day off (between trains) at Port Gibson, that long-time center of civilization and now the seat of two institutions of learning for our youth. Dr. Hunt has already done much toward making the college over which he presides attractive without, and as much so from within; for it has not been my pleasure to look upon a body of more attractive young ladies than gathered in the chapel. Sixty young women are in the dormitories and the doctor says he can accommodate a few more comfortably. He is the right man in the right place, say the people.

Brother Burton seemed quite as much at home with his class of young people as in the pulpit. To say he is filling the bill and pleasing the people is what was to be expected. Just like Burton, he has his hand on every nerve of the church, and, by the way, he told me that there was just one more Presbyterian boy at Chamberlain and Hunt than Methodist, and I said, "What about Millsaps?" From all reports this is truly a day of education in Mississippi—grammar schools, high schools, colleges, all full to overflowing.

Well, again I'm on the old hearthstone, gathering the eggs, feeding the pigs, picking the peas, going to bed by the hoot of the owl and getting up by the crow of the rooster. In as much as I am exempt from making out reports for Boards, I may come again before Meridian. "Good night and sweet repose," was the blessing of our fathers, so I close. Come again to our home in the woods, Henry, and bring Sam with you.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTICE.

Any visitors to the approaching session of the Louisiana Conference in Ruston who desire hotel accommodation, will do well to notify me, that I may engage rooms for them in advance.

I should like very much, indeed, to have a complete list in advance, of all those who are entitled to free entertainment and who purpose to attend the Conference. (I have at hand the list of all regular members of the Conference.) Names of alternates who expect to take the place of regular delegates, of candidates for admission to Conference or for ordination, of supplies whose names do not appear in Minutes, of lay members of Conference Boards who are not delegates, should be promptly furnished. It would also be helpful if any member of the Conference, clerical or lay, is unable to attend the Conference, that he should notify me in advance.

IN MEMORIAM—MRS. I. W. COOPER.

By Rev. W. H. Lewis.

On the night of October 5, 1919, Mrs. Betty Wadsworth Cooper, wife of Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D., passed to her eternal home. She attended to her accustomed duties on Friday and Saturday, feeling only a little indisposed; not until Sunday morning was it deemed necessary to call in a physician, and before the midnight hour that night the end came. How sudden and severe the shock! How intense the sorrow in the hearts of the bereaved! But what consolation was theirs as sympathizing friends gathered to minister to them! Only those who have passed through the deep waters, and experienced a like sorrow, can appreciate the real value of the sympathetic handgrasp, the flowers given out of a heart of love, and the silent tear coursing its way, unbidden, down the cheek.

Mrs. Cooper was fifty-nine years and seven months old. The last eighteen years of her life were spent in Brookhaven, during which time she not only gained for herself many true friends, but she also contributed largely to the success of Christian education for girls. She was quiet and reserved in her nature, sincere in all she did, strong in her convictions and purposes of soul, unyielding in her loyalty to what she regarded right, feeling a mother's interest in the girls of Whitworth College, and contributing, in a great measure, to the success of Dr. Cooper in his work. Only those who knew her well could appreciate her true worth. It was in the home where she lived her life, and where the deep impress of her character was felt.

When twenty years of age she and Dr. Cooper were married. For thirty-nine years and three months she walked by his side, sharing with him the hardships and trials incident to the life of an itinerant preacher and that of a college president. She was also sharer with him of the blessings and joys incident to a life of unselfish service to God and humanity. Those are years of blessed memory and will ever be cherished by the sorrowing husband as a gracious heritage. She was a devoted wife and a true helper. Dr. Cooper said of her: "I never took a step without first consulting my wife. The best part of me is gone." In the full consciousness of the greatness of his loss and the loneliness of the path before him, he bows his head in sorrow, but, with an abiding faith in Christ and implicit confidence in the promises of the Gospel he has preached for so many years, he looks up with joyful anticipation of a glad meeting in glory. Thank God, it is not an eternal separation; she has simply gone on a little in advance where she will await his coming.

Mrs. Cooper was the mother of ten children, four boys and six girls. Two died in infancy and one at the age of three years. Those left to mourn the transition of a devoted mother are: Maj. I. W. Cooper, Meridian, Miss.; Lieut. Ellis Cooper, Jackson, Miss.; Miss Lois Cooper, instructor of music, Whitworth College; Mrs. Bessie Hopkins, Hickory, Miss.; Mrs. Lucile Yon, Tallahassee, Fla.; Miss Mildred Cooper, student, Trinity College; Miss Virgie Cooper, student Whitworth College. She was one with her children, both in their pleasures and sorrows. Like other mothers, she was brave and patriotic. Two sons were in the service of their country, and one daughter engaged in Y. M. C. A. work across the sea. In their absence from home her heart and mind were over with them. The agony of her suffering while one of the sons was in the midst of battle can be realized only by those who have passed through a similar experience. While others slept, she would lie awake following, in her mind, her absent children and encompassing them with her prayers. She experienced the joy of having them all home again.

One brother, Mr. Earnest Wadsworth, of Meridian, Miss., is the only living representative of her immediate family.

On Monday afternoon, funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder, assisted by Rev. W. H. Lewis, pastor, and Rev. C. W. Crisler and Dr. A. F. Watkins, former pastors of the Brookhaven church. Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Summit, was also present and offered prayer at the home before going to the church. The large auditorium of the church was filled with friends, many of whom came from a distance to express their sympathy and love. The beautiful floral offerings spoke in silent and sweet accent of the high esteem in which the sorrowing loved ones are held.

A useful life has come to a close, a true Christian has gone to her eternal reward; but she will continue to live in the hearts of friends and loved ones, and the fruitage of her life will continue to manifest itself in the lives and character of her children. May God comfort them in their great sorrow, and may they all so love and appreciate their mother as to enthrone her Christ in their hearts.

Brookhaven, Miss.

SOME OF THE UNFAVORABLE SIGNS OF THE PRESENT.

By Rev. Isaac L. Peebles.

As parents should strive to know and correct every hurtful thing in their children's lives, so should Christians do in their own lives and also that of the church; but optimism is so magnified and emphasized to-day, that Christians, and even the church, seem blind to growing, destructive evils. For the profit of individual Christians and also for that of the church, let us consider some of the most unfavorable signs of this age.

The first one to which we call attention is the lack of seriousness, or, as the Bible has it, gravity. Paul said that wives, deacons and aged men should be grave; and also he wrote that children should be in subjection with all gravity, and that young men should show themselves patterns in gravity. The Greek for grave is "semnos," which occurs 9 times in the Bible—Old Testament 4 times, and the New Testament 5 times. The Greek for gravity is "semnotes" which occurs 3 times in the Bible, "semnotes" being the noun and "semnos" the adjective, each carrying not only the idea of order, politeness, courteousness, but also that of dignity, seriousness, weightiness and reverence, and even more than our English is able to express. It leaves no room for foolishness, levity, clownishness, etc.; but the fashion now is to chuckle, giggle and laugh about everything, overlooking the fact that the worship and services of God demand seriousness, dignity, reverence, and even awe. We should rigidly avoid the appearance of idiots instead of that of the wise, weighty, reverent and dignified children of the great God, for otherwise our physical, or inferior, nature will have the preference.

Another unfavorable sign of the present is that of misrepresentation. Nearly everything is misrepresented in order to tone and to accomplish. Attendance at church, results of meetings, condition of charges, finance, and even the preaching of God's Word are misrepresented, and all so much so that one hardly knows the real state of things unless one sees for himself. It is popular to misrepresent.

Another unfavorable sign is, the conscience is not being rightly trained by the Word of God. It is not a matter now as to what God approves and requires, but as to what the individual prefers and wishes to be and to do. The conscience is the slave of the desires, preferences, prejudices, passions and appetites of the individual. Church law and its enforcement are as nothing. One's promise, however much it may involve, is regarded and governed largely by one's feelings and personal comfort and profit as to whether or not one will meet it. There is no real scriptural conscience in the matter at all.

The Sabbath is used as a holiday and not as a holy day; men and women profess and act religion in public gatherings and make their homes disorderly and veritable hells. Family prayer twice daily and secret prayer thrice daily are rare now.

Another unfavorable sign is, that a man not only does not endeavor to find all of his own faults, but does not want any one else to find them and inform him of them. He is as faultless as he desires and therefore wishes for no disturbance whatever about lackings in his own life. He is as good as the average, if not better, in his own estimation; and hence is at perfect ease. He is quick to defend those who are wickedly faulty, and sees more good in such than in those who are struggling against all wrongs and endeavoring to live a holy and clean life. He has great pleasure in discovering, magnifying and publishing any fault in the pure and sincere, however unintentional that fault may be; disregarding the fact that unavoidable imperfections in such a one's life should elicit his sympathy and help instead of hatred; and in love and wisdom he should denounce wilful and deliberate sins perpetrated by the self-conceited, hold sin lovers, and encourage them to seek pardon.

Oh, for the day when each one shall be eager to know his own faults, in the light of the Scriptures, and as far as he is able, to correct them! Oh, for the disappearance of all unfavorable signs, by each and every one's living as the Bible teaches and requires! And then what orderliness, what contentment, what happiness, what joy, what prosperity, what frankness, what holiness of heart and life, what supreme love for God and the people, will be ours!

Let that day come now, O God. Amen.

TABBY'S KITS.

Annie M. L. Hawes.

Old Tabby took her kits to walk;
They were a pretty show:
Young Mustard Pot, and Old King Cole,
And little Spit o' Snow.
"If dogs we meet," said mother Puss,
"See, hump your back and spit!"
Exactly as his mother did,
Did every little kit.

They strolled about the poultry yard;
They peeped in every pen,
For Tabby knew the gander'd gone
To swim with goslings ten.
They saw the horses and the cows;
They saw the chicks at play,
And then came back upon the lawn,
To frolic in the hay.

But there, dear me, a dog they spied—
Each furry back went high,
And "s' s' t" each kitten said,
As fierce as he could cry.
"Meow, meow," laughed mother Cat;
"Why get in such a fright?
That's Baby's little wooden dog;
He can not bark or bite."

Then Old King Cole looked quite ashamed,
And Mustard Pot said, "Mew!"
But little Spit o' Snow, he laughed,
And then the rest laughed, too;
And when a real, live dog they saw,
They all forgot to spit,
But ran and helped him lap his milk,
Tabby and every kit. —Churchman.

THE GIRL WHO DECLINED PROMOTION.

Harriet was busily at work, and did not notice the manager until he stood beside her desk.

"Good morning, Miss Blanchard," he said. "I have come to make what I hope will be a pleasing announcement to you. We have been watching your work for the past few months ,and you have been so faithful and efficient that we think you deserve promotion. You are rather young for the place, but you certainly have demonstrated that you have the faculty of leadership, and we shall put you at the head of Room 16."

Harriet was silent. There was no sign of exultation in her expression.

"Why, how is this, Miss Blanchard? You actually look disappointed."

"Oh, no, Mr. Ingram. I'm proud and happy to hear you say that I have been efficient and faithful, because that is just what I have tried to be. But about the promotion, Mr. Ingram, really, I—i'd rather not take it."

"Not take it!" For once the manager was startled into an exclamation. "Why, I supposed that was what made you work so hard in the position where you are."

"Not at all, Mr. Ingram." Harriet spoke very earnestly now. "I was only doing my best to fill this place, without reference to any other. I like this place; I am satisfied to remain in it, and I—I think I can be more useful to the firm here than anywhere else. If I'm doing well here," Harriet smiled quietly, "it wouldn't be any disadvantage to have me remain here, would it?"

The manager rumpled his hair and went away thinking hard. By and by he came back again and said: "Miss Blanchard, we are more than glad to have you keep this place, now that we know that you are not working to get out of it. And we shall try to pay you a salary equal to the service that you render to the firm."

This little story illustrates a new but rapidly growing idea in regard to business life and success. In the review of a great army, what is it that thrills the beholder? It is the rank and file, not the officers; the thousands and thousands of men, standing in their own places, ready to do their full duty. And the time is soon coming when that same idea is going to be the inspiration of all departments of life—home, business, social and religious. The girl of the future is not going to think all the time, "How can I get out of this? How can I get ahead of others?" but "How can I do my very best, unless a clear call comes to leave it, in the place where I am?" And the girls of today may be sure that along that way lies not only the most helpful and successful service, but the surest returns of peace and happiness.—Girl's World.

FAMOUS ARTISTS.

About the year 1607, in the city of Leyden, was born Holland's greatest painter, and one of the greatest of the world. Rembrandt van Ryn (of the Rhine), as he sometimes signed himself, in remembrance of his birthplace, was the son of a miller, and he spent his early years in one of those mills which are so characteristic of the Dutch. Rembrandt lived in the golden age of Holland just after she had thrown off the Spanish yoke, and was rejoicing in a new life of her own. He was an untiring worker, and very much absorbed in his work. He painted the things he knew, the people he saw every day; the members of the little household at the mills, not forgetting the one model who would always sit to him in the looking glass. Another favorite model was his mother, whose face is almost as familiar to us as his own. In 1631 Rembrandt went to live in Amsterdam. The busy seaport town brought him new models to study, and he soon became famous as a portrait painter. As an etcher he stands in the very front rank, making his black lines convey the effect of light and shade, cloud and sunshine, as he does with brush and color. For a time Rembrandt was very popular, and pupils and sitters flocked to the house in Amsterdam; but his popularity was short lived. Perhaps he was too original and imaginative for his very practical countrymen. There came money difficulties. Times were bad, and probably the painter was extravagant. The day came when he was bankrupt, with old age coming upon him. He lived where and how he could, indebted to a few faithful friends for commissions which kept him from staryation. Forgotten and neglected, he died in the year 1669, and there is a simple notice in the church register concerning the man whose pictures are now amongst the wonders of the world, "Died, Tuesday, October 8th, Rembrandt van Ryn, painter."

Sir Joshua Reynolds was the cultivated, scholarly gentleman to whom all London society sat for their portraits. He was an artist from his boyish days, when his father, the master of a Grammar School, wrote across a pen-and-ink sketch in his son's exercise book, "Drawn by Joshua in school out of pure idleness." Still the schoolmaster saw that the boy's talent ought to be cultivated, and Joshua was sent to London, to study art under the painter Hudson. He was fortunate in making the acquaintance of the future Admiral Keppel, who, in the year 1749, took the young man for a cruise in the Mediterranean. Reynolds returned by way of Rome, Florence and Venice, and made his first acquaintance with the works of Italian artists. He worked and studied very hard, and from the works of Raphael, Michel Angelo and the Venetian masters learned much of value. Once more in London, his portraits became the rage. His home was the resort of many of the famous people of the day, Dr. Johnson, Garrick and Goldsmith being among the number. When, in 1768, the Royal Academy was founded, Sir Joshua became its first president. In 1789 he partially lost his sight, and his working days were over. By special request he remained president of the Academy until his death in 1792. Goldsmith, in a joke many years before Sir Joshua died, wrote an epitaph which describes the feelings of those who knew him best:

"Here Reynolds is laid, and, to tell you my mind,
He has not left a wiser or better behind.
His pencil was striking, resistless and grand,
His manners were gentle, compliant and bland;
Still born to improve us in every part
His pencil our faces, his manners our hearts."

WORK.

Let me but do my work from day to day,
In field or forest, at the desk or loom,
In roaring market-place or tranquil room;
Let me but find it in my heart to say,
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray,
"This is my work; my blessing, not my doom;
Of all who live, I am the one by whom
This work can best be done in the right way."

Then shall I see it not too great, nor small,
To suit my spirit and to prove my powers;
Then shall I cheerful greet the laboring hours,
And cheerful turn, when the long shadows fall
At eventide, to play and love and rest,
Because I know for me my work is best.

NEEDED—A PROPHET.

The religious world needs to-day a prophet after the order of Paul, or Luther, or Wesley—they were, indeed, powerful "forth-tellers" of the will of God. They could proclaim the will of God because they knew what that will was, and they had power because advocacy of divine truth was a passion with them. In some respects, their early periods were very similar—they all passed through soul-trying experiences before they discovered their missions in life—and their work, based upon those experiences, abides to this good day. But the world needs another voice such as was theirs—a voice with the accents of divine authority, with the power to turn the currents of human history. We do not know of any such voice that is being lifted up to-day.

It may he that this is not an age for prophets. It may he that the world has swung so far over to the rationalistic and materialistic view of life that spiritual values are obscured by the mass of things that seem to be worth so much more—that spiritual voices are drowned out by the roar of traffic in the streets and in the marts of trade. It may be that men who, otherwise, might speak, have been overwhelmed by the raucous screaming in the market places and have been afraid to lift their voices in protest and in warning; or it may be that they have spoken and have not been heard above the tumult of a pleasure-seeking, money-mad generation.

We do not wish to appear to be pessimistic when we say that there seems to be too much of the spirit of conformity in the land. Generations have passed since there has been a distinct, powerful, organized movement of protest against the accumulated tendencies of modern life toward an easy acquiescence in the state of things as they are. We are too prone to be swept along by the current that runs, in smooth-worn channels through verdant landscapes, out into the ocean where lies the land of the Lotus-Eaters. The call of the crowd, "Come and go with us," falls entrancingly upon our ears, and we shout our answer and hurry along lest we be counted with those who linger in the rear. We sometimes seem to think that movement is progress, no matter what the direction.

We need a prophet—God grant that he may soon arise. We do not know what his message will be, else we would begin to proclaim it as his forerunner; but he will have a message that will smash upon our ears with the impact of a shell from a big gun, and that will stir our hearts and consciences like martial music in the camp and the roar of artillery along the battlefront. We are becoming weary of pitiful platitudes that tell us nothing at all, and that help us even less. We want a man with an absorbing passion in his soul: the music of the thunder will be in his tones, and the glory of the lightning will blaze in his eyes. The world will hear him, not because it may, but because it must.

HOW TO REPORT CENTENARY FUNDS AT CONFERENCE.

It is understood that a separate column will be given in the financial tables of the Conference Journals to show what has been collected on the Centenary pledges. In order that this column may show accurately what has been raised by each pastoral charge, it is very necessary that the pastors' reports be made out in such way as to show unmistakably the correct figures.

In order that there may be no mistakes, the Centenary Treasurer, Mr. Jno. E. Edgerton, has issued the following instructions: On Table III of the Statistical Report, on one of the lines beginning "For" at the bottom of the table, write the word, "Centenary;" then learn from the local church Centenary treasurer what amount has been paid in on the Centenary pledges, and insert this amount in the corresponding column. These figures should show only the amount PAID IN, not the amount subscribed. They should NOT include the amount that has been paid by Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues; these items should appear on the Sunday school and League page of the report blank.

Careful attention to these directions will insure each charge's receiving full credit for what it has done in the Centenary campaign.

INTENSIVE CULTIVATION.

We are firmly of the opinion that the time has come for us, as individuals and as a church, to devote some time to the intensive cultivation, in a spiritual way, of the fields in which we are appointed to labor. It is hard to find a single community in which the spiritual resources of the people have received anything like their full development. We find much of organized activities, and there are many signs of a kind of superficial stirring of the ground where hountiful crops ought to be growing; hut too often the surface has merely been scratched, and the crop is altogether too "spotted."

It is possible that we are assuming too much with regard to the spiritual attainments of the members of the church and of the children who are growing up in the Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues. One of the distinctive doctrines of Methodism is that of regeneration—that mysterious but clearly defined process which takes place when we "pass from death unto life." If experience counts for anything, we know that regeneration is not a theory but a fact—a fact that is as clear to our consciousness as the fact that we are physically alive. Yet it is sadly true that many of our people cannot converse in the terms of the New Birth, and that they act as strangers in the company of those who are living the life "hid with Christ in God." They are sincere in their desire to be saved from their sins, and they are ready to be instructed in the way that will lead them "into the glorious liberty of the children of God;" but they know in their hearts that they have not entered into it. What an opportunity for the faithful minister of the Gospel!

It may not be that prayer is a "lost art" in the private devotional life of our people, but our own observation leads us to believe that the generation of those who will pray in public is rapidly passing away. There are usually a few men in every congregation, and a few godly women, who will take this part in the services of the church; but there are scores who ought to be willing to do it—and they probably could be brought to that point if they were considerately and patiently and lovingly dealt with from the beginning of their religious experience. We are in danger of training our people to think that ours is a sacerdotal ministry more than it really is, and in doing so we shall deprive them of the privilege of having a vital part in the service of worship. Unless our young men and young women learn to pray in public, the time will come when the minister will be practically alone in the conduct of every part of the distinctively religious work of the church. One year of intensive work on the part of all our preachers ought to add at least a thousand men to the number of those who will lead the congregation in prayer.

It is by this intensive work, too, that the ranks of the ministry can best be recruited. We believe in the divine call to the work of preaching the Gospel, and we believe that the Holy Spirit is not conditioned by time or place or circumstance; but God still works through human agents as he has in the past, and he oftentimes depends upon us to carry to the individual the message of duty and opportunity and privilege that he would have him hear. We cannot call a young man into the ministry ourselves, but we may get him to listen to the call of God, or interpret that call to him after he has heard it. Surely God has not quit calling—why, then, are so few responding to that call?

We have enlarged our borders and our fields are constantly widening. Let us do intensively our work as faithfully as we have done it extensively.

THE OCTOBER REVIEW.

The October number of the Methodist Quarterly Review has an attractive table of contents, and the articles themselves, so far as we have been able to read them, measure up to the expectations raised by their titles. Of special interest at the present time are the articles, "What the World Is Facing," by the Editor; "Methodism Facing the New Era," by Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon; and the first article in the Editor's Table, "The Status of Unification." We suppose all our preachers read the Review regularly—if they do not, they should "get the habit" as soon as possible; thousands of our laymen ought to read it also.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"We have had a great year and are ready for Conference," writes Rev. J. W. Raper, of Kilmichael, Miss.

Rev. and Mrs. J. O. Ware, of Fayette, Miss., are happy over the arrival of a baby boy in their home. Blessings upon the little one!

Rev. C. A. Parks, our popular and efficient pastor at Ackerman, Miss., is closing a year's work that has been successful in every respect. He will go to Conference with a good report.

Splendid meetings have recently been held at Central Church, Meridian, Miss., where Rev. H. B. Watkins is pastor, and at East End, in the same city, where Rev. J. L. Sells is pastor.

Announcement has been made that the price of the Christian Observer, an organ of the Presbyterian Church published at Louisville, Ky., has been advanced from $2.50 to $3 a year.

We learn from a press dispatch that Rev. Isaac L. Peebles has been appointed to serve the Poplar Springs Church, Meridian, Miss., until Conference, in place of Rev. B. L. Sutherland, recently transferred to the Pacific Conference.

Rev. R. T. Ware, pastor at Mooringsport, La., has just closed a fine meeting in which he was assisted by Rev. F. R. Power, of Shreveport. There were fifteen additions to the membership of the church, and nine children were baptized.

We learn from a press dispatch that Dr. Wm. R. Bourne, president of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., is one of the lecturers at the Training School of the Sunday School Board now being held at Court Street Church, Montgomery, Ala.

Rev. J. D. Newsom, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, has been confined to his bed for the past two months at his home in Meridian, Miss. We sincerely pray that he may have sustaining grace in his affliction.

Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, recently discharged from service as a chaplain in the army, assisted Rev. C. C. Wier in a good meeting at Algiers last week. We acknowledge the honor of a call from Brother and Sister Rousseaux on last Saturday.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Ruleville Station, North Mississippi Conference, adopted strong resolutions in appreciation of the work of the presiding elder, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, who is completing his fourth year on the Winona District.

Our First Church at Gulfport, Miss., has been bereaved by the death of one of its faithful official members, Mr. S. P. Smith. He passed away last Friday night, and was buried on Sunday afternoon.

Dr. J. A. Burrow, the gifted editor of the Midland Methodist, who has been serving our church at Cleveland, Tenn., as pastor along with his editorial work, will hereafter devote his entire time to the work of the paper. He will make his home in Nashville.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Guntown and Baldwyn charge, North Mississippi Conference, adopted strong resolutions in appreciation of the services of Rev. T. H. Dorsey, who is completing his fourth year as presiding elder of the Corinth District.

Dr. C. M. Chapman, our accomplished pastor at Waynesboro, Miss., is taking great interest in various community welfare movements. He is at present helping to create sentiment in favor of securing a trained nurse for the promotion of better health conditions throughout the county.

A personal note from Rev. M. G. Jenkins, an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, who is now living in San Antonio, Texas, informs us that he is in a feebie state of health and, therefore, will probably be unable to attend the approaching session of the Conference.

Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, Louisiana Conference, is conducting a "whirlwind" round of quarterly conferences in winding up the year's work. He is holding conferences and preaching every day. This has been the best year of his life, he writes, and he is happy. Well may he be.

Rev. D. L. Griffin, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, but now State missionary for the American Sunday School Union, reports a busy year in his work. He has traveled more than 11,000 miles, distributed much good literature, raised a considerable sum of money, and held many fruitful religious services.

A remarkable revival was brought to a close in Sardis, Miss., on October 12. Rev. Charlie D. Tillman, of Atlanta, Ga., assisted the pastor, Rev. E. G. Mohler. There were thirteen accessions to the membership of the church, and the whole community was spiritually helped. Brother Mohler will have a good report at Conference.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., unanimously adopted resolutions expressing high appreciation of the work of the presiding elder, Rev. W. B. Jones, and of the pastor, Rev. W. A. Terry. Brother Terry is closing his fourth year at this church, which has undergone marked development during his pasorate.

A most helpful series of revival services was brought to a close at Carrollton Avenue Church, this city, on last Sunday night. The preaching was done by Rev. F. M. Freeman, pastor of Parker Memorial. Rev. Jno. F. Foster, the pastor of Carrollton Avenue, will be able to present a fine report at the approaching session of the Annual Conference at Ruston.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer reports that Rev. A. Inman Townsley preached two powerful sermons last Sunday to large congregations at old Felicity Church, where a revival meeting is in progress. The services will continue throughout this week, and there is every indication of splendid success in the saving of souls and the strengthening of the membership of the church.

The fourth quarterly conference for the Lintonia charge, Mississippi Conference, will be held at Dover on Sunday, November 9. Rev. J. M. Morse, the presiding elder, will preach, morning and afternoon. The Millsaps College quartet will sing at both services. The pastor, Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, has issued a cordial invitation to all who may be able to do so, to attend.

The fourth quarterly conference for the Bernice charge, Louisiana Conference, was held on October 18. The reports were remarkably good. The salaries of the pastor and the presiding elder have been more than paid, the Conference collections have been secured in full, and most of the first year's quota of the Centenary pledge has been paid. Rev. W. A. Mangum is the happy pastor.

Rev. B. L. Sutherland, formerly pastor of the Poplar Springs Church, Meridian, Miss., has been transferred to the Pacific Conference and stationed at Healdsburg, California. He will be greatly missed by his Mississippi brethren. He and his family passed through New Orleans last Tuesday on their way to their new field of labor. We greatly enjoyed a short visit from Brother Sutherland.

The Eighth International Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement will be held at Des Moines, Iowa, beginning Wednesday afternoon, December 31, 1919, and closing Sunday night, January 4, 1920. These Conventions are held but once in each student generation—that is, once every four years—and constitute the largest and most influential gatherings of the students of North America.

A note from Rev. Jas. G. Galloway, of Forest, Miss., brings the sad news of the sudden death of Mrs. D. C. Langford at her home in Morton, Miss., on the night of October 21. She was the widow of Rev. D. C. Langford, who was, for many years, an efficient member of the Mississippi Conference. A good woman has gone to her reward. Our church at Morton has suffered a great loss. We extend sincere sympathy to those who are in sorrow.

Our church at Homer, La., of which Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., is pastor, will have a fine report at Conference. At the fourth quarterly conference, held on Thursday of last week, the stewards reported that every assessment had been raised in full, with an excess. The total amount raised by this church this year is $8810.81. Extensive repairs have recently been made on the parsonage, which have added greatly to its convenience as a home for the preacher.

Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, Mississippi Conference, writes that he may need some supplies for works within that district for next year. He would prefer young men with fair education and some experience who expect later to enter the itinerancy. Those who may be interested in the matter are invited to write to Brother Sharbrough at Port Gibson, Miss., before the meeting of the Mississippi Annual Conference, November 26.

One of the beautiful incidents in connection with the laying of the corner-stone of the Winnfield Methodist Church, next Sunday, at Winnfield, La., is the fact that Rev. J. F. Wynn, the oldest living member of the Louisiana Conference, has received a special invitation to be present. Brother Wynn is considered the father of Methodism in Winnfield and in Winn Parish. He traveled that circuit on horseback many years ago, when the preaching places were twenty-five and thirty miles apart.

Rev. W. S. Shipman, our pastor at Ruleville, Miss., has made a remarkable record in his Conference. In making out his twenty-seventh report, he states that he has never failed to secure every cent of the assessments on his charge, no matter what the grade of the appointment was. He has had an unusually good year in his present charge. One of the best parsonages in the Conference has just been completed. There is every indication that the pastor's salary will be substantially increased next year.

Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., celebrated "Home Coming Day" on last Sunday. Judge W. C. Barnette delivered the address of welcome in the Sunday school, and Capt. W. W. Moore, of Centenary College, made the response in behalf of the young men who were in military service. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Drake, preached appropriate sermons both morning and evening. A large display advertisement announced the services in the local papers. Noel Memorial is one of the leading churches of Louisiana Methodism.

Rev. H. S. Johns, chaplain of the Louisiana State Penitentiary, and Rev. J. L. Sutton, superintendent of the Destitute Orphan Boys' Home, New Orleans, attended the recent meeting of the American Prison Congress in New York, and both were honored by being given positions of responsibility in connection with the work of the Congress. Brother Johns was placed on the committee on probation and parole, and Brother Sutton was made a member of the Board of Directors. Both are members of the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Lieutenant Harold J. Warlick was married to Miss Ward McWilliams, of Stock Bridge, Ga., at the residence of Congressman and Mrs. J. B. Aswell, in Washington, D. C., on October 11. The ceremony was witnessed by a distinguished company, including Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, Representatives Wilson, of Louisiana, and Blackmon, of Georgia, and Col. J. S. Chambers, of the War Department. Dr. Aswell was "best man" for the groom. Lieutenant Warlick, who is a son of Rev. T. J. Warlick, of Columbia, La., has been assigned to accompany the American commission to Silesia as the representive of the Quartermaster Department. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to him and his bride.

The man with the rope cannot help the man at the bottom of the well if he will not help himself. He can lower the rope; he can tell him what to do; he can draw him out if he will obey instructions. But if he will not use his hands, all the men at the mouth of the well cannot save him God has provided for our rescue. He has let down the rope. He stands waiting, ready, able to save; but if we will not do our part, there is no help for us. We must perish in our sins.—United Presbyterian.

IS CHRISTIANITY A NECESSITY?

By Rev. C. B. Powell.

Christianity is a deep necessity to the human heart. It is life to the soul. it also verifies or disapproves itself to the degree in which it is felt, or answers to the spiritual nature and wants of the individual.

It does not come forward as a new philosophy. It professes to be in accord with reason. It claims to rest upon a rational conception of the universal system, of which man is a component part. It also founds its title on more practical grounds. It appeals immediately to the conscience and affections, and cails for the rectification of the will. It promises to minister to the necessities of all human hearts, to men of the most excellent intelligence, and to minds of the humblest cast. It will be understood in the degree in which it is felt. If an experience is small, it will be felt but little, for the experience and feeling are to be drawn from the heart.

There is in the human heart a profound need for God. This grows out of the fact that we are not only finite, but consciously finite and not sufficient for ourselves. At this point, Christianity is a necessity. In reality the hunger for God, whether it be recognized or not, is deeper in the human heart than any want of nature. Its very vagueness has the effect of sending man off in pursuit of finite objects, which are sought for the sake of filling the void. Now is wealth, now is fame, now is pleasure, and many other so-called earthly goods, but when they are gained, disappointment still ensues, the void within is still not filled. Here, again, Christianity is a necessity.

In childhood, we find the world into which life is opening sufficient; we do not tire of its novelty; we care nothing about it; the future stretches before us with a great attraction; the charm of mystery is spread over it. But when we emerge out of immaturity, there will arise within us a sense of unsatisfaction.

There is also a reaching out for something larger than human love can provide. The things that will satisfy the mind of the child will not satisfy the full grown man. Study, travel, search for happiness, much as they do drive away the temporary feelings of want, they fail to pacify. A thirst, slaked for to-day, revives on the morrow, and there is a cry in the human soul, even if not heard by the soul itself, to which the world makes no response.

Not only is he without God, but apart from Him, and in this condition man finds himself. Christianity is a necessity, and adapted to his condition. The soul needs help from within, that it may subdue the principles of sin without. This subduing process can go on only with an experience of a Christian life. Certainly, then, is Christianity a necessity.

And, at last, there approaches every household, and every individual, the dark shadow of death, and at this remote point is the great need of Christianity.

MEETING OF LOUISIANA CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE CABINET.

The Louisiana Conference Epworth League Cabinet met for their annual fall cabinet meeting at Alexandria, La., on Saturday, October 11. The members of the cabinet present were: Jas. B. Grambling, of Shreveport, President; Mr. Edgar Cayard, of New Orleans, Vice President; Miss Iva Hawthorn, of Shreveport, Secretary; Miss Grace Cook, of Monroe, Treasurer; Miss Myra Price, of Lake Charles, Era Agent; Rev. W. E. Thomas, of New Orleans, President Annual Conference Board. The following District Secretaries were present: Misses Inez Manchester, Jena; Juanita McLean, Baton Rouge; Mabel Dobbertine, Lake Charles; Robina Vaught, New Orleans; Pauline Wynn, Ruston; Edith Pierce, Marthaville.

The meeting was of great interest from the opening until the close, many definite plans being made for the winter, and for the second Annual Assembly, to be held at Mansfield next June.

One of the very interesting and important features of the meeting was the report of the Missionary Department concerning the Africa Special for this year.

The quota for the Louisiana Leagues was $1,520, which was raised by the Assembly last June to $1,700. To the present time the following report is in hand.

Alexandria District — quota, $100; raised, $75.

Baton Rouge District—quota, $200; raised, $160.

Lafayette District — quota, $100; raised, $193.

Monroe District — quota, $100; raised, $23.

New Orleans District—quota, $500; raised, $457.75.

Ruston District— quota, $200; raised, $246.03.

Shreveport District—quota, $500; raised, $536.41.

The total amount raised is $1,673 19.

There are a number of Leagues in the State that have not yet been heard from. If your League is not represented in this list, notify the State President at once of the amount your chapter pledged; if you have raised more than you are credited with, notify the President and he will correct it.

There were eleven Leagues in the State that went over their quota. The Noel Memorial League holds the record for the largest gift, the Senior League giving $163 and the Junior, with an increase of 400 per cent, giving $55.40.

A large part of this amount was reported as paid in by Miss Cook, of Monroe, who is the treasurer, although she reported only one League in the State as having paid its State dues. The State dues are $2.50 per year for every Senior Chapter, and $1.25 for every Junior or Intermediate Chapter, and this is due now.

Our State organization is planning great things this year.

WOMAN'S NERVES MADE STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Winona, Minn.—"I suffered for more than a year from nervousness, and was so bad I could not rest at night—would lie awake and get so nervous I would have to get up and walk around and in the morning would be all tired out. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it. My nervousness soon left me. I sleep well and feel fine in the morning and able to do my work. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make weak nerves strong."—Mrs. ALBERT SULTZE, 603 Olmstead St., Winona, Minn.

How often do we hear the expression among women, "I am so nervous, I cannot sleep," or "it seems as though I should fly." Such women should profit by Mrs. Sultze's experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such serious conditions as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, dizziness, and nervous prostration or women, and is now considered the standard remedy for such ailments.

Count Fifty! Pains and Neuralgia Gone

Instant relief! Rub this nerve torture and misery right out with "St. Jacobs Liniment."

Rub this soothing, penetrating liniment right into the sore, inflamed nerves, and like magic—neuralgia disappears. "St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain. It is a harmless "neuralgia relief" which doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

Don't suffer! It's so needless. Get a small trial bottle from any drug store and gently rub the "aching nerves" and in just a moment you will be absolutely free from pain and suffering.

No difference whether your pain or neuralgia is in the face, head or any part of the body, you get instant relief with this old-time, honest pain destroyer—it can not injure.—Adv.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

In view of the fact that a large number of our schools failed to observe Sunday School day this year, the Sunday School Board requests the preachers and superintendents to ask each school for an offering to cover the expense of the programs that were sent out and to further aid in extending the work of religious education in our Conference. We feel sure our men will not fail us in this urgent call.

The Centenary money raised by the Sunday schools at the monthly missionary meeting should be sent to J. E. Edgerton, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Mr. J. J. Stowe has resigned as treasurer. Our Sunday schools will not fail to meet their pledges to the cause of Christ. Money pledged to a cause cannot be diverted to other objects, however worthy, without injury to the conscience of those in charge of such money.

Paragraph 327 of the Discipline requires a report from the preacher in charge to the Sunday School Board. A post card will be mailed to each preacher for this report. The information is needed by the Board that it may know where help is most desired. No thoughtful man can afford to neglect this important matter. A list of the best reports will be published in the Advocate.

Our Conference has been asked to secure 372 new subscribers to the Church School, not for the sake of the periodical, but that our teachers may receive the best instruction in religious education. Every means must be used to perfect the education of all our teachers; for in a large measure the kingdom of God must come through the teaching of Christ to the present generation. Would that we could realize the truth of the prophet's statement, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."

Well, what next? The biggest thing yet. Beginning November 1st, the Sunday school forces in the entire church will begin a campaign for new members and continue until the last person is reached. This is our first step in the evangelistic campaign. Let me say, this organized effort to win souls to Christ will be what we make it, no more, no less. The object in bringing these thousands of young people into the Sunday school is to win them to Christ and train them up in his service. Is such an objective worthy of our thoughts and efforts and prayer? Who will say, "Here am I, send me?"

SOME THINGS UNCLE BILLY SAID AT THE TEACHERS' MEETING.

"I think our school ough' to buy some books to help our teachers sharpen their intellec's. I've noticed th't a dull plane leaves bad places in the board it's used on, an' a dull saw don't cut ev'nly."

"Th' diff'rence between some pieces of wood, chunks of iron an' scraps of other things, an' a buggy is organization. I'm 'fraid some of our Sunday schools is mostly pieces an' chunks an' scraps."

"I noticed my nephew larnt a heap more 'bout square dealin' an' respect for the rights of others after he joined the baseball team his Sunday school teacher was manager of."

HIGH COMMENDATION.

Dear Brother Carley: Allow me please to write a line or so of appreciation of the splendid work being done by Brother R. H. B. Gladney, our Sunday School Field Secretary. Brother Gladney is doing fundamental work, a needed work—a vital work. He is going all the time into the "byways and hedges," into the nooks and crooks of our Conference, teaching, teaching, teaching. His soul is fired. He is in dead earnest. The lack of co-operation on the part of the pastor, small crowds, bad weather and disappointments seem not to lessen his pace or cool his ardor. He is in every sense of the word laying himself out for the extension of God's kingdom. Wherever he goes he leaves tracks and tracts (feet and Sunday school). They know he has been to the place. At each place he preaches, teaches, reproves, rebukes, prays, organizes, scatters leaflets, tracts and Sunday school literature, and sells books. Something is doing all the time. He is one of the most indefatigable workers I have ever known. He shames you while, at the same time, it is an inspiration to have him with you. He is a veritable dynamo. Earnestness and enthusiasm are oozing out of every pore. A mighty work this man of God is doing. I love him and thoroughly appreciate the fine service he is rendering his church—thus this short communication.

E. G. MOHLER.

Sardis, Miss., Oct. 14, 1919.

WHO IS "MR. SMITH?"

The Smiths still lead in the Boston City Directory, but there is one "Mr. Smith" in whom we are all more interested than in all the rest of them combined, because he is evidently not of the Smiths. Henry F. Durant, who gave Wellesley College to the world, was a "Smith," a real native Smith, and changed his name because it was currently reported in his lifetime that he said: "No one could be adequately recognized in law by the name of Smith."

Now, a man, or woman, who has already given Massachusetts Institute of Technology several millions, gives $4,000,000 more and always under the tantalizing name of "Mr. Smith." Who is "Mr. Smith?"—Journal Education.

GETS 28 EGGS A DAY NOW, FROM 34 HENS

Chas. C. White, Well-Known Breeder, Tells How. Costs Nothing to Try.

"I gave Don Sung to 34 utility Buff Orpingtons and the egg yield increased from 7 to 28 a day. Don Sung is a wonder and I am now giving it to all my hens regularly."—Chas. C. White, Manager Cherry Hill Farm, Flackville, Ind.

Mr. White is the well known breeder and exhibitor. He wrote the above letter in December, after his test had shown a gain of 21 eggs a day from 34 hens. We will make you the same offer we made him. Here it is:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She Mixed Sulphur with it to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

THE DEPARTMENT OF ARCHITECTURE.

By Rev. J. A. Baylor, Architectural Secretary.

The Department of Arehitecture was organized in November, 1917, for the purpose of securing the eonstruetion of church buildings adapted to modern Sunday sehool and church work. There was a genera feeling that the Board of Church Extension should in some way prescribe the plans for buildings erected by its aid, as thoso who received Church Extension Funds had often failed to reallze all the bonefit intended beeause of inadequate or out-of-date plans. Some specific alms were:

(1) To give out to competent and interested arehitcets throughout our bounds the information necessary to enable them to adapt their plans to the necds of the church.

(2) To seeure wherever possible the intelligent co-operation of these architects in an improved building programme.

(3) To direet pastors and building committees to the architects prepared to give them the best service.

(4) To supply to building eommittees throughout the ehureh suggestions as to plans for churehes and parsonages, advice as to building eontracts, information as to chureh furniture and equipment, and coneerning church problems generally.

(5) To prepare plans and specifieations for ehurches and parsonages when called upon for such service, or when such service eannot be secured elsewhere.

The Importance of Securing Architectural Service.

It is of the highest importance that eompetent architeetural serviee bo seeured for every building enterprise, even the smallest. A good arehiteet will always save the building committee far more than the amount of his commission, by the selection of the best materials to be used, by the elimination of waste in building, and by his knowledge of good construction.

Trying to get along without an arehitect is false economy. The proof of this statement is painfully evident on every side. In going about the country all too frequently buildings are seen with bulging walls due to improper roof construction, foundations giving way, cracked walls, leaning ehimneys, leaking roofs, poor acoustics, etc. On a recent trip the writer preached in a church rivaling in its departure from the perpendieular, the famous Leaning Tower of Pisa. On the same trip he saw two or three churches actually falling down from poor construction.

In addition to all this, there is the increased attractiveness secured by consulting the taste of the architect. Even the untrained eye can see at a glance the differenee betwcen the building designed by an architect and the one that is thrown together by rule of thumb.

What is included in real Architectural Service.

(1) Real arehitectural servlee includes eomplete plans and elevations, with all neeessary detailed drawings for the construction of a particular building, with special reference to the site which it is to occupy.

(2) Specifieations covering every part of the work, and ealling for the very best materials according to the judgment of the arehitect, that it is possible to use within the prescribed limits of eost.

(3) A complete and aeeurate estimate of cost, based upon the actual quantities of material neeessary to ereet the building, at present market priees.

(4) If called for, eomplete bills of materials, such as lumber, brick, cement, etc.

(5) All necessary advice as to purchase of materials, letting of contract, fixing of payments to eontractor, furnishing, equipment, etc.; also supervision of the work of construction while in progress by the architect or his representative, in order to secure the faithful execution of the plans.

It can readily be seeu that there is a vast difference between this kind of service and so-ealled "plans" sent out by individuals, magazines and building companies, which are nothing more than blueprint reproductions of stock plans, with no adaptation to any particular site, without reliable estimate, or real architectural service.

The standard seale of charges for arehitectural service for plans and specifications, without personal supervision of the work by the architect, is from 3 to 4 per cent of the estimated cost of the building. When personal supervision is given, the charges are from 6 to 7 per cent of estimated cost, with extra charge for traveling expenses. It is usual for buildings costing $10,000 or less to charge a somewhat higher commission than the above.

Terms on which Architectural Service is Suppiled by the Board.

A great deal of service is rendered free of charge, such as giving information concerning the purchase of church furniture and equipment of every kind, advice as to remedying defects in buildings, furnishing forms for eontracts, and suggestive plans for churches and parsonages.

Our suggestive ehureh and parsonage plans are printed in folder forms, so that any required number may be bound together. Eaeh folder shows a cut of the eompleted building, with floor plans, and has a brief deseription of the plan, and gives the approximate estimate of eost.

When working plans and specifications are ealled for, the eharges are in keeping with the standard seale already given, it would not be fair to the architects who generously eo-operate with us to violate their established praetiees, and experienee has shown that beeause of the numerous small building enterprises neeessarily handled in this department, these eharges seareely eover the eost of the service rendered. Churches that are able to do so will not object to paying for plans, and in the case of churches unable to pay for arehiteetural service, the Board is willing to cover this eost wholly or in part by donation or loan.

Advantages of Securing Plans from the Board of Church Extension.

(1) One great advantage of seeuring plans from the Board, or from architeets who co-operate with it, is that sueh plans are earefully adapted to the standards fixed by our Church leaders for Sunday-school work and Church activities of every kind.

(2) In case it becomes necessary to call upon the Board for aid, it is a distinct advantage to have plans already approved by the Board, copies of which are on file in the Architectural Department.

(3) It is in many cases possible where plans and specifications are secured from the Board to arrange for eompetent local supervision of construction at small cost, thus reducing the eost of architectural service about one-half.

(4) In securing plans and architectural service from the Board we are helping ourselves. All the income from this department goes back into the funds of the Board.

PASTOR'S FOURTH YEAR ON THE BOGUE CHITTO AND NORFIELD CHARGE.

This has been a very attentive people to their pastor these four years. There are people at each of these places who deserve to be mentioned individually as well as collectively.

At Bogue Chitto, because of the moving of the large milling interests—having used all the available timber—many families have moved and the church and Sunday school interests have been weakened in numbers. We hope this is only temporary, as the good roads are here and that fact is causing the people to look to the establishing of new industries. This great Southern Highway passes just in front of our parsonage and each of our two churches, and the churches are only two miles apart. Rumor credits Brother B. E. Brister, our leading layman on the charge, for getting the good roads to come this way.

The pastor held his own meeting at Bogue Chitto, as his help was unable to come. We believe God was with us and both pastor and people were more strongly united in Christian love and appreciation. We believe the messages reached hearts and did them good. A closed envelope was handed the pastor at the last service by that devout Christian woman, Mrs. B. E. Brister. The contents of that envelope showed by the generous gift therein that there were warm hearts and thoughtful appreciation among our members at Bogue Chitto. Brother Hugh Brister (banker) and Marvin Thompson, a little boy, were the only two whom the pastor caught in their donations, but he accuses Brother and Sister B. E. Brister of leading a number of others into giving their pastor this pleasant surprise.

Will write you about Norfield later. My time will be out here at Conference, but tell Brother J. T. Leggett, the presiding elder, and Bishop Kilgo to send this charge the best preacher they can find.

WALDO W. MOORE,
Preacher in Charge.

Black-Draught a Family Medicine

Some Kind of Stomach Trouble with Cramps and Terrible Pains Made This Oklahoma Man's Life Miserable Until Black-Draught Relieved Him.

Chickasha, Okla.—Mrs. J. W. Walker recently said this: "We use Black-Draught as a family medicine and think it is the only liver medicine made. My husband makes it up and uses it as a tonic as well as a laxative. I use it for headache, sour stomach, a full heavy feeling after meals, which I suppose is indigestion, and it certainly does me a lot of good.

My husband had some kind of stomach trouble we don't know just what. It would strike him just any time in the day and cramp or pain him just terribly bad. Someone told him how to make a tea of the Black-Draught, which he did. It did him so much good, it removed the cause and cured him. Since then we have praised the Black-Draught to our friends, and gladly do so."

Seventy years of successful use has made Thedford's Black-Draught a standard, household remedy. Every member of the family at times needs the help that Black-Draught can give in cleansing the system and preventing or relieving the troubles that come from constipation, indigestion, lazy liver, etc.

Eat Less and Take Salts for Kidneys

Take a Glass of Salts if your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Suppose It Were You!

How refreshing to be able at the end of a cold, busy, merciless day to go to a home all clean and sweet, and find first of all a mother-friend with her cheery greeting, and just over there a dining room from whose inviting tables there come the most tantalizing odors—to go in and find steaming hot dishes filled with real home-grown vegetables, beans, peas, tomatoes, corn, and saucy little dishes of sweets on the side, with now and then a slice of peach or pear "to tip off with;" how this heartens our working girls whose lives are sordid enough at best! But this cannot be; it must remain the same old hash and grits until our auxiliaries will share their store of summer cans with our Co-operative Home at Corinth. They need everything now—vegetables all gone; no more sweets.

Look in your pantry. How many cans will you give? Give the same old things that can never grow old to girls because it is like home, and then slip in a special can for a surprise at the end of some hard, trying day.

Rally Day—Results?

Let those of us who have observed Rally Day remember that all "impression without expression is worse than useless" and that if the effect of Rally Day on our work is what it should be, it will be because we try faithfully to put into practical execution the resolutions for service we were moved to make.

Especially should the presidents of auxiliaries seek to conserve the new interest aroused. New members should be put to work at once and old ones given more to do. With the great Conservation of the Centenary Program on, with the week of prayer and Bible Study Campaign approaching, there is need for every woman in every auxiliary.

The final test of the Rally Day is the result for the remainder of the year. If it was, indeed, a success as the reports from the auxiliaries observing it indicate, we shall see a steady growth numerically, financially and spiritually.

BEULAH S. BOSWELL,
Corresponding Secretary.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Supplies.

Such very nice boxes of supplies were received at St. Mark's Hall during the month of September. The auxiliaries remembering St. Mark's were: First Church, Shreveport; Amite; Mansfield; Mansfield Juniors; Shreveport Young People's; Kelthville, and Monroe.

A CALL TO PRAYER,

November 2d to 8th.

Be one of the 5,000 auxiliaries to get the benefits of this blessed season. Let every auxiliary, if possible, hold special services for 5 days during the week set apart by the Council for prayer and self-denial.

The leaders urge the observance of the Week of Prayer in the homes.

FIRST DAY.

Prayer Changes Things.

"For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith." (Mark xi. 23.)

The Centenary has brought a new epoch in our church.

Pray for the continuation of the power and spirit of the Centenary in intercession and stewardship.

SECOND DAY.

Win San Francisco for Christ.

"Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son." (John xiv: 13.)

There are more Christians in the city of Shanghai, China, than there are in San Francisco. Out of this city, prepared for the gospel message, salvation should flow to the Orient.

Pray for the evangelization of San Francisco.

THIRD DAY.

For the Healing of China.

"When he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion for them, because they were distressed and scattered as sheep not having a shepherd." (Matt. ix. 36.)

There are 350,000,000 people in China who have never yet seen a doctor. Women and little children die by the thousand because of the lack of medical attention. The infant mortality rate is between 65 per cent and 70 per cent. An adequate force of medical missionaries will be the power that will banish superstition, open the doors of the hearts of men for the gospel, and relieve the present unbearable human suffering in China.

Pray for the Church of Christ that she may awaken to this appalling need.

FOURTH DAY.

For Life Investment.

"Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest." (Matt. ix. 38.)

The highest motive in choosing a life work is that of selecting the profession or occupation where one can best serve human life.

Pray that the young people of our church may learn that God has a definite plan for each one of their lives, and pray that they may be led to seek his plan.

FIFTH DAY.

THE Children of the Wide, Wide World.

WOMEN IN CHURCH GOVERNMENT.

At the church of England synod of the diocese of Fukien, held at Foochow in February, the question of appointing women representatives on the councils of the church was considered. The burden of the speeches was to the effect that there was much to be learned from women, and that trying to get on without their advice in the councils of the church was like trying to get through daily life with one hand only. Finally the synod decided almost unanimously that women should be eligible as representatives, not only on pastorate committees and church councils, but also on the synod itself.—Church Missionary Review.

We note with interest the above article cut from the Church Missionary Review. Naturally, we would suppose that it is the right hand that has been in use. Now that women are recognized more generally in church affairs, may the tendency not be to become left-handed. Surely we would never want to see a church send more women than men as delegates to the Annual Conference.

HAVE YOU SCROFULA?

Now Said to Be as Often Acquired as Inherited.

It is generally and chiefly indicated by eruptions and sores, but in many cases it enlarges the glands of the neck, affects the internal organs, especially the lungs, and if neglected may develop into consumption.

It causes many troubles, and is aggravated by impure air, unwholesome food, bad water, too much heat or cold, and want of proper exercise.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the medicine that has been used with so much satisfaction by three generations, is wonderfully successful in the treatment of scrofula. Give it a trial.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed, take Hood's Pills,—there is nothing better for biliousness or constipation.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Adv.

FROM SHUQUALAK, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As we have just closed the greatest meeting that has been held here for a number of years, I will give you a short account of the same. We commenced on Sunday, October 5, and closed Sunday, October 12, at night. During this time our town was stirred as it has never been stirred before. The older citizens say they have never seen such a meeting in Shuqualak in which all the people, regardless of denomination, took part.

Rev. S. L. Pope came to us Saturday, October 4, and remained with us till the end. I have never had Pope with me in a meeting before, but I found him to be a man whose entire soul is in the work. His messages came from a heart full of love and reached the hearts of the people. Pope left with the love and esteem of the entire town, and they will be glad to have him come back at any time and be with them in another meeting.

Some of our very best services were held in the stores of the town for the men. In these the men would meet, and, after a song by the young ladies, Pope would preach to them for 15 minutes. One of the greatest services was held right in the streets, Saturday evening, October 11, with something like 350 people present. At the close of this service Pope had the negroes to sing "Old Time Religion." Carley, you should have heard them. It would have done your soul good as they made the streets of our town ring.

The Wisdom sisters, of Macon, Mo., were with us, and, oh, how they did sing! Those who have heard them know what a treat our little town had in having these sweet singers with us. This was the first meeting that they had been in for about two years and they certainly did enjoy it. Their hearts were hungry for the work. At times while they were singing it seemed that heaven and earth almost met. There was a sacred hush that would settle over the congregation that it was almost sacrilegious to break. They took the town off its feet when they used as their first song, "Amazing Grace!" They left here with the prayers of the entire town following them. The people of our town will never forget their sweet singing.

Doubtless the climax was reached on Sunday evening, October 12, in the children's service, when almost every man, woman and child gave their testimony. Some of our older people who had been saying they could not testify, when they saw the children giving their testimony, could stand it no longer and they gave theirs. Oh, how the children enjoyed it. I shall never forget that service.

One of the great things was the co-operation of the other churches of the town with us. You couldn't tell who was Methodist, Baptist, or Presbyterian, for we all worked together for the salvation of souls, and I often thought of the song, "Blest Be The Tie That Binds." There were 19 conversions during the meeting. Fourteen joined the Methodist Church, three the Presbyterian, and two the Baptist.

A NOTE FROM REV. W. M. McINTOSH.

Dear Brother Carley: We are just back from Arkansas, where we had a meeting of old-time power. There were over one hundred accessions to the church. We are now at home for a few days' rest and then go to the delta for a meeting in the bounds of my own Conference. This has been one of our best years.

Brother McKeown, our pastor, has just closed a splendid meeting. He was assisted by Rev. W. A. Wilson, who is very popular in Iuka. Brother Wilson will apply for admission into the North Mississippi Conference at its next session. He is a splendid preacher and will make the church a very successful pastor.

Brother McKeown is about ready for t'onference, all finances in full. The Centenary collections went away over the top and the work was done by a committee of women, with Mrs. McIntosh as leader. We have some of the finest women here I have ever known. I don't know what Iuka would do without them.

Brother McKeown is one of the most popular pastors we have ever had, and all of us would be glad to have him returned for his fourth year. As one of the members of the board, I will see to it that he is paid a better salary. Yours fraternally,

W. M. McINTOSH.

FROM EAST END, MERIDIAN.

Dear Brother Carley: Last Sunday night we closed a two weeks' revival meeting in East End. Rev. Chas. F. Weigle, of Sebring, Fla., one of our general evangelists, did the preaching. He is one of the strongest preachers I have ever heard and is safe and sane in his methods. I can most heartily commend him to any one needing a helper who will cry aloud and spare not, and yet convince all of the tender love of God. My officials pronounce this meeting one of the best East End has ever had and they ought to know. We had some sound conversions, joyous reclamations and the church was much edified.

One more month and the Conference year will close. My treasurer of the Board of Stewards says that all finances will be in full and that all back debts will also be paid. Spiritually, we have had a good year. Prayer meetings have increased in attendance and interest, the Sunday school is prospering and the Epworth Leagues are going forward. I have never had kinder or more considerate workers than I have found here in East End. Our Lord shall have all the glory. Hope to see you at Conference.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE PROBLEM SOLVED.

A statement is going the rounds to the effect that the great Dr. Spurgeon, when asked how he managed to fill his church with eager listeners, replied, in effect, that he never troubled himself about filling the church—it was his business to fill the pulpit. In considering this particular case we must, of course, take into account the remarkable personality of Spurgeon himself. But his answer probably contains the solution of one of the great problems of modern church life—how to get people to go to church. It may be that some of us are more concerned about the number of people in the pews than we are about the kind of preacher in the pulpit. A great many people still have a tendency to go to hear good preaching.

HURRY IT ALONG.

Reports from every section of the country show that there is an alarming shortage of houses. Building operations practically ceased during the war, while the population increased at its usual rate. The consequence is, hundreds of families in every city are finding it a difficult matter to secure a place which they may call "home." Even where houses are available, the rental is fixed at a figure that makes it prohibitive for all except those who have an assured income of considerable proportions. Now we read that Mr. Thomas E. Edison, the wizard of electricity, and Mr. Robert H. Ingersoll, the watch manufacturer "who made the dollar famous," have perfected a process by which eight men can construct a concrete house, complete in every detail, within ten days, at a price that would be considered reasonable even in the days of normal costs. We are not attaching too much importance to the report as it appears in the newspapers—but we hope it is true. And we hope those who are interested in developing the process as a commercial venture will hurry it along. They could do a big business in New Orleans to-morrow.

LESS NOISE, MORE WORK.

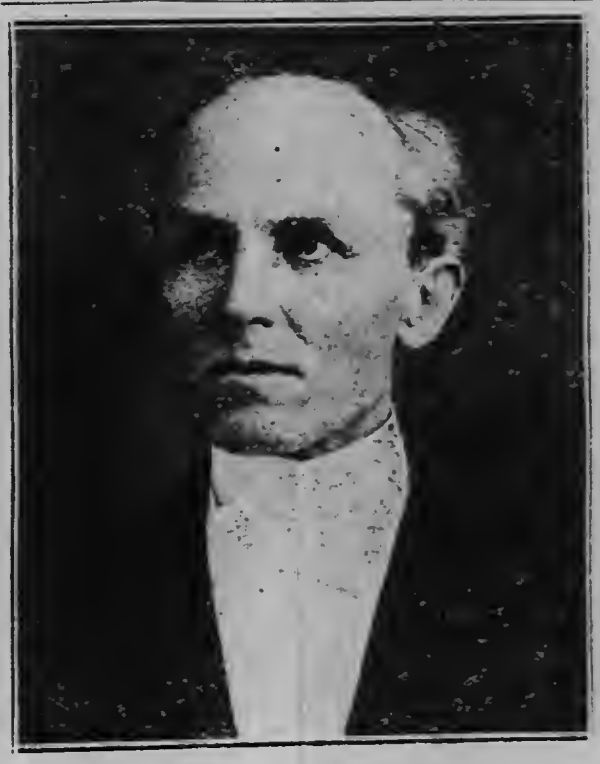
We had the unpleasant experience a few nights ago of having to listen to the whining and howling of a dog that had been confined in an outbuilding. This outbuilding had a dirt floor, and if the dog had devoted half as much energy to digging as he did to howling he would easily have found a way of escape from his prison, and the neighborhood would have been spared the horror of a hideous night. The lesson lies on the surface: If we would work instead of wail, we would very likely be able to accomplish our purposes and life would be infinitely happier for all concerned.

NO MILITARISTIC SPIRIT.

We do not believe that the American people are in sympathy with the effort on the part of a group of distinguished military authorities to commit this Government to a militaristic policy that involves universal military training and the maintenance of a large standing army. Such expressions of opinion on the part of the rank and file of the American Expeditionary Forces as have come under our observation are, almost without exception, opposed to such policy. Officers who have been detailed to organize military companies as units of the National Guard have reported that they find a strong disinclination on the part of returned soldiers to take part in the organization. According to a recent announcement of the War Department, there are more than 300 vacancies in the list of candidates for appointment to West Point Military Academy. In addition to all this, General Pershing, according to press reports, has recently stated that, in his opinion, a standing army of 300,000 is amply sufficient to meet such needs as are likely to arise in the future. A proper state of preparedness does not involve a tremendous military establishment. The American people have successfully met every critical issue that has arisen throughout their history. When troops have been needed, they have been forthcoming, and they have demonstrated their fitness to cope with the most highly trained troops Europe could produce. The ends of peace will best be served by discouraging, rather than encouraging the militaristic propaganda.

"NECESSITY IS THE MOTHER OF INVENTION."

Practically all the papers and magazines of national circulation published in New York have been forced to suspend publication on account of a strike of the typesetters of that city. The Literary Digest, however, under the stress of necessity, has perfected a process of printing from photographic plates of typewritten pages that has enabled it to reach its readers almost as promptly as before the strike. Apart from the enterprise of the publishers in overcoming apparently insurmountable difficulties in the production of their paper, this achievement is a remarkable demonstration of the possibilities of the inventive mind in the presence of compelling circumstances. We do not know to what extent the new process will be adopted by other publishing concerns, but it is evident that a revolutionary method of producing the printed page has been discovered. It is another illustration of the old truth, "Where there is a will, there is a way."



BISHOP JNO. C. KILGO,

Who will Preside over the Approaching Sessions of the Louisiana, the North Mississippi, and the Mississippi Annual Conferences.

CONGRESS BELIEVES IN PROHIBITION.

President Wilson's veto of the prohibition enforcement law, on the ground that the war is practically over and war-time prohibition is, therefore, an unjust measure, was promptly and decisively overridden by both houses of Congress. The President's action in vetoing the bill was not altogether unexpected, though there was a strong feeling in some quarters that he would allow it to become effective without his signature. The uncertain condition of his health had led many people to believe that his physicians would not allow him to give attention to any except the most important matters of legislation. It would seem to be a fair inference, in view of the veto and of other actions of the President, that he is strongly opposed to the principle of prohibition as it is held by the vast majority of the American people. His opinion ought to carry great weight in the settlement of questions of public policy; we are glad to record the fact, however, that our representatives in Congress have acted according to the instructions given them by their constituents in standing by their former action in making the liquor traffic illegal. We understand that the liquor dealers, led by eminent counsel, will now launch a determined attack against the constitutionality of the war-time prohibition act. We can afford to admire their determination to fight to the last ditch while we scorn their eagerness to impose upon the nation a traffic that it is heartily tired of. The saloon has been outlawed by every court of justice and of morals in which it has been brought to account. The verdict will not be changed.

THE TEST MAY BE AT HAND.

The determination of more than 400,000 coal miners to carry into effect a strike order that will paralyze industry and bring untold suffering to millions of their fellow-men, in spite of a restraining order issued by a Federal court on application of the Government, may be the beginning of a series of events that will determine whether or not this nation has succeeded in establishing a form of government that is, in truth, "of the people, for the people, and by the people." We do not question the right of workers to demand that they be given full justice as to wages and conditions of employment; we recognize, also, their right to cease work when they are dissatisfied with the terms upon which they may hold their positions. But there are moral obligations resting upon them not to allow their personal grievances to interfere with the orderly processes of industry, or to keep other laborers from taking their places if they are so disposed. The church stands for the equal rights of all men in maintaining life, in upholding liberty, and in seeking happiness, and it joins hands with the State in opposing injustice and oppression of every sort. It must view with the utmost concern, therefore, as does the State, the present tendency of organized labor to attain its ends by measures that involve violence, whether so intended or not. Strikes are easily justifiable at times; but in the crucial period immediately following a great world war nothing short of the direct necessity should make any body of men willing to imperil the stability of government by insisting upon demands that normally could be satisfactorily met by conference and arbitration. The struggle between the classes is as old as the ages. It must be settled sometime—but it will never be settled until it is settled right. This nation needs divine guidance now as much as the Israelites ever needed it in the course of their troublous history. Now is the time for patience, thought, faith in God and man, and earnest prayer.

WHEN I HAVE TIME.

When I have time so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care;
I'll help to lift them from their low despair—
When I have time!

When I have time the friend I love so well
Shall know no more those weary, toiling days;
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always
And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise—
When I have time!

When you have time! The friend you hold so dear
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent,
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her life with sweet content—
When you had time!

Now is the time! Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so dear—
They may not need you in the coming year—
Now is the time!

CLOSED MINDS.

By H. D. Ramns.

I have been wondering recently whether controversy ever achieves any good result. Sometimes, when one strives hard to set forth certain phases of truth and then comes to find that other men, with directly opposing ideas, take your ideas, garble them quite freely and gleefully, misquote your sentences and ignore your qualifying clauses, you begin to question whether fairness dwells on the earth, and whether men do want the truth, or only seek to enjoy the zest of battle. Perhaps one of the most satisfying feelings in life to many men and women, people of combative temperament, is the glow of conquest in a bitterly contested controversy. Historic controversies within the courts of the church of Christ have revealed how this passion seizes the minds of the very elect, and how venerable and rightly respected church leaders of all shades of thought have forgotten the spirit of Jesus Christ in contending about minor aspects of theological opinion.

One of the most tragic facts in human existence is that the Christ, who was Himself so tolerant, has come to see within His church so much intolerance. No man who knows anything of the inner life of the church to-day in any of its branches but will admit that there is with us an amount of harsh, ungenerous, un-Christlike controversy continually proceeding, and that feelings are precipitated and expressions used and written between men and ministers that are unworthy of those who believe themselves Christians. Many a letter has been written by one professedly Christian leader about another in which there were sentences that burn and sting, and that impugn the Christian character of the other man. Take down your church history, read over again some of the historic controversies, and then ask yourself when you are finished whether those men really possessed the spirit of Jesus Christ. Which really was the more important thing—the "truth" for which they fought, or the spirit and manner of their fighting? As we remember the Master, who again and again rebuked the disciples for a display of uncharitableness toward those with whom they disagreed, we have not much doubt of the answer.

Without a doubt the lives of many great public men have been spoiled and their record disfigured by exhibitions of intolerance in controversy. Admitted there was great provocation in many cases and the truth for which they contended was vastly important to the lives of mankind. But the fact remains all the same. Mighty, big-hearted Luther refused to others the freedom he claimed for himself. So fine a man as Mazzini has this flaw in his character. His biographer, Bolton King, says, "In his political controversies, it must be confessed, his equananimity deserted him, and he is often intolerant and unfair. He was too ready to think that bad politics implied bad morals." He is one of a great company in the opinion that bad politics, bad theology, bad economics, imply bad morals. A certain school of ultra-evangelistic thought has its devotees who say very quickly—have you not heard them?—"So-and-So has got bad doctrine. I don't think he lives very well." Which, of course, is utterly despicable and unworthy of a professed follower of Jesus. Then there was John Bright. Barry O'Brien tells how he (Bright) was staying with a friend in Scotland, and a certain Tory gentleman lived near. Bright's friend wanted to make a pleasant call on the aforesaid Tory gentleman, but the tribune absolutely refused to see the person, and stepped out of the carriage into the middle of the road, saying, "I won't go."

Fortunately the pages of biography have something to say to us on the other side, and these instances point the way to the better thing. Take Bright's friend, Cobden. Now Richard Cobden was as keen a fighter in a worthy cause as the veriest Luther of them all. But his manner was different. John Morley, in his "Life of Richard Cobden"—if you have not read it, you ought—says, "He was unsparing in his trenchancy of argument, but he never sought to hurt individuals, not even Lord Palmerston. 'I believe he is perfectly sincere,' Cobden said, 'for the longer I live, the more I believe in men's sincerity.'" Morley adds, "There could be no better sign of a pure and generous character than that so honorable a conviction as this should have been the lesson of his experience." Hugh Price Hughes was forthright and downright enough for any man. He was in conflicts often, but throughout managed to preserve his broad, grand catholicity of spirit that redeemed his undoubted combativeness. Possibly Hughes was the greatest Methodist since Wesley. Every Methodist who loves catholicity of mind should honor Hugh Price Hughes. In the very valuable "Life" by his daughter we read, "In particular his quotation from St. Ignatius—that where Jesus Christ may be there is the Catholic Church—is worthy of insistence, because in it he proclaimed that doctrine of tolerance which his whole life had gone to show forth. In making it the watchword of the Free Churches he enjoined upon them a tolerance so great and startling that many did not seem to divine it."

The trouble so often in controversy is that men and women start off with closed minds. There is no hope of any good coming out of a controversy if one or the other side or person has a closed mind. In such cases it is impossible to achieve any end, for if the man with a closed mind ought to be convinced by all the laws of argument and citations of fact, he will not budge. He does not seek to be convinced, or even to convince the other person. In many cases he does not even try to understand the other man's case. He is sufficient of himself. He is cribbed, cabined and confined in the impenetrability of his own prejudices. Often this is the case with people who belong to any of the many propaganda societies, societies that conceive their function to be the defense of any particular branch of church thought, political nostrum or economic theory. It is usually hopeless to attempt to convince any one belonging to any such order or society of any virtue existing in any opposing organization or set of theory. One in fifty of such people may have an open mind on that subject, and will look fairly and honestly at the other side—the others feed on the narrowness bred of their nostrum. The writer has had a recent experience which convinces him of the hopelessness of even attempting to reply to any attack from such a quarter, for when the very premises of your arguments are twisted and distorted to make an organization victory, why, the only thing to do is to let the organization have its victory unchallenged—and much good may such "victories" do.

But the pity of all this is that possibly never in the history of the world was there a time when the man and woman with the open mind were so needed as in these latter days. Problems in church and State call for adjustment, and only those who will painstakingly and painfully, if necessary, examine the conditions, and in a catholic spirit prescribe the remedy, are able to be of service. The person with the closed mind perpetuates prejudice, and refuses to enquire. You must at least be willing to seek out the truth, even if it lead against your wishes, before you can contribute your quota to the need to-day. The most pitiable thing in church and State to-day is sectionalism of all kinds. It is a hopeless tangle into which it leads. Class war, denominational strife, anti-Catholic and anti-Protestant propaganda, all your inglorious mass of isms and shibboleths are clogs on the path to progress in these great days. The only way to prevent that is the cultivation on the part of all of us of the open mind. Forget your prejudices—and think and read.

How can we cultivate the open mind? There is one way that occurs to me. That is, read and think about the good done by the organization, or society, or church to which you are opposed. Make yourself see its good side. For it has a good side, whatever your foolish prejudce may exclaim to the contrary. If you are what is called a "good" Methodist (that usually means a bigoted one), read something about Presbyterianism, or hear worth-while Presbyterian preachers, and you may come to the conclusion that your church does not exhaust all the grace of God. This is particularly valuable treatment if you live in a rural district and have lived there a long time. Or if your particular bete noir is Roman Catholicism, read Thomas a Kempis' "Imitation of Christ" or "The Life of St. Francis," and do not refuse to remember that Protestantism has lighted fires of bigotry as well as Roman Catholicism. And do not distort history to serve your purpose. And forget for a while anti-Catholic propaganda writings. Give your soul a chance. Then, if you hate Socialism, forget the hate for a time, long enough to read Ramsey Macdonald's little book on "Socialism." or Kirkup's very fair "History of Socialism." You may not be converted to Socialism. As I am not a Socialist, I am not concerned about that; but you will know something of the thing you condemn, and, maybe, you will be fairer than you have been in the past. You will have made an effort to break the barrier of that prejudice of yours. These are days when mere "bogeyism" is dead, and the man or society who thrives on it will come to speak to a diminishing audience and have a diminishing following. Let us hasten the day of liberty and the open mind.—Christian Guardian.

UNIFICATION AT CLEVELAND.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

II.

Status of the Negro.

The discussions at the Cleveland meeting centered largely upon the question of the status of the Negro in the unified church. The report of the seven members of the Committee from the M. E. Church provided for a Regional Conference for the Negro with exactly the same rights and privileges, in proportion to numbers, in the unified church as the White Regional Conferences. There were, also, various recommendations in that report for the protection of minorities and for the practical limitation of the activities of certain negro officials. The report of the seven members of the M. E. Church, South, set the negro membership apart in a missionary jurisdiction, with a membership in the General Conference limited to five per cent, and with definite limitations upon these Missionary Regional Conferences and upon the bishops and other officials of the same. Eighteen of the members of our Commission thought that the status of the Negro in the unified church was satisfactorily determined by the report submitted by our seven members. Concerning this question it fell to my lot to make the only extended speech from our Commission, and, from the stenographic report of that speech, I give the following extracts:

"Our General Conference at Atlanta recognized, just as this Commission does to-day, that the question which must be settled was the status of the Negro in the church; just as in a measure that was the question in 1844, not constitutionally, but as an incidental question that threw the whole church into a ferment. And our General Conference at Atlanta certainly expressed its great concern about this matter in such fashion that the delegates from our church cannot hesitate in agreeing to go farther, perhaps, than our church has ever gone before. The General Conference at Atlanta had before it two reports, the majority and the minority, and in the minority report there were two paragraphs concerning the status of the Negro in the unified church. One paragraph said that no further action looking to Unification is proper to be taken by us until such time as the Methodist Episcopal Church has taken proper and suitable action with reference to the negro question. The next paragraph said that we believe it due to Christian candor to say that our church cannot safely depart from the policy that it has followed since the organization of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in 1870, and cannot accept any plan of Unification which would tend to weaken its interest in, or withdraw its interest from, the said church, to which we are bound by the most sacred obligations. After a very full discussion of that minority report in the Committee on Church Relations, it was voted down by—well, I think, perhaps, that only the signers voted for it; there may have been two or three more who favored the minority report. And when it came to the General Conference, so determined, as I understand it, was the General Conference, that our Commission should not be hampered with positive instruction on the negro question, that it should be free to negotiate, to discuss, to bring back the best plan that it could, that the minority report was finaly withdrawn, because the framers of it saw that there was no chance at all for its adoption. And the majority report was adopted with a vote against it of, I think, only six or eight of the entire membership of the General Conference. Before that happened, however, Dr. J. O. Willson offered a resolution as follows: 'We further instruct our Commission that the welfare of the South, and the fixed opinions of the great body of our people make it very necessary, if the peace of our Zion is to be preserved, not to vary from the Oklahoma declaration as to the place of the Negro in unified Methodism, and that we must take care of the interests of all Methodism in this country.' That resolution did endeavor to bind the Commission to the Oklahoma declaration so that it could not vary from it at all. That resolution was laid on the table by a great majority.

"I felt, therefore, in action on this Committee, to which I was appointed by my brethren, free to follow out what I thought to be the attitude of our Southern Methodism on this question. And while I said frankly at Oklahoma that I thought the plan proposed there was a better plan, that the Negro should be in an independent organization with the closest possible fraternal relations to our church (and I still think that is the better plan), yet as our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church say frankly, flatly, that that plan is an impossible proposition for them, that they have a negro membership in their church which is not willing to be set apart in an independent organization and that the white members cannot withdraw themselves from the Negroes (and I agree to that; I understand their position; I do not see how they can), we are faced, therefore, with the fact that the white membership cannot withdraw, the colored brethren are unwilling to go into this independent organization, and, therefore, if we are going to stand for that plan, we might as well discontinue negotiations at once and wait for another time. I do not think our General Conference at Atlanta meant that. There may be brethren on our Commission who do think that. But I do not. And in acting on this Committee of Conference, I have tried to represent what I think is the view of our church as indicated by the vote of the General Conference at Atlanta.

"This paper presented by the members of the Committee from the M. E. Church, South, does recognize what we consider to be fundamental, and what we think is in accord with the position actually taken by the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Methodist Episcopal Church agrees with us that the Negro should have separate congregations; and that is your practice. The Methodist Episcopal Church agrees with us that the Negro should have separate Conferences; and that is your practice. The Methodist Episcopal Church is proposing to adopt the Chattanooga platform, which provides that the Negro shall be in a separate Regional Conference. That is the proposition presented to us to-day. Now these three things indicate very clearly that the Negro is not to be in the unified church in exactly the same relation as the white membership. There is no question about that at all. We are all agreed upon that by our practice and by the proposition which is now before us. He is in a different relation: namely, he is by himself so far as his local activities are concerned."

Bishop McDowell: "Mr. Chairman, if Bishop Cannon will allow me, I would not like that statement to go with the understanding that it is to be accepted as an accurate interpretation of the relation of the negro members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. I do not care to do more than say that."

Bishop Cannon: "I am very frank to say that I had no intention of not stating what I understood to be the fact, namely, that the Negroes of the Methodist Episcopal Church do have separate congregations (Bishop McDowell: "They do.") And that they have separate Annual Conferences (Bishop McDowell: "They do.") And that they shall have a separate Regional Conference."

Bishop McDowell: "It is also true that the white people have separate Regional Conferences."

Bishop Cannon: "The Negro is put in a separate Regional Conference, just exactly as the white membership is in separate Regional Conferences; but the fact remains that the Negro is placed in separate congregations and is in separate Conferences and that it is proposed to put him in a separate Regional Conference—that fact clearly indicates that there must be some reason why this procedure is followed. We of our Commission think that that procedure is wise, because we think that the Negro is still largely a missionary proposition; that the Negro is an immature race; that the Negro is a child race; that he should be dealt with from the missionary viewpoint—not every individual Negro, not every single negro church, but the Negroes as a mass; that while one negro church may develop or the Negro may develop in one special section, yet for the Negroes as a mass this Regional Conference which we are proposing is what is best for him. And this is to our view similar to what we are proposing for the Mexicans, the Brazilians and the inhabitants of Argentine, people who have equally as much civilization as the Negro, but who are distinctly missionary so far as the relation of the church to them is concerned. We propose, therefore, that the Negro shall be placed in one of these Regional Conferences just as the Latin American people, the people of Europe, the people of Eastern Asia and the people of Southern Asia; and that he shall be given a representation in the General Conference that is limited at both ends, namely, that he shall not have less than a certain number, and that he shall not have more than a certain number.

"Why should we put that limitation? Because we do not think that it is wise to bring into the General Conference a larger proportion of delegates than five per cent from this Negro Regional Conference, or from any of these other missionary Regional Conferences, thus giving as a maximum of these people, who differ from us in race and in habits and in methods of thought, no more than twenty-five per cent of the total membership of the General Conference. We from the South are willing to agree that the colored man shall have his Regional Conference just as we do, and that he shall come into the White General Conference, but with the representation which is suited to his immaturity, his lack of development and his missionary relationship. And now to us of the Southern Church this is just as much a question of moral right, of moral sense as it is for you brethren, when Bishop McDowell states that the Negro is entitled to full representation without any limitations whatever. We honestly believe that it is best for the Negro and best for the white man that there shall be this difference as long as the Negro is in the present immature state and as long as he is largely a missionary proposition. Your own church figures will show that your Freedman's Aid Society and your Home Mission Board are pouring money out for the development of your Negro Conferences. Just as we are pouring money out for our Mexican work on the border, so you are pouring out missionary money for the Negroes. They are clearly still as a mass a missionary field.

"I do not hesitate to say, brethren, that I think it will be far better for the Negro, far better for the white people, if the churches unite. I believe that the opportunity for friction will be greatly abated thereby. I believe that the men who, either in the black race or in the white race, desire to agitate racial questions for some personal reason or ambition, will find little profit in such conduct when the church is unified and reorganized as we are reposing. I think that there will be a very great gain for both the Negroes and the whites by this method.

"Now as to the expediency of it: I told the Committee first, and say here just what I said there, that if I were convinced that the plan proposed by the majority report would be adopted by your church and also by our church, and that the plan we propose could not be adopted by your church, even if it were adopted by our church, I desire the Unification of Methodism so greatly that I might be able finally to vote for that plan. But I do not believe it. I believe that the possibility of the adoption of the plan proposed by the majority report is very much less than the possibility of adopting the plan proposed by the minority. I say frankly that there will be a very great deal of objection even to this minority plan among many of our people. They will say that it is giving the Negro representation in the General Conference, and until they get to the bottom of it, they may say 'proportionate' representation. And we must answer that by saying, 'No, it is proportionate representation, with a limit, which safeguards the General Conference from too great a number of representatives of the immature race.' And I can stand for that position, and I can advocate such action on the missionary basis among the people of our church. But as to the majority plan, I say frankly that I doubt, I greatly doubt, whether it can possibly be carried through our General Conference and through the Annual Conferences. It might be adopted by a majority of our Commission. It might be adopted by a two-thirds vote of our General Conference. That might be possible. But it would be exceedingly difficult, I think, for it to be adopted by three-fourths of the members of our Annual Conferences. I do not say it cannot be done. I am trying to be just as frank as I can be. It might be done; but it would be very difficult to do."

"If the idea of the majority report is that in taking the action they propose we are to confer upon the Negroes exactly the same rights that we give to the white membership, if their relation as delegates to the General Conference is to be exactly the same as that of delegates from the White Regional Conferences, what effect will that have when it comes to voting by Regional Conferences? For myself I say frankly that the answer to this question would make all the difference between going as far as I said I might go yesterday, and being unable to go one step further under any circumstances than the minority report. I think there must be a clear statement on that point. Certainly it is necessary for me and I understand it is necessary for most of my brethren.

" * * * I am sure that if the majority report had said that proportionate representation meant that the Negro Regional Conference should have the same rights and privileges as the six White Regional Conferences are to have in the General Conference, every one of us would have seen at once how great a difference there is between that proposition and the proposition that the Methodist Episcopal Church made at St. Louis. But that point was not emphasized. I realized somewhat while Bishop McDowell was talking yesterday afternoon that it was evident that in his mind there was the sweeping thought that the negro membership was to have all the rights and privileges of the white membership, and so when I spoke, I emphasized a little more strongly than I might otherwise have done the difference between the two reports, and the fact that the minority report did put the negro membership into a different classification—into a subordinate classification. Now the issue as I see it is a very clear-cut one. Stripped of all possible misunderstanding, it is something like this: Shall the status of the negro membership in the reorganized church be that of an immature, undeveloped child race, with corresponding privileges and limitations, or that of a race that should be given exactly the same rights and privilegs as the white race, but set apart in separate congregations, Annual Conferences and Regional Conferences, solely on the ground of race, not to say color? That is seems to me is the issue as we have it to-day. This good brother (Dr. Spencer) sitting in front of me, has been my friend for many years. We are real friends, but he writes things sometimes that I cannot understand. I do not understand how he can think that certain things exist. The issue is not, as Dr. Spencer has said in a recent issue of his paper, I think, perhaps, within the last four weeks. He says that it is the race question that is keeping the churches apart: one church standing for the exclusion of Negroes from the reorganized church because of their color—that is, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; the other church, under its conception of the Fatherhood of God and the heart of its message to the heathen world, unable to impose upon its own loyal colored membership such an exclusion.

"Now, I say that is not the issue. That is not the question here to-day. That has never been the issue in the language Dr. Spencer used. It was not the issue in 1844. It was not the issue before the Civil War. The Negroes were in our church. We never thought of excluding them from membership in our church. When the war was over and it became evident that unless some new arrangement was made—a new arrangement, for they were in our church—they would practically all leave our church, and their leaders consulted with our bishops and our other leaders, and the proposition was made to adjust their church relationship so as to get the best results for the development of the Kingdom of God among the negro people, our leaders first proposed the Associate General Conference idea. When that was proposed the Negroes did not want it; they wanted an independent church. We never put the Negroes out of our church on the ground of color. They are out of our church because they asked to go out, and because conditions are such, not only in the southern part of our country, but in the whole country, that it has been found better for the Negroes to worship in separate churches and to have separate Conferences. Now, this much I wanted to say to Dr. Spencer, and I determined by God's help, after I was placed on this special Committee, to go the full length that I could go, while preserving the only principle that is ever to govern me in my attitude toward the Negro. At Savannah the Southern Commissioners agreed, by a vote of 19 to 6, that the Negroes should be represented in the General Conference. That was two years ago, and this article of Dr. Spencer's is recent, only four weeks ago. We said frankly at Savannah by a vote of 19 to 6, 'Yes, we will take the Negro into the General Conference, but as a child race, as an immature race.' I have wanted to go just as far as we could go. I have wanted it to be so that even Dr. Spencer would be thoroughly convinced that that statement of his did not have foundation. So I proposed in the Committee to go right up to the proposition of the Methodist Episcopal Church in St. Louis, and say, 'Why, yes, take proportionate representation for your present negro membership. Bring the Negro into the church, but bring him into the church in the relationship in which he ought to be in the church, as a child race, and in the same relation as the Mexicans, the Brazilians and other races that are undeveloped and have not yet the capacity to come into the great body and determine the great affairs of the church.' I cannot agree personally to the idea that we are to base the setting up of the Negro into separate churches, separate Annual Conferences and separate Regional Conferences, as is proposed in the majority report, solely on the ground of color and race. There is surely another reason, quite evidently a very different reason. They are brought into the General Conference under the plan of our Northern brethren with a proportionate vote, but up to that point the only ground on which they are set apart is the ground of race color.

"Now, I say very frankly, that there is a sweep to this majority report which I can hardly conceive was in the minds of the brethren who signed it. I must think that it did not carry everything to their minds that it must logically carry. It carries the selection of negro bishops by the Negro Regional Conferences and they are to come into the General Conference exactly as the other bishops, and to be assigned as the other bishops by the Board of Bishops. That is something the Methodist Episcopal Church has not done in the past. The Methodist Episcopal Church has not yet elected a colored man bishop. Why? Because of race? I would not think of saying that. It is because of his immaturity, because the church has felt that up to the present time it was not wise to put the representatives of an immature race in control of the Conferences. I think there is in their minds as well as in the minds of Anglo-Saxons generally a certain percentage of racial feeling which is unavoidable. Not anything improper; but the fact remains that this report would carry us further, in my judgment, than the Committee which brought it in thought it would.

"I call attention to what I may have a little pride about, and an honest pride, that this minority report does have some logic in it. That there is a thread running through it from beginning to end. I do not at all claim originality for the details of the proposition; the only thing that I tried myself to emphasize was that I wanted to go to the extreme limit that has been asked by the Methodist Episcopal brethren on the matter of representation for the colored man, always providing that he remains in the relation that this paper places him in, namely, the missionary relation, if not by the word being used, by the classification in which he is placed.

"Now, this paper goes on in paragraphs three and four to carry on the idea of the first and second paragraphs, that these Regional Conferences, all of them, not some of them, not simply those of the colored membership, but all of these subordinate Regional Conferences, Latin American, Eastern Asia, Southern Asia, all of them, shall have the powers and limitations proposed for the Central Conferences in the report of the Committee on Conferences at the Savannah meeting.

"Now then, section four: we went further in our thought than our brethren at Savannah. As you knew, they insisted that whenever the time came that the negro membership should reach six hundred thousand it should then pass out of the relationship that it held; that the General Conference must then erect it into an Associate General Conference. It does not seem that was necessary; but it does seem that after these missionary Regional Conferences reach the point that five or six per cent is no longer a fair proportionate representaton, even though they are immature child races, they should have the right to ask the General Conference to set them apart in an Associate General Conference, with equal powers and with the proposed nexus between the two bodies. Therefore, it is declared in this minority report that whenever these missionary Regional Conferences attain a membership of four hundred thousand, it will be possible for each of these Regional Conferences to ask for the relation of an Associate General Conference, I think then the church ought to give that relation.

"Now, I believe there is a single thread running through this minority report, namely, that the one way to treat people is to treat them in accordance with the facts as they exist. The Southern people have treated the colored people in all the relationships of life, not as our enemies, not as a hostile race, not as a race with whom we can have no dealings, but as a race that is under tutors and governors as a child is. And the civil government in our Southern States has never been animated by bostility toward the Negroes in its legislation in reference to the suffrage. It has had in view the interest of both races that they may live together helpfully. There has been injustice sometimes, nobody has ever denied it. There has been injustice in the North as well as in the South on racial lines. But the intent and purpose of the dominant class of the Southern people has been to order the life in that section of our country so that there would be the best result for both races. We believe that what is true in the State is desirable also in the church. These colored brethren need our help in the State. We are obliged to tax ourselves for their school funds. If it was their property alone that should be taxed to educate them, they would have no schools at all in some sections. They are developing in property, but we tax our ourselves largely for their help. We also help them build their churches. Almost every month negro men and women bring papers to me, and ask for help. We do help our colored people; we do desire their good; but to us they are still an immature, undeveloped child race, and this minority report is drawn up in accordance with the facts as we see them. We believe that it would be a great mistake to put the Negroes' in any other relation."

The above quotations from the stenographic report indicate that the proposition made by our Commission to the Commission of the M. E. Church is in accordance with the previous attitude of our church toward the Negroes, is in accord with our present missionary policy, and is in accordance with the teaching of the New Testament. The proposal of the Commission of the M. E. Church is, to the writer, illogical and contrary to the attiude of that church toward the Negroes in the local congregations and in the Annual Conferences.

REV. EDWIN HARTFIELD MOUNGER, D.D.

By A Friend.

In these days when "the world is too much with us" and we lay waste our powers, "getting and spending," it is well that we may, on occasions, turn our attention to the lives of a few rare spirits who have been in this world and yet not too much of it. Of such was the life of Rev. Edwin Hartfield Mounger, D.D., one of the most useful and scholarly men Mississippi Methodism has produced.

Dr. Mounger was born, if not in "pioneer days," at least sufficiently near them to have tasted something of their lessons in hardihood and courageous living, for soon after his birth, in 1838, the family records show that his father, Judge Henry Mounger, and his mother, who had been Miss Celia Millsaps, daughter of Judge Uriah Millsaps, moved to that portion of Jasper County which is now the site of Vossburg, and there cleared virgin forest land for the establishment of a home.

Added to the advantage of thus being the foster child of vigorous nature, Dr. Mounger was rich in the heritage of wisdom, piety and scholarship received from his own parents. Of his father, Dr. Mounger wrote, "He was an excellent scholar and I had no other thought than that I must study and acquire an education." How full of meaning is that sentence! All his life, his mind was so filled with right ideals that he had no other thought than that he must live up to them, to the best of his ability.

He thought his mother was "a woman of rare good sense" and one who encouraged and aided him in every way. She provided for his youth a home atmosphere which was "wise, tender, elevated, beautiful and refined"—where religion was the chief concern and the fire on the family altar was kept burning morning and evening.

From such a home, we are not surprised to find him make a successful entry into the next realm of his existence—the school world. In the common schools of his neighborhood and in several academies of the vacinity, he secured such good instruction and applied himself so well that when he entered Centenary College, in 1857, it was found that he was prepared to do Junior work. In this institution, he excelled all of his classmates in scholarship, but was not awarded an honor because he had been only two years in residence at the college, while an honor required an attendance and study of four years. But his training had brought him a more lasting pleasure than any "honor" could give, for during these days of study he had acquired a taste for and a knowledge of good literature which was to be an abiding joy throughout his years. His literary inclinations were toward the classic. Besides his mother-tongue, he was proficient in French, Latin and Greek. To the close of his life, he read his Bible in Greek. Indeed, his scholarship was so thorough and so comprehensive as to make him easily superior, in this particular, to most men of this day.

After his graduation, a little more than a year was devoted to the study of law, and to teaching for a few months in the Deaf and Dumb Institute, at Baton Rouge. Then he answered the call to preach and, in November, 1860, was received into the Mississippi Conference. Four years previous to this time, he had been "clearly and joyously converted" during a meeting at Pleasant Hill.

During a period of about fifty years, he served the Conference with zeal and ability. At the end of this time, he superannuated. While in the Conference, he served some of the most important pastorates and was for many years a presiding elder. His Conference conferred upon him the distinction of making him delegate to the Ecumenical Conference.

Dr. Mounger was especially interested in the educational work of the church. He was a frequent visitor to all the church schools of the State and was known throughout the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences for his able commencement addresses. It was very fitting that his Alma Mater bestowed upon him the degree of D. D.

The same month that he entered the Conference, Dr. Mounger was married to Miss Mary Jane Jones, daughter of Rev. R. J. Jones, Sr., of the Mississippi Conference. For thirty-seven years she shared with him the joys and hardships of an itinerant minister's life. Among the special trials which they underwent together were the terrible days of yellow fever epidemics, in 1867, at Yazoo City, and 1878, at Port Gibson. On both these occasions, they were found at their posts of duty, holding high the banner of their King, as they ministered to tho sick and dying.

Death claimed Mrs. Mounger in 1897. To her husband, she left five children. All of them now survive their father. They are Judge Henry Mounger, of Indianola; Mr. William Mounger, an enterprising merchant, of Natchez; Mr. Edwin L. Mounger, a prominent lawyer, of Greenwood; Mary Ethel Mounger, wife of the late Dr. J. J. Stevens, of Hattiesburg; and Dr. Harvey T. Mounger, a successful physician, of Hattiesburg.

As his life neared its close, the great Apostle Paul wrote, triumphantly, "I have fought the good fight." Just so, our friend, Dr. Mounger, a short while before his death, wrote to one of his companions that he felt a great sense of satisfaction in reviewing certain facts of his life—both spiritual and material. Of the practical side, he said: "I have been able to give all my five children good advantages in education—sending them to the best colleges in Louisiana and Mississippi, and that without cost to any one else. Help has been offered me on several occasions, but I did not accept it. I have always kept out of debt and it is to-day a matter of rejoicing that I do not owe a single cent. This has been accomplished by economy and by never spending money until it was in my possession and my own. My heart is full of gratitude to God."

In 1899, Dr. Mounger was married to Mrs. Sallie Folkes, daughter of George Markham, of Warren County. After seventeen beautiful years of companionship, she preceded him to the other world.

On October 8, 1919, in the eighty-first year of his age, his spirit, too, was called to join the "choir invisible of the immortal dead." Immortal? Yes. We may think of him as enjoying a two-fold immortality: the immortality of tho spirit made perfect through continued service in another and brighter world; and that earthly immortality which comes through the silent force of influence.

"For when a good man dies,
For years beyond our ken,
The light he leaves behind him, lives,
Within the hearts of men."

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

What does that Bogalusa preacher mean, that I am "from" the pines, but he is "in" them? Punch him up, Carley, and make him travel around some, and come up in the highlands, and see the pines of Mansfield. I am going to live among them for good. You know that when Jacob got to Jabbok he was mighty anxious about the future; but a delegation of angels met him there, and all was well from that on! The Scriptures are intensely interesting to me now, especially some parts of it. Same old world, Carley; same sort of folks in it, Albermarle pippins and limbertwigs, thoroughbreds and scrubs, paper-shell pecans and chinquapins.

Do you know Schultz, over at Gallman, Miss.? Well, sir, he put it over on mo. I received a letter from him inviting mo to preach a week for him. He wrote on a sheet with a Hazlehurst letter-head, and a whole lot of Red Cross head-lines. I was so glad to get a chance to go to Mississippi that I accepted the invitation at once, thinking I was going to Hazlehurst. But Gallman! Where was Gallman? When I landed there, I found two stores, a station, a mill, a schoolhouse, a couple of churches, and a few residences. I couldn't see the town for the woods and fields. That was Gallman, that, plus Schultz! Schultz is a dynamo in breeches.

I have not enjoyed myself so much in a long time as I did preaching in Gallman. The incessant rain interfered seriously with the meeting, but did not stop it. Mansfield is above the average in the church-going habits of its people; but I doubt if we would even have opened the church in Mansfield several times with such weather as we had at Gallman; but there we did not miss a service. I was a guest in the home of Mr. Alford, and feasted around, browsed in the "fat pasture" where Schultz keeps as plump as a doughnut. He serves a noble people, and they love him. Graves let me preach once in Hazlehurst, where I had the pleasure of renewing acquaintance with Dr. Caldwell, of the Presbyterian Church, who was a co-pastor in Memphis many years ago. One of the pleasant features of the Gallman meeting was the hearty interest taken in it by Prof. Hood and his public school. Public school education is all right when such true men are at the helm. But for the rain, it is probable that we would have had the help of more people from the nearby towns. Brother Graves was with us several times in spite of the weather.

My, how those good folks do feed you! Of course, I cut out the luxuries. Nebuchadnezzar's table-fare doesn't suit the saints. I want to live, so I remember what the wise man says about using your knife on certain occasions. I am seventy, and have all I started with, appendix and all—all, except one tooth knocked out when I was a boy. The rest of the teeth are without a flaw, and never had a dentist to work on them, no "fills," "plugs," "bridges," or else. There is where I beat old Tom Holloman, who rode "Susannah" in the "parade" at Columbus. No wonder Susannah pranced when toothless Tom leaped into the saddle!

But Schultz. Yes, sir; he is there, and moving things.

THE EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN IN THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The Ad Interim Committee of the Centenary has adopted a plan submitted by the General Epworth League Board for an evangelistic campaign in the Epworth League. The Leaguers are expected to assist the local Church Committee on Evangelism and the pastor in all their plans. In addition, the Epworth League proposes to make a survey of all churches, to show the number of young men and women of the League age who are members of the church but not Epworth Leaguers, and also to find out how many young people not members of any church who should be Methodists.

The date for making the survey has been set for the week Feb. 8-15, 1920. Pastors of churches where there are no Leagues will be asked to co-operate.

The Department of Epworth League Evangelism will send free of charge to pastors and League presidents a copy of the Standard Plan for the Evangelistic Campaign in the Epworth League. This manual gives in detail the plans for making the survey, and for carrying on the evangelistic campaign in the League.

For information concerning Epworth League Evangelism write to Rev. Ralph E. Nollner, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

TO BABY LAND.

"How many miles to Baby Land?"
"Any one can tell;
Up one flight,
To the right;
Please to ring the bell."

"What can you see in Baby Land?"
"Little folks in white—
Downy heads,
Cradle beds,
Faces pure and bright."

"What do they do in Baby Land?"
"Dream and wake and play.
Laugh and crow,
Shout and grow;
Jolly times have they!"

"What do they say in Baby Land?"
"Why, the oddest things;
Might as well
Try to tell
What a birdie sings!"

"Who is the Queen of Baby Land?"
"Mother, kind and sweet;
And her love,
Born above,
Guides the little feet."

SCRATCH FEED PHILOSOPHY.

By Kate S. Gates.

It was partly the weather perhaps. One never feels quite as ambitious in dog-days, you know. And partly because Jack was tired and everything had seemed to go wrong all day long.

"There isn't much use in trying to do anything or be anybody," he muttered, half to himself and half to Uncle Jack, who stood in the barn door watching him feed the chickens.

"I want to go to college and be a surgeon the worst way. I've wanted it all my life. If I could have half a chance, I'll bet I could make something of myself! Father knew, we used to talk about it ever so much. If he had lived, he would have helped me, but mother and the girls need all there is, and I might as well give up first as last."

"Have good luck with your chickens?" asked Uncle Jack.

"Yes," answered Jack, a little hurt and surprised at the abrupt change of subject. "Yes, they are doing fine, guess we get more eggs than any one else round here."

"If they do so well for you, why don't you make life easier for them? I notice you scatter the grain round in the chaff so they have to do considerable scratching to get it."

"Why scratching round is just what is good for 'em; if they picked up all they wanted without any trouble, they'd grow too fat and not be any good for laying," said Jack, a trifle importantly. It was rather gratifying to know more about even so small a matter than this fine city uncle.

"That's the idea, is it? I wonder, Jack, if that principle doesn't hold true with a human race as well as with chickens. Somebody says it is a misfortune to be born in the lap of luxury, and wise old Benjamin Franklin declared that to be thrown on one's own resources was to be cast into the lap of fortune. I am inclined to think that he was right. Somehow, when one has to struggle hard with inferior and trying conditions, it seems to stimulate one's strength of purpose.

"Look it up and see if you do not find that the men trained in the hard school of adversity, who have had to clear the path for every step are not more than a match for those who have had everything handed to them.

"Remember how it is said Lincoln walked forty miles to borrow a book he could not afford to buy, and Thurlow Weed walked through the snow two miles with pieces of carpet rags tied round his feet for shoes to borrow a book he felt he must have to study. That was some scratching, wasn't it?

"It may be pretty up-hill work for you; you will have to scrimp and save and work hard, but I believe you can do it, and make life gloriously worth while. Won't you try it, my boy?"

"Sure," said Jack. "I'll do my best. I reckon I can scratch as hard as the next fellow if I can only win out in the end."

"That is the spirit, and here is something I picked up the other day and liked so well that I memorized it:

"Got any rivers they say are uncrossable?
Got any mountains you can't tunnel through?
We specialize in the Wholly Impossible,
Doing what nobody ever could do."

Just specialize in the "Wholly Impossible," and you will get where you want to be, you see if you do not."—Exchange.

A BUNCH OF KEYS.

We usually think of the Tower of London as a show place wherein are stored many of the treasures of the realm, and we are apt to forget that the Tower played an important part in the history of our Empire. Here the ill-fated children of Edward IV met their death. Sir Walter Raleigh was imprisoned, and here also Lady Jane Grey was beheaded. The Tower is still guarded by a band of yeomen or beefeaters, as well as by a considerable force of soldiery, and from the latter a certain number are chosen every morning to serve as guards for a royal bunch of keys. It seems strange that a commonplace bunch of keys should be treated with the respect due to kings, but this is true of this especial bunch.

A little before midnight all through the year the word "keys," shouted in loud tones, is heard, and, led by an officer, sleepy soldiers turn out, one carrying a lantern. Outside the constable's house a warder appears, wrapped on chilly nights in a long red cloak, and from his hand jangle the great, massive keys. "Present arms" is the order. The guardhouse reached, the whole guard turns out to salute, and a sentry cries "Halt! Who comes here?" and the warder answers "Keys." "Whose keys?" "The King's keys." "Stand! Advance one and give the countersign." And this being done, he proceeds, "Pass King's keys. All is well." About twenty yards farther on the keys stop again, to be saluted by the guardians of the Jewel House, then on past the Byward Gate, then to Spur Gate, and finally the Barrier Gate, which is the first locked. About twenty yards off the keeper of the keys halts whilst the men of the guard form two lines, down which the keys are carried; then a corporal advances and locks the gate, which is well shaken, to make sure it is safely closed. Next, arms are presented, the beefeater carries his precious burden again to the front, the men reform in marching order and return to the Spur Gate. This gate being locked, the men say "God bless the King." Byward Gate is then fastened, and finally the keys taken back to their repose, from which on no account can they be disturbed until the ceremony of unlocking takes place in the early morning.—Exchange.

A STORY OF LIGHTS.

The night had come. The sun had disappeared, and birds had tucked their heads beneath their wings to rest. A night bird flew close to an electric light.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "You give so little light compared with the sun!"

"I do the best I can," said the light. "Think how dark this corner would be if I were not here! People walking and driving might run into one another and some one might get hurt."

"That's true," said the bird; and away he flew. Then he came near a gas light, standing apart from houses and busy streets.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "You do not give as much light as the electric light!"

"I do the best I can," said the light. "Do you not see that steep bank just beyond? If I were not here, some one might fail to see it and fall."

"That's true," said the bird, and away he flew.

Soon his sharp eyes spied a lamp in a window.

"Of what use are you?" asked the bird. "You do not give even as much light as the gas light."

"I do the best I can. I am in the window to throw light down the path, that Farmer Brown may see the way when he comes home. I do my best."

"That's true," said the bird, and away he flew, thinking, "The little and great, all are helpers."—Kindergarten Review.

THE LAYMEN AT WORK.

For a long time it was recognized that the church had tremendous resources in man-power that were not being utilized to the fullest extent. In every congregation there were a few men, comparatively, upon whom the burden of responsibility seemed to rest for the success of whatever movements might be undertaken, while the great majority of the membership were content merely to "look on," with the feeling that they were more or less relieved of any obligation to take an active part in the procedings.

But the great Centenary Campaign has wrought a marvelous change. One of the distinct aims of that movement was the enlistment of as many men as possible in the necessary and urgent work of the church, with the expectation that there would be a hearty response to the appeals for help when it was realized that a worth-while program was being undertaken. It was generally felt that many men of unquestioned ability and large business success would be willing to give themselves as diligently to the work of extending the work of the Kingdom of God as they were to promote their personal interests, if they could be made to see that their efforts were actually directed toward the accomplishment of definite results that would be permanent in their nature.

One of the outcomes of that aim on the part of the Centenary authorities was the organization of the Methodist Minute Men. In every congregation men, many of whom had hitherto taken no active part in the work of the church, were enlisted in the task of bringing to the people at large a realization of the responsibility that rested upon them as representatives of the cause of Christ, and of the opportunities that were confronting them for the propagation of the gospel among the needy nations of earth. They were supplied with information that stirred their own hearts, and they were given the opportunity of telling to the people, Sunday by Sunday, the plans and purposes that were being formulated and developed.

It is impossible to say how much of the success of the Centenary Movement is to be attributed specifically to the work of the Minute Men, but we feel very sure that they are entitled to no small part of the credit for that remarkable achievement in the history of Methodism. It is a pleasure for us to pay tribute to these faithful men for what they have already accomplished for the extension of the Kingdom of God on earth.

Now that our laymen have demonstrated their ability and their willingness to do a special work of the church, we believe that they will be found equally able and equally willing to do whatever else they may be called upon to do that will be for the good of the cause in which they have shown such active and intelligent interest. We do not hesitate to say that the church to-day is going to measure up to its responsibilities in proportion to the degree of success it has in maintaining the active co-operation of its lay membership in its undertakings. The time has passed when the minister alone may be expected to carry to a successful issue in the local congregation the wide-reaching plans of a great program. He must have the assistance of the best equipped and most faithful helpers that can be found. This assistance is at hand in this organization of Minute Men, which has demonstrated its usefulness in one great undertaking, and which gives full promise of functioning just as well in other movements yet to be enterprised. We honor the Minute Men for what they have already accomplished, and we rejoice in the prospect of continued activity and usefulness on their part.

LET US DO IT.

In the Christian Advocate (Nashville) of October 19, under the caption, "Why Not Begin Now?" the editor of our general organ makes the suggestion that the raising of a large surplus above the $35,000,000 asked for in the Centenary Campaign furnishes a wonderful and providential opportunity of making adequate provision for the urgent needs of our superannuated ministers—the "forgotten men"—of Methodism. We call attention to that suggestion for the purpose of giving it our hearty and unqualified endorsement. In the larger application of the purposes of the Centenary, we do not believe that there would be any misapplication of funds in using part of this surplus for the relief of these faithful servants of the church; on the contrary, we believe that the great majority of our people would feel that the best possible use had been made of the amount so used.

There is, of course, no doubt that the entire Centenary pledge, and more, could be used to the greatest advantage in the distinctively missionary operations of the church. But when we remember that our church to-day is what it is largely through the work of these men who are now beyond the age of active service, and when we remember that it is a reproach to us that we have failed to include them in any plan hitherto that would discharge our obligations to them, we may well feel that we are redeeming our pledges of the past, and that we are making justifiable provision for our missionary work in the future by setting aside an adequate sum for this cause. We hope this suggestion will be brought to the attention of the Centenary Commission and that favorable action will be taken thereon.

THE AD INTERIM COMMITTEE IN SESSION.

The Ad Interim Committee appointed at the recent meeting of the Commission on Unification in Cleveland, Ohio, is in session this week in Richmond, Va. This Committee, composed of fourteen members—seven from the Methodist Episcopal Church, and seven from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—is charged with the weighty responsibility of finding, if possible, some plan for the unification of American Methodism, that will be accepted as equitable by all parties concerned. Even those who have kept only slightly in touch with the work of the Commission thus far will realize the difficulty of the task confronting the Committee in Richmond. These honored and trusted leaders of both churches are endeavoring, by the appointment of their respective Commissions, to solve a problem that has engaged the earnest thought of the leaders of Methodism for several years. They need the sympathetic interest and prayers of all our people as they engage in their delicate and arduous task.

The result of the meeting of the Ad Interim Committee will be communicated to a meeting of the full Commission, to be held some time in January, presumably in New Orleans. The Commission will then submit its conclusions to the General Conferences, which will take such action as they deem wise. It is impossible, of course, to forecast what the result of the meeting in Richmond will be. It is not too much to hope, however, that their deliberations will eventuate in a plan that will commend itself to the wisdom of all parties at interest as leading to a satisfactory solution of what is, perhaps, the most pressing problem before us to-day. We have every confidence in the fairness, ability, and Christian integrity of these representatives of the two great churches, and we believe that any conclusion reached by them will be entitled to the serious consideration of the membership of both churches.

REV. THOS. H. LIPSCOMB GOES TO EMORY UNIVERSITY.

Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, at present the presiding elder of the Aberdeen District in the North Mississippi Conference, has been called to the professorship of English Bible in Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., and will enter upon the duties of the position at the close of his work as presiding elder at the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brother Lipscomb is a man of marked ability and excellent scholarship, and he has had very successful experience as a teacher in former years. He has taken rank as one of the leading men of his Conference, and his brethren will regret very greatly to give him up from the active work of the ministry in which he has met with such success. They will rejoice with him, however, in this call to a field of usefulness to which he is peculiarly adapted by temperament and by training. Emory University is to be congratulated upon securing such a capable and consecrated man for the important chair to which he has been called.

REV. JOHN E. THOMAS DIES SUDDENLY.

Just as we were going to press on Tuesday of this week, we received a telegram from Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference, announcing the death on Monday, of Rev. John E. Thomas, our pastor at Aberdeen. The cause assigned was apoplexy. This announcement will bring a great shock to our readers throughout the North Mississippi Conference, and to many others who were acquainted with the splendid life and character of the man whose spirit has taken its flight. Brother Thomas was to have been the host of the approaching session of his Annual Conference. The Advocate joins with his multitude of friends in extending heartfelt sympathy to those who have been bereaved by his going away. We shall expect a fuller account of the death of this good man in due time.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"We shall have the best report for Conference that we have ever had," writes Rev. A. R. Beasley, our pastor at McCool, Miss.

Rev. J. L. Williams, of Shreveport, La., a local preacher of our church, was a recent caller at the Advocate office. He reported North Louisiana Methodism in a flourishing condition.

It has been announced that Dr. O. E. Goddard will have charge of the Centenary Conservation program at the Louisiana Conference. A better man for the work could scarcely be found.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, who was recently transferred from the Mississippi to the Pacific Conference, has been appointed pastor of St. Paul's Church, Fresno, Calif. His address is 2219 Frosno Street, in that city.

The monthly meeting of the New Orleans Union Epworth League will be held at the McDonoghville Methodist Church on Tuesday evening, November 11, at 8 o'clock. A full attendance of the Leaguers is desired.

Dr. Gilbert F. Douglas, formerly identified with the Methodist Church in Meridian, Miss., has removed, with his family, to Birmingham, Ala., where he has placed his membership with the First Methodist Church.

Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, who assisted Rev. C. C. Wier in a splendid meeting at Algiers, will be engaged in Red Cross work in Mississippi until the meeting of the Louisiana Conference. His address is the Edwards House, Jackson, Miss.

Rev. H. B. Vandenburg, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, has spent much of the year in visiting North Louisiana and Texas in search of health. A note from him informs us that his condition is better than it was last year.

We learn with great sorrow that the health of Mrs. B. E. Meigs, wife of our faithful pastor at Monticello, Miss., shows no improvement. Her condition is critical. Let prayer be made that sustaining grace may be supplied these sad hearts in this time of anxiety.

Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., a member of the Ad Interim Committee of the Commission on Unification, passed through New Orleans on Saturday of last week, en route to Richmond, Va., to attend the meeting of the Committee. He honored the Advocate office with an appreciated call.

Two memorial tablets will be unveiled in Felicity Methodist Church, this city, on Sunday afternoon, November 9, at 3:30 o'clock—one in memory of Grayson H. Brown, son of Dr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Brown, and the other in memory of Joseph A. Wakefield. Chaplain L. N. Taylor, U. S. N., will deliver the address.

Our church at Madison Station, Miss., has suffered a great loss in the death of Brother W. H. Field, which sad event occurred on October 20. He was one of our most loyal, faithful, and dependable members. He had served the church faithfully for more than 35 years. A sullable obituary will appear in the Advocate in due time.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Grand Cane charge, Louisiana Conference, has asked for the return of Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, its efficient pastor, for the third year. Resolutions were also passed, expressing appreciation of the work of Rev. C. D. Atkinson, who has served for four years as presiding elder of the Shreveport District.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Brooklyn and Bond charge, Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, passed appropriate resolutions of appreciation in connection with the work of the presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, and the pastor, Rev. D. W. Ulmer, both of whom are completing a four-year term of service in their respective appointments.

Rev. A. H. Williams, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference who has been serving as a supply at Coaling, Ala., gives an interesting account of his work in the Alahama Christian Advocate of October 2. A recent revival meeting added eleven names to the church roll, nine of them by profession of faith. There has also been marked material growth.

The death at her own hands of Mrs. William A. Webb, wife of the president of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, which occurred a few weeks ago, was a great shock to the entire church. Mrs. Webb's act is thought to have resulted from anxiety over the condition of Dr. Webb, who has been in California for several months recuperating from a nervous breakdown in the early summer.

The Interchurch World Movement of North America will hold sixty-six State conferences during the month of December for the purpose of making its program thoroughly understood by the lay and clerical leaders of the churches throughout the nation. One of these conferences is scheduled for Jackson, Miss., December 1-3, and another for New Orleans, La., December 3-5.

The editor had the privilege of attending the mid-week prayer meeting at Picayune, Miss., last week. It was helpfully conducted by the Devotional Department of the Epworth League. In spite of very inclement weather, there was a large attendance of young people, many of whom cheerfully took part in the service. The pastor, Rev. W. F. Baggett, has accomplished a splendid work this year.

Rev. J. L. Neill, who will have charge of the Centenary Conservation program at the Mississippi Conference, has arranged for Bishop W. F. McMurry to be present and speak on Evangelism. Bishop McMurry's messages on this great topic have stirred the whole church during the past few months. It will be a great privilege to those who are so fortunate as to be able to hear him at Meridian.

Rev. S. D. Roberts, our pastor at McDonoghville, La., held a meeting at Tallsheek, La., last week, which resulted in the addition of five persons to the membership of the church. Tallsheek is a small community which has largely been without pastoral supervision this year, although we have an organization there. The meeting resulted in a renewal of interest which will probably insure regular services for next year.

The American-Press, of Lake Charles, La., in its issue of October 25, gives large space to an account of the work of the Sunday school of the First M. E. Church, South, for the past year. It shows an inspiring record of activity and growth.

The Chester charge, of the Durant District, North Mississippi Conference, at its fourth quarterly conference, passed suitable resolutions of appreciation concerning the work of Rev. W. W. Mitchell, the presiding elder, who is completing his fourth year of service on that important district.

Mr. Henry H. Ahrens, in a personal note to the editor from New York City, says, among other things: "To-day I saw the King of the Belgian people, and heard and saw that prince of preachers, Bishop Warren A. Candler. If I had my choice of being the reigning monarch of Belgium, or of possessing Bishop Candler's gifts as a preacher, I would tell the Belgians to keep their job." Bishop Candler preached at Old John Street Church on Sunday, October 26. This historic church of American Methodism has just celebrated its one hundred and fifty-third anniversary.

Rev. J. L. Neill, Superintendent of the Department of Missionary Education of the General Sunday School Board, preached a series of helpful and inspiring sermons to the students of Port Gibson Female College last week. Dr. Rolfe Hunt, president of the College, writes that the services have borne much fruit. Recent visits from Rev. T. B. Holloman and Rev. Jno. C. Chambers were of much interest and profit to the college family. It is gratifying to know that the attendance at this splendid school for girls is already equal to the total enrollment tor last session. There is still room for a few more students, but those interested should confer with President Hunt at once.

The editor had the privilege of attending the Rally Day service of the Sunday school at McDonoghville last Sunday. Although the weather was very bad, the attendance was good. Under the superintendency of Mr. W. H. Black, prominently connected with the Federal Reserve Bank of New Orleans, this school has reached a high degree of efficiency. The pastor, Rev. S. D. Roberts, stated that the church would be able to make a good report at Conference, all assessments being paid in full. An interesting feature in connection with the revival services conducted by Rev. A. F. Vaughan, was the reception into the church on profession of faith of representatives of three generations in one family—grandmother, daughter, and granddaughter.

On the evening of September 27, 1919 CARL, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Davis was suddenly called from this earth world to a more beautiful home. Carl was a super-spiritual boy. He was ready to lend a helping hand to the needy and give a cheerful smile to all with whom he met. Although his life here on earth was short, for months ere the end came he spent his every hours in cheering others. He loved home, Sunday school and the church. His faithfulness to the church and Sunday school is worthy of imitation. He was untiring in his devotion to his parents. To say that Carl made home pleasant is no words too much. We feel that death has cheated us in striking down such a promising life but we also know that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord. Carl was a bright boy and had the right to make a noble man. Though the last call came to him suddenly we feel that he was ready to meet it. Yes Carl is missed in the home, the church, Sunday school, and by a host of friends. May the God of all comfort the loved ones in the loss of their only and dear child.

W. H. GANT, Pastor.

Jackson, Miss. Oct. 21, 1919.

WILLIAM LAFAYETTE TUCKER, son of Rufus Wilson and Harriet Scott Tucker was born June 7, 1847, near Olive Branch, Desoto County, Mississippi. He served in the Confederate Army throughout the war between the states and during the Reconstruction Period. In 1867 was married to Miss Sallie A. Oliver who died in January 1882. He married a second time, having a wife for 36 years. To this union were born seven children, five of whom survive him. He professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South at Olive Branch, Miss. in 1870 and remained a faithful member of that church until his death. He was a charter member of the Methodist Church at Tucker, La. and served on the board of stewards throughout his membership of more than 40 years. He was a Mason and was buried with Masonic honors. He was a kind husband and father, a good neighbor and a true friend. He was a man of sterling character and integrity. He was a man of prayer and his life was a benediction to all who knew him. He was a consistent member of the Methodist Church and lived a devoted Christian life. He was a man of few words but his life was a sermon. He was a man of deep convictions and had the courage of his convictions. He was a man of strong faith and his faith was a source of strength to his family and friends. He was a man of prayer and his prayers were answered. He was a man of God and his God was with him. He was a man of peace and his peace was a blessing to all who knew him. He was a man of love and his love was a light to all who knew him. He was a man of hope and his hope was a comfort to all who knew him. He was a man of faith and his faith was a rock to all who knew him. He was a man of God and his God was with him. He was a man of peace and his peace was a blessing to all who knew him. He was a man of love and his love was a light to all who knew him. He was a man of hope and his hope was a comfort to all who knew him. He was a man of faith and his faith was a rock to all who knew him.

Brother Tucker was a most devout and zealous Christian. His loyalty to Christ and His church was such as to subject him to criticism by the unsaintly, with God and His plan for His children dear. Our brother like unto his Lord was not understood by his friends at many times when he spoke in the congregation of worshipers. His experience was deep and assuring. His conversation was in heaven, consequently his earthly possessions he counted not his own, but they were at the command of the "Great Head" of the church. Brother Tucker was awake to every interest of the church and never failed to foster her interest and defend her cause. She was to him the "Bride" of the Lord and with zealous love he protected her good name and gave himself to her tasks. He came to the end in great peace. He knew whom he believed and feared not, yet knew the valley of the shadow of death was reached. His triumphal entree to the mansions of heaven. He will be missed among his friends. The church has lost an earnest supporter, society and the brother. His work will follow him and teach to all coming generations. His children, grandchildren and relatives will never forget the life he lived with them. Here shone his character with brightness equalling to the brightness of God. And with him, what a Redeemer. He was an inspiration to the end. He spoke well of the church of his fathers. He was a faithful husband and father. He was a true friend. He was a man of God. He was a man of peace. He was a man of love. He was a man of hope. He was a man of faith

FROM GUNTOWN AND BALDWYN.

Dear Brother Cariey: As the Conference year will soon close, I would just like to give a short report of our work. We have had, in all, a fine year. Our revival meetings have closed and were good. We had several conversions and additions to the church. We were assisted in these meetings by Brothers Bennett, Conference Evangelist of the Mississippi Conference; M. L. Ward, of Booneville, and J. J. Garner, of Sidon. These brethren preached with power, and their work was productive of much good. They are men whom the church can trust.

We have just held our fourth quarterly conference, and it was the best that we have had for three years. Everything is in fine condition. The spirit of our people was never better. We have raised our Centenary assessment, paid an old church debt, of about seven year's standing, of five hundred dollars. We also have a subscription of ten thousand dollars to build a new church at Baldwyn. We feel safe in saying that the church will raise this year twice as much money as it has ever raised in one year before. We certainly will have a great spiritual uplift to follow.

Brother Dorsey is closing his fourth year as presiding elder. He certainly has done a splendid work on our district. The people all love him. The old Corinth District is soon to take its place as one of the leading districts in our great Conference.

I am closing my third year, and with good people to serve, coal bought and paid for, and five porkers to kill for meat, it makes one—well, just "sorter" glad that the limit is four years, at least. Now, if the "flu" does not hinder us, we shall soon meet at Conference. May God give us a great Conference. J. D. SIMPSON.

Guntown, Miss., Oct. 25.

NEW PROSPECT CAMP MEETING, AND ELSE.

In 1880, Dr. I. W. Cooper preached the first sermon at this camp meeting. During the years that have intervened, many good metings have been held here. Many souls date their conversion to one or another of these meetings. Some converted here have gone into the ministry, and are doing good work now. The last meeting was a success. The weather was ideal, and the attendance unsurpassed. Two hundred thousand dollars' worth of automobiles were there on Sunday.

Rev. J. E. Williams, of Sumrall, did most of the preaching. He showed himself a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed." I have never heard more logical presentation of the truth, or stronger appeals to sinners. Were his gifts and ability as an evangelist known, it would be hard to keep him in a pastorate. His work is of the safe, sound sort. He leaves the church stronger, and more in love with the pastor. A better helper or a more brotherly man I have not known.

Brother J. R. Jones, our beloved elder, was present, and preached a strong sermon, and held our fourth conference. Resolutions expressing appreciation of his faithful and efficent services for the past four years were adopted. Brothers C. P. Jones, C. Y. Higginbotham and M. W. David were present and preached once each, each bringing a helpful message. The local preachers, Brothers J. H. Havens and L. R. Roberts, were present, and rendered valuable service. Brother Roberts preached the opening sermon.

I used to wonder, like Brother Henderson, of Louisiana, why the local preacher; but since I have served these brethren, and a few others, as pastor, I no longer wonder. I find that there is a large place in our church for the local preacher. These are abundant in labors, and are in demand for revival meetings. Let us, as pastors, develop the local preachers. They are in our hands, and may be very useful.

We are finishing our second year on the Vancleave charge—a pleasant place to live, and a delightful circuit. Happy the man who serves this people! J. H. GRICE, P. C.

Vancleave, Miss., Oct. 25.

A GREAT REVIVAL AT INDIANOLA, MISS.

We clip the following account of a great revival at Indianola, Miss., from the Memphis Commercial Appeal. The pastor, Rev. Chas. D. McGehee, was assisted by Chaplain W. B. Hogg and Rev. J. W. Robertson.

"The following has just appeared on the editorial page of one of the local papers:

"'For Sale—A perfectly good dancing pavilion in Indianola. It is thought by the best people that we don't need a thing like this here. If sold the owner is expected to move it.'

"This expresses fully the sentiment of the people of Indianola as the result of seeing dancing in a new light. A great revival of religion has swept over the people of the community, the oldest inhabitants saying that they never saw anything like it, even in the olden days.

"Under the auspices of the Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopallan and Baptist churches, with the Catholics and Jews co-operating, it has proven a truly great revival of righteous living to the thousands who attended. Between 400 and 600 publicly expressed a desire to live better, and pledged themselves to do so. So far, 110 have pledged themselves to join the different churches Sunday.

"At one service 400 mothers and fathers attended and at the close pledged themselves to rally around the ministers and make this town the best possible to live in.

"At the close of this service, Mrs. M. T. Davis, wife of one of the prominent merchants, was taken suddenly ill. Twenty-four hours later she was dead. Before she died she requested to be buried from the pavillon, for it had been made sacred through the service that had been held in it. The merchants closed their stores, as they had done for all the other services, and her funeral was one of the most impressive that have ever been held here.

"The closing service was the most impressive of the series. At the close every one of the 1,000 people present brought a flower and gave it to Chaplain Hogg as a silent token of appreciation for the valuable service he had rendered this community. Merchants say that old bills charged off are being paid, friendships that have long been dead have been renewed, men say they find it harder to 'cuss,' card parties have been called off and the tenants are getting the best settlements in years.

"A free will offering of $1.600 was made to defray the expenses of the meeting, not a dollar being solicited."

A CENTURY OF SERVICE.

In 1820 a good old-fashioned doctor in North Carolina prepared an ointment for skin eruptions. It met the needs of his patients, and has likewise met the needs of millions of other doctors' patients. Gray's Ointment, the compound he prepared, is now rounding its hundredth year of honest, good old-fashioned service and value. It is very effective for sores, boils, cuts, bruises, burns, stings, eczema and the many similar forms of skin eruption. It soothes the pain, cleanses the wound, kills the germs and begins healing. If your druggist can not supply you send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and a liberal sample will be sent you.—Adv.

If Thin and Nervous Try Bitro-Phosphate

While excessive thinness might be attributed to various and subtle causes in different individuals, it is a well-known fact that the lack of phosphorous in the human system is very largely responsible for this condition.

It seems to be well established that this deficiency in phosphorous may now be met by the use of Bitro-Phosphate, which can be obtained from any good druggist in convenient tablet form.

In many instances the assimilation of this phosphate by the nerve tissue soon produces a welcome change—nerve tension disappears, vigor and strength replace weakness and lack of energy and the whole body loses its ugly hollows and abrupt angles, becoming enveloped in a glow of perfect health and beauty and the will and strength to be up and doing.

CAUTION:—While Bitro Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

NEW TREATMENT THAT KNOCKS RHEUMATISM

75c BOX FREE TO ANY SUFFERER

Up in Syracuse, N. Y., a treatment for rheumatism has been found that hundreds of users say is a wonder, reporting cases that seem little short of miraculous. Just a few treatments even in the very worst cases seem to accomplish wonders even after other remedies have failed entirely. It seems to neutralize the uric acid and lime salt deposits in the blood, driving all the poisonous clogging waste from the system. Soreness, pain, stiffness, swelling just seem to melt away and vanish.

The treatment first introduced by Mr. Delano is so good that its owner wants everybody who suffers from rheumatism or who has a friend afflicted, to get a free 75c package from him to prove just what it will do in every case before a penny is spent. Mr. Deland says: "To prove that the Delano treatment will positively overcome rheumatism, no matter how severe, stubborn or long standing the case, and even after all other treatments have failed, I will, if you have never previously used the treatment, send you a full size 75c package free if you will send your name and address with 10c to help pay postage and distribution expense to me personally."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Since my last letter, two days were spent at Knoxo and Kokomo. I believe that the time is ripe at both places for a forward movement, and believe that it is coming. Brother Broadfoot, the pastor, has things well in hand and is putting souls and life into the work.

A "C" grade Training School was conducted for four days at Centerville. Fifteen enrolled and 7 took the examination. I think this fine for a beginning. I feel that many other schools should do a like work.

Miss Minnie E. Kennedy will demonstrate primary work on November 26, at 3 o'clock, Central Church, Meridian. I hope there will be a large attendance of Elementary workers. It will pay you for your time and attention.

No pictures have been received from rural sunday school classes. Please, if you can, send them in. I am anxious for the Conference to know what the rural schools are doing.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

Wonderful Egg Producer.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3257 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

SOME THINGS UNCLE BILLY SAID AT THE TEACHERS' MEETING.

"Squire Mockabee said he didn't get any four-bits' worth outen the chautauqua lecture last week. The reason was, the Squire only had a two-bit intellect to get the lecture in."

"To be sure, Parson, that was a powerful fine sermon Peter preached at Pentecost; but I reckon ev'ry one o' those three thousan' Jews what was converted an' j'ined the church that day had been reg'lar members of the Jew Sunday schools at the synagogues when they was children an' was learned in the Scriptures as they had 'em then. That's why I'm such a crank about gettin' children an' young folks to come to Sunday school—so's we can learn 'em the Scriptures an' get 'em ready 'gainst the time you preach a Pentecostal sermon."

"The boy what loses touch with the Sunday school when he begins to think an' act for hisself is mighty apt to lose touch with God, too. Our school ough' to go into a campaign to get an' keep young person in this c'munity in Sunday school."

"Le's join the Membership Campaign."

Comb Sage Tea in Hair to Darken It

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Keep Her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through hair taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.—Adv.

Drugs Excite Your Kidneys, Use Salts

If your Back Hurts or Bladder bothers, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. —Adv.

REMARKABLE MEETING AT WATER VALLEY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: There has just closed in First Church, Water Valley, Miss., the greatest meeting that it has been my privilege to attend. There were not so many conversions as I have known, but while that is all-important, it is not more so than the quickening of the church and the deepening and strengthening of moral sentiment in the community. This was the feature of the meeting. A more extensive influence for righteousness it has not been my privilege to witness.

The meeting began on the fifth of October and on the seventh the Rev. Geo. Tucker, of Jackson, Tenn., arrived and took charge. He is the "switchman" evangelist. Four years ago he was converted and soon left his switch engine to preach the "good news" that had saved him. That being only about four years ago, he is still young in the work. In the ordinary sense of the word, Brother Tucker is not an educated man, but in the special sense of the knowledge of the Word and of divine grace in the heart, he is an expert. He knows the processes of salvation from an experimental standpoint, having been lifted from a great natural and practical depravity. His heart being full of this glorious experience, he has a passion for showing it to others. With this passion he combines a remarkable skill in its expression. As a result of these qualities in the leader of the meeting, there were about 100 conversions and reclamations.

For revival work I do not know a better combination than Geo. Tucker and his assistant, Mr. C. B. Watt, the musical director. J. W. DORMAN.

DEDICATION OF JAMES CHAPEL.

Dear Brother Carley: Twelve miles west of Hammond, La., in the Parish of Livingston, is a Methodist church known as James Chapel. This is one of our most spiritual country churches. At it a stranger, especially a visiting preacher, receives a hearty welcome and most cordial treatment. This church raised its Centenary quota in full.

Wednesday, October 22, was a memorable day to the members of the James Chapel church. Their new building, which is a neat, painted, frame structure, was dedicated to the service of God. In spite of the threatening elements, the church was comfortably filled with people. Rev. H. W. May, our presiding elder, preached the dedicatory sermon. "The Crucifixion" was his subject. Brother May was at his best. In depth and reach of thought, in mode of delivery, in forcefulness of expression and spiritual power, his sermon should be put in the class of sermonic utterances heard Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour at the seat of our Annual Conference. In addition to the pastor, Rev. Wilson Brown, Brothers Lipscomb, of Ponchatoula; Fayard, of Springfield, Murphy, of St. Francisville, and myself were present and took part in the service.

The ladies of the church had prepared a fine dinner for the occasion, which was served just after the service of dedication. If you do not believe they have fine cooks in Livingstone Parish, attend the James Chapel church some time when they have dinner on the ground.

Socially and spiritually, the day was of great profit and blessing.

There is contagion in a sweet and beautiful character, for health is contagious as well as disease. We are all the time giving to others either wholesome or unwholesome moods—poisoning their atmosphere with doubt and suspicion, or clearing it with helpfulness and good cheer.—Phillips Brooks.

A Christian in a state of grace has a right, as no other man has a right, to be in high spirits. Nowhere does the New Testament imply that there is a special sort of spirituality in moroseness and gloom; and gloom is least appropriate in these solemn duties which more than any other express our relations to and feelings towards the source of joy.—Dr. Liddon.

Notes From the Field.

City Board of Missions at Biloxi, Miss., has notified the Secretary that the new chapel and gymnasium connected with the Wesley House at that place have just been completed and that both buildings are now ready for acceptance.

Our Mountain Schools, Sue Bennett and Brevard Institute, have opened with very full enrollment and increased interest on the part of faculty and students.

Word has been received also of the most successful opening of Scarritt Bible and Training School. The opening address by the new Professor of Sociology was most inspiring and helpful, and the year begins with a large enrollment and enthusiasm..

Paine College Annex reports a splendid opening, more than one hundred in the boarding department, and a large number turned away for lack of room.

Deaconess Ella Hooper and her assistant, Mrs. White. are happy over the prospect of a new Wesley House at Houma, La., in accordance with Council plans for a strong center radiating the influence of the women's work in French parishes.

Workers at Behlehem House, Augusta. Ga., have entered upon a prosperous year with full classes and enthusiasm. Mrs. Jennie White, the head resident, having had opportunity for study in the School of Philanthropy, New York City, is full of new plans for the successful ongoing of the work.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

From the September Bulletin.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT.

Dear Juniors: Did your society report last quarter? Only forty-two reports were received, and that means more than one-third did not report. At the close of the third quarter, we shall expect every Junior Society in North Mississippi to report promptly.

I am rejoiced to tell you that the second quarter's report was the best report financially that North Mississippi Conference ever sent in to the Council. The societies leading in finances were Holly Springs, $125; Tupelo, $90; New Albany, $80. In addition to this, Little Frances and Virginia Parks of Merigold, Miss., sent in $150 for the support of a kindergarten in Japan. Also the Misses Vaughan of Shannon, Miss., gave $25 in war savings stamps for the support of a Sunday school in Japan.

There were a number of societies that had splendid financial reports, several sending in more than had been sent in for the entire year. This should be the record of each society in the Conference. In the face of present day opportunities, we cannot afford to be satisfied to do just what we did last year. If we do as well the third quarter as we did the second, everybody will have to work, and work hard.

Although October is the month set aside for Mission Study the logical time for children is during vacation. Will not every second vice president order at once copies of the last Mission Study books, namely: "Jack of all Trades," "Mook and Jack and Janet in the Philippines."

The following plan has been used with success. One copy of each book has been placed in the hands of some woman in each neighborhood; she was asked to have Story Hour in her home each afternoon for a week. She invited all the children near her to attend. Then she read the book to them, reading from one to two chapters each day. The last afternoon, an oral examination was given, or the older Juniors were asked to bring the story of the book written in their own words. After the examination, the children were allowed to make candy. The leaders of these circles have been surprised at the knowledge of the book as revealed in the examinations. And, too, the children were pleased with a study that had not been so long drawn out. Under the old plan of taking a chapter each week, the children lose interest, because they lose the connection. In the church where this plan has been tried almost every child in the church has been reached by Mission Study. Another advantage is that a woman who cannot leave her home can have the privilege of helping in this important work of the church.

Each Mission Study class counts ten points on the Honor Roll. Any Society can reach the Honor Roll by organizing Mission Study Circles. Our Goal is every Junior Society an Honor Roll Society. CORINNE ROGERS.

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

SOMETHING FOR RURAL CHURCH WORKERS TO READ.

M. W. Brabham, Rural Worker.

During the long evenings on the farm, when winter weather shuts us in, there are moments and hours in which we often wish to push a little nearer the light and read for a while.

In the course of a winter we frequently make plans for the coming of "open weather;" this causes us to be interested in what writers are saying in such good papers as "The Progressive Farmer," "The Country Gentleman," and others; we want to know what others have done and are doing on their farms.

Along side of these there are books and papers which may fairly claim a place because of their worth, their interest and their subjects. Some of these could be supplied by the Sunday schools of the community if plans are made now to secure them.

Such papers are "The American Boy," "The Youth's Companion," "The American Magazine," "The Visitor," "Boys and Girls," "The Nashville Christian Advocate," the New Orleans Christian Advocate, "Rural Manhood," "The Missionary Voice," "The World Outlook."

The following are some of the books recommended for reading this winter:

"How to Run a Little Sunday School," Ferguson, 75c.

"The Making of a Country Parish," Mills, $1.

"New Schools for Old." Dewey, $1.50. This is the story of a public school made over by the interestingly hard work of a country school teacher.

"World Facts and America's Responsibility," Patton, $1; a vitally interesting book setting forth conditions in missionary fields.

"Making America Safe." Goddard-McDonnell; a striking presentation of the Home Mission Work of the M. E. Church South.

"A Methodist Church and Its Work," Tippey and Kern, 65c.

"The Christ We Forget," Wilson, $1.50.

"Our Troublesome Religious Questions," Pell, $1.50.

"The American Girl and Her Community," Slattery, $1.50.

"Big Jobs for Little Churches," by John F. Cowan, 75c.

"The Making of a Country Parish," Mills, $1.

"Training the Devotional Life," Meyer-Kennedy, 75c. A splendid study of the importance of training our boys and girls and young people in right habits of worship.

"The Methodist Hymnal: Annotated Edition," Tillett, $2. A very interesting setting forth of incidents and stories connected with the lives of our hymn writers and in many instances the story of how the hymn came to be written.

"Marks of a World Christian," by Fleming, 75c. This little book will prove to be a good friend to carry about from day to day, using it as a basis of devotional study and reading.

"Social Studies of the War," by Clark; this book is the outcome of the studies and experiences of Rev. Elmer T. Clark during his stay in England, France and Italy. $1.50.

"Does God Care," Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, 75c; a study in the love of God and the prayer life of the individual.

"The Life of Jesus," by Harris Franklin Rall, 75c.

"Life in the Making," Barclay and others. This is a delightful study of the nature and needs of the child and will be especially helpful to parents and Sunday school teachers; it is one of the books in the Standard Teacher Training Course of our church.

The winter will be an opportune time to secure some of the various leaflets dealing with the work of the Sunday school. These may be had without cost by writing to the General Sunday School Board, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Some of these are as follows: "Wesley Bible Class Suggestions for Officers, Teachers and Members;" "Elementary Work in the One Room School;" "The Standard Teacher Training Course;" "How to Begin and Conduct It;" "Program of Service for Wesley Bible Classes;" "The Young People's Department and the Young People's Wesley Bible Class;" "The Cradle Roll Department;" "The Beginners' Department;" "The Primary Department;" "The Junior Department;" "The Rural Sunday School Keeping Open All the Year."

Hyomei

THE BREATH of the FOREST

THAT KILLS CATARRH GERMS.

While lecturing in London, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement, and temperance orator and leader of international fame, who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble.

He went to Inland Australia where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forests, especially the Eucalyptus trees. This experience led Mr Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment,—Hyomei.

Hyomei is a germ killing vapor treatment formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. This medicated air is especially effective in treating Catarrh and colds of the head, Catarrhal Coughs, Bronchial Catarrh, Spasmodic Croup, Catarrhal Laryngitis or Hay Fever. It destroys the catarrhal germs and restores health.

Sold on a positive guarantee of satisfactory results or money refunded. Complete outfit $1.15; extra bottle inhalant 60c. At druggists or by mail, if your druggist cannot supply it. Booth's Hyomei Co., Ithaca, N. Y.

What Nuxated Iron Is Made From

Sworn Statement of Composition of Its Formula

It increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time in many instances.

The Board of Directors have authorized the broadest publication of the sworn statement of the composition of Nuxated Iron, one of the most widely used tonic, strength and blood builders in the world, so that the public may examine it for themselves and judge as to its merits.

It is conservatively estimated that this remarkable formula is now being used by over 3,000,000 people annually in America alone. Among those who have used and strongly endorse it are many physicians formerly connected with well-known hospitals, former United States Senators, members of Congress, and former Health Officials.

Newspapers everywhere are invited to copy this statement for the benefit of their readers. It is suggested that physicians make a record of it and keep it in their offices so that they may intelligently answer questions of patients concerning it. Everybody is advised to cut it out and keep it. A copy of the actual sworn statement will be sent to anyone who desires such. It is as follows:

Iron Peptonate (Special specific Standard) Quantity given below.
Sodium Glycerophosphates U. S. P. (Monsanto.)
Calcium Glycerophosphates U. S. P. (Monsanto.)
P. E. Nux Vomica U. S. P.
Cascarin Bitter
Magnesium Carbonate
Po. Ginger U. S. P.
Oil Cassia Cinnamon U. S. P.
Calcium Carbonate Precip. U. S. P.

Each dose of two tablets of Nuxated Iron contains one and one-half grains of organic iron in the form of iron peptonate of a special specific standard which in our opinion possesses superior qualities to any other known form of iron. By using other makes of Iron Peptonate we could have put the same quantity of actual iron in the tablets at less than one-fourth the cost to us, and by using metallic iron we could have accomplished the same thing at less than one-twelfth the cost; but by so doing we must have most certainly impaired their therapeutic efficacy. Glycerophosphates used in Nuxated Iron is one of the most expensive tonic ingredients known. It is especially recommended to build up the nerve force and thereby increase brain power, as glycerophosphates are said to contain phosphorous in a form very similar to that in which it is found in the nerve and brain cells of man.

As will be seen from the above, two important ingredients of Nuxated Iron (Iron Peptonate and Glycerophosphates) are very expensive products as compared with most other tonics.

Under such circumstances the temptation to adulteration and substitution by unscrupulous persons, is very great and the public is hereby warned to be careful and see every bottle is plainly labeled "Nuxated Iron," by the Dee Health Laboratories, Paris, London, and Detroit, U. S. A., as this is the only genuine article. If you have taken other forms of iron without success, this does not prove Nuxated Iron will not help you. We guarantee satisfaction to every purchaser or your money will be refunded.

In regard to the value of Nuxated Iron, Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says it has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves and strengthening the muscles. Dr. J. W. Armistead, Grove Hill, Ala., graduate of the University of Alabama School of Medicine, Mobile, 1883, says: "In the cases I used Nuxated Iron I have found more beneficial results than from any preparation I have ever used in 31 years' practice." Dr. R. B. Baugh, Polkville, Miss., graduate of the Memphis Hospital College, Memphis, 1898, says: "I always prescribe Nuxated Iron where a reconstructive tonic is indicated." Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time.

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. Nuxated Iron is not recommended for use in cases of acute illness, but only as a tonic, strength and blood builder. In case of illness always consult your family physician and be guided by his advice. If in doubt as to whether or not you need a tonic, ask your doctor, as we do not wish to sell you Nuxated Iron if you do not require it. If you should use it and it does not help you, notify us and we will return your money. It is sold by all druggists. Dee Health Laboratories, Detroit, Mich.

REPORT ON THE GENERAL STATE OF THE CHURCH, MANSFIELD, LA.

As the third quarterly conference was held only a short time ago, little has occurred since; but it is well for the fourth quarterly conference to give a resume of the work during the year.

We are grateful to God for a year of peace and harmony among our members. All have worked together, and there have been no bickerings or dissensions to mar our fellowship or hinder our efforts. This does not mean that we agree about everything; for even good people, like Paul and Peter and Barnabas, have their differences. But it means that we hold our differences in charity, and seek to work together for the best interests of the church. The perfect harmony that has existed between the pastor and his official board will ever be a grateful memory.

We have had a fine year in our financial work. We have raised nearly $1,500 more than in previous years on our regular budget, notwithstanding the numerous extra demands made upon us. The pastor's salary was increased $500; he was given an excellent helper in Mrs. T. H. Morris; the parsonage has had a new roof put on at an expense of several hundred dollars; the ladies have made additions to the furniture; all bills have been paid promptly when they came due; our Centenary apportionment of $15,000 was exceeded, and all old debts cleared up; we have sent over $600 to the Orphanage at Ruston; all our Conference claims will be met in full, and my successor will begin with a clean sheet. We are commanded to give "honor to whom honor is due"; and it is right to say that these fine financial results are largely due to the earnest and diligent leadership of the Chairman of the Board of Stewards, Judge H. T. Liverman. He has had the cordial support of the Board. Altogether the church has raised a total of $16,000, not including our Centenary contribution. Our people have responded liberally to the needs of the work, and have done it cheerfully.

In the spring we had a most gracious revival, led by Rev. Lovick P. Law. More than fifty persons were converted and joined the church on profession of faith, and hundreds of our people were led to a renewed consecration to God. The blessing of the meeting rested on the whole community. Bro. Law, assisted by his wife in the musical department, is an evangelist one can wholly commend, and both he and his good wife won a warm place in the hearts of our people. All departments of the church, Sunday school, Missionary Society, and Epworth League, as the several respective reports will show, are in fine working order.

It is a pleasure to make special reference to the work of Mrs. Morris. Sister Morris is the widow of Rev. T. H. Morris, deceased, a former pastor of this church. Her experience as a minister's wife admirably fits her for the position she fills. She knows what a pastor wants a helper to do, and what is due to the pastor. She was acquainted with the people, and is esteemed and beloved by the whole community. Her help has been invaluable, and her work with the ladies, and with the young people, and in the homes of Mansfield has given her a warm place in our hearts. I hope the church will retain the useful service of Mrs. Morris, though in making this suggestion I am acting on my own motion without knowing her plans.

And now it is with a heart full of gratitude to God and to the good people of Mansfield that I refer to their kindness to me and to my family, in the gift of a permanent home among them. An eligible lot, and something under $5,000 have been donated to us for a home. The gift was as unexpected as it was unsolicited and grateful. Bishops are sometimes the fortunate recipients of such distinguished favors, but it is very seldom that such happy fortune comes to the private soldier of the Cross. It was the spontaneous action of the community, which enhances its value. I was seventy years old on October 5, and have been 53 years in the ministry. It is glorious when one reaches the summit of threescore years and ten, like Jacob at Jabbok, to meet a delegation of the angels of the Lord, who make the spot warm and sunny with their presence, and throw over us the mantles of their love. May the richest blessing of God be upon the people of Mansfield.

Miss Lucille Aubry has been transferred to Temple, Texas.

Respectfully submitted,
S. A. STEEL, Pastor.

FROM ST. FRANCISVILLE CHARGE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: I am giving you a small report from my work. This is my 24th year to serve our Conference, and I have tried to make it the best. We have held three meetings on the work—at New Hope, Tunica, and Concord. At Tunica, Brother Booth, of Baton Rouge, did the preaching and it was good. One member was received and the church was revived. At New Hope, I did all of the preaching, also at Concord. Sixteen members were received at Concord. We have some good Sunday schools on the work. We have had our "Early" man with us, and he did good work. I think we have advanced on some lines. The Lord has been with us.

It was my privilege to be at the dedication of the new church, James Chapel, on the Springfield charge, on the 22d of this month (October). We met Brothers L. I. McCain, of Hammond; T. D. Lipscomb, of Ponchatoula; J. Wilson Brown, E. D. Fayard. Our elder, H. W. May, did the preaching, and stood at the head of all the services. He preached one of his good sermons. We had a good day in His name.

Our collections are not in full; however, we are making the call.

Yours in Him,

FROM ROCKY SPRINGS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you allow me a line or so in the Advocate to brag about some good times? I see the other preachers are telling of the times enjoyed in revival work; a good time started with us on the fifth Sunday in August, when Brother T. J. O'Neil, the former pastor of Burtonton church, came to me there and started a protracted meeting. His son, James W., or Lieutenant O'Neil, came along. Of course I call him Jim, because we were boys together. Jim used to preach before he went to war; I did, too. Jim made the music, I tried to sing, and Uncle Tom did the preaching. God gave the blessings, and, I tell you, we had a good time; the folks all enjoyed it. Jim is in Emory University now, preparing to preach better; I am doing my best, and Uncle Tom is still raising sand with the devil. I tell you, I don't mind rooting for a fellow that preaches like Uncle Tom; and he says that he is proud of us boys. Some people call us scrubs, but I am glad some people are proud of the scrubs, and that God honors our work and allows us to enjoy ourselves in his work.

I am doing some rescue work on this charge. I have rescued the lost Shiloh church after about five years of abandonment. We are now having good service there. The people seem to be religiously inclined. We are also having good times at Cedars, besides the other six regular churches on this charge.

Our church at old Redbone, in Warren County, was destroyed by fire a year or so ago. Our register was lost in the fire, and, as supply, it becomes my task to make a new one; so I would be very glad if all the preachers who have ever served Redbone as pastor would write me the dates that they served there, and, if possible, give the names of those who joined under them, and how. All this would be greatly appreciated and you had better help me now because I am too busy to be good looking; but you cannot keep me from loving the work.

Respectfully,
ANDREW J. BOYLES.

FROM CREW LAKE, LA.

I have just settled from the activity of the protracted meetings. I commenced my first meeting at Crew Lake on Wednesday night, Aug. 27, and closed it Wednesday night, Sept. 10. I did the preaching until Monday, Sept. 1, when Brother I. T. Reames, of Rayville, came to my help, and remained most of the time until the close. He did very good work, both in preaching and leading the choir. We had very good results. There were converted and added to the church eleven members, and we received one by letter. One has joined since, making twelve by profession and from other churches, and one by letter. The whole community was greatly benefited.

On Sept. 14 (Sunday), I commenced my meeting in Girard, preaching at 11 o'clock and at night, and continued until Wednesday, Oct. 1. On Monday, the 15th, Brother W. R. Harvell came to my help and remained through the meeting. We had a meeting of great power, Harvell did the preaching and had the management of the services, and he gave good work. We had very good results. There were nineteen converted and joined the church, with two from other churches and two by letter.

The two churches received thirty-six in all, two by letter and the others by profession and from other churches, making an increase to the church of thirty-two members.

Since closing my meeting, I have been helping some of the brethren, and have just settled to get ready for Conference. We will (my work and I) make a good report.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WILL THEY DO IT?

Work for all the unemployed in Germany for the next eight years will be provided in restoring the ruined mines of Northern France, according to a recent investigation. The problem, however, is not to find work nowadays, but to get somebody to do it. This country is passing through one of the severest industrial crises in its history because so many people prefer not to work. If "an idle brain is the devil's workshop," idle hands are his tools.

BETTER THAN DRINKING.

We have seen all kinds of results attributed to the placing of the ban on the sale of liquor. The latest to come under our observation is the statement of a New York hotel proprietor that the American people are eating fifty per cent more than they did prior to prohibition. We have no means of verifying the statement, but we hope it is true. It brings to our mind the picture of thousands of helpless women and innocent children, formerly clothed in rags and pinched with hunger, who now are able to dress decently and to enjoy a nutritious meal with some degree of regularity because the wages of the husband and father do not regularly go into the till of the barkeeper. Those wasted cheeks are beginning to fill out, and those thin bodies are beginning to show signs of vigorous development, and those lustreless eyes are beginning to shine with the light of a new hope and a new purpose. Some of the people of America are eating more than they did before prohibition went into effect—yes, and we thank God for it.

AMERICA FOR AMERICANS.

A new era has opened in the course of American history. The Government has energetically instituted the policy that hitherto has been a kind of ideal in the minds of the people without definite steps to attain it—America for Americans. This ideal is not based upon narrowness and selfishness, but upon a broad conception of the part the United States has played and ought to continue to play in the development of the world's civilization. It has been our proud boast from the beginning of our history that the people of all climes were welcome to our shores, to enjoy the freedom of a democratic government and to partake of the privileges of a liberty-loving nation. In spite of the protests of those who have been dominated by selfish considerations, our country has welcomed the hosts of immigrants who have sought our shores year after year. But a change has come about. So long as those foreigners were willing to become one with us, to assimilate our ideals of life and of government, we gave them a cordial greeting and helped them in every way possible to establish themselves in the pursuit of happiness and prosperity; but when these aliens deliberately, persistently, and vigorously undertake a propaganda that looks to anarchy and revolution, to the overthrow of the constituted forms of government and the establishment of class rule, patience ceases to be a virtue. In self-protection, therefore, the Government has undertaken to run down, arrest, and deport the radicals who have been plotting to destroy this Government by violence. A good beginning has been made. Scores of the leaders of the "Reds" have been arrested and put in prison, and the Government is showing a commendable determination to make America safe for Americans. Our authorities may count on the hearty support of all patriotic citizens in this determination.

THE LATE REV. J. E. THOMAS,

Whose recent sudden death was a great shock to the Church. Brother Thomas would have been the host of the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference.

"OUT OF THEIR OWN MOUTHS."

"The triviality, licentiousness and sensuality connected with the stage were condemned by a well known American actress in a very outspoken address at Leeds yesterday," says a news dispatch from London. We do not mean to suggest by the caption of this paragraph that the speaker in question is aught that she should not be—the presumption is that she exemplifies the highest type of womanly virtue—but we have used it because it brings to us testimony from one who, presumably, is in a position to know whereof she speaks. We have heard the charge made that all adverse criticism of the present-day stage comes from Puritanical persons who are altogether out of sympathy with those forms of art that appeal to the liberal and high-minded men and women of this advanced age. We have known that this charge is not true—and here we have testimony to that effect from one who is well qualified to speak. We would not say that all theatrical productions are morally objectionable—we know nothing about them at first hand—but we are thoroughly convinced from what we have heard and read that a stream of pollution is being poured into the minds of our young men and young women from the stage that is poisoning the deepest springs of their natures. Our protest is not against a legitimate form of art that has ministered to the esthetic tastes of refined men and women for hundreds of years, but against a vile form of indecency that a commercialized stage parades under the name of art. It is high time that the fathers and mothers of this land learn not only where their sons and daughters go to find their entertainment, but also what that entertainment is. And when they know, they will, unless their parental instinct is blunted, make impossible the continuance of the degrading "shows" that are sending thousands to perdition every year.

ARMISTICE DAY.

Tuesday, November 11, was the first anniversary of the signing of the armistice by the nations that were engaged in the great world war. It was very properly observed as a holiday, or celebrated in fitting fashion, throughout the world. It is probable that it will henceforth be marked on the calendar as one of the memorable dates of all history. While the armistice did not actually end the war, it brought to a close active hostilities and relieved the tremendous strain under which the whole world had been laboring for many weary months. In a very real sense it marked the beginning of a new era in the relation of nations to one another—an era of international association based upon the principles of justice and righteousness, rather than upon force. It is a cause of legitimate pride to all citizens of the United States to remember the part our own nation had in bringing the war to a close. Without desire for material gain, and with no thought of selfish aggrandizement, we went into the fight because we conceived that the civilization of the world was at stake. We gave freely of our treasure, and thousands of our choicest young men gallantly and heroically fought for this holy cause. Some of them made the supreme sacrifice. Those who stayed at home were just as faithful in their service as those who went overseas. The world has not yet been able to return altogether to the ways of peace, but progress is being made, and we may confidently hope that the last chapters in the history of the mighty struggle will soon be written. It is to Almighty God that we owe thanks for the marvelous victory, and it is to him that our hearts should always turn in gratitude on this memorable date.

THE BUD OF A COMING PREACHER.

By Byron H. Stauffer.

Eureka! I have found the bud of a coming preacher. When, some Sabbath thirty years hereafter, he has swayed a multitude by his eloquence, and I have toddled up to the chancel to grasp his hand in congratulation, I shall tell the nearby deacon, class leader, elder or vestryman that I discovered his preacher back in the year 1919.

Two months ago he introduced himself to me in a letter of inquiry as to methods in sermonic preparation. Last week he 'phoned to ask whether he might have thirty minutes' chat with me. He had dropped off in Winnipeg, while en route from Massachusetts to Regina, to discuss matters of preaching with two or three preachers. Well, well! I have heard of a budding manufacturer spending a day at Kenosha or Kankakee to study output or overhead expense; or a medical graduate detouring to Rochester, Minnesota, to observe the ways of the skillful Mayos; but this idea of a young parson stopping off at an intermediate point on a holiday tour to inquire as to introductions and perorations, illustrations and applications, scrap-books and filing cabinets, was novel to the extreme.

Well, I gave him—and he gave me—not thirty, but three hundred minutes. I walked farther those two days than I had in many a week (and, by the way, I am trying to maintain the new habit), chatting about preachers and texts with that chap. He returns in a fortnight, and I have strictly commanded him to give me another call, for I need the tonic of his conversation.

He is a young Welshman of twenty-four. He started preaching when he was seventeen, took what educational training he could on the fly while preaching here and there in English missions and tumble-down rural churches, came to America two years ago, secured a modest pulpit in New England, and is at it—everlasting at it—gathering material, studying methods, making sermons. He has read widely; one can readily see that. In two years he has imbibed much of American history and biography. He knows who's who and what's what in all the denominations. You feel instinctively that he is getting ready for a career, modest though he is about it all.

But this is the novel thing, that he loves to talk preaching. You do not frequently meet his kind among young preachers. Too often they will tell of successful financial campaigns, special efforts for one cause or another; but about the keystone feature of their calling, preaching the Word, they are strangely silent. What ails such men? I journeyed three hundred miles with a pastor who could not once assist in relieving the tedium of the nine hours by a refreshing word about his pulpit work. Not once did he enthuse over his calling sufficiently to tell me his latest text, outline the sermonic programme of the last month, or speak of the Scripture lessons that had gripped his people. I tried my best to draw him out, asked him whether he shared the view of a prominent pulpiteer that the Scripture selection should not exceed four or five verses, and should not usually be on the same subject as the sermon. But he had no opinion to offer. He knew all the details of ecclesiastical politics, could tell who was slated for such-and-such a secretarial position. This may sound strange enough to be doubted; it is not only the exact truth in this case, but I will assert that in parts of this continent such lack of enthusiasm regarding preaching is general among preachers.

How can we develop more preachers of the type of my young Welshman? That is the puzzle of every theological seminary president the world over. Would the finding of them solve our problem of empty pews? In part, perhaps; but only in part. There are a score of excellent, and you might say famous, preachers in New York and Boston who are preaching to small congregations in big churches. These men have consecration, culture and oratorical fire, but the throngs which pass their auditoriums never enter to sample the preaching. If they did, they would probably not appreciate the message. Yet these men cannot be said to fail, and they do better than men without their qualities would do. In a generation which has lost much of the church-going habits of the fathers, it is all the more important to have a consecrated ministry. And no preacher can be said to be consecrated who does not supremely love to preach.

The coming preacher must be discovered in the local church. Somewhere, in a prayer-meeting, or a Junior League, or a Christian Endeavor, there should be furnished an opportunity for some young Samuel to reveal his prophetic gift. The pastor's eye and ear should be quick to discover such an one. Yea, he must form a sacred league with the lad's parents to watch for the Spirit's call. In the obituary column we often rejoice to note how many churches a deceased pastor had seen erected. Would that it were possible to record how many youths he had inspired to take up the work of an ambassador for Christ.

The entire atmosphere of the theological school should develop a love for preaching. Does it usually? The holder of the chair of homiletics should invite the most successful preachers within reach to address his classes frequently. These addresses should not be stilted lectures, delivered with an eye to their subsequent publication, but heart-to-heart talks on their workshop habits, the gathering and conserving of illustrative material, the putting together of sermons, the choice of subjects, the phrasing of themes, pulpit manners and ministerial aims.

If R. J. Campbell, or J. H. Jowett, or George A. Gordon should to-day be appointed to average pastorates in strange cities—cities which the fame of these preachers had never reached—would they succeed in filling their churches and continue to do so year after year? Understand me; I ask whether, with their present intrinsic merits, but without the magic of their names, they could gather and hold unusually large congregations, granting the presence in the community of an English-speaking, Protestant population? I name these three men because of their undoubted ability; also because they are not at all sensational nor announce subjects. It is a question for debate. Opinion will be well divided among thoughtful people. They would certainly draw some spiritually-minded people. But would the Sunday motorist and the Sunday movie devotee find themselves drawn to church? Could these men adjust their messages to the wants, and the immediate needs, perchance, of the unchurched?

I raise the question to ask another. Is not the cause of empty pews a matter of poor listening as well as poor preaching? Should the people not at least share the blame now usually heaped on the pulpit? A newspaper sent out this question to the clergy of its constituency: "What changes should be made in religious teachings to meet present-day needs?" I suggested that the query might be made more pertinent by amending it to read: "What religious teaching should be heeded to remedy present-day conditions?" I cannot think of any new doctrines or theories that would be so potent; can you? The messages of the various ecclesiastical organizations seem to me to be ample. Personal responsibility, retribution, salvation through Christ, the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule—all these, if heeded, would solve our moral problems. The great trouble is that men are so busily engaged in seeking dollars, and in finding ways of hilariously spending the dollars they succeed in gathering, that they have little time for heeding the rules of real living. This is their fault, not the preachers'. During the hour of the final game between the Reds and the Whites I would hardly venture to preach a sermon in the grand stand. There seems to be a perpetual world series of another and more harmful sort on hand to prevent the delivery of our message to the souls of men.

Yet we must go to the world's grand stand and seek to get men's attention to a message that belongs to their peace. Somewhere between the innings we must seek our chance. We dare not give up because so many do not seem willing to listen. We must devise methods and a message that will hold the attention long enough to do the work. Some years ago, before the days of the movie of to-day, an ex-preacher came to me to offer a stereopticon show free of charge. My down-town church needed good entertainments, and with some speculation as to the donor's motives I accepted the proposition. The pictures were delightful. One series showed the organs of digestion and the processes of food assimilation. The lecturer spoke of the need of food which would supply blood and fats and muscle in exactly the right proportion. Then he quietly remarked that many physicians believed that Fry's Scrambled Oats contained all these requisites. That was all he said on the subject, but the Fry company evidently thought it profitable to pay that man a good salary to say that one sentence to five hundred people a night.

I wonder if it would not be good tactics to employ that method if the old devices fail. By unique inventions the Jesuit fathers won a hearing in heathen lands where the immediate holding of masses would have failed. Are we not facing similar conditions in many communities? But my point is that amid present conditions a new brand of preacher is a need of the church. The preacher of to-morrow must compete with the amusements of an unchurched throng, without the help of a real Sabbath. If he wins, he must do so by supreme faith in his message. More, he must have all the help he can get from the best training and the widest culture. Some company advertised, "We cannot improve the goods, so we have beautified the box." Only the man who is passionately fond of preaching can succeed to-morrow. That is why I stake my all on that budding young Welsh preacher.—Christian Guardian.

SOUTHERN METHODISM IN EUROPE.

Southern Methodism has eagerly and prayerfully awaited the return of the Centenary Commission which sailed to Europe some months ago vested with full power to establish missionary work in that ripe and needy field.

The delegation, headed by Bishop James Atkins and Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, has returned to America. The members of the delegation are enthusiastic concerning the outlook in our newest mission field.

The commission spent two months in making investigations, and brings to the church at home a report that indicates a complete and accurate understanding of the situation in the war-despoiled lands of Europe. A review of the work projected by them will convince even the most skeptical that the $5,000,000 which was alloted to this needy field will render the highest service to a grateful and suffering people.

Bishop Atkins and Dr. Beauchamp are unanimous in declaring that the first and most imperative need is to save the people from the rigors of the approaching winter. Dr. Beauchamp said that the condition of the people is pitiable. They have made the long and painful trek back to the place where once their homes and gardens smiled, only to find ruin, destruction and desolation. In many cases they are living in deserted enemy dugouts. They need everything, shelter, food, clothes, friends; and it is one of the greatest joys of Methodism to supply their need. Dr. Beauchamp said that he had seen children of fourteen who could not walk and who would never walk, as a result of starvation and German cruelty. Multitudes of Belgian children will die in spite of all that can be done to prevent such a dreadful possibility. There are a few men left—old men. The younger men and boys were killed in the war.

As a first step toward immediate relief for such a terrible situation, the Commission has projected the establishment of stations at Brussels, Ypres, Montdidier, St. Quentin, and elsewhere. These relief stations will furnish food, fuel, and clothing, and do everything possible to meet the most pressing needs of the people. An arrangement with the British Red Cross operating in France, has been made, by which transportation and supplies will be furnished.

The Commission was fortunate in securing at a very reasonable price a magnificent building which formerly housed a famous boys' school at Uccle, a suburb of Brussels. This piece of property, costing two hundred thousand francs, will be converted into a home for Belgian orphans.

Another magnificent plant, situated in the heart of Brussels, will be converted into an immense Publishing House. It will contain printing presses, book-stores, Bible distributing station, lecture room, preaching-places, and living quarters for deaconesses and nurses. From this great center, Belgium and France will be supplied with Christian literature. Through an agreement, the Secretaries of the two Protestant bodies already in Belgium, the State Church and the Free Church, will be located in this building, and it will not only be Methodist headquarters, but headquarters for the United Protestantism of Belgium.

Permanent work among the Southern Slavs will be developed around a hospital and clinic situated at Belgrade, Serbia, and taken over by the Commission.

A proposition has been made looking toward the acquisition of one-half interest in the Protestant Hospital now in operation at Brussels. This will mean enlarged staff and equipment, and will insure to our church an equal voice in the management.

Permanent work will be launched at Ypres, probably the most completely devasted of any city of Belgium. The Commission also recommends the erection at once of a Southern Methodist Church amid the black ruins of Ypres to stand by the side of the great memorials erected to the fallen heroes of allied nations as a worthy and fitting exponent of Christianity.

Probably the crowning achievement of the Commission was the selection of five colporteurs to go at once into the Holy Land for the purpose of distributing Bibles and Christian literature. These will be the first to enter the Holy Land on such a mission. It is a matter of great pride and rejoicing that it has been given to our church to be the pioneer in giving to the land of Christ the printed Word which will mean to many the knowledge and acceptance of His Gospel.

The Commission had every facility for making an accurate survey of the field. The work was done carefully and conscientiously. A wonderful program has been outlined, and no time should be lost in carrying it out. To do this successfully will require a large force of trained workers, filled with the love of humanity and the desire to serve God.—Centenary Headquarters.

HENRY POPE LEWIS.

By Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D.

The death of the Rev. Henry P. Lewis removed from the walks of earthly life the oldest and most honored member of the Mississippi Annual Conference, and took from its roll of superannuates the name of the most beloved of the brotherhood of itinerant Methodist preachers in the State. It is given to but few of our preachers to serve the church more than sixty years, and to fewer still to serve so long with so high a record of usefulness and popularity.

His life was not marked by the flash and sparkle and tumult of a mountain stream, leaping from crag to crag with thunderous roar on its downward journey to the sea; but was rather like the full, wide current of a river flowing through green meadow lands, making rich the pasturage, slaking with its cool waters the thirst of man and beast, and blessing with its generous bounty the lands through which it flowed.

He was a native of Mississippi and knew, as only one born among them can know, our people, and he loved them, and by them was loved. His was that good English blood that poured its richness and its strength into our early American life, and it was his honest pride that he could trace his lineage back to a sturdy young Welshman who fought with Marion and Green against the British in the Revolutionary War. The son of this hero of the Revolution, and the father of our brother, was Quinnea Lewis, a native of North Carolina, who, at the age of twenty-two, married Martha Speir, and, about 1820, moved to Mississippi and settled near Pearl River, in Marion County. There are still living a few who cherish the memory of "Uncle Quinny" and "Aunt Pattie" and bear witness to the beauty of their Christian lives, and knew their sturdy sons, two of whom became honored ministers of Christ and members of the Mississippi Annual Conference. The eighth of the eleven children was Henry, who was born in the old home in Marion County, April 1, 1836. He joined the church when he was ten years old, and, in 1855, when nineteen years of age, was soundly and happily converted. He used to say of his experience: "I got a full start in my early Christian life, and I have never willfully departed from my God."

Presiding Elder of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference. Brother Lipscomb will become Professor of English Bible in Emory University at the Close of the Approaching Session of his Conference.

As an itinerant preacher, Brother Lewis' strength was found, not in the possession of any one conspicuous gift, but in a combination of gifts that made possible a well-rounded and symmetrical character and a type of unusual efficiency. He was always safe, always available, always useful, always popular. Entering the ministry at a time when in our Conference there was scarcely any other character of appointment than the large and important circuits among the rural population, he found in these the field of his happiness and usefulness.

Brother Lewis was fortunate in the fact that the three most powerful formative influences that operate in the development of character wrought together in his life. From his conspicuously devout parents he inherited a sound and robust body, a voice of singular sweetness and power, the inestimable gift of common sense, and an amiable and obedient spirit. The influence of his godly home and the circumstances that surrounded his youth confirmed these natural gifts; and his experience of religion in the years of his childhood made possible the steady and orderly development of the traits inherited by the child and the virtues inculcated in the youth. No wonder, then, that he became a strong, earnest, and scriptural preacher; a gentle, sympathetic and helpful pastor; a wise and affectionate counsellor, and a faithful and successful itinerant minister. He seemed happy and contented in his work, seemed to know no jealousy of his more conspicuous brethren, seemed never tempted to harsh or unbrotherly criticism, and throughout his life the kindliness of his heart was shown in his frequent expressions of appreciation of the people whom he served. Hear him say again and again: "I have four preaching places among as good people as I ever served," or, "We soon found a warm place in the hearts of the good people," or "We found good people everywhere," or, "Better people I have never known."

He was licensed to preach in July, 1856, and received on trial in the Mississippi Conference in November, 1857, at a session of the Annual Conference held in Brandon and presided over by Bishop Early. His gentle and susceptible spirit was strongly impressed by his contact with his brethren, and he mentions, with reverence the names of the strong men then prominent in the Conference. His appointment was Black Creek Circuit, comprising thirteen preaching places and covering all of Harrison County and parts of Perry and Marion. He used to say, with a smile, that his appointments on the circuit began with New Hope and ended with Good Hope. For ten years he traveled circuits, principally in the southeastern section of the Conference, his charges being Columbia, Franklinton, Cayuga (colored charge), Warren Mission (colored), Tylertown and Mt. Carmel. In 1867 he was made presiding elder of the Paulding District, which he served two years, and after this, as preacher in charge, he served Franklinton, China Grove, Holmesville, Magnolia, and Amite Circuits.

In 1883 we find him on the Providence Circuit, where he labored three years, during which pastorate he was wounded and narrowly escaped death in a cyclone which destroyed the church in which the services were being held. Then came the pastorates at Lauderdale, Benton, Caseyville, Summit, Lake, Carthage, Fannin, Yazoo, and Gallman Circuits. At Gallman came the greatest sorrow of his life in the death of his noble wife, whose wise and loving ministry had been his joy for more than forty years. In 1905 he served the Vicksburg Circuit, shadowed by his sorrow in the death of his wife, but sustained by his unwavering faith. To the same pastoral charge the next year was given, and then came the last stage of the itinerant journey—Liberty Circuit, where two years were spent, and where the pleasure of the Lord prospered in the hands of the veteran preacher. The last day of the itinerant life had come. It was known that the farewell sermon would be delivered and a great congregation gathered to hear the message of the beloved pastor. After the sermon the doors of the church were opened and eight persons joined the church.

In 1909 he was granted the superannuate relation and moved to Jackson, where he spent the remaining years of his life. Everywhere his work was marked by revivals among the churches and everywhere he so walked among his brethren that when his name was called at the Annual Conference sessions the answer was always given, "There is nothing against him."

Brother Lewis was twice married. In his youth he met and loved and wedded Rebecca Ann Tillerry, of Wilkinson County, Miss. She was the pride of his young manhood, the sharer of the fortunes of his long itinerant life, and the wise and devoted mother of his children. After the death of his wife, which occurred in August, 1904, he was married to Mrs. Louisiana Langston, a native of Mississippi, but for some years a resident of Arizona and Texas, where her first husband was a member of the Los Angeles and North Texas Conferences. They were married in 1907 and for twelve years this noble and devoted woman was the stay and comfort of his old age and the sympathetic and helpful mother of his children.

The home life of Brother Lewis was especially happy. The good mother was the center around which the congenial circle moved, but mother and children alike looked with affectionate pride to the father whose influence bound the happy group together. There were born in the home eleven childrn, seven boys, of whom the oldest, William Bryant, died in his childhood, and four daughters, one of whom, Ada, died in infancy. Of the surviving sons, the oldest, Charles, is a railroad yardman and lives in Meridian, Miss. The others, Barney W., John Tillerry, Henry P., James H., and Osmond Summers, are Methodist preachers and all but John Tillerry, of the North Mississippi Conference, are members of the Annual Conference in which their honored father spent his life. The daughters are Miss Elizabeth, Miss Pattie and Miss Lela. Miss Elizaheth, the eldest, was happily married first to Rev. Jas. E. Jagere, a local preacher, who died in 1888, and later to Mr. W. H. Griffin, of McComb City, Miss., and the youngest, Miss Lela, is the wife of the Rev. W. A. Terry, of the Mississippi Annual Conference. Four of the sons and the preacher son-in-law are honored and loyal alumni of Millsaps College, and the four sons who are members of the Mississippi Conference are known throughout the State as the Lewis Brothers Quartette. It is pleasant to look upon these young men as examples of the promised blessing of God upon the children and grandchildren of the righteous man.

During the years of Brother Lewis' residence in Jackson he became known and loved by the citizens of the community, and those accustomed to worship in the Galloway Memorial Church will long remember the courtly old man who worshiped with them and whose rich and sonorous voice in song and prayer so often touched their hearts.

He attended the session of the Annual Conference in December last; but with the opening months of the new year came the evidences of increasing weakness and the signs of approaching dissolution. He became too weak to attend church and spent most of his time sitting on his front porch ready to greet his passing friends and to talk of the great transition that was approaching, and to declare his confident trust in the Lord who had redeemed him and to whose service his life had been given. A day came when a fall from a chair so injured him that he was confined to his bed, and on Saturday morning, July 26, at 8:30 o'clock, he quietly passed away. The funeral services were held in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends in the great auditorium of the Galloway Memorial Church, after which his body was conveyed by train to McComb City, to rest beside the wife of his youth, the six sons acting as pall bearers from the train to the grave. The Rev. W. M. Sullivan, of Columbia, Miss., conducted the services, assisted by the Rev. Charles W. Crisler, the Rev. J. M. Morse, and the writer of these lines.

Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

SOME FACTS REVEALED BY THE CENTENARY CAMPAIGN.

By Wm. Shields Holmes.

Dear Brother Carley: As Centenary director for the Baton Rouge District, I feel impelled to give to you a few facts that impressed themselves upon me in the progress of the work.

I do not suppose there is a district in the whole connection more nearly rural or more backward as to the work of the church than the one I had the honor to represent. Some of the parishes are almost without railway facilities; some consist largely of cut-over pine lands, thinly populated; and many of the people are despondent because of the impracticability of raising cotton on account of the ravages of the boll-weevil. However, strawberries, vegetables and other crops, and live stock are beginning to take the place of cotton, and our people are really as well off financially as ever, if they were only convinced of that fact.

As only eighteen out of sixty-nine church directors attended two councils held at the beginning of the campaign, the writer was obliged to go to the individual churches, so that he came into touch with a large number of the churches.

The pastoral charges are divided as follows:

Stations	6
Two-church circuits	3
Three-church circuits	2
Four-church circuits	1
Five-church circuits	4
Six-church circuits	3
Eight-church circuits	1

The amounts raised in the several classes without credits were as follows:

	Per Capita
Stations	$27.13
Two and three-church circuits	20.24
Four-church circuits	16.62
Five and six-church circuits	6.65
Eight-church circuits	3.16

However, this table doesn't show exact results because one new station raised only $14.75 per capita. It had formerly been a part of a circuit and was late in getting a pastor, and in getting a start in the Centenary Campaign. Besides, this new station had already subscribed its pastor's salary and all of its Conference benevolences, and when the Centenary Campaign followed immediately, the idea had become stale to some extent.

Again, one six-church circuit made almost a failure of the work, three of the six churches not having made any canvass whatever.

But the table is sufficiently accurate to show the condition of things, and to indicate the folly of circuits with more than two or three churches.

Attention should be called to the fact that the congregations of the station churches are not the wealthiest proportionally. I have in mind three small churches that are perhaps the wealthiest churches in the district.

Money matters are supposed to indicate only the material state of affairs, though I doubt that proposition, but there is another way to get at the spiritual condition of the churches, and that is through the condition of the Sunday schools. Everyhody that thinks at all on the subject knows that it is only through the children that the world will ever be brought to Christ, and the church that looks after the children is the church that has a future.

Being especially interested in the Sunday school, I made a limited investigation of this subject during the campaign.

The stations all had good Sunday schools. I do not mean to say that they were perfect, nor that they even approximated their obligations or their opportunities, but they are very well graded and organized, and are moving forward.

The schools on the circuits of two and three churches are fairly good, and there is one good school on the circuit with four churches. This is due to the efforts of a remarkable woman.

But for the rest, I do not know of a school that could be rated as fair, except possibly one, and some of the churches on the larger circuits have no schools at all.

The pastors do not visit or interest themselves in the schools of the large circuits because they cannot very well do so. They must be up and going to meet their appointments. The fault here is with our plan, rather than with the men. Many of our preachers were reared in the country in churches on the large circuits and have never seen a real live, wide-awake Sunday school. They get no training elsewhere, and how can they be blamed for not knowing how to lead the people in Sunday school work?

And now let me ask what of the future under such conditions as the foregoing? Can our church expect much growth unless we change our plan for the country church? Methodism is a country movement. Are we going to fail at the point where we are supposed to be strongest?

I hope our leaders will see that it is a crime against our church to continue these large circuits and the consequently poor Sunday school work. Cannot some of the Centenary funds be used to correct this? If all our churches could have constant and active pastoral supervision, the money for benevolences would greatly increase.

Let us, then, spend some of the Centenary money on the large circuits, and in that way the great causes of Missions, Education, and so forth, will indirectly secure far more funds than would be spent to get them upon their feet as live, going concerns.

Another serious condition discovered through the Centenary Campaign was the fact that fifteen churches in the district have been abandoned within the past few years. I cannot say why they were abandoned, but it indicates a great lack of efficiency, to say the least. Either the churches ought not to have been built, or, having been built, they should have kept on, unless the congregations had moved away, as sometimes happens in sawmill towns. But, as I am informed, this does not apply to any of the foregoing abandoned churches.

If we abandon our churches after building them and do not see that the children are Christianized, how long will it be before there is no Methodist Church?

"JUST COMING ALONG."

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

The little seven-year-old was late getting in from school; indeed dark was drawing on and mother was getting uneasy lest some accident had befallen her only boy. "Son, why are you so late this evening? Did your teacher keep you in, or did school turn out later?" Quick came the reply, "No ma'am, I was just coming along." "Just coming along" the distance of less than half a mile and on paved streets took nearly three hours, and caused mother great uneasiness. The boy had committed no crime, he had done no wrong; he had only loitered, playing marbles on the street, trying the qualities of the other boy's new top, or stopped to watch the maneuvers of a kite playing with the winds. All unconsciously the time had gone and he had forgotten that mother was anxiously awaiting his usual prompt return.

Such, I said, are the ways of men. How many of us "just come along," forgetful of the plans and interests of others, postponing from day to day to act upon matters that are of great concern to others, which should have prompt recognition if we observe the golden rule! In the Christian Advocate (Nashville) of October 17, appears a communication from the pen of one Mrs. Townsend, of Reedsville, North Carolina, (as with others that have appeared in that periodical) on the burning question of our neglected duty to the "forgotten man." It is well worth a place in every paper in our connection. For quite twenty years our great church has been toying with the crying needs of our superannuates. Setting out to raise $5,000,000, we have actually secured about $500,000. Given 20 years in which to raise $500,000, how long will it take to procure the $5,000,000? And what a lesson in "just coming along" while others suffer! In a recent issue of the Nashville, there appeared a paragraph, "If a Man Were a Horse," which told of a movement upon the part of the people of England to pension the horses which were used in the late great war. There was a picture of a beautiful young girl holding the rein of an English war horse, under which was written, "English War Horses Are Pensioned," and it was stated as a fact that a great fund had been raised by that people to make it possible for the horses used in the war to spend the remainder of their lives without toil. How much greater appreciation of their war horses these people have than the churches have for those men who have gone through the thick of the fight for their upbuilding and who are to-day suffering from the exposures incident to the lives they have lived! The writer has known the old, faithful, family horse fed and groomed, cared for tenderly for what he had done; how much better is a man than a horse!

COLUMBIA (MISSISSIPPI) INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTE.

Dear Mr. Editor: I recently made a visit to the thriving town of Columbia, Miss., to assist, with my four brothers of the Mississippi Conference, Brother Sullivan in a meeting. Outside of saying that God blessed us with a most gracious revival, I will have nothing to say about our meeting held with Brother Sullivan. The main purpose of this article is to tell the readers of our Advocate about that wonderful Industrial School of our State that is located at Columbia. Incidentally, I purpose telling the readers of the Advocate that the success of our revival was largely due to the faithful preparation and effort of Brother Sullivan, the pastor of Columbia Methodism.

A few years ago the authorities of our State located a Reformatory School at Columbia, the purpose, of course, being to take care of, and educate, supposedly incorrigible boys and girls who had become a problem in their home communities. With the liberal assistance of leading financial men of Columbia, the State has purchased, and had donated to it, a thousand or more acres of land on which have been erected several fine and commodious buildings to be used as dor-

REV. E. H. CUNNINGHAM,
Of the North Mississippi Conference.

Brother Cunningham joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1909. He is now closing his second year as pastor at Kosciusko, Miss. Prior to entering the Conference, he was a popular and successful teacher in the public schools of Prentiss County, later entering the service of the U. S. Post Office Department. He has rendered conspicuous service to his Conference and to the whole church by his ability as a newspaper man in reporting the proceedings of important ecclesiastical gatherings.

mitories, school buildings, shops, etc. Mr. Will Jacobs was put at the head of this institution, which is now in process of being developed under his wise leadership.

There can be no doubt but that the right man is on the job as director of this institution. Mr. Jacobs is a broad-minded and big-souled man who loves every child in the institution almost, as if it were his own. One of the first, and best, things that Mr. Jacobs did, was to discard the word REFORMATORY and catalogue the school as THE COLUMBIA INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTE. His good reason for discarding the word REFORMATORY is the fact that when you take from any human the thought that he is a person of reputable character, you thereby put him almost beyond reformation. Mr. Jacobs goes on the theory that all humans are possessed of noble, as well as ignoble natures and that when humans are in their plastic age you have but to let your suggestions touch their nobler natures to develop them into noble men and women. Mr. Jacobs has Sunday school conducted in the Institute every Sunday and has preaching quite often at the Institute. Besides this, as many of the children as desire can go into Columbia to church. Several automobiles full came in, during our revival, on several nights. We were out with them one morning. Personally, I could see but little difference between the one hundred, or more, boys and girls at that Institute and those in our public schools. They were all neatly dressed and had on clean apparel. And their singing was an inspiration. Our State, under the leadership of Mr. Jacobs, is doing a great work for the future good citizenship of Mississippi in giving to these unfortunate children the right ideals of life, and fitting them with an industrial education so that they can become efficient bread winners and builders of homes. When we Christians pray, we should remember this great institution and pray the Father to give wisdom to all concerned, that His will may be done through this institution.

Just a word, now, about Brother Sullivan and the preparation he made for the revival and the deep interest he showed in the spiritual success of the meeting, all the way through. I have been unfortunate, a few times in my life, by having been asked to hold meetings where no previous preparation had been made for the revival, and where the pastor seemed indifferent to the spiritual success of the revival. They seemed to say, by their acts, "Well, Lewis, the job is yours—go to it! You may do something with this bunch, but I doubt it." It is needless to say that it is practically impossible to have a revival under conditions like that. Brother Sullivan, however, made great preparation for the meeting in Columbia. For a week or more before the meeting he and a few of his faithful ones had sunrise prayer meetings, asking for the leadership of the Spirit in the revival, and praying for special ones. During the meeting Brother Sullivan was busy almost day and night working and praying for the spiritual success of the revival.

In conclusion, I will say that the time is here when every pastor in Southern Methodism should be working and praying for a revival of Holy Ghost religion in our church. The pastor who fails at this point is failing at the most vital point of his ministerial life. The end toward which God called the ministry to preach, is the saving of souls. The work of education, the work of the hospital and the work of the orphans' home are but BY-PRODUCTS. Personally, I doubt seriously whether God ever led a man, whom He called to preach, into the work of education, or any other BY-PRODUCT work of the church. The purpose of the ministry is to help God save souls. Woe be unto that man whom God called to preach His gospel, yet who has gone and found himself another job!

Cordially,
J. TILLERRY LEWIS.

Evangelism in the Sunday School.

This child is lost.

The street boys are sorry for her and will doubtless take her home.

There are millions of boys and girls lost to the Church.

With Christlike compassion let us find them and bring them into the school of the Church and to the Savior, who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

If the Church allows boys and girls to grow up without religious instruction, what is the Sunday school for?

What shall it profit us if we shall gain the whole world and lose our boys and girls?

TWO MAGIC WORDS.

Two little words I would have you learn,
Two little words, "I'll try!"
They'll pick out the hardest shoestring knot,
And pull up the weeds when the sun is hot,
They're a wonderful help for the "I forgot"—
Those two little words, "I'll try!"

There's a charm indeed for the mad inside
In those two little words, "I'll try!"
When temper begins to sputter and spout,
Those magical words will put him to rout;
And now they'll get after Old Grumble and Grout!
Those two little words, "I'll try!"

When lessons are dreadfully hard and long,
Say two little words, "I'll try!"
Of course, little friend, you'll want to be "smart."
"I'll try!" are the words that will give you the start;
Write them carefully down, deep down in your heart—
Those two little words, "I'll try!"

—Congregationalist.

PASS IT ON.

Once, when I was a schoolboy going home for the holidays, I had a long way to go to reach the far-away little town in which I dwelt. I arrived at Bristol, and got on board the steamer with just money enough to pay my fare; and that being settled, I thought in my innocence I had paid for everything I needed in the way of meals. I had what I wanted so long as we were in smooth water; then came the rough Atlantic and the need of nothing more. I had been lying in my berth for hours, wretchedly ill and past caring for anything, when there came the steward and stood beside me. "Your bill, sir," said he, holding out the piece of paper.

"I've got no money," said I in my wretchedness.

"Then I shall keep your luggage. What is your name and address?"

I told him. Instantly he took off the cap with the gilt band around it that he wore and held out his hand: "I should like to shake hands with you," he said with a smile.

I gave him my hand and shook his as well as I could. Then came the explanation—how that some years before some little kindness had been shown his mother by my father in the sorrow of her widowhood. "I never thought the chance would come for me to repay it," said he, "but I am glad it has."

"So am I," said I.

As soon as I got ashore I told my father what happened. "Ah," said he, "see how a bit of kindness lives! Now he has passed it on to you. Remember, if you meet anybody that needs a friendly hand, you must pass it on to him."

Years had gone by. I had grown up and quite forgotten it all, until one day I had gone to the station of one of our main lines. I was just going to take my ticket when I saw a little lad crying—a thorough man he was, trying bravely to keep back the troublesome tears as he pleaded with the booking clerk.

"What is the matter?" I asked.

"If you please, sir, I haven't money enough to pay my fare. I have all I want but a few pence, and I tell the clerk if he will trust me, I will be sure to pay him again."

Instantly upon me flashed the forgotten story of long ago. Here, then, was my chance of passing it on. I gave him the sum he needed, and got into the carriage with him. Then I told the little fellow the story of long ago and of the steward's kindness to me. "Now to-day," I said, "I pass it on to you, and remember, that if you meet with any one that needs a kindly hand you must pass it on to him."

"I will, sir," cried the lad as he took my hand, and his eyes flashed with earnestness.

"I am sure you will," I answered.

I reached my destination and left my little friend. The last sign I had of him was as the handkerchief fluttered from the window of the carriage, as if to say, "It is all right, sir; I will pass it on."—Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, in "New Zealand Methodist Times."

BETTY'S BIRTHDAY BONNET.

The bonnet had come all the way from New York City, a birthday gift to Betty from Aunt Elizabeth.

Grandmother smoothed its silken tie-ribbons and said that when she was a child, little girls never saw such a beautiful bonnet.

Mother said it was almost too dainty to touch, and told Betty she should be very careful not to crush or soil it.

Daddy only laughed, and said something about "Princess Betty."

The owner of the bonnet herself, well, of course she thought there never had been anything prettier made.

"I'll be very careful," she promised, "for I don't want Fido to tear this hat to pieces."

Betty told grandmother how last summer she had laid her hat on the stand in the hall, "just for a minute," and Fido had taken it for some new plaything, to be torn to shreds.

"But I'm older now," Betty concluded, "and I'll keep this lovely blue hat in its box all the time, except when I'm wearing it."

Weeks passed, and it looked as though Betty really was growing out of her careless ways, for the new hat was always put carefully back in its box as soon as its wearer came in.

After a while, Betty was not quite so careful with the beautiful hat. Once mother found it thrown carelessly on Betty's bed. Again, Betty hung it on the post at the foot of the stairs and promptly forgot all about it until mother reminded her.

Finally, one day, because Betty "forgot," a strange mishap befell the New York bonnet.

Old Mrs. Nevins, who was very stout and very deaf, and also near-sighted, came to call.

The day was warm, and she was puffing from her walk. She started toward the nearest easy-chair.

Just then, Betty, who had opened the door to the caller, noticed a light-blue silken object resting on the cushion of this same chair.

Her hat! She made a quick step forward, but was too late.

Mrs. Nevins had seen nothing amiss, and she had not heard Betty's hasty, "Oh, wait, please!"

Down she came, crushing braid and flowers and ribbon.

Betty ran into the hall to call mother. She didn't know whether to laugh or cry, so after mother had come down she did both.

She cried to think of her lovely hat being ruined and she couldn't help laughing when she thought of the big woman sitting on the little hat.

When the lady, after what seemed a long time, went home, Betty stole in and picked up the hat, ruined beyond repair.

During the rest of the summer, Betty wore her old faded brown hat without complaining. She knew that it was all her own fault that the blue one had been ruined.—Helen P. Metzger, in The Christian Register.

A BEUTIFUL ANSWER.

One day a little girl in a white frock, and with a bunch of flowers passed by a boy who was playing in the dusty street. Somehow the sight of that dainty figure stirred the spirit of mischief in the boy's heart, and suddenly he threw a handful of dirt which struck the edge of the white dress and fell in a shower upon the kid shoes.

The girl stood still. Her face flushed pink. Her lips trembled as if she would cry. But instead a smile broke over her face, and, taking a flower from her bunch, she tossed it to the boy, who stood waiting to see what she was going to do.

A more surprised boy no one ever saw, nor one more heartily ashamed. He hung his head, and his cheeks reddened under their tan and freckles. His unkind fun was quite spoiled, just because in return for a handful of dirt some one had thrown him a flower.

What a changed world this would be if everybody, big and little, were as wise as this six-year-old maid! How quarrels would go out of fashion, if for angry words we threw back gentle answers. —The Child's Hour.

THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE IN SESSION.

When this issue of the Advocate reaches its readers, the Louisiana Annual Conference will be in session in Ruston, a beautiful and progressive city of North Louisiana. The church in which the Conference will be held is a modern and commodious structure, a credit to the Methodist people of the community and to the town as a whole. Ruston is one of the leading appointments of the State, having been served for many years by some of the strongest men in the Conference. Its present gifted and faithful pastor is Dr. R. H. Wynn, formerly the well known president of Centenary College.

The Louisiana Methodist Orphanage is located at Ruston. This institution, under the management of Rev. R. W. Vaughan, has become one of the most important enterprises of the Conference. It has had a remarkable growth—so remarkable, in fact, that an enlargement of the plant has become a necessity. Plans are already under way for extensive improvements in the near future. The visitors to the Conference will have the opportunity of seeing with their own eyes what has been done under the auspices of the church for the care of dependent children, and of realizing the necessity of maintaining and extending the work.

The Louisiana Industrial Institute is also located at Ruston. This is an educational institution of the State which, through its able faculty and large student-body, adds much to the social, intellectual, and cultural life of the community. It will afford the members of the Conference much pleasure to visit this institution which has served so well many of their own parishioners.

The Conference this year will have present, for the first time in its history, several women as delegates. These women have demonstrated their loyalty to the church and their ability to administer successfully large interests hitherto committed to their charge. There is every reason to believe that they will perform faithfully and efficiently the duties that come to them in their new relationship to the church.

There is a general feeling and hope that this session of the Conference will develop and maintain a spiritual atmosphere that will make it a great blessing to its members and to the city in which it is held. The revival spirit is stirring throughout the church, and plans for a great, church-wide revival campaign have already been adopted as an outgrowth of the inspiring Centenary Movement. It is the hope of Louisiana Methodism that this campaign will be as successful within its borders as it undoubtedly will he in other sections of the church.

A full account of the proceedings of the Conference will appear in the Advocate next week.

FINANCING THE CHURCH.

The ever-present problem of the local church, as well as of the church at large, is to get money enough to meet adequately all its pressing needs. Usually, at the beginning of the year, a rather rough estimate is made of the financial requirements for the ensuing twelve months and, so far as possible, subscriptions are secured to cover them. Throughout the year, there is a gradual falling behind of the receipts, and at the close there is a period of nervous anxiety and intensive effort in order that the preacher may he able to go to Conference with all claims paid in full. In many cases, this desirable result is finally secured; in many others, in spite of the diligent efforts put forth, the collections fall short, the preacher has to do without a part of his promised salary, the benevolent causes of the church have to get along with less than they had expected to receive, and the membership of the church—such as give any thought to the matter at all—console themselves with the reflection, "We did the best we could, but we just couldn't get it all."

There are situations, of course, where peculiar circumstances make full collections practically impossible; hut we venture the assertion that the average congregation is easily able to meet every legitimate financial obligation resting upon it without undue pressure, if our people could he brought to realize that they definitely assume financial obligations when they join the church, and if our official boards would install and operate a definite and business-like plan for administering the finances of the church.

Some of us seem to fear that any mention of money in connection with membership in the church has a tendency to lessen the spiritual ardor of the convert, and that the subject, if mentioned at all, should he broached apologetically and indirectly. It would be the height of folly, of course, to ask a new member abruptly, as soon as he has assumed the vows of membership, "What are you going to pay?" hut we ought to be so definite in our teaching concerning the subject, and so consistent in our practice, that those who come into the church from time to time would understand that they have become partners in a great business enterprise, though it is of a religious nature, just as they have become identified visibly with the Kindom of God, and that they are expected to bear their part of the expense in carrying forward that enterprise. Ours is a gospel of grace, to he sure, and we ought never to fall to emphasize that fact; hut a large part of our Lord's teaching had to do with money, and we need to include that in our preaching as well as other things.

It is probable that every church has on its roll members who never contribute one penny to the expenses of the church, and it is certain that there are a good many people in every church who do not give in proportion to their ability. This may be their fault—and it may not be. It may he due to the fact that they have never been instructed in the doctrine of stewardship, and that they have complacently assumed that they were under no obligation to do more than "throw in" a nickel or a dime when the collection basket is passed at the regular services. There are always some devout souls who deprecate a sermon on the grace of giving money for fear "the cause will be hurt," when, as a matter of fact, the cause is suffering acutely every day because so many nominally Christian people have so poor a conception of their duty as God's stewards of material things. Our people should be taught systematically, faithfully, and definitely that the promise to support the institutions of the church, while voluntarily made, is a binding and sacred obligation. Southern Methodists are abundantly able to support all the enterprises of the church when they come to see their duty in the matter.

In addition to inculcating thoroughly the doctrine of stewardship in the minds and hearts of our people, we need to develop a thoroughly systematic and business-like way of managing the financial affairs of the church on the part of all our official boards. It is highly gratifying to know that with a great many boards, this is already an accomplished fact. But in too many cases, a policy is pursued in looking after the material interests of the church that would not be tolerated a moment by any member of the board in the management of his private affairs. "What is everybody's business, is nobody's business," and it too frequently happens that the finances are allowed to fall behind and, before anybody realizes it, Conference is at hand and a tremendous "last-minute" drive has to be made to secure the assessments in full. This process is nerve-wracking to the officials, trying to the congregation, and often embarrassing to the preacher.

The solution of this difficulty is to he found, of course in the adoption of a budget in the beginning of the year that will be ample for all the normal needs of the church, and the covering of this budget by pledges of people who have prayerfully and carefully considered their obligations in relation to the work of the Kingdom of God. In order to do this most effectively, we need to lay emphasis upon tithing as a simple, proportionate, and fair method of meeting these obligations. Without insisting upon tithing as an obligatory system of giving for all Christians, we maintain that it has the divine sanction, that it is easily followed, that it is equitable, and that it is adequate to meet all the demands that may be made upon the treasury of the church under ordinary conditions. A determination to practice tithing will receive the approbation of the individual conscience, and it will give the contributor a constant fund upon which he may draw for the many deserving calls that come to him from time to time. In addition to all this, there will he, in almost every case, a spiritual quickening of the life that will deepen the religious experience and intensify the joys of Christian service.

It is our earnest conviction that the adoption of the tithing system by the membership of our church will solve permanently the difficult problem of properly financing the church. Let us practice it and preach it as the best means to a highly desirable end.

THE AD INTERIM COMMITTEE AT RICHMOND.

The Ad Interim Committee of the Joint Commission on Unification, which met at Richmond, Va., last week, adjourned on November 7, after drafting a report which will be presented to the Joint Commission at its meeting on January 15, probably in New Orleans. We do not know what is contained in the report of the Committee, as it was deemed proper not to make the report public until it has been acted on by the full Commission. We have been informed, however, that it constitutes the best possible agreement that can be arrived at, though it does not express the exact sentiments of either Committee or, perhaps, of any individual member. A distinguished member of the Committee from our church is of the opinion that the plan embodied in the report will be the most satisfactory to the Southern church that has yet been presented.

As we see it, there is very little room for discussion until the report of the Ad Interim Committee is before us. All Methodism will await eagerly that report.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"We are closing out well," writes Rev. R. M. Evans, of Buena Vista, Miss.

Rev. H. E. Carter, of Tunica, Miss., writes that he is winding up the year's work with a full report.

The Victory Jubilee Convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet in St. Louis, Mo., November 15-20.

At the recent convention of the W. C. T. U. of Louisiana, Mrs. A. C. McKinney, of Ruston, was elected president for the ensuing year.

The Advocate has been going regularly to the home of Miss E. L. Powe, Winchester, Miss., for more than fifty years. A notable record!

A report from the pastor, Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, indicates that the Anguilla charge, Mississippi Conference, has had one of the best years in its history.

The Courtland charge, North Mississippi Conference, has had "a good year, Bishop." All assessments will be paid in full. Rev. W. D. Bennett is the pastor.

Mrs. A. J. Davis, wife of our pastor at Hawkins Memorial, Meridian, Miss., honored the Advocate office with a call on Saturday of last week. She was accompanied by her sister.

Rev. D. Scarborough, who has many friends in Mississippi, was recently transferred from the Los Angeles Conference to the West Texas Conference, and appointed to Midland, Tex.

"Hernando will make a good report to Conference," writes the pastor, Rev. Carroll Varner. The services of the church have been splendidly attended, and the pastor's salary was increased $600 over last year.

Rev. J. P. Abney, father of Rev. J. T. Abney, of the Mississippi Conference, has not missed a copy of the Advocate since 1867. He is now eighty-four years old, and it is a source of great regret to him that he can no longer see to read the paper.

The Ad Interim Committee of the Centenary Commission, at its meeting on October 31, voted to co-operate with the Interchurch World Movement in making the survey of the South. Mr. A. C. Zumbrunnen will have charge of the survey.

Rev. Isaac D. Borders, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, but now stationed at Independence, Mo., is looking forward with great pleasure to a visit to the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference at Aberdeen.

The official board of Durant station, North Mississippi Conference, adopted highly commendatory resolutions in connection with the work of Rev. W. W. Mitchell, who is concluding a four-year term of office as presiding elder of the Durant District.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Mentorum charge, Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, adopted strong resolutions expressing appreciation of the services of Rev. J. R. Jones, who is just completing his fourth year as presiding elder of the district.

Rev. and Mrs. Geo. H. Thompson, of Meridian, Miss., have sent out cards announcing the marriage of their daughter, Maggie Bourdeaux, to Mr. Charles Lester Rittenhouse, at Meridian, Miss., on November 3. The Advocate extends cordial good wishes to the young couple.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., unanimously adopted resolutions of appreciation of the services of Rev. C. D. Atkinson, who has been presiding elder of the Shreveport District for four years. The official board also presented him with a token of esteem.

The members of the Y. W. C. A. at Whitworth College are planning to build a "log cabin" for the use of the Association in the near future. Much of the necessary amount of money will be contributed by the girls themselves, but the alumnae and friends of the college will be given an opportunity to help them.

At the annual meeting of the trustees of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, on October 15, Dean James M. Gray reported a total enrollment for the year ending August 31 of 2,183 students in the day and evening classes, representing twenty-two denominations, forty-three States, and twenty-three foreign countries.

Sister T. S. Randle, who has been visiting friends in Louisiana, and who has been expecting to attend the Louisiana Annual Conference, of which her late husband was, for many years, an honored member, has returned to her home in Yoakum, Texas, to see her grandson, Tom Randle, who has just returned from France, where he was in active service for three years.

The Herald, a newspaper published in Algiers, which is a part of the city of New Orleans on the west side of the river, recently devoted considerable space to a description of the new Methodist church to be built in that part of the city. The building will cost about $40,000, and will have every modern convenience for aggressive church work. Rev. C. C. Wier, the pastor, is entitled to much credit for the successful working out of plans that have been in mind for a long time.

The Rocky Mountain News, of Denver, Col., contains, in a recent issue, an extended notice of the marriage of Miss Rubye Edwina Knapp and Mr. Ashley W. Warlick. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Hartley Knapp, of Denver. She attended Northfield Seminary, in Northfield, Mass., and was, for four years, a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, in Boston, where she was prominent in musical circles. Mr. Warlick is a son of Rev. and Mrs. T. J. Warlick, of Columbia, La., where Brother Warlick is pastor of the Methodist church. He is a graduate of the Louisiana State University, and was, for several years, prominently identified with the educational work of the State. He has recently been in service with the American Red Cross at General Hospital No. 21. The couple will make their home in Denver, where Mr. Warlick will enter business. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to the happy couple.

FRONTIER WORKERS NEEDED.

The Department of Home Missions is looking for five men who are willing to do real frontier work as preachers of the Gospel—four for Montana and one for New Mexico. These charges are in fine climate, high altitude and the field is not occupied by any church. The salary will range from $1200 to $1500, and the opportunities for doing good and building up the cause of Christ and Southern Methodism are unlimited.

I should like to correspond with men who would like to undertake this work. You can write me at 810 Broadway, Box 510, Nashville, Tenn.

CHURCH EXTENSION APPLICATIONS.

As Secretary of the Conference Board of Church Extension I am very anxious that every pastor who expects to apply to this Board for aid this year will get his application ready and send it to me at least a week before Conference. It will enable me to get all the data in such shape that the Board can act more intelligently upon those applications than we can do if they are not presented to me until after the Conference session opens.

If you are building a new church, ask for a loan at first and let us make the donation later, when you are trying to pay all indebtedness upon the church. L. E. ALFORD, Secretary.

Miss RACHEL MARTIN was born on December 6, 1887, and departed this life on May 7, 1919. She was in active school work in the State of North Carolina when she died. Her body was brought by a brother to New Prospect church, near her home, where she held membership, and laid to rest in the church cemetery, the writer conducting the funeral services. She joined the Methodist Church in early life and lived a devoted Christian life. Hers was indeed a life of service, always remembering the welfare and interest of others before her own interest. She was engaged in such ministries when she contracted the disease that removed her from this life. But the world has been blessed by her living and Heaven has been enriched by her death. Her friends and neighbors all loved her and her parents were indeed proud of her. Her chastity, her modesty, her clean, pure life is to be coveted by all young people, and her piety and genuine Christian faith were a continuous invitation to come to the Christ, who only can endow a life with such noble virtues as she possessed. But being reared in the Christian home that she was, the daughter of a godly father and devoted Christian mother, such a life as hers is not a surprise. The home has lost a daughter, the church one of its most active members, and the community a humble servant whose place cannot be filled. I commend the bereft family to Him who only can comfort in such hours as this, and I pray that you, too, may live that Christian life that will entitle you to the same welcome, "Come up higher," where you will be reunited into a happy family, whose ties cannot be severed by departed loved ones.

Her pastor, T. B. WINSTEAD.

The subject of this sketch, Brother TURNER WILLIAMS, was born at Arkabutla, Miss., fifty-one years ago the 20th day of last March, and died Sept. 28, 1919. He came to Tunica some years ago, and for several years was chancery clerk of this county. He filled the office acceptably and was clerk at the time of his death. He joined the Methodist Church nine years ago, and lived a consistent Christian life. He loved God and the church; he was the preacher's friend; he was a regular attendant at church as long as his strength would permit. He went West for his health, but to no avail. His body was brought back to Tunica for interment, and, on Oct. 1, 1919, we laid him away in the Woodlawn Cemetery to await the coming of the Lord. He leaves a good wife and children to mourn their loss, with a host of friends.

"Weep not for me dear wife and children,
For my body was sown in weakness here;
'Twill there be raised in power;
That which was sown an earthly seed
Shall rise a heavenly flower."

His Pastor,
H. E. CARTER.

Tunica, Miss.

Brother J. T. LONG was born on March 5, 1856, and departed this life on May 16, 1919. He was 63 years, 2 months and 11 days old. He was married to Miss M. J. Steward on January 27, 1876. They lived happily together until death parted them. To this happy union were born 16 children, 10 of whom, with his wife and a number of grandchildren, remain to mourn their loss. Brother Long united with the M. E. Church, South, when about 18 years old. He at once threw himself into church work, and was always ready to do his part. He was at once elected steward, which office he filled as long as he lived. He was one of the most efficient stewards I ever knew. After his health failed, I told him he had better let some one else collect for the pastor, but he said, "I will do it myself." He enjoyed the work. At the time of his death, he was steward, recording steward, and trustee. He is not only missed from Sandtown church, but is missed from the whole of Neshoba County and surrounding counties. There was no sacrifice too great for him to make to help others. He would fill almost any place; in the absence of a preacher, he would conduct a funeral service, or do any other church work. Such men are missed when they are gone. I found him to be a true friend to his pastor. We miss him from the church, and from the community and especially from the home. I visited him a number of times during his sickness. He was anxious to get well, but always said he was not afraid to die. All was done that loved ones could do to restore health, but the Master called, and he had to go. The last time I saw him he talked of his part of the church work he loved so well, but he had to lay his armor down, and go to his reward. Weep not, sorrowing ones; if you are true to the God he served, some day you will meet him again, where parting is no more.

His pastor, S. E. FLURRY.

Burns, Miss., Nov. 3, 1919.

Sister JULIA FELDER (nee Huffman) was born on June 26, 1846, and died on October 5, 1919, at 7:50 o'clock a. m. Here was a beautiful Christian life, possessed of all of the Christian graces. For three years I was her pastor, and she was a devout, consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I always esteemed her and her husband, Brother J. S. Felder, among my truest friends. Those who knew her best said of her that she was one of the most unselfish persons of their knowledge. The church has transferred a jewel, the husband, a thoughtful companion, and sons and daughters, a devoted mother, to the home beyond, where she joins a mighty host who outstripped her in the race of life. Be of good cheer, loved ones; we shall meet again.

Her ex-pastor,
P. H. HOWSE.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of appreciation passed by the fourth quarterly conference of the Madison charge, held at Ridgeland, Miss., October 28, 1919:

Whereas, This charge and community have been blessed by the life and labors of Brother W. H. Field during the past thirty-five years, and his life as a citizen, church member and official in the church has in every way been an honor and an example of loyalty and faithfulness, be it resolved:

That, while we know he has gained eternal rest by his passing from us, still, we feel that the church has lost a faithful, devout member, the official board a model steward and official member, and the community one of its truest and best citizens.

That we shall ever hold precious the memories of his sweet, Christian fellowship, and that we are inspired to more loyal devotion to God and the church by the record of his life.

That a copy of these resolutions be placed on record with the proceedings of this conference, and a copy be sent to the family, and copies be furnished our county and church papers for publication.

FROM HARPERVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We are through with our meetings. We did not have a meeting at Harperville, on account of delay in church building. We have received twenty-two into the church this year, twelve by certificate and ten by profession of faith.

We have a charge of seven churches, more than we can do justice to as a pastor. But, upon the whole, there has been a great deal of progress made on the charge in the two years we have served the work. The Lord has wonderfully blessed us. There are more people who love the church and the Lord, and who love it better than before; hence, a growth in grace.

We have bought and paid for a parsonage, repaired two churches, and are building a modern little church here at Harperville. It will have three class rooms, besides main auditorium. We bought a nice organ at another church in these two years of labor here.

When we came to the charge, the salary for the preceding year was $545; the officials increased it to $900, this year. The entire assessments were paid in full last year, the first time in the history of the charge. This year we expect to collect more than last, notwithstanding the fact that the people are paying up their Centenary pledges.

Our fourth quarterly conference was a great occasion. Every church was represented. Four paid their salary in full and over. Two others paid out the next day (fourth Sunday). The other church will pay all in full. The officials had a meeting at the noon hour and unanimously agreed to ask for our return another year. This we appreciated. Then the stewards, in conference with the presiding elder, assured him of practically a two hundred dollar raise in salary another year.

This being Brother Linfield's last year on the district, the quarterly conference passed resolutions expressing their high appreciation of his work as presiding elder, and of his brotherly spirit shown at all times.

We are happy in the Lord and praying to be sent just where the Lord can use us best for his kingdom another year, let it be here or elsewhere.

R. H. CLEGG, P. C.

A SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL AT BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

We have just closed a most satisfactory revival here, which continued through three weeks. Rev. G. A. Klein, General Evangelist, did the preaching; Rev. Harry Beckman directed the singing. Bro. Klein was untiring in his zeal and God greatly blessed his labors in quickening the consciences of the people and leading them to make a definite consecration to Christ for service. It was a time of refreshing to all Christians who were regular in attendance upon the services. Sinners were brought under conviction, many of whom left the church to hush the voice of conviction; others remained and found relief in surrender to Christ.

The membership of the church was given a vision of duty, responsibility and privilege that will not be forgotten soon. It was at this point that Bro. Klein did his greatest work. He had no mercy on the slacker in the church; he pictured in vivid language the fearful consequence of negligence and indifference; he handled with ungloved hands the sins of greed and worldliness among professed Christians, and told in no uncertain terms of the inevitable result it the people did not repent and turn back to God. His messages were cutting, but delivered in the spirit of love. Some of his hearers were offended and endeavored to hush the voice of conscience by criticising the preacher; others acknowledged the truth, confessed their sins and got right with God. There were more than two hundred who thus yielded to the truth. Forty-three were received into the church, and there are others to follow.

Bro. Klein proved himself to be a consecrated and fearless worker for the Lord. Many regard him one of the greatest evangelists Brookhaven has ever had. He is doing a work for the church that will be abiding.

W. H. LEWIS.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas God in his infinite wisdom and love has seen fit to claim for His own, our beloved member and co-worker Mrs. Flora Jamieson, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, members of the Jeter Class of the Sunday school of the M. E. Church, South, of Mooringsport, La., with sorrowing hearts bow in submission to the will of the loving Father, believing that he knoweth and doeth all things well.

2. That we desire to express to the bereaved husband, daughter and sisters our deepest and most heartfelt sympathy.

3. That in her death the community and our work have lost a faithful Christian character.

4. That this consecrated member, true friend and unselfish helper may prove as a guardian angel and a daily inspiration to her loved ones, and members of our church.

5. That we will ever hold in grateful remembrance her faithful service and self-sacrificing life, whose light has been a pathway unto our feet.

6. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

50 Eggs a Day.

"Before using 'More Eggs' tonic, I was getting only 12 eggs a day and now get 50" writes Mrs. Myrtle Ice, of Boston, Ky. Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. "More Eggs" is a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs" will double the production of eggs. Poultry raisers everywhere are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

Send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and he will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs." A million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

A BEAUTIFUL STORY.

By G. W. Barr.

The Advocate of Oct. 23 carried to the homes of its many readers another beautiful story about our soldier boys. I enjoy reading Elmer C. Gunn's letters, for he always has something good to say about the boys who bravely stood between us and the enemy of civilization and human rights.

It is solidly true that we should have a very great regard for them. The hardships and dangers to which they were exposed made up a great heap that would be difficult to explain. They wept when they left their homes and loved ones, and prayed to God for their success and victory over German cruelty, and for their safe return. They have performed the noble task, and have landed back on their native soil, to resume the duties calling for them here. They have fought the fight for freedom of the world, and should have everything nice and encouraging that we are able to give them.

God was with us in fighting, and in finishing the battle in the right way. To him, we owe our most earnest gratitude. Read over the beautiful story, and heed the call for regard to the returned soldier boys.

Peptiron is an excellent combination of iron and manganese with nux, celery, pepsin and other tonics and digestives, and is made with special reference to the needs of pale, weak, nervous sufferers. It is both medicine and food for the blood and nerves, and is signally effective in the treatment of anemia and neurasthenia.

Weak, Thin, Nervous People Should Tak Bitro-Phosphate

What It Is And How It Increases Weight, Strength and Nerve-Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms and neck, and replacing hard hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should soon produce a welcome transformation in the appearance, the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes brighten, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION: While Bitro Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat producing food.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Since my last letter I have had the pleasure of being with Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, and making the circuit of his charge. I was delighted to find the charge in good shape and it seemed to be in better condition than it has been and is developing with the country. I was delighted with some of the features of the work. I feel the result of the trip will establish two Sunday schools and that they will perhaps be revived for a long time. Three Cradle Rolls were promised. Nine Teacher-training Books were ordered. Four of the churches observed Sunday School Day. All the schools pledged to put on a campaign for Sabbath observance. I feel that the trip was profitable.

The public schools of Silver Creek, Hathorn, Oakvale and Grange were visited.

It is not too late to send in Wesley Bible Class reports for the Annual Conference. It will help the whole Sunday school effort if these reports will come in.

Mrs. L. W. Wood, Brookhaven, Miss., has kindly consented to act as Elementary Superintendent of the Brookhaven District in the place of Mrs. Bowen.

Pray for the work and the workers.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Conference year is practically over and the preacher can go to Conference with books closed and report in hand to turn over. This year has been crowded from the first day until this present minute.

It is best to wait until after Conference to outline our work for the immediate future. I am still writing schools for reports. I have the blanks and will be pleased to send them to any school that has not received them, or has misplaced them. I want you to be careful in writing, for I have to read it and sometimes it looks worse than my hand, and that is awful. Read the anniversary program in last Advocate, so you will know what to expect Saturday night at Conference. We will have a preachers' chorus to do some fine singing for the anniversary of the Sunday school.

I wish to thank all the pastors and the good laymen who have assisted me this year, and I cannot say too much in praise of the presiding elders. They have helped me much. Our Advocate has been generous in giving me space in its valuable columns. The Advocate is one of the best church papers in the South.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

From November 1 to January 4 the Sunday schools of Southern Methodism are called upon to put on a campaign for members. This is the first step in the church-wide effort for souls. We must show enough interest in people to get them to study God's Word if we would do the more delicate and difficult task of presenting Christ to them. Let the superintendent call his teachers together for prayer and consultation. Write to Dr. C. D. Bulla, Nashville, Tenn., for all the helps needed and get this first work done before the Christmas holidays.

There are three methods of evangelism we propose to use: the personal work method, the teaching method, and the revival method. Shall we not put emphasis on all three methods? Let us not forget that it takes as much genuine prayer for the one as for the other. The power comes from God and from God alone. The methods are of worth only as we get in vital touch with the Holy Spirit. Nothing is so needed as this evangelistic campaign for lost souls.

The Tupelo school reports that every teacher is taking the course of study. Several of them have completed one book and are ready for the next. More teachers have done honest study this year than at any time in the past. And more are enrolling for study than ever. This means that we are to have teachers qualified to give religious education in an effective way. The prepared teacher is the key to evangelism at the present. The most far reaching work I know of is that of making teachers.

The Conference Elementary Superintendent has clearly demonstrated the value of her office. We need a Conference Superintendent of Teacher Training, a Conference Superintendent of Missionary Education, and a Conference Superintendent of Wesley Bible Classes. And of course we must have a little expense money to pay their postage and stationery bills. We can afford to be economical in the use of bread for the body, but how dare we deny the Bread of Life to the thousands of helpless, dependent children that are looking to us for nurture? How can this tremendous task of teaching be done in a day and done with only a pittance? We have hesitated and tinkered at this chief task of the church too long already.

DRIFTERS AND DREAMERS.

Two classes of people are of uncertain worth in the world—drifters and dreamers. The former idle through life, never asking why they are here, or whither they are going. Their life is that of the mole, the parasite, or the butterfly. Any wind may blow them anywhere, and they are as happy—or unhappy—in one place as in another. Their life is motiveless, and therefore meaningless. Of somewhat more account are the dreamers—by night or day. These see plenty of visions, but rarely know what the visions mean. They dream dreams, yet no Daniel interprets them. They are always going to do things, and rarely doing them. Their life is a future tense, without a preterite behind it; and their present is about as practical as a New England fog, or a mass of black smoke. Nevertheless, both classes of misspenders of life's forces may possibly be reclaimed, or directed to good things. It is possible, by converting him, to provide the drifter with a motive and a moral goal, to put backbone into his character, and to make an Elijah out of a Gehazi. So, too, the dreamer may be helped to discriminate between his visions, to throw himself on the side of his best beliefs, and to fulfill himself in service by way of sacrifice. The vision is good, so be it the seeing of a John the Beloved, and if it issues in the personal consecration of a prophet who says, "Here am I, send me!" Doers are made out of drifters or dreamers. It was so done in the first century, and, by help of divine grace, it may be so wrought out to-day.—Zion's Herald.

Wonderful Egg Producer.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

11 Hens Idle; Now Lay 221 Eggs A Month

Mrs. Young Almost Gave Up Raising Chickens. Then She Tried this Plan.

"When I accepted your offer and tried Don Sung, I had been getting 1 or 2 eggs every other day. The next month, using 10 cents worth of Don Sung, my 11 hens laid 221 eggs. I almost gave up raising chickens, but now I have decided to raise as many as I can."—Mrs. F. C. Young, Bellefonte, Pa.

Feed is too expensive to waste on idle hens. You can easily start your hens laying and keep them laying, even in coldest winter. To prove it, all you need do is accept our offer, as Mrs. Young did.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 405 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

Brings the Best Into Co-operation.

It is no wonder that many are finding the new medicinal combination, Hood's Sarsaparilla before eating, Peptiron, a real iron tonic, after eating, and Hood's Pills as needed, remarkably effective as a course of treatment for giving vitality, vigor and vim, and increasing strength and endurance.

Among the medicinal substances that the combination brings into co-operation are such cleansers, tonics and digestives as sarsaparilla, nux, iron and pepsin, whose great merit been fully established.

Good results from such a combination in cases amenable to treatment, seem to be among the "inevitable." The combination is especially recommended for those who are run-down, whose blood is poor, because of impurity or lack of iron, whose nerves are weak or unstrung, livers torpid or sluggish. Try it.—Adv.

DON'T OVERDO OR OVER-EAT

But If You Do, a Few Doses of Black-Draught May Prevent Serious Trouble.

Nowata, Okla.—Mr. W. B. Dawson, of this place, says: "I have known of Black-Draught ever since I can remember, and of all the liver medicines I ever used, Black-Draught is without doubt the best. We would not be without it in the house.

I used to take pills and different things, but after taking a course of strong medicine I would be left in a constipated condition, and would need then to use a laxative. But after I began to take Black-Draught I did not have any trouble of this kind.

I take a big dose at night and follow a few nights with lighter doses, and I am like a new man until I overdo or overeat, and neglect to take care of myself until the liver gets out of fix, when I have to go to Black-Draught again.

Black-Draught I have found is all that is necessary for the bloated feeling in the stomach, sour stomach or bad taste in the mouth so common in spring in the swampy country.

Try Thedford's Black-Draught. At all druggists.—Adv.

SAVING TIME.

Dear Brother Carley: The Annual Conference being a gathering for the transaction of business, it seems to us that we ought to omit everything that would hinder business; so we are in favor of omitting the oral reports of the preachers in charge, following the passing of their characters.

It is all right for the dear old superannuates to speak there, and we are edified by their reports; but the preachers in charge are required by law to make written reports, and the oral reports are but time-killers, unsatisfactory both to speakers and hearers.

There is no legal requirement for the bishop to say, "Let us have your report." It is just a matter of custom. There may have been some such law in the past, but we are serving under the Discipline of 1918, and there is no more law for it than there is to sing "And are we yet alive?" at the opening session of Conference.

We need more time for business.

P. H. FONTAINE.

Eunice, La.

FROM ANGUILLA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I don't believe that I have reported to the Advocate since I came to Anguilla, nearly three years ago, but don't think that we have been idle. I feel that we have made progress along all lines. I will mention a few things accomplished.

We have completed and seated our new church at Delta City, have painted the Sunflower chapel church, have moved the parsonage (we have had rollers under us), and have almost completed a brick church at Angullla which is a beauty, and which, when completed and furnished, cannot be duplicated for $15,000. We lacked only a little of going over the top in the Centenary.

The church membership has been a little more than doubled during the three years. The pastor's salary has been raised to $1400, which is double the amount paid by these three churches three years ago.

We have a kind and appreciative people, who are thoughtful of their pastor and family. They also have church pride; every claim will be paid by Conference. The spirituality of the charge has grown wonderfully.

We had three old-time revivals this year. I saw strong men at the altar seeking Christ, and rejoiced with them when they found him. On August 3, Rev. J. T. Abney, of Scooba, came and preached two excellent sermons. Rev. J. V. Bennett, our Conference Evangelist, came Monday and did the preaching, Brother Abney leading the singing. Bennett is a good, strong preacher, full of the Spirit. He is not sensational in his work, but denounces sin in all its forms—at the same time holding up a high standard of experience and living. He is fearless, yet wise in his work. I tell you, Brother Carley, when you get Abney to do the singing and help otherwise, and Bennett to do the preaching, something will happen. Our meeting at Anguilla lasted 12 days, which resulted in a great victory, several conversions and reclamations. The church was spiritually quickened, and many testified to the good they had received.

Abney left us, and we went to Sunflower chapel. After one week there, God gave us a great victory. From there we went to Delta City for another battle and victory. Brother J. M. Boykin, of the Louisiana Conference, was with us at Delta City. He rendered efficient help in the singing and otherwise. Brother Bennett and I left Friday night, Brother Boykin carrying the meeting through Sunday night.

Brother Bennett was with me the entire month of August. He preached well when he came, but he seemed to improve all the time (I think the Delta did him good). The people appreciated the work done. Thirty members were added to the church during the meeting. Since the meeting, we have organized two prayer meetings, and one Epworth League. The Sunday school has taken on new life. The people paid Brother Bennett $344, Brother Abney, $76, and Brother Boykin, $100.

Brother Carley, you are giving us a good paper; I enjoy it very much. I hope to see you at Conference.

Eggs Paid The Pastor.

Mrs. Lena McBroon, Woodbury, Tenn., writes: "I've got more eggs than I ever did in my life; paid my debts, clothed the children in new dresses, and I paid by pastor his dues. I have money to spare now. 'More Eggs' is the remedy for me. I sold 43½ dozen eggs last week, set four dozen, ate some and had 1½ dozen left."

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, discovered the wonderful tonic, "More Eggs," that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens work all the time. You need this great egg producer. It means big egg profits for you. Don't delay. Send $1 to E. J. Reefer, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and he will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" tonic. A million dollar bank guarantees that if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

If the Christian Scientists healed all the sick, cast out devils, and did many wonderful works, they still would need more proof that they were either scientists or Christians. Uric Acid in Meat Clogs the Kidneys

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Letter From Superintendent of Study and Publicity.

It is very gratifying to hear from new auxiliaries who are going into the work with zest and earnestness. Some of these will have so much to familiarize themselves with that perhaps they may not decide to hold the Week of Prayer at the time set by the Council. To these and any others who are not planning to hold these daily meetings for Intercession and inspiration, I wish to appeal. We have just used the splendid material furnished for the Week of Prayer in Ruston, holding it a week ahead on account of the approaching Annual Conference in our midst, and I desire to recommend it very heartily for its effectiveness. The Life-Play for Young People, entitled "At the Wesley House in San Francisco," was indeed illuminating and every one of the sixty-three participants, as well as the large number of spectators, will never forget the need and the opportunity that is calling to us from San Francisco. This Life-Play can be obtained from Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Natchitoches, if your Superintendent of Young People's Work has not already received it from her. (Perhaps she has not the name of your officer.) She has, besides this, a lot more of excellent material for demonstration, which you cannot afford to do without. The "Sick in China" is the demonstration for Children's Day on the program and is wonderfully impressive. I think Mrs. Emma Drew's supply is exhausted, as she advised me to write to Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb for it; enclose stamp for postage.

A letter received by Mr. Wynn recently from Bishop H. M. DuBose may be of interest in connection with our study of San Francisco conditions:

"I am promising myself the pleasure of a visit to your Conference during its coming session. The authorities of the Church Extension and Mission Boards have granted me the privilege of taking some 'special' collections for our Greater San Francisco mission and gospel movement. In the San Francisco Bay cities are more than a million of people, seven hundred thousand of whom are unchurched. We are assaulting this mass of unbelief in the modern Babylon. In addition to our four regularly established churches, I have this year appointed men to four new places. Our plan is to build inexpensive tabernacles at these places as Sunday school houses and evangelistic centers. We begin the building of the first this week, the funds being in hand. A second has been provided for, but we need at least three more. I hope to find funds for these on my coming trip. I have hope of a "Birmingham Center" and a "Fort Worth Center." I should like to have a "Ruston" or, at least, a "Louisiana, Center" represented. Can you not get me before a representative audience at your sitting to tell my story?"

It is always a delight to me to get letters from the auxiliary Superintendents of Study relative to their work or lack of it. It establishes a bond between us that we pray may be productive of increased interest in Bible and Mission Study. I always take special pleasure in dealing with your problems and will endeavor to get all the light on them that I can obtain.

Very truly,
MRS. R. H. WYNN,
Ruston, La.

AUXILIARY BULLETINS.

Does your auxiliary send out a quarterly bulletin? Doubtless there are many auxiliaries in our three Conferences that do. For those who may not be using this splendid means of publicity, we are showing below a bulletin of the Carrollton Avenue Missionary Society. These brief summaries and announcements of the work are sent to all of the women of the congregation. Surely this does encourage the auxiliary members and should help to awaken the interest of those who have not yet given themselves wholly to the work of their church.

Bulletin of the Woman's Missionary Society, of Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, La.

THIRD QUARTER.

It is the opinion of the Publicity Committee that we have closed the third quarter with a creditable showing.

When asked this year to double our pledge for the support of our Bible Woman, Priscilla Bentley, at Wonsan, Korea, we readily responded, and have paid in full the $120 before the close of the third quarter.

In spite of the summer heat, and absence from the city of a large number of our working force, we have carried through the regular program of work, and have laid plans for big things for the last quarter, in faith, believing in our women.

The "Local Department" is always interested in the parsonage and ready in the care of the church. Through the good efforts of this committee the women of the church were entertained one afternoon in a most cordial and pleasing manner. On this occasion a large offering was made as a contribution to the church building fund.

Our Superintendent of Publicity and Mission Study is outlining her fall course, the plan being to meet the second and fourth Tuesdays in each month at the various homes. We are taking both Bible and Mission study.

Through the Social Service Committee, a little pleasure has been given the children at the colored waifs' home, and some help to Brother Thomas, our city missionary, for very needy cases.

The financial report is as follows: Total amount sent Conference Treasurer, $145; sent to City Mission Board, $18; amount spent on local work, $10.50; total, $173.50.

Our annual Week of Prayer, beginning November 2, closely following our revival services, should bring a response from the women of our church, and we make this earnest plea as a Woman's Missionary Society for your co-operation in our efforts to aid in the extension of the Kingdom.

WHAT IS YOUR CALL?
TO GO? POSSIBLY.
TO GIVE? CERTAINLY.
TO PRAY?, ASSUREDLY.
PRAY YE.

You Do More Work

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and Quinine suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength - Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared." — Mrs. M. GODDEN, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

Such annoying symptons as heat flashes, nervousnsss, backache, headache, irritability and "the blues," may be speedily overcome and the system restored to normal conditions by this famous root and herb remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complications present themselves write the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions how to overcomo them. The result of forty years experience is at your service and your letter held in strict confidence.

You Will Write a Letter Like This

I wish I knew which one of the thousands of letters I receive would have the most weight with you, my friend. I can't quote all of them here, but I am going to ask you to read these carefully and then give me a chance to renew your health and make you write me one very much like them:

Barnard St., Savannah, Ga.
Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.

Dear Sir: I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft-boiled eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantity as possible for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

A. L. R. AVANT, M.D.
Leeds, S. C.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter. C. A. CROSBY, M.D.

These are not selected cases, nor are the results unusual. I receive thousands like them from physicians, ministers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers and every conceivable profession. I want the satisfaction of receiving such a letter from you. No matter what your complaint may be, dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, or any curable ailment that has not responded to drugs. I invite you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If the water fails to benefit you simply say so, return the empty demijohns, and I will promptly and willingly refund your money—every cent. Sign below:

Shivar Spring,
-Box 17 C, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

A NOTE FROM PORT GIBSON, MISS.

The meeting conducted by Rev. J. L. Neill, of Nashville, at Port Gibson, closed November 2. The services were held in accordance with the Centenary plans for the church schools and colleges, except that in this instance part of the services were held in the Methodist church, part in the chapel of Port Gibson Female College and part in the chapel of Chamberlain-Hunt Academy.

In the College we had been at work toward a revival from the opening day of the session. We later organized and carried out the program of the Centenary Commission. Before the meeting started, we had twelve girls on the campus who belonged to no church. At the close of the meeting, each of that twelve was in some church, most of them Methodists. The only girl on our campus now not a member is one who entered school after the meeting began.

Another item of interest is that Mrs. Bettie Taliaferro has given to the College a set of "The Biographic and Historic Memoirs of Mississippi." In these volumes there is much of historic value. Recently Rev. T. J. O'Neil, former president of the College, presented the institution with a set of "The World's Greatest Literature." ROLFE HUNT, President.

FROM DURANT STATION.

I found, on my arrival at Durant a beautiful church, with a debt of $2000, and a parsonage, poorly furnished. The first thing we did was to make the parsonage comfortable; so we have in the parsonage to-day one of the nicest suites of furniture that can be found in any parsonage, and the screening has been looked after. In other words, we spent something like $250.

Our church debt campaign was put on in the month of February, and every dollar of it was raised during that month. You will remember that Bishop John C. Kilgo dedicated it the first Sunday in June.

I found that it had been the custom to raise the benevolences the last of the year; yet my custom has been to look after them in March. So, after due planning, I put the drive on the first of March and within five days I had it all in hand, and in the hands of the Conference Treasurer.

Next came the Centenary drive. With but very little help, and with no minute men and no church director, within four hours on Sunday evening we went over with $1000 to our credit; and one-fifth of this was paid a long time ago, with $105 over. So, you see, we made good there.

The preacher's salary was raised from $1200 to $1500, and the preacher and the elder have been paid for some time in full. This was all done without touching a single treasure of the church or Sunday school class, or taking any of the special that might be given for other purposes, as has been done heretofore.

All in all, I think that Durant Station has done well this year. While the pastor has done some hard planning and hard work, the people, together with the most wise and efficient presiding elder, deserve some of the credit. The town of Durant is sorry to have to give Brother Mitchell and his family up, but, as they must go, the prayers and good wishes of not only the church but the entire town go with them.

Durant Station has one of the most liberal laymen I ever have had the pleasure to know or serve. W. C. Castleberry deserves much credit for my success here. I only wish that we had more like him. He is a delegate to the Annual Conference. We now have no indebtedness of any kind.

NUXATED IRON
A DRIVING FORCE
BEHIND KEEN SUCCESSFUL MEN AND WOMEN

When you think of the successful men and women you know—people who are doing things worth while—you will find that they possess force, vim and energy—the kind that simply brim over when the blood is filled with iron. Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells, strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed force and energy into the whole system. Three million people use it annually as a tonic, strength and blood-builder.

MAKE THIS TEST

See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form.

HELP ME TO BE HOLY!

By Rev. R. T. Ware.

Help me to be holy,
Dear Father on high;
Help me to be like Him
Who for me did die
Help me to be holy.
In all that I do,
Help me to be faithful
Kind hearted and true

Help me to be holy.
In all of my way;
Help me to trust Him.
By night and by day;
Help me to be true,
Submissive and meek
Bearing the burdens
Of those who are weak

Help me to be holy,
That Thy face I may see;
Help me to surrender
My all unto Thee.
Help me each day,
As onward I go,
To point a lost world
To the Savior I know.

Help me to be holy.
For this is Thy will;
Help me to strive,
Thy Word to fulfill;
For then in Thy likeness
I surely shall shine
In that bright mansion
Which soon will be mine.

A BIBLE STORY IN FAMILY WORSHIP.

By Clem Baker.

I was recently entertained in the home of the superintendent of a school a few months after he had introduced the graded lessons, and saw a remarkable illustration of the influence of these lessons upon the family worship. The superintendent's family consists of grandmother, father, mother and two sons, six and seven.

Bedtime had come, and I was expecting to be asked to conduct the family worship in the usual way. Imagine my surprise when my host said, "Brother Baker, I am afraid that you have not had time to prepare for our worship to-night, so with your permission I will conduct it."

Instantly I saw an expression of interest come over the faces of the two boys as they eagerly drew nearer to their father's chair. And then, in the most natural way possible, that father told the story of Joshua leading the Israelites into the Promised Land.

When the story was finished, those open-eyed, open-mouthed, open-eared, boys, instead of hurrying off to bed said, "Daddy, tell us some more."

"No, wait until to-morrow night," he said. "We want to talk to our Heavenly Father now. Who has something he wants to thank him for?"

One by one, from the smallest boy up to the grandmother, they told of God's blessings upon them that day.

"Who has something he wants to ask our Father for to-night?"

Again each member of that family told his heart's desires.

Then the father led in a simple prayer in which he mentioned each one's thanks and requests. As he prayed, I was sure that each child said "Amen" in his heart as truly as any adult ever said it.

After the boys had gone to bed the father told me that he took at least an hour down at his busy office each day to prepare his Bible story for family worship and that in preparing his lesson he made large use of the primary graded lesson material used in his Sunday school. I went to bed that night and for a long time lay thinking of another little boy who, years ago, looked upon family worship either as something to be endured or as an opportunity to get his first evening nap.—The School Standard.

JAPANESE MUSIC

Music in Japan has always had a bad name. Well-brought-up Japanese girls were on no account permitted to indulge musical talents.

The coming of the talking machine to Japan has, however, brought about a different state of affairs. The standard of music has been raised to a degree undreamed of but a few years ago.

The music of the Japanese was, up to the coming of the nipponophone (the Japanese name for the phonograph) a product mainly of three instruments—the shakuhachi, an ancient type of flute; the sumisen, the Japanese equivalent for the guitar; and the koto, a very much elongated stringed instrument.

Harmony, in Japanese music, is a thing unknown. Specially trained men of Anglo-Saxon teaching had to be imported and put to work on the Japanese melodies before proper recording of the airs could be accomplished.

The Japanese have been seized with a sudden and engrossing hunger for good music as a result of the introduction of the talking machine

Several Japanese prima donnas are now engaged in concert work in America.—Exchange.

ENOCH WALKED WITH GOD

Enoch was a man with like passions to us. He was a family man, a public man, a man who lived in an age of extraordinary wickedness, but he walked with God. Egypt had its Joseph, and Babylon had its Daniel. To walk with God is to be in harmony with God. There can be no harmony of life while there is contrariety of nature. "Ye must be born again." To walk with God is to love the things that God loves and to hate the things that God hates. Enoch was not enamored of the things that God hates. To the people of his day he probably seemed straight-laced and narrow-minded, but we speak of him as "the man who walked with God." To walk with God means to keep step with him. We cannot walk with God if we lag behind in timid or surly disobedience. We can not walk with God if, through lack of faith, we run ahead to reconnoiter. To walk with God is to be conscious, however rough and rugged the way, that heaven lies at the end of the journey. "Enoch" means dedicated, initiated, disciplined. We can never come to the fullness of the stature of God's ideal for us except through the process of discipline, for "discipline" is but another word for "discipling."—Selected.

Sage Tea Darkens Hair to Any Shade

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-Time Recipe that Anybody Can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.—Adv.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

First Day

The seventy-fourth session of the Louisiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La., on Wednesday morning, November 12, at 9 o'clock, Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo presiding. The Bishop read Psalm 103, and the Conference joined in singing hymn 279, "Rock of Ages, cleft for me," after which Bishop H. M. DuBose led in prayer. Bishop Kilgo then read an address to the church, recently issued by the College of Bishops, emphasizing the great need of the church for a revival of true religion.

The secretary of the preceding Conference, Dr. F. S. Parker, called the roll. Dr. Parker was nominated as secretary. He stated that he would prefer to have somebody else elected in his place on account of the amount of work involved in his position as General Secretary of the Epworth League. Rev. Jno. F. Foster was nominated. When the vote was taken, Dr. Parker was elected. The Secretary nominated the following as his assistants: Jno. F. Foster, R. H. Harper; Rob't W. Vaughan, statistical secretary. The statistical secretary nominated H. W. Cudd, J. M. Boykin, and Leland Clegg as his assistants. They were elected.

On motion of Dr. R. H. Wynn, the opening and closing hours were fixed at 8:45 and 12, and the bar of the Conference was made the first floor of the main auditorium.

By action of the Conference last year, the usual committees were made quadrennial committees. They are, therefore, the same as last year, except those on public worship and memoirs. Rev. J. M. Henry, Rev. R. H. Wynn, and Dr. S. L. White were appointed the Committee on Public Worship.

On motion of Briscoe Carter, the Address of the Bishops was ordered printed in the Minutes. Various communications were referred without reading to appropriate boards and committees.

Bishop DuBose was presented to the Conference.

A resolution was adopted as a standing rule of the Conference, to become effective at the next session, setting apart the evening hour for preaching, the connectional and other interests to be presented during the regular business sessions or at afternoon sessions.

The Bishop called Question 17—"Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" The following made their reports and their characters were passed: Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District; H. W. May, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District; H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Lafayette District; A. S. Luiz, presiding elder of the Monroe District; J. G. Snelling, presiding elder of the New Orleans District; J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the Ruston District; C. D. Atkinson, presiding elder of the Shreveport District.

The names of the preachers were called by districts, and those called by the Bishop were passed in character.

The Rev. Mr. McFadden, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, was presented to the Conference.

Bishop H. M. DuBose addressed the Conference concerning the work of our church on the Pacific Coast, especially in San Francisco. An offering was taken for strengthening this work.

Dr. O. E. Goddard, Secretary of the Home Department of the Board of Missions, was presented to the Conference.

Announcements were made, a hymn was sung, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction by Bishop DuBose.

Afternoon.

Dr. O. E. Goddard, Secretary of the Home Department of the Board of Missions, preached at 3 o'clock in the afternoon on Evangelism.

Evening.

The anniversary of the Board of Missions was held at 7:30 p. m. Rev. W. W. Holmes presided, and addresses were made by Rev. N. E. Joyner, Dr. W. W. Pinson, General Secretary of the Board of Missions, and Dr. O. E. Goddard.

Second Day.

The Conference convened at 8:45 o'clock, Thursday morning, Bishop Kilgo in the chair. The Bishop conducted the opening exercises, which consisted of singing, prayer by Rev. J. D. Harper, the reading of a part of the 19th chapter of the Gospel of Matthew, and an address concerning the religious condition and needs of the church.

The secretary called the roll of absentees from the opening session. The call showed that a good many delegates had arrived since yesterday. The minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

The call of Question 17 was resumed. The names of the superannuate and supernumerary members of the Conference were called, their characters were passed, and they were continued in the same relation. The names of Rev. T. J. Embree and S. A. Steel were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations.

The question, "Who remain on trial?" was called. E. N. Barrios, having joined another church, was dropped from the roll. C. M. Mayo, not having stood an approved examination, was continued in the class of the first year. A. J. Martin, W. H. Giles, Ellis Smith, S. J. McLean, and J. E. Selfe, having been approved by the committee of examination, were advanced to the class of the second year.

The transfer of D. B. Boddie from the Texas Conference was announced.

Announcement was made that O. L. Tucker had withdrawn from the ministry, retaining membership in the church. His credentials were surrendered to the Conference.

Leland Clegg was advanced to the class of the third year and elected a traveling deacon.

C. V. Vetter, A. D. Martin, Frank Collins, and R. A. Bozeman were elected local deacons.

A. L. Harper, J. L. Lay, and J. L. Evans were elected traveling elders.

When the name of R. W. Smith was called, his presiding elder announced that charges against his character had been made, and asked that a committee of investigation be appointed. The committee was appointed, as follows: N. E. Joyner, W. J. Porter, W. L. Doss, Jr.

On motion, R. S. Walton was substituted for T. J. Embree on the Committee of Examination for the fourth year, Brother Embree being unable to serve on account of illness.

Frank Collins and Porter M Carraway were admitted on trial into the traveling connection. In noting the fact that there were only two applicants for admission on trial, Bishop Kilgo spoke at some length of the need of a type of Christian life and activity on the part of the ministry and laity of the church that would result in such a revival of religion as would largely recruit the ranks of the ministry. Dr. F. S. Parker, Dr. S. H. Werlein, Dr. F. N. Parker, Briscoe Carter, and others spoke on the same subject, and the whole Conference was moved by the manifest presence of the Spirit of God.

W. C. Everett, manager of the Dallas branch of the Publishing House, and Frank Reedy, of Southern Methodist University, and other visitors were presented to the Conference.

The report of the Board of Christian Literature was presented by H. W. Rickey, as follows:

Report of Committee on Christian Literature.

The Sunday school literature has become a serviceable and practical power in every department.

No man can have a church-wide and a world-wide view of Methodism unless he reads the Nashville Christian Advocate.

The Centenary of Methodist Missions demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt the power of the printed page for educative preparedness, organizing usefulness, and the mobilizing unification of the diversified resources of a great church.

The Quarterly Review keeps before the thoughtful reader the most recent and best Christian thought.

The Epworth Era, by actual trial in League meetings, creates the Epworth League spirit and develops life, leadership, and loyalty.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate should be appointed assistant pastor by every first quarterly conference. It makes 52 pastoral calls to each subscriber's home annually. It brings information and inspiration concerning every claim, interest, and organization of our church. The most liberal and loyal, helpful and intelligent Methodists of our city and circuit churches are constant Advocate readers.

It means to crucify every good cause between two thieves, to let our Advocate perish of starvation by lack of enough subscribers. No cause succeeds in this country without a live literature propaganda. The Americans are a newspaper reading people.

The "H. C. L." affects the Advocate. The publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate advises your Conference Committee that

HOW IT IS DONE.

I asked the Lord that I might grow
In faith, and love, and every grace,
Might more of his salvation know,
And seek more earnestly his face.

I hoped that in some favored hour
At once he'd answer my request,
And by his love's constraining power
Subdue my sins and give me rest.

Instead of this, he made me feel
The hidden evils of my heart,
And let the angry powers of hell
Assault my soul in every part.

"Lord, why is this?" I trembling cried;
"Wilt thou pursue thy worm to death?"
"'Tis in this way," the Lord replied,
"I answer prayer for grace and faith.

"These inward trials I employ,
From self and pride to set thee free,
And break thy schemes of earthly joy,
That thou mayst seek thy all in me."

—Olney Hymns.

NOTES OF EARLY TOMBIGBEE METHODISM.

By Geo. J. Leftwich.

When the North Mississippi Methodists assemble at the coming meeting of the North Mississippi Conference at Aberdeen, Miss., they will meet on historic ground. Cotton Gin Port, an abandoned town of Monroe County, near Amory, is by all odds the oldest settlement in north Mississippi. A French governor, Bienville, landed his forces at Cotton Gin Port nearly two centuries ago to fight the Chickasaw Indians. That place had been for a long time a frontier trading post. The eastern portion of Monroe County was ceded to the United States by the Chickasaw Indians Sept. 20, 1816. That portion west of the river was ceded by the Chickasaw Indians to the United States government Oct. 20, 1832, by the treaty of Pontotoc.

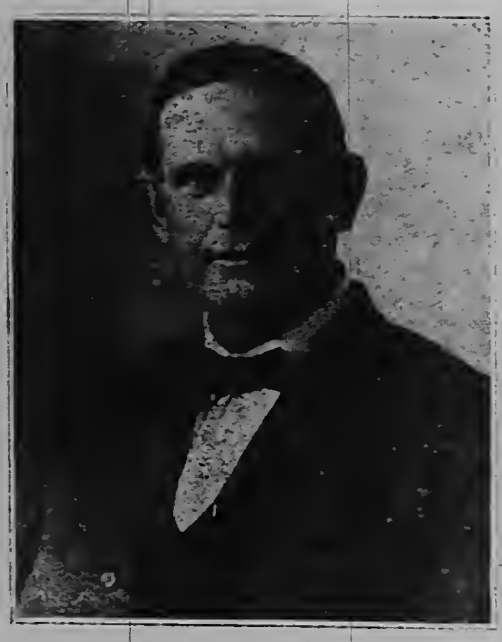
The city of Aberdeen was founded and named by Robert Gordon, father of Colonel James Gordon, for a time United States Senator. Robert Gordon was a native of Dundee, Scotland, which name the canny Scot gave to the town, which he later changed to Aberdeen because early settlers pronounced "Dundee" with the accent on the first syllable. This disgusted him, and he said he would give the town a name that "the yaps" could pronounce.

The western part of the county, including the rich prairie in which Aberdeen is situated, was not opened to settlers until after the treaty of Pontotoc in 1832. As early as 1830, however, "Tombeckbee," later called Tombigbee, is found on the minutes of the Alabama Conference. At this time the Tombigbee country on the east was rapidly settling up, and the Methodist itinerant, as usual, was early found on the ground. In 1836-37 Aberdeen first appears as a separate charge in the Alabama Conference, Columbus District, with J. L. Finley and John Gilmore preachers, and in 1837-8 J. K. Hawkins, preacher. In 1840 the charge is set down as Aberdeen and Cotton Gin Port, with W. Wier, preacher. In 1841 Aberdeen appears in the Memphis Conference, Holly Springs District, with Daniel Moody preacher. In 1840 the Aberdeen Mission appears in the minutes of the Memphis Conference with John S. Williams preacher, which charge was evidently an outlying district of the then sparsely settled country. From 1836 to the present time Aberdeen appears to have been a station. The names of the preachers and presiding elders who served the charge might be of interest. The preachers, as shown by the Conference minutes, in addition to those given are as follows:

In 1845, W. H. Seat, as preacher in charge; 1846, D. W. Garrard; 1847, W. Warren; 1848, to be supplied; 1849, J. W. Knott; 1850, W. C. Robb; 1851-2, W. Hyer; 1853, A. B. Fly; 1854, W. H. Shepard; 1855, W. W. Peebles; 1856, W. T. Harris; 1857-8, B. F. Crouch; 1859-60, J. T. Meriwether; 1861-2, Charles D. H. Campbell; 1863-4, A. J. See; 1865-6, Amos Kendall; 1867, J. W. Mathis; 1868-9, Isaac Ebbert; 1870, L. H. Davis; 1871, Samuel R. Brewer; 1872-3, William Shepard; 1874-5-6, William Murrah; 1877-8-9-80, John H. Scruggs; 1881 to 1884, R. P. Mitchell; 1885, W. B. Murrah; 1886, T. W. Dye; 1887-8, E. L. Spragins; 1889 to 1892, J. A. Bowen; 1893 to 1896, Amos Kendall; 1897-8, W. W. Woollard; 1899 to 1901, Richard Wilkinson; 1902 to 1904, J. E. Cunningham; 1905-6, J. H. Felts; 1907-8, W. E. M. Brogan; 1909, J. R. Countiss; 1910-11, J. T. Murrah; 1912 to 1914, Isaac D. Borders; 1915-16, J. M. Bradley; 1917, J. Tillerry Lewis; 1918, John E. Thomas.

The presiding elders, as shown on the minutes, are as follows:

Beginning in 1845 to 1849, Thomas L. Boswell (his appearing on the minutes five years is doubtless due to a change of districts); 1850-51, M. Brock; 1852, J. F. Walch; 1853 to 1856, J. H. Brooks; 1857 to 1860, M. J. Blackwell; 1861 to 1864, J. T. Meriwether; 1865, Michael Blackwell; 1866 to 1869, Archibald C. Allen; 1870 to 1877, T. Y. Ramsey (the long continuance of this elder in the charge is again plainly due to the change of district from Verona to Aberdeen, he having served both successively); 1878-9 and 1880-81, Amos Kendall; 1882 to 1885, R. G. Porter; 1886 to 1889, Amos Kendall; 1890 to 1892, J. B. Stone;



REV. GEO. H. THOMPSON,

Presiding Elder of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference.

1893, W. S. Lagrone; 1894 to 1897, S. M. Thames; 1898, J. M. Wyatt; 1899 to 1901, W. W. Woollard; 1902-3, J. C. Park; 1904 to 1907, J. H. Mitchell; 1908 to 1910, J. H. Felts; 1911, J. E. Cunningham; 1912 to 1915, John W. Bell; 1916 to 1918, T. H. Lipscomb, the present incumbent.

It might be noticed that the pastorate appears to have been shorter in earlier years. The above lists of preachers and presiding elders contain many notable men. Among the first of these was Dr. Thomas L. Boswell, father of Dr. John W. Boswell, both long distinguished in this Conference. Joseph H. Brooks was the father of J. J. Brooks, a much honored and highly respected member of the Conference. Notable among the list is the Rev. Amos Kendall, the spirited Englishman, who served Aberdeen as pastor in 1865-66, and again four years beginning in 1893. He served the district as presiding elder four years, beginning in 1878, and four years more, beginning in 1886. He was thus a familiar figure in the Aberdeen territory, and he and his faithful wife are buried in Aberdeen, in Odd Fellows' Rest. He was a man of unfaltering devotion and courage, a preacher of great power and far-reaching influence for good in all the territory he served. Another notable name is that of Dr. William Murrah, who came within one vote of being elected bishop. He was pastor of the church from 1874 to 1876. His son, Bishop W. B. Murrah, was pastor in 1885 and until he was elected president of Whitworth College. Another son, Rev. J. T. Murrah, was pastor in 1910-11, and until his death.

Dr. John H. Scruggs, who married a daughter of Bishop Robert Paine, and is now a distinguished member of the Georgia Conference, was four years at Aberdeen. The Rev. Robert Gilderoy Porter served the district as presiding elder four years. The Rev. Mr. Porter, widely known under the nom de plume of "Gilderoy," was perhaps more widely read in the church periodicals than any man in this Connection. He was a theologian, a controversialist when aroused, a most interesting story-teller, and an unusually entertaining and high-minded gentleman. Rev. L. H. Davis, who served the church in 1870, was a blind preacher and was led about over the town visiting his people by a little negro servant. Much might be said, if space permitted, of men who served the church and became afterwards notable, and much of many who yet promise to reach great distinction.

A notable figure in the church at Aberdeen was Bishop Robert Paine, who was born in Person County, North Carolina, November 12, 1799, and died in Aberdeen, Miss., October 19, 1882. Robert Paine joined the Methodist Episcopal Church October 9, 1817, and was admitted to the itinerancy in 1818 and appointed to the Tuscaloosa Circuit, Alabama Conference. This circuit embraced a very wide territory and is believed to have included much of Monroe County and much of the prairie district. The heavy labor imposed upon the young preacher on this circuit and the charge that followed is believed to have undermined his health and strength. In 1823 he was presiding elder of the Forked Deer District, which extended from Forence, Ala., on the east to the Mississippi River on the west, to the Kentucky line on the north, and embraced much of the North Mississippi Conference. Bishop Paine was made president of La Grange College, a connectional institution, located near Tuscumbia, Ala., in 1829, a place he filled with great distinction until elected bishop in May, 1846, after the separation of the churches North and South. He was the author of the plan of the separation of the two churches and also of the widely read life of Bishop William McKendree, whose assistant bishop Robert Paine was in his early ministry and whose apostolic labors set a pattern for the young preacher. After his election as bishop, Bishop Paine moved to Aberdeen. There were few railroads then and with undaunted labors on horseback he penetrated the swamps of the Mississippi valley and the staked plains and sparsely settled regions of the southwest. He was a great administrator of the church, a pulpit orator of high order, a man of fine business qualifications, and a church statesman of broad conceptions.

The first church building belonging to the Methodist Church at Aberdeen was situated in Old Aberdeen, just south of the County courthouse, and near the residence of the late Dr. John L. Tindall, and built in 1837 or about that time. Among the leading members were Colonel Bowling C. Burnett, Alex Carlisle, wealthy slave holders and planters, and J. D. Mann, known as Parson Mann, a local preacher. He continued to live in the town during a long life and was well known for much eccentricity and great devotion to the church.

The second churchhouse was framed of wood with a detached Sunday school building on the site of the present church, which was torn down and replaced in 1859 by a handsome brick church constructed after the Greek models with tall Ionic columns in front. That church was large and comfortable, with a wide gallery for the negro slaves and a basement with numerous rooms for the Sunday school. There was much to admire in its plan and architecture. This church was torn down and replaced in 1912 by a much more costly structure of Gothic architecture, equipped with Sunday school rooms, pastor's study, and all the conveniences of modern church buildings. Its shape and architecture are of delightful proportions and its high and beautiful towers are restful to the eye and attract attention for many blocks around.

The officiary and leadership among the laymen of the Methodist Church of the last generation was a very distinguished body of men, representatives of the wealthy settlers from Virginia, the Carolinas and Georgia, who very often made North Alabama the half-way house, and who later settled in the Tombigbee country, attracted by the rich lands and wide opportunities for wealth.

We might note among the trustees and stewards of the church of the last generation Colonel James Phelan, a Confederate States' Senator; Colonel John B. Sale, a lawyer of wide renown; W. A. Sykes, Thomas B. Brandon and W. H. Copton, widely known and wealthy planters; D. H. Holmes, Dr. Barton and B. B. Barker, distinguished citizens and wealthy merchants of the city of Aberdeen.

The wealthy Prewett family who came into Monroe County soon after the eastern portion was opened to settlers in 1816 was composed of Lemuth Prewett, a Primitive Baptist preacher, who had five sons of much wealth and influence: Abner, Dyer, Kirk, and Larkin. This family at one time and another owned much of the landed property of Monroe County. Some of them were leading members of the Primitive Baptist Church in this region and at Aberdeen. Their church here was on the site of the present Catholic Church and their liberal and fraternal association with the Methodists is indicated by the fact that the Methodists occupied their church while the splendid building constructed in 1859 was being erected. The Primitive Baptists have now only a few congregations in the country, and Methodism is still widening its borders and influence.

The Aberdeen charge and the entire Tombigbee country was for a long time a part of the Alabama Conference, but was later detached therefrom and added to the Memphis Conference, where it remained till the formation of the North Mississippi Conference in 1870. In the meantime it seems to have belonged to several presiding elders' districts, but is now and had been for a long time a part of the Aberdeen District.

SEVERAL THINGS.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

Dear Brother Cathey: That you may get my bi-monthly in before Conference, and before I get too busy getting up my reports, I'll take this time by the forelock; and, by the way, that leads me to say that uppermost in my pleasures on the old farm has been a good saddler, which, in addition to averaging several miles daily, has also earned his feed by pulling the plow and turning into the bin more than double. Of course his name must be Charley and he has as much sense as David Harum's nag that would stand without hitching.

But I am ahead of myself, for it is first to thank you for asking me to contribute to the paper; and I will also add another thank for your kindness in sending so few to Botany Bay. Whatever your readers may have thought of the scribblings (and doubtless many passed them by unnoticed), you are responsible as editor; and by the way, I heard a good judge of such matters say recently that the New Orleans is among the best. Well, that's just why that Publishing Committee put you in for another term (now no blue pencil—I'm responsible).

And Mansfield has done herself proud in making Sam Steel a citizen for the rest of his days—hurrah for Mansfield and hurrah for Sam! Didn't I write in an article for your columns some time back, "Better to be born lucky than rich?" Well, Sam's luck is due to Mansfield's pluck. Now, that's the way to do an old war horse—not turn him out to starve and shiver on the commons. Why, I'll see that old Charley fares better than that; he's entitled to good food and a bed of hay for old recollections. I wrote and asked Sam if that gift meant that he was contemplating slacker life, and it just seemed to nettle him up to a reply by return mail, saying, "No, I'm just getting ready to begin to start to fight."

Now that the fall-time has come, we may write

of 'possums, potatoes and persimmons. Ah, what charming recollections cling to those three p's, something akin to the old oaken bucket that hung in the well! Dining with a neighbor a few days ago, I was greeted by a well-browned carcass of this marsupial; somehow, it didn't taste very "simerly like," as our colored friends say, and, upon close inspection, the "tater" fence around was absent—'possum to be good must be intimately associated with yellow yams—not bunch yams, not Nancy Halls, but the genuine yellows. About persimmons: the crop has been short this season, so it's a race between the boys and the 'possums which get the most. Speaking of persimmons recalls that drink so familiar to our boyhood which wasn't any "near beer," but the real stuff; and if you want witness to its goodness, just ask Sam Steel—he knows about these things "before the war."

Called to Jackson to meet Board of Trustees of Millsaps, I had an afternoon on the Fair Grounds, where I met quite a number of the brethren, and, of course, we talked Conference. One brother said a P. E. had said that we would be full to overflowing; and yet the Advocate of this date has a call from one of the "Beloveds" for supplies for next year—what's wrong in Denmark? However, there is a limitation to young men, which means that old men need not apply, no matter how competent. Perhaps it is as one of our Baptist editors has said, it's a gospel of legs that's wanted.

And my page is nearly full, and I haven't said a word to Herbert Watkins, et al., about how to entertain the Conference. Well, I didn't vote for Meridian, so I'll be modest and let those boys arrange for that company, sisters and all. Oh, how it still rings—"don't send me a woman!" Sister Martha doesn't want Sister Mary sitting around doing nothing. My report will be "in full, Bishop; had a good year," etc.

Of course I shall look for this in the earliest issue of the Advocate.

October 30, 1919.

REV. THOMAS G. FREEMAN.

Rev. Thomas G. Freeman, son of Rev. Alfred Freeman (a local elder in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South), was born near Cageville, Haywood County, Tennessee, January 27, 1835 and entered into his eternal rest at Grenada, Miss., August 13, 1919, being in the eighty-fifth year of his age. He was educated in the public schools of Tippah County, Miss., and in Denmark, Tenn. Converted in 1847, he felt a divine call to the ministry in early youth and was licensed to preach in 1860; admitted on trial in the Memphis Conference in November, 1861, at Aberdeen, Miss., and ordained deacon by Bishop Paine at the same session of the Conference. He received his elder's orders at the hands of Bishop Doggett in Water Valley, Miss., in December, 1870, at the first meeting of the newly-organized North Mississippi Conference. From the foregoing dates it will be seen that he gave fifty-nine years of his life to the Methodist ministry, having been in the local ranks for four years before joining the travelling connection, and also having been granted this relation for the years 1878, '79, '80. He was twice given a supernumerary relation for one year, and was a superannuate for the last nineteen years of his life. For thirty-one years he was in the thick of the fray as an itinerant Methodist preacher, serving hard circuits at a meager salary.

Converted in childhood, he never faltered in the faith nor slackened his hold on God to the day of his death. For him, God was a genuine reality, an ever-present, soul-cheering companion with whom he held daily communion. His religious experience was of a type too positive to permit any dalliance with doubt. Confident of his relation with God, he became sure and steadfast in all his convictions, outspoken in every good cause and ready always to combat evil of every sort. He was no "reed shaken by the wind." Soft raiment and sumptuous fare made little appeal to his sturdy soul, fired with zeal to carry the evangel of his Lord to the perishing children of men. With weakness and suffering he was as tender as a child, as sympathetic as a woman; in the face of evil and sham, as courageous as a Crusader, as uncompromising as a soldier of Cromwell. No one ever suspected him of pruning a sermon to court popularity or to win favor. With line and plummet he sought to lay straight and true the walls of Zion.

Physically, he was of such mold as the Master had need what time Methodism was seeking the lost on frontiers and establishing the kingdom on immense circuits traversed by wretched roads. No dilettante weakling could have endured the hardships to which he was subjected in these fields. At one time he walked forty miles to an appointment. His massive frame betokened vigor in every lineament and member and the body did not belie the soul within. His virtues were too rugged to pass unnoticed. A man without guile, his life was an open book. His candor was as refreshing to those seeking truth as it was disappointing to those who would cloak unworthy schemes with the seemly garb of ministerial en-

On motion, the name of J. Ivey Hoffpaulr was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the supernumerary relation.

The minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

Acording to the direction of the General Conference, the constitutional question of the revision of Article 23 of the Articles of Religion was submitted by the Bishop. The vote resulted as follows: For the revision, 135; against, none.

Question 8 was called, "Who are located this year?" John Sholars, at his own request, was granted a location.

STATEMENT BY DR. JOHN R. MOTT.

Under date of October 21, Dr. John R. Mott, General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Associations of North America, sends the following wire from New York:

"I am greatly surprised to learn that notwithstanding my previous statements on three important subjects, my attitude, belief, and practice are still misunderstood. Request, therefore, that you give widest immediate publicity to the following statement:

"First—To-day, as always, I believe in the providential character and mission of our evangelical Christian denominations. I have never been identified with and have never countenanced any organization or movement which stands for breaking down denominations. On the contrary, have devoted most of my thought and strength for over thirty years in seeking to raise up leaders at home, the different denominations in their work at home, abroad, and in other ways to strengthen the hands of these denominations. I believe in co-operation and in the oneness for which Christ prayed, but this does not imply any weakening of denominational integrity, loyalty and efficiency. I have not worked in the dark. My public utterances in all parts of the world during all these years, largely on denominational platforms and in the counsils of trusted denominational leaders, ought to make such misunderstanding impossible.

"Second—Regarding Camp Pastors, let me state that as a member of the Committee of Six, I opposed the proposed action regarding their withdrawal from camps. The minutes of the Committee and testimony of my colleagues corroborate this statement.

"When I learned that I was being quoted to the contrary and this apparently with support of War Department, I called and entered protest in person to War Department and was exonerated. Not only have I not opposed Camp Pastors, but, on the contrary, have always instructed our Young Men's Christian Association War Workers to give full support to all properly accredited Camp Pastors.

"Third—Regarding the charge that the Association minimized the religious side of its work, especially overseas, would state that our purpose, policy, and effort were to secure the exact opposite result. Notwithstanding shortcomings and weaknesses in this work, owing to inadequate leadership and other handicaps, this most vital part of the program became increasingly prominent and effective. A larger number of pastors were sent overseas than of any other profession not excepting regular Young Men's Christian Association secretaries. They numbered over fourteen hundred. They had a leading part in the control of the entire movement, with results of which we are proud. The charge that we did not devote relatively sufficient money to religious work is absolutely false and misleading, because this charge does not take account of the principal items, namely, those such as the large number of personnel engaged in this work. It is highly significant that the most severe criticism regarding Young Men's Christian Assocation war workers overseas has come from writers, speakers and others who charge that our work was too religious, and, in particular, too much in the hands of evangelical denominational leadership.

"JOHN R. MOTT."

THE UPLIFTING POWER OF FORGIVENESS.

My brethren, we all know by a hundred wretched experiences the impotence of an unnerved will, the poverty of a corrupt love. Our resolutions are so brave until the moment comes for keeping them; our intentions are so excellent until the pressure of facts confuses us; our desires are so eager for purity, if only they would not so strangely languish just as the passions awake in a storm. All would be well if we did not just slip and fall where it was vital to stand. Most miserable this incessant collapse! How it disheartens; how it disgusts! We are netted as a bird. We flutter up, but the meshes once again entangle us, and down we come to the ground, and the sky is as far off as ever. And what if, around and about this poor, this impoverished will, there was wrapped the irresistible might of a will that had not been broken, a will, new, fresh, undaunted, tough as steel, endurable as stone, firm as adamant?—what if the warmth of a love were laid about it to which the emotion of impure appetites is impossible?—what if it were given up to this love, so that it abode within us and possessed us, and held us fast, untroubled by our disasters, unhurt by our sins? What if, after all our sinning, we still can turn back again and again to find this loving will there still, pure and strong as ever within us, still pressing, with unwearied patience, on toward the beauty of holiness, with its unwavering eyes ever fixed on the face of God? Would not this be enough? Would not this be salvation? Would not this be peace? "Ye shall mount on eagles' wings." That is our splendid assurance. No longer that fluttering tumult of the poor captives, tangled in the snare!

Nay! but "on eagles' wings," the wings of God under us, kingly and unconquerable, as they beat their strong way upward, let the winds blow as they may: "on eagles' wings," the wings of a holy will, the wings of a clean desire laid under us to bear us upward. This may be yours, you who are in sickness, infirm, or palsied, or dead. This uplifting power may be made your own, if you will but forsake your own mode of cure, your own medicines, your own wisdom and come and lay yourself at the feet of him who alone can make a breach in your sad captivity; who, through his very manhood has, alone, the power here on earth to forgive the sins of his fellows.—Henry Scott Holland.

A TITHING CHURCH

A MILLION TITHERS IN METHODISM

DECEMBER 7-14

Sign the Tither's Card

IMMEDIATE TASK:

ONE-FIFTH OF MEMBERSHIP SIGNED UP AS TITHERS

Study carefully that chapter of the Standard Plan which deals with the campaign for Christian Stewardship and Tithing.

From the Pulpit, in the Sunday School, Woman's Missionary Societies, Epworth Leagues, and all other organizations of the Church the principles of Christian Stewardship and the reasons for Tithing should be clearly and frequently presented in order that the people may be informed on this vital subject.

The Church membership should be divided into groups of twenty, and trained workers should earnestly and prayerfully present to such groups the subject of Tithing, urging each individual to sign the card as a tithing steward.

To acknowledge by the payment of at least the TITHE God's ownership of all that we possess will mean a deeper spiritual life in the Church.

CORMORANT FISHING.

By M. Tourneur.

There are all sorts of methods of catching fish, from the big steam trawler of the North Sea to taking trout in a country stream by "cuddling" with the hands round the stones for them. But most picturesque of all the ways of fishing in the world is one that long ago was used in Great Britain and other countries of Europe, but now is only to be seen in China and Japan—fishing with cormorants.

The Japanese, like the Chinese, are among the greatest fish eaters in the world, and have so many different kinds of eatable fishes that they can have a different one for breakfast every morning in the year. In China and Japan the folk have looked after their fish supplies for hundreds of generations, and never go short of fish at all events.

The white and the black cormorants are specially reared for fishing. The eggs are hatched under hens, and when the young cormorants are three months or so old they are trained to fish. The trainer ties a string to one of the bird's legs, and drives the cormorant into the water. He then throws out small fish, which the bird promptly catches. It is taught to dive and come back at the call of the trainer's whistle. Then, when fully trained, a ring of metal is put about the bird's neck, so that it cannot swallow the fish it catches. It is so greedy that it will eat three times its weight in fresh fish.

In Japan cormorant fishing is usually done by torchlight. As many as seven boats are often employed, and in each are four men and the cormorants. In the bows of the boat stands the captain, who looks after twelve of the cormorants; and in the middle of the boat is another man, who has four birds. One of the important men of the crew is the "kako," who is so called from the bamboo apparatus he uses to make a great noise in order to keep the cormorants at work.

Each bird, as has been said, wears round its neck a ring of metal, big enough to let it eat its food, but small enough, too, to prevent the fish from being swallowed. A cord is tied round the cormorant so as to let the birds be put into the water or brought up into the boat without being hurt.

The captain, having placed his twelve cormorants into the water, holds their cords in his hands, and the second bird-man does the same. The blazing torches draw the fishes to the spot, the kako begins his clatter, and a very lively affair takes place. The cormorants are diving and ducking with extraordinary quickness in every direction, and a sharp eye has to be kept on them to see when they catch anything. When this takes place they are at once dragged into the boat and made to spit out the fish. Each bird is numbered, and a certain order is kept among them as to their turns in diving. The cormorants are wonderfully quick at their work, and can catch as many as 130 fish in an hour. And the fish that can swim faster than the cormorant under water is as rare as a small fish in an angler's description of his "catch!"—Exchange.

FROM A TO IZZARD.

Nat had been a prisoner for a long time with a sprained knee, and at last his patience gave out.

"Roll my chair away from the window," he said to Rose, his older sister.

Rose knew why he had suddenly lost all interest in looking out of the window. It was because there was no use watching for Zeb Rawson, his chum, for Zeb had gone away to visit relatives in the next town.

"I'm tired of that old street," Nat said soberly. He turned away his head.

Then Rose thought of a game. "Let's stay at the window a little longer," she proposed, "and play 'From A to Izzard.'"

"I don't know what that is," Nat answered. He did not look at all interested.

Rose drew up a chair and sat down. "Izzard is an old name for the letter Z," she explained. "And so from A to Izzard means the alphabet. The game is for us to find twenty-six things in the street that begin with the different letters of the alphabet. The things must be objects that move. We'll take it by turns, and whoever doesn't get stumped wins the game. Now, then, A is for—automobile, of course! There go two automobiles this minute."

Nat turned his head and looked out. "B is for baby," he said, but his voice did not sound as if he were much interested.

Rose wished a cat would come along for C, but none came, and so after a while she chose coat tails; there were plenty of coat tails in the street, and they were all moving. Her choice made them both laugh, and Nat's face brightened a little.

D was easy, for a dog ran into sight at just the right moment; but E was very hard. Rose decided that she should have to say "eyes." She could see a pair of eyes now and then when some one glanced up at the window.

Nat had a hard time with F until a florist's cart full of bright flowers went by. At the same moment a girl pushed a gocart under the window and gave Rose two G's; and there were plenty of horses for Nat's H.

Rose found I a very troublesome letter until the ice wagon turned the corner. Then, when Nat was almost in despair over J, an accommodating blue jay suddenly hopped along a limb of the nearest tree and solved the puzzle for him. K was a kite that a boy was carrying by; L was a leaf; and M, standing for man, was of course the easiest letter of all.

N worried Nat for a time; then a newsboy ran down the street and made it all right. Rose pointed out an officer for O, but P was an obstinate letter, Nat found. He looked up and down the street and shook his head. Then all at once he laughed aloud. "Parrot!" he cried. "I'm glad they hung that fellow in the front window to-day!"

Rose racked her brain over Q, but at length, when she was almost beaten, she spied a quilt swinging on a line in some one's back yard.

A boy on roller skates came along for R; but S was a hard nut to crack. It took the weather to decide that for them. There was a splash of raindrops on the pane, and Rose exclaimed, "Shower!" with a triumphant laugh.

"Tree!" Nat cried in turn. "See, the wind is moving the maple!"

U, which would have been very difficult but for the storm, was umbrella; V was vines; and a wagon rolled by at just the right moment to stand for W.

Then came X. Nat was almost ready to give that up when he saw a swinging sign that was marked "Dixon" in large black letters. "I wonder if I could use that X?" he asked doubtfully. "But, no, it doesn't begin a word."

"Well, use it anyway," Rose said, "because I may have to take something just as foolish for Y." She was right; Y almost stumped her. But after a while she pointed to a young man. "Youth!" she cried.

Nat was much excited. "We're even now, but, O Rose, I'm afraid I'm going to lose out with old Izzard!" He craned his neck and gazed this way and that, but he could not find any object that began with Z. Then he saw something that made him forget all about the game. A small boy was racing up the street through the rain.

"I thought he wouldn't be home till to-morrow!" cried Nat. "I thought he wouldn't be home till to-morrow, and here he is!"

The front door banged, and feet came flying up the stairs. Zeb burst into the room. He had come home unexpectedly, he said.

A little later Nat told him about the game. "But I got stumped at the very last letter of all," he confessed.

Zeb laughed. "Didn't you see me come running up the street?"

"Why, yes," Nat answered, wondering what he meant.

"Well, don't I begin with Z?" asked Zeb.

The children shouted. "We came out even, after all," Rose said.—May Myrtle French, in The Youth's Companion.

So many people are largely animal, giving but a paltry remnant to spiritual things. Their immortal nature is atrophied. Their life is in the fleeting possessions that they imagine they have made their own; but a man's life does not consist in the things which he possesses, for he cannot live by bread alone. It is the part of wisdom to foster the imperishable life and the ever-best life. Then our life is independent of environment; and it is dependent upon the life of Christ in us, one with him through faith and love. So our life partakes of the everlasting life of the everlasting God and Father of our spirit, who is "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever." A. William Lewis.

EPISCOPAL ADDRESS.

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dear Brethren:

We, the chief pastors of our beloved church, charged to "watch for your souls as they that must give account," that we may do it "with joy and not with grief," feel constrained at this time to address you concerning a matter which we judge to be of supreme importance and urgent necessity to our church, our country and all the world, under the conditions which confront mankind in this momentous hour of human history.

At all times we would be ever mindful of the apostolic charge laid upon us that we give heed unto ourselves and to all the flock over which the Holy Ghost has made us overseers, to feed the church of God which he hath purchased with His own blood, and, at the present moment, this weighty and solemn responsibility is felt so keenly by us that we are impelled to make to you, upon whom rests the same burden of holy obligation, a communication concerning the great matter which fills our souls with reference to a revival of religion in our own country and in all lands. On this subject we addressed you from our last meeting, but our solicitude concerning it is so deep we cannot forbear speaking to you again with even greater earnestness than before.

It is noteworthy that great visitations of grace in former days have fallen upon God's church at the same times that great providential movements have come to pass. "In the dispensation of the fullness of times" came our Lord in the flesh, and with Pentecostal power he sent forth the agents of the Primitive Church to save a sad and sinful world from utter ruin and despair, when the combined forces of Jewish religion, Grecian philosophy, and Roman law had culminated in a situation which prepared the way for the life-giving evangel which those agents preached.

In like manner the spiritual and providential forces of heaven moved in divinely directed conjunction during the days of Luther and the Reformers. That great revival of apostolic Christianity and the discovery of America were not accidentally brought together in that world-renewing period.

So also out of revival centers in Great Britain (mainly in England) God sent forth the first settlers of the North American colonies. They were led of the Spirit into the wilderness, that by temptation and trial and heavenly succor a nation might be brought forth in whom all the families of the earth might be blessed in these last days. Indeed, it is a remarkable fact, the rise of the English speaking nations to their present commanding position of obligation and opportunity has been coetaneous with great revivals which have prevailed among them at every epochal turn in their history, from the days of the reformers to this good hour. And the history of our country has been marked especially by the saving power of such blessed visitations. The effect of the "Great Awakening" in 1740, the influence of the Wesleyan Revival in America, the far reaching results of the "Revival of 1800," and the saving power of the "Revival of 1858" have entered as most powerful factors into the making of this Republic. The nation has been a nation saved by grace, and might well adopt the language of the Hebrew Psalmist and say, "Thou hast given me the shield of thy salvation; and thy right hand hath holden me up, and thy gentleness hath made me great." (Ps. xviii, 35.)

In view of all our past history, would it not be a strange and disappointing thing, if now, when the ends of the earth have come upon us, no such heavenly power as that which came upon our fathers should fall upon us who have inherited from them such blessings and opportunities as we possess? Would it not argue some departure from God upon our part which had forfeited His favor and grieved His Spirit? Could we explain it by affirming that the God whose visitations of grace have so greatly enriched and invigorated the English speaking nations in all the days of their lives, has in our day withdrawn His saving purposes concerning them and that His mercies toward them are clean gone forever? Nay, we must believe that He who is the same yesterday, today and forever, will return to them even as He came to their fathers when they returned to Him.

Nevertheless, we are constrained to confess with sorrow that as yet there are no convincing tokens of the coming of such a widespread work of grace as those visitations which blessed the generations who have gone before us. Local revivals have come, and in all such genuine works of the Holy Spirit we rejoice and for them we give thanks to God. But their fires have not spread, and in most cases their flames have gone out all too quickly.

The English speaking nations, especially our own country, need in this hour of the world's distress, disquietude and confusion, a great revival of religion as widespread as the Reformation and as powerful and purifying as that which came to them in the days of the Wesleys and Whitefield. Nothing less can save us at this momentous hour in human history. Even men of the commercial world, in which it is so easy to forget and ignore spiritual things, declare with emphasis that a revival of religion is the supreme need of this nation, and well they may; for if we forsake God, we cannot, with all our wealth and power, escape the doom of the nations which forget Him. The bare possibility of such a dreadful doom is enough to alarm the most careless and worldly souls among us, and it cannot be averted unless there be a speedy and hearty turning of the people to God.

What do we see around us? On all hands we observe a riotous covetousness and a ravenous greed which sets neighbor against neighbor, and class against class, filling the land with bitter strife that threatens the stability of government and the very existence of social order. Sober-minded men, who view with clear eyes present-day conditions, will no more accuse us of a faithless pessimism for thus speaking than they would charge St. Paul with hopeless despair when he warned Timothy of perilous times when men would be "lovers of themselves," "covetous," "boasters," "proud," "blasphemers," "unthankful," "unholy," "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." (II Timothy iii, 1-7.)

We cannot conceal from ourselves, nor withhold from you, that we note also a distressing decay of family religion. Family altars have fallen down, and their fires have gone out in multiplied thousands of the homes of our people. Children are born, grow to years of maturity, and go forth from parental homes to the temptations of after life, without the habit of prayer, and without the blessed memory of holy hands lifted daily by pious parents in supplications for them. Who can overstate the immeasurable loss thus sustained by the children of prayerless households? The family is the unit of civilization, and any genuine revival of religion must turn the heart of the fathers to the children and the heart of the children to their fathers.

We fear that many have become so addicted to pleasure, and so unused to prayer, that the words of Job concerning the godless might be applied justly to them: "They send forth their children like a flock, and their children dance. They take the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the sound of the organ; they spend their days in wealth, and in a moment go down into the grave. Therefore, they say unto God, depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways. What is the Almighty that we should serve Him? And what profit should we have if we pray unto Him?" (Job xxi, 11-15.)

We should be less than just and faithful, if we failed to express the fear that the ministry has not wholly escaped the worldly influences prevalent in these times of abounding opulence. It would be gratifying and surprising if such were not the case. "Like people, like priest," however, is a maxim which has had frequent melancholy exemplication since the days of Moses. (Hos. iv, 9.) When the people fall under the spell of worldliness and wickedness, their priests and prophets are likely to be touched by the same unholy spirit. Then doctrine becomes corrupt, moral standards low, and spiritual life feeble. If such a state is long continued, the number of ministers is diminished, and the prophetic voices become few. So it was in the prosperous and worldly day of Solomon's reign in Israel, and so it is beginning to be in our country. The fundamental truths of God's Word concerning sin, repentance, faith, the new birth, sanctification, and the witness of the Spirit, are too much neglected in the pulpits of the land, while current topics usurp their place, and programmes of naturalism are substituted for the saving power of the gospel of Christ. Schemes for ameliorating physical conditions occupy attention in some instances to the exclusion of the redemption which is in Jesus Christ; and the number of preachers begins to show a decrease in many sections of the church. Under such conditions our hearts are burdened, and we trust the hearts of many of you also are burdened, for the salvation of all the people.

As Jesus Christ is in the world, so are we in the world "to seek and save that which is lost." Our ears will not be deaf to the voices of the needy when they cry, nor will our hands be slow to stretch forth in compassionate ministry for their relief. But their supreme need, and the supreme need of all souls, is God and His salvation, revealed and imparted by the Holy Ghost. That will solve all perplexing problems, soothe all the sorrows of a grief-stricken world and purge away the wickedness which disturbs the peace and threatens the welfare of mankind.

But we cannot have such a revival of religion, if we seek it with any lower end than that we may know God through Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath brought salvation down. Nor can we substitute for such a knowledge of God anything else.

We rejoice in the enlarged liberality of our people. Their generous gifts to the great enterprises of the church and their contributions to many other benevolent causes fill us with devout thanksgiving to Almighty God who hath enriched them with abundance of goods and enabled them to do all these worthy things. But we should beware that we boast not of our offerings nor fall short of that humility which moves men of faith, after they have done all things commanded them—to say in the presence of God, "we are unprofitable servants; we have done that which was our duty to do." (Luke xvii, 10.)

Above all, we must lay to heart the teaching of the Apostle Paul that though one bestow all his goods on benevolent projects and give his body to be burned, it will profit him nothing, if his heart be not right with God. We should not forget when we are disposed to be proud of our offerings that it was when the Jewish people were practicing a system of tithing which descended to pot plants even, and filled their ecclesiastical treasury to overflowing fullness, they forgot God and turned His house into a house of merchandise. Out of the plethoric funds of the church were drawn the pieces of silver which purchased the betrayal of our Lord.

Our people having brought their offerings to the altar, we now pray that they may give themselves also wholly to God. That offering of themselves, and that offering only, will bring upon them the Pentecostal flames from above, which will attest their acceptance with God and fill them with joy unspeakable and full of glory.

Such a consecration of themselves must and will involve deep conviction of sin, hearty repentance towards God, and true faith in Jesus Christ our Lord. It will mean agonizing to enter in at the strait gate. It cannot be brought to pass by mere human plans and programmes, but must be the result of the convincing and saving power of the Holy Ghost, who alone is the administrator of God's will in redemption. It is to be feared that amid the complex machinery of modern society we may overestimate the power of our plans and underestimate our absolute dependence upon the Spirit of God. For the consummation of a material enterprise even, an ancient, servant of God was warned that this task was to be done "not by might, nor by power, but by the divine Spirit." (Zechariah iv, 6); and a great preacher of our own times has uttered recently the timely words that to "achieve spiritual results our fathers agonized, but we their children organize." Let us take heed that we do not dishonor the Holy Ghost, and "burn incense to our net and worship our drag."

Our hearts' desire and prayer to God is that He may pour upon us all the power of the Holy Ghost, and bring to us a mighty revival of repentance, faith and holy living. Therefore, most earnestly we call upon all the ministers and members of our church to unite with us in prayer and labor to this end.

We do not forget that such an awakening must begin in the ministry, ourselves included. So all revivals of religion, in all ages of the world, have begun. So it was with the fathers of our Methodism, and so must it be with their successors in the church of to-day. We who have been called and ordained to the ministry of the Word must keep this truth ever uppermost in our minds, and be careful that in purity of doctrine and holiness of life we be meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work. (II Tim. ii, 21.) The Holy Spirit will not work through men who are unsound in doctrine, feeble in faith, worldly in spirit and lax in life. Our first duty, therefore, is to take heed unto ourselves and unto the doctrine, continuing in them; for in so doing we shall both save ourselves and them that hear us. Wherefore we entreat our brethren to unite with us in self-examination to see if we be in the faith, to the end that there be nothing in our hearts, or lives, which hinders our closest communion with God, or retards our growth in grace.

In former days it was the habit of Methodist preachers to give much time to the study of the Scriptures, meditation and prayer; but the multitude of material affairs of the church nearly usurps all our preachers' time and diverts their thought from the most vital matters. We can find no reason why our laymen, as intelligent as they are, should not take charge of all the material affairs of the church that the preachers may give themselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the Word, and we exhort our laymen to assume these cares both for their own benefit and the relief of their preachers.

It was also a custom with our early preachers to preach on those doctrines which call men to repentance and to faith, such as sin, repentance, confession, justification, regeneration, holiness, the atonement, future rewards, and future punishments, and to follow their preaching with calls to the altar of prayer, or to unite with the church, or to make open confession of Christ. God wonderfully blessed them in their work, and we beseech you that this custom be revived among us. And also let our Sunday school superintendents and teachers give frequent opportunity for the scholars publicly to seek the prayers of the church for their salvation. Likewise, let all our stewards examine themselves to know if truly they are men of solid piety and examples to their families and the church. We are not opposed to seasons of revival when special efforts are made. On the contrary, we heartily believe in them; yet we pray for that degree of consecration which makes the spirit of evangelists the dominant and enduring spirit of our whole church, not only on the Sabbath and at special seasons, but at all times and in all our work.

We should not be satisfied with anything less than that all our people come into a satisfactory experience of the new birth by the Holy Spirit. The increase of members in our churches ought not to be the ruling aim of our ministry, and any evangelistic efforts that aim chiefly at this result are not to be commended.

The spiritual conditions which now give us grief have arisen largely out of such mistaken aims, together with a habit of too hastily receiving members into full connection with the church. We should give instruction to all candidates for membership, praying with them and guiding them until they come into a knowledge of God's forgiveness of sin and are truly prepared to assume the vows which we administer to all who unite with us. It is not an increase of numbers we seek, but renewed souls in Christ Jesus.

Upon no other grounds will any person enter the Kingdom of God, and we dare not allow any person under our pastoral protection to be deceived in this supreme matter.

While we do not think it appropriate for us to suggest to you a fixed plan of evangelistic work, knowing that the Holy Spirit is the guide of all who truly commit their ways unto the Lord, yet we do not deem it amiss to remind you, as we remind ourselves also, that in all things we must be wholly obedient unto the will of God as he has revealed it in Christ Jesus and through His holy prophets and apostles.

Let us hold fast and obey the teachings of the Holy Scriptures; the first of which we must magnify is the Lordship of the Holy Spirit, as the only executor of the mind of God in His church. He only endows us with power, gives spiritual light, reveals the things of God, shows us the things of our exalted Lord, convicts of sin, and righteousness, and judgment, brings forth new creatures in Christ Jesus, guides saints, distributes gifts, and accomplishes all the ends of redeeming love. Let us not in any degree grieve Him, but be obedient unto His will, and by an undivided devotion to the Master become effective agents of His saving grace.

Let us faithfully preach the Word, which contains sufficiently all doctrines required of necessity for eternal salvation through faith in Jesus Christ.

Let us put aside all strife, and divisions, and contentions, and, speaking the same word, dwell in Christ as members of one body.

Let us frequently relate our experiences, remembering that we are witnesses of Christ. For this reason we earnestly request that the love feasts and the class meetings be restored, and that we often speak one with another concerning our spiritual condition and welfare, especially taking oversight of the young Christians that they may be encouraged in their lives and strengthened in their faith.

Let us in patience and love admonish all who do not walk in the way of the Lord, giving no place to sin in any form, constantly exhorting such to seek the highest estates of grace, that they may be unto the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ.

We are persuaded that concerning all else you and we shall be taught of the Holy Spirit, that our labors may redound to the glory of God in the salvation of sinners. Pray for us, as we cease not to pray for all of you, making request unto the Father of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, that we may fill our office unto the ministry of the Spirit, and in faith and labors be true examples of the grace of God and faithful overseers of His flock. "Now, the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do His will, working in you that which is well pleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory forever and ever."

dorsement. His honesty was as conspicuous as his sincerity, part of the warp and woof of his nature.

His preaching was expository in type. He loved the great truths of the Bible, which he accepted as the revelation of God to men and deemed the authoritative rule of faith and conduct. He was especially fond of worship in song and none who ever heard him pour forth the praise of God in Christian hymns can forget the effect as the melody that surged in his heart burst from his lips in a volume that awakened echoes in the hills hard by the church in the vale.

He loved children and received their affection in return. Nothing seemed to give him more pleasure than to note the development and prosperity of those who grew up under his ministry. He especially rejoiced in the welfare and success of the younger ministers of his Conference, and found no envy in his heart that they enjoyed comforts and advantages resulting in large measure from the toils and sacrifices of his own generation. As a superannuate, he was regular in his attendance upon the ministry of the Word and gave support to his pastor with hearty "amens" at forceful passages in the sermon.

Brother Freeman was twice married. Sons of his first marriage are Mr. Edward Freeman, of Hazlehurst, Miss., and Rev. W. A. Freeman, an honored member of the Memphis Conference, now stationed at Brownsville, Tenn. His second wife, with their daughter, Mrs. Bertha Sanders of Charleston, Miss., survives him. After his superannuation in 1900, he made his home in Grenada, where he conducted a small grocery business and by industry and frugality managed to provide reasonable comforts for himself and his devoted, loyal and efficient wife, without whom his lot would have been sad indeed. A good man and true has gone from among us. Another ambassador for Christ has been called home. Another soldier of the Cross has received his discharge. Another faithful servant has heard his Master say "Well done!" We shall miss him here, but hope to meet him yonder. J. R. COUNTISS.

THE THANKSGIVING CARS FOR OUR ORPHANAGES.

A car will be run for the Baptist and Methodist Orphanages on the M. & O. and A. & V. Railroads, from Vinegar Bend, Ala., to Waynesboro, Miss., on Friday, November 28; Waynesboro to Meridian, Saturday, November 29; Meridian to Jackson, Monday, December 1, 1919.

We are anxious to fill this car. May we depend on you to take charge of this matter in your community and interest with you such others as will push the work, and will you assist them in seeing the other people in your community and give them a chance to contribute liberally to this object?

The high cost of living makes it necessary for us to enlarge our contributions.

Besides sending corn, bacon, flour, lard, peas, canned goods, syrup, etc., with which to feed the children, send boxes of clothing, shoes, hats, hose, elastic, soap, pins, needles, thread, buttons, pencils, tablets, quilts, blankets, sheets, pillow cases, towels, old or out-grown clothing that your children may have on hand, and send velvet beans for the cows to eat.

Besides having a soliciting committee, there should be one to pack and ship the gifts contributed. Prepay the freight and send the bill of lading to the Superintendent of the Orphanage to which the parcel is billed. We will have to prepay the freight, as this is required by the railroads, and this can be paid out of the cash offering taken at the churches on Thanksgiving Day.

Orphanage officials are: J. R. Carter, Superintendent Baptist Orphanage; B. F. Lewis, Superintendent Methodist Orphange.

Trusting you, we are yours for the orphaned children,

Tired Out?
Do you know that languidness, that "awful tired feeling," heaviness, lame or weak back, sore muscles, stiff or swollen joints, rheumatic pains, lumbago, in the great majority of cases, indicate kidney trouble?
Foley Kidney Pills
act promptly and effectively to restore weak, overworked or diseased kidneys and bladder to a healthy condition.
Mrs. Robert Blair, 461 S. 20th Street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "I suffered two years with kidney and bladder trouble frequently getting backache. Mornings I would arise feeling very tired and having headaches, and see floating specks before my eyes. I saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised and made up my mind to try them. After taking them a few weeks I found my trouble dispelled. The backache stopped and my kidneys were restored to healthy, normal action. I am also free of those tired spells and headaches and my vision is no longer blurred. My recovery is entirely due to Foley Kidney Pills, which I gladly recommend."

FROM THE LATE REV. J. E. THOMAS.

The following letter from Brother Thomas was dated November 3, but did not reach the Advocate office until November 12:

"Aberdeen, Miss., Nov. 3, 1919.

"Dear Brother Carley: Enclosed, I send you an article on 'Methodism in Aberdeen,' written by Hon. G. J. Leftwich. This has been a great year of great prosperity in this church. We have had a great revival, conducted by Chaplain W. B. Hogg. Forty have joined the church by letter during the year and seventeen on profession of faith. Every financial obligation has been met in full. We over-subscribed our allotment for the Centenary fund, and almost one-third of the entire subscription has been paid. Of the 268 who subscribed to this fund, every one has paid the first year's subscription; many have paid the entire amount.

Fraternally,
J. E. THOMAS."

FROM MRS. J. E. THOMAS.

To the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate.

Dear Sir:

Eleven months ago, one day at noon, the new pastor, Rev. J. E. Thomas, and family reached the Methodist parsonage at Aberdeen, Miss., to find its doors open, the fires lighted, the table bountifully spread, the dinner prepared by kind, thoughtful hands, and a glad welcome awaiting us, that immediately brought sunshine and gladness to our very spirit, hope for the days to come springing into each face as we clasped extended hands.

We have realized the hope that filled our hearts that noon-tide, because through all the months that followed every Sabbath day we found the Sunday school rooms, as well as the auditorium, increasing in numbers as well as in interest, the pastor's enthusiasm in his message increasing as he found the sympathy of his congregation with him, shown in their listening attitude and appreciative minds and hearts.

In their daily attentions to little things, that so often make the pathway of life smoother and better to those about us, they have shown that the pastor was their pastor and they were his people. In sickness they were ever near to lend a helping hand, and his every expressed desire for the improvement of the church work considered, and if possible, granted. The weekly prayer meeting was his especial delight, as often he said, "The prayer meeting is the pulse of the church." To this effort of his life he also found great help from his congregation.

His appreciation of these dear friends is found in this expression made to me not long since, "I have never served a more faithful, helpful church." In the cares and perplexities that arise in every minister's life, they rallied to him, encouraging him, and cheerfully, in every instance, bearing their part of the burdens.

Sorrow deep and heavy hangs over the parsonage to-day, for only a few days ago their beloved pastor and our dear one fell asleep in Jesus. Every heart here proved by so many tender deeds of loving kindness their faithfulness to him whom the Master called up higher to greater fields of usefulness.

His casket was banked with lovely flowers and the room was filled with beautiful designs, tokens of remembrance from so many places where he had told the old, old story to hungry hearts.

The floral offerings sent by so many charges that he had served in recent years proved the high esteem in which he was held. We who are left behind in this vale of sorrow must take leave of these friends who have become so dear to our hearts, but we know that Christians never see each other for the last time.

Perhaps sooner than we expect we will meet again in the Father land, where the redeemed shall meet to part no more. M. M. T.

50 Eggs a Day.

"Before using 'More Eggs' tonic, I was getting only 12 eggs a day and now get 50" writes Mrs. Myrtle Ice, of Boston, Ky. Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. "More Eggs" is a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs" will double the production of eggs. Poultry raisers everywhere are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

Send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and he will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs." A million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS AND STEWARDS.

One section of the Centenary program has been a tremendous success. This success is leading us to further achievement. There is one particular phase of the program, however, to which the Home Department wishes to call your attention, namely, the better support of our pastors. We do not presume to believe that you are negligent in these matters, but the Centenary Survey charges us with the interests of the underpaid pastors. In five years there will be paid out of the Centenary treasury to the support of pastors on mission charges between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. But even so large an amount as this will not be sufficient to meet the needs of these days of increased cost of living. There are many needy cases which we will not be able to help at all.

The standard set by the Centenary is that no unmarried man shall receive less than $600, and no married man less than $1,000. We appeal to you, brethren, to help make this possible. In fact, it cannot be made possible unless you do help, and help largely. There is not a church in our entire connection, small or large, but could add something to its pastor's support. They are the poorest paid men in the world. Some of them go hungry and their families uncomfortable that they may minister to your spiritual needs and the moral welfare of your family. Let's give them a bit of encouragement and thus help to work out our own salvation.

Let all the stewards go to the first quarterly conference, not to keep the pastor's salary down, but to put it up. We would suggest that you increase the salary at least 25 per cent over last year. Then you will lack about 75 per cent in meeting the increased expense of living. Brethren, we ask you in the name of these good men and their families who trust to you to look after their very living, to do your best for them. Let there be an advance in this matter in all our churches, and we will do very much to advance every interest of the Kingdom of God.

R. L. RUSSELL, Secretary.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS
Eat less meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers you —Meat forms uric acid.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twings, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER
Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. WORTHLINE, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

FACTS ABOUT THE GREATER AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE OF LOUISIANA.

Several letters from members of literary and debating societies in different parts of the State have been received by L. L. Squires, Secretary of the Greater Agricultural College Association, Baton Rouge, La., asking for information to assist them in preparing a debate on the question, "Resolved that the Legislature should make provision for building and equipping a greater Agricultural College for Louisiana." He is compiling facts and figures that will be printed together with an outline of debate and mailed to every student or school requesting them.

There are 206 senior high schools in the State besides a much larger number of educational institutions that have literary and debating societies, and when their members become so interested in the Greater Agricultural College movement that they are debating and writing compositions about it, it is indicative of a general interest.

It has been the plan of the Committee to offer several prizes, at some later date, the first of which would not be less than one hundred dollars, for compositions setting forth the advantage to farmers of a scientific agricultural education, and these debates will be an excellent preparation for that contest.

Any student desiring information for the preparation of a debate should write the Secretary and it will be forwarded as soon as it is off the press.

OBITUARY.

On the evening of August 14, 1919, JAMES CARNEY, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Jean, was suddenly called from this vain world to a more beautiful clime. James Carney was a sweet-spirited son, always ready to lend a helping hand to the needy and to give a cheerful smile to all with whom he met. Although his life here on earth was just a few months over twelve years, it was spent in scattering flowers of cheer and happiness in the home, and along the pathway of others. He loved home, Sunday school and church. His faithfulness to home, church and Sunday school is worthy of imitation. He was untiring in his devotion to his parents. To say that James made home pleasant, is not saying too much. We feel that death acted cruelly in striking down such a promising life, but we also know that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord. James was a bright boy and bade fair to make a useful man. Though the call came to him suddenly, we feel that he was ready to meet it. Yes, James Carney is missed in the home, in the community, school, church, Sunday school, and by a host of friends. May the God of peace and love comfort the loved ones in the loss of their dear child. LASTIE N. HOFFPAUIR.

TRAGEDY OF BEING COMIC.

A reputation for humor is undesirable not only because it is exceedingly difficult when once a person has established the belief that he is "funny." There are few, if any, who will take him seriously, no matter how earnest he may try to become.

Many a speaker, teacher or other person having to do with fairly large groups of people has found the temptation to entertain his listeners by telling jokes or being comic in manner almost irresistible. Some have yielded, and a very few have succeeded in maintaining a reputation for humor for many years. Others have found that after a short time the old stories would not make the crowds laugh, that the audiences actually grow weary of the efforts of the entertainer to be amusing and finally came to criticize him because he was not more "substantial" in his thought and character.

But the tragedy of not being able to throw off the character of the humorist or the clown and appear as a serious minded person on a serious subject is extremely poignant. Mark Twain told of going to a large American university once and appearing before the students in chapel with a very earnest desire to talk to them on a serious subject. His manner indicated his purpose, but as he stepped to the front of the platform he was greeted with roars of laughter. Twain declared he could hardly suppress his tears because he realized completely that he could never be taken seriously. —Kansas City Star.

ONE INEXPENSIVE COMMODITY.

A college president, commenting on the great increase of enrollment in nearly all the colleges this year, explains it in part by the fact that a college course is one of the cheapest of commodities. "In relation to other values," he says, "the cost of education is the lowest of all utilities."

College fees have seldom gone up more than 25 per cent over the pre-war rate, and in some institutions have not gone up at all. The cost of living at colleges has risen, to be sure, but hardly as much as the cost of living outside of college.

Meanwhile the money value of education has greatly increased. There is more demand for college graduates than ever before. The war has created a better appreciation of the trained and instructed mind.

It is safe to say that the ambitious young man or woman can get more today for a given amount of money in a college or scientific school than anywhere else. Every institution of learning is a bargain counter.

The same fact holds true of those who go to high school or business school, and also of those who for any reason cannot go further than the grammar school.

Education is more attainable outside of college than it ever was before, and at a cost absurdly cheap in comparison with other things. Books cost very little more than they used to, and public library books cost their readers not one cent more. But the education that may be gleaned from them will bring higher prices than ever in the brains market.—Berkeley Gazette.

Since we come to think of it, Jesus lived in harmony with natural law. When hungry, he ate; when tired, he rested and slept; and he refused to cast himself down from the pinnacle of the temple out of respect to laws of gravity. Yes, he healed the sick, gave sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, raised up the dead—all by his own supernatural power, without the help of medicine. These all sickened and died again. He nowhere condemned, but commended the physician for those that were sick. His humanity was as real as his divinity. He was a real human being, "the son of man." He had flesh and blood.—E. N. Evans.

FROM REV. J. B. CAIN.

Dear Brother Carley: I am spending the last few weeks of my very pleasant four years on the Washingtonton Circuit. The presiding elder, members, and people of other churches have all conspired to make my stay a very satisfactory quadrennium to me at least. I fear that I have not been able to return "value received," but I hope that my stay has not been altogether profitless. At present I am preaching in three Methodist churches, two Presbyterian, and one Episcopal; so you can see that we have already established unity of spirit, which is the only kind worth having.

I have not the material for obituaries but I want to make mention of the death of three faithful servants of the church this year, all of them in March. All of them were officials, and, with the death of John D. Ireland in April, made four deaths from the official membership in one quarter.

John P. Latham was received into the Jefferson Mission, or Linwood Church, in 1878, under the ministry of J. Perry Drake, his friend and comrade-in-arms during the Civil War. From that time till a few years before his death he served the church actively as steward, trustee, and Sunday school superintendent. For more than forty years he lived a consecrated Christian life, loved and respected by all who knew him.

W. Horton Ratcliff was also a Confederate soldier and had transferred his membership to the circuit about 1880, and had always been either a steward or trustee since that time. A genial, hospitable citizen of the old South, we miss his presence very much in the village of Washington, where he lived, and at the church he had attended. His Grandfather Horton came to Mississippi with one of the Methodist itinerants from the Little Pedee River in South Carolina.

James O. Scot was a younger man who became a member by transfer in 1911. He was afflicted in body so that he could not stand at all, but in his horse and buggy he went all over the country to church at many places in Adams and Jefferson Counties. As a recognition of his indomitable spirit, we made him steward at Cannonsburg, which place he held until his death. No man in the country had more friends than he.

This is a great country, and has a fascination for one after he has been here for a number of years, so that he finds it hard to break away. These people deserve a good pastor, and I am sure the bishop and his cabinet will send them one. Sincerely,

J. B. CAIN.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

The American Bible Society announces that its program for the world-wide distribution of the Bible will call for a budget of $982,000 for 1920. The officers of the Society have been in session for two days with representatives from the leading denominations who contribute to the Society's funds in laying out this extensive program. Urgent appeals have come from all parts of the world. One of the interesting features of the Society's plan is the contemplated work in France, Russia, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and other European countries which have been devastated by the war.

The Society has reason to believe from reports that come in from its agents throughout the world, that there was never a time when so great an interest was manifested in the reading of the Christian Scriptures.

A nation-wide appeal will be made for funds to carry out the extensive program of the Society.

MISSIONARY VOICE AT SPECIAL PRICE.

The Missionary Voice is out to secure forty thousand new subscriptions and renewals during the month of November and December. To this end, a special price of seventy-five cents per year is being made, limited strictly to these two months. The regular price, one dollar per year, will become effective again after December 31.

The Voice is a thirty-two page, three column magazine, representing both the general and woman's work of the Board of Missions, and consequently full of interest for every member of the church. It surveys the whole field of our missionary endeavor at home and abroad, and also devotes a great deal of space to the Centenry and to special articles on prayer, stewardship and kindred subjects. Many fine illustrations add greatly to the interest of the magazine.

As some one has said, "missions is the biggest business in the world, and nobody can be well informed who is not informed about missions." Certainly no Southern Methodist can keep closely in touch with the missionary work of his church who does not read the Missionary Voice. The special price offered for November and December ought to put it into many thousands of the homes. Send your order to-day to The Missionary Voice, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

THE SEWING MACHINE.

In a year when observance of centenaries of men and women of fame are not unusual there is more than passing interest, nevertheless, in the celebration at Spencer in recognition of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Elias Howe, Jr. It is hardly necessary to say that this man was the inventor of the sewing machine, and that his inventon of a commodity which is known in all households and found in most gave him, so to speak, a bowing acquaintance with the world. Any school boy or any school girl connects Howe's name with the sewing machine, just as there is similar suggestion in the name of Fulton or James Watt or of Ben Franklin.

Elias Howe, Jr. was born in Spencer, in this Commonwealth, and the observation of his birth was by the countryside about Spencer and by the Howe family throughout the country.

An interesting event of the observance was the dedication of a marker to Elias Howe, Jr., William Howe, inventor of truss bridge, and Tyler Howe, inventor of the spring bed. The two Howes last named were brothers, and were uncles of Elias. All three were born in the Howe homestead, near which the market was set up.—Boston Transcript.

The Inward Effects of humors are worse than the outward. They endanger the whole system. Hood's Sarsaparilla eradicates all humors, cures all their inward and outward effects. It is the great alterative and tonic, whose merit has been everywhere established.—Adv.

FROM LONGVIEW, MISS.

Everything is going very well on the Longview charge. We have had a very good year. We have had some good meetings. We have had 22 accessions to the church on profession of faith which is above an average for the charges this year. We are proud of this that the Lord has blessed our work. However, I have been a little late in giving you the report. I hope to have a good report at the Conference.

With best wishes to you and paper, I am R. G. A. CARLISLE.

PLEA FOR THE BOOK STORE.

There is an article in the August Atlantic on "The welfare of the book store." It tells us that the book store as we knew it 40 or 50 years ago, is fast passing away. In proportion to population the article says, there are not half as many book stores as there were 50 years ago. Right after the war Pougbkeepsie of 20,000 population had three good book stores. To-day with 30,000 population, she hasn't any book store. Other cities are cited giving the same state of facts showing that the book store as it once was, a place where the selling of books constituted a business, belongs to the past.

Many reasons are assigned for this disappearance, which may all be jumbled into one article, that they didn't sell enough books to pay for the store expense. It is a little strange that this shall be the case, for a bookstore in a town was always regarded as an honor and its support an expression of the people's intelligence. There are many reasons assigned for the change, but we incline to the simple one that the reading of books has gone out of fashion. It has taken to newspapers, cheap magazines and corner pictorials. When the good old bookstore comes back again we will say that the world is getting better.—Ohio State Journal.

STABILITY OF SOUL ESSENTIAL.

"So will not we go back from thee!" cried the Psalmist, immediately adding, "Quicken us, and we will call upon thy name!" It would appear to be the implication of these words that quickening is needed if religious men are simply to stay where they are. It is generally acknowledged that grace from on high must be sought if any great advance is to be made, but too often assumed that by a kind of moral "vis inertia" good people can be expected to remain in their present status. The truth is that grace must constantly be sought if we are not to "go back from" God, and slip our spiritual moorings. The downward pull on every Christian soul is tremendous. To counteract this gravitational pull of sin and temptation a large and positive addition of divine strength is needed. It is no chance remark, then, of the Apostle when he exhorts believers that, having done all, they are "to stand." Israel in the desert was constantly looking if not turning back. On one occasion Jesus was compelled to apply even to the best of His disciples the searching query: "Will ye also go away?" Stability of soul is therefore never to be assumed, but constantly to be insured—by the spirit of prayer, and by the viselike grip of faith on the immutable promises of God.—Zion's Herald.

MUSIC, THE REFINER

Through music, the child, partially and unconsciously at first, but more definitely as the years go by, enters into the unseen world of beauty. Not only this, but in music he also finds a means of expressing the otherwise inexpressible. For many a boy and girl during the trying years of adolescence, full of half-fledged yearnings and self-questionings, music offers a release into a more harmonious realm. Music makes the child a partner in the great business of creation. Each of us is by nature a member of the mighty chorus of the universe. No child is willingly a mere passive listener, and in singing or playing, no matter how imperfectly, he becomes what he was meant to be, a creator.

The study of music not only gives invaluable exercise to the mind, it also refines the whole nature. Watch a crowd of street urchins listening to the right sort of music and see how utterly the spirit of hoodlumism is banished. —Exchange.

Whatever God gives, He gives freely. He loveth a cheerful giver, for He is Himself a cheerful giver. And there is not a gift of grace, there is not a gift that concerns us, whether for time or for eternity, that He will not freely give with Christ to all who ask Him. —W. L. Watkinson.

IMPROVEMENTS ON WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

Work to Begin Soon on New Dormitory and Dining Hall for Students.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, spent Tuesday in Jackson meeting by appointment trustees and friends of the institution in its interest.

President Cooper reports with pride and pleasure on the work of his denomination, that not only is the $200,000 endowment fund assured, but that a three-story brick dormitory building will be contracted for and will be in course of construction by the close of the present term. It will be erected opposite the Cooper building to the west. This building will accommodate one hundred new boarding students.

The new dining hall, also in the prospective, will seat 325 students, and rooms over the dining hall will accommodate about forty additional boarders. Old Whitworth Hall and dining room will be demolished.

A gymnasium and natatorium will be erected to the north on line with the present Whitworth Hall, which will be torn down.

The Y. W. C. A. hut which will be put up between Margaret Hall and the new dining hall and which will cost $6,000 will be equipped with rooms for literary clubs, pressing club, storeroom and kitchen.

Added to all these wonderful improvements and progressive measures new apparatus is to be purchased for Science Hall, and the Library will be added to, to conform with demands made by the Southern Educational Association.

A new fence costing $2,000 will be placed about the Whitworth enclosure at once, and by the term of 1920-21 it is expected the greater portion of the improvements and additions named will have been completed.

Dr. Cooper's administration will have covered eighteen years at the close of the session of 1919-20, and it has been characterized by ability and remarkable efficiency in the prosecution of the great task of a college president. The College has enrolled to date 271 students.—The Brookhaven Leader.

ABOUT RHEUMATISM

What Thousands Have Found Gives Relief From This Painful Trouble.

Rheumatism is a constitutional disease, manifesting itself in local aches and pains, inflamed joints and stiff muscles. It cannot be cured by local or external applications. It must have constitutional treatment.

Take a course of the great blood purifying and tonic medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acid condition of the blood on which rheumatism depends, and gives permanent relief. This medicine combines, with excellent alteratives and tonics, what is generally conceded to be the most effective agent in the treatment of this disease.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed take Hood's Pills. Purely vegetal

Neutralizes Uric Acid!

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." RESOLUTIONS

Whereas Rev. W. L. Linfield, presiding elder of the Newton District, has held his last quarterly conference of his quadrenium for our circuit and has fulfilled his duties during his entire administration in a most acceptable manner, and has co-operated in every way possible in the promotion of the interests of the Kingdom among us by his wise counsel and unwearying ardor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the fourth quarterly conference of the Homewood charge, do hereby express our gratitude for these aforesaid services, and it is our sincere desire and prayer that God will bless him and continue his opportunities for future services, preserve his health and the health of his loved ones, and that success, as heretofore, crown his labors.

Resolved, further, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the county paper and a copy to the New Orleans Advocate.

FROM THE LINTONIA CHARGE.

Services will be held at the Methodist church at Anding, on the Lintonia charge, Sunday, November 23, beginning at 10:30 a. m. The nature of the service will be song and praise. The Millsaps College Quartet, composed of E. A. King, Peal Harmon, R. T. Hollingsworth and C. W. Alford, will conduct the service.

Anding has paid all her church claims in full, and I think the other churches on the charge will, between now and Conference, come up in full.

RICHEST FRUIT ON OLD VINES

The famous grapevine at Hampton Court, England, is probably the oldest large grapevine in the world. As its keeper was telling a visitor how many clusters of grapes it bore, the visitor's attention was called to the fact that the grapes were small. "Yes," the keeper replied, "an old vine cannot bear as large grapes and as large clusters as a young one, but they are richer and sweeter and finer in flavor. They are for the table of the Queen." In one thing this grapevine differs from the best of old Christians. In the real, true sense the old Christian not only bears the richest, sweetest fruit but he bears an increase in quantity in correspondence with increase in growth in grace or in the Christ image. —Christian Herald.

Hold fast to the Bible as the sheet anchor of your liberties; write its precepts on your hearts and practice them in your lives. To the influence of this book we are indebted for the progress made in civilization, and to this we must look as our guide in the future. —Ulysses S. Grant.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas we, the official members of the Homewood charge, have a keen appreciation of the services of Rev. M. L. White, this being his quadrennium year as pastor of this charge, and whereas he could remain with us longer under the new law of the church, but we refrain from petitioning the Conference to return him the fifth year; and whereas he has been so faithful to the trust that our church imposed upon him, also patriotic and loyal to our country, thereby infusing patriotism into the people with whom he had to do; and whereas he did not have any pets among us nor special places to go, being a special friend to children and young people, thereby gaining their good-will; and whereas his most cultured family has looked after the welfare of the parsonage, setting a splendid example for the coming preacher; therefore be it

Resolved, That we express our gratitude for the services aforementioned, and it is our sincere desire and prayer that God will bless him and his family with good health, and his new field of labor may be better for him and family, of which we believe to be most worthy.

Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions be incorporated in the minutes of the quarterly conference, and a copy forwarded to the Conference organ with a request for its publication.

KILLS CATARRH GERMS

Famous Hyomei—Mr. Booth's Wonderful Discovery.

Some years ago, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement and temperance orator and leader of international fame who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble. Seeking to regain health he went to inland Australia where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the Eucalyptus forests.

This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment known to medical science—Hyomei, which is formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. Hyomei is a germ killing vapor, absolutely harmless but wonderfully effective in the treatment of Catarrh and colds of the head, Catarrhal Coughs, Bronchial Catarrh, Spasmodic Croup, Catarrhal Laryngitis or Hay Fever.

The treatment is simple but most scientific. You breathe Hyomei. It is pronounced the only method of treatment that sends, by direct inhalation to the most remote part of the air passages, a balsamic air that destroys germs and hacilli of bronchial catarrh in the breathing organs, sooths and allays irritation and enriches and purifies the blood. PUBLICITY AND THE PRINTED PAGE.

(From the Missionary Voice)

There is no more important department in our missionary work than that of publicity. It was said of old, "My people perish for lack of knowledge." This statement is no less true at the present day. And there are those who perish for this lack of knowledge in our own land as well as in the countries afar off. It seems sinful that a need so easily supplied should be neglected.

Publicity may be attained in many ways, but perhaps there is no more effective method than by means of the printed page. The business world has not been slow to see the value of the press nor to take advantage of it. If a merchant has something to sell, he notifies the public by means of the press. A real estate dealer or the man who wants to buy a home turns first to the newspaper. The political leader pleads his cause through the columns of the daily or weekly paper. In fact, almost every subject, from the state of the weather and the newest and most modern dances to wars and rumors of wars, are served to us with our morning meal by means of the printed page.

Then if the secular world so appreciates the value of publicity as achieved by the press, how much the more should we use this agency as we go about our Father's business! Realizing that the press is a most powerful aid in reaching the public ear, should we be content for it to be used only for exploiting worldly affairs? Shall we allow this most effective agency to be monopolized by politics, accounts of crimes, and baseball news?

This is a day of advertising and specialization; and if we are to do the Lord's work successfully, we must adopt modern methods. The cry of the world and the secular press is for news. And what more thrilling and inspiring news is there than the real, live facts of missions and missionary workers? There will be no trouble in securing space. The editors are eager for news of the religious world, but we must choose our facts wisely and present them in an attractive way. Let us literally publish the glad tidings. Let every publicity superintendent, every woman's page editor, every member of an auxiliary, awake to a realization of the fact that the powerful weapon of the public press is at her disposal.

The need of the world for knowledge was never so great, and to-day is our day of opportunity.

Pointed Paragraphs.

The publicity department is a great bottle of "information tonic." This tonic, taken in broken doses daily, gives marvelous results. It provides missionaries, arouses interest, makes any society work, oils talking machines, stimulates prayer, dispels ignorance, promotes investigation, prevents rust, and transforms.

The publicity work is like perpetual motion—steady, quiet, but continually at it.

It is through the publicity superintendents that the membership of our societies and the church at large get the information which stimulates the individual to "do things" at home and abroad.

Get space in your paper every week, and by all means use it every time. Only hermits fail to read newspapers.

Short articles to the point carry more weight than if you air your literary talent.

You must make your publicity work interesting and instructive to the auxiliary if you would succeed. Ask your president for five or ten minutes each meeting to present your work and use the whole time—but no more—in an interesting and enthusiastic way telling of our great work. Know definitely before going to the meeting how you are going to use your few minutes.

You cannot put too much stress on poster work. It was a placard poster on a country roadside advertising a missionary meeting that led Robert Moffatt to become a missionary. Many items in the Bulletin may be illustrated by posters.

"Immortality comes by way of the printed page." This is the age of printers' ink and progress, and the wise men are the men who read the signs of the times and keep in advance of the passing show of purchasers. This is the age of the publicity movement in all avenues of human endeavor. Publicity women, help push now, instead of catching on behind as the procession passes you.

One great trouble in our publicity department is that so many women deem publicity work insignificant. If they only knew that the publicity superintendent is the key that unlocks every other department!

The publicity superintendent is the bearer of good news; she stands at the gate to announce; she is the herald of victories won; she catches the shouts of triumph all along the line and sends them out to all the army; she cheers the workers with the news of forward movements everywhere.

Publicity superintendents are not born so, nor are they easily made. Work! work! work! Grow! grow! grow!

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Good News From Houma.

The prayers of years have recently been answered in the purchase of a home and the establishment of a Wesley House and School for Girls in Houma. The workers down here are too happy to write much and also too busy working out plans that have been a life-long dream, but they wish others to know and share their joy in this great forward step in the work in the French field. They also need and desire the prayers of all the women of the Louisiana Conference "that the hand of our God" may be "on us for good" and that God may have His way in all things; that the work may be to His glory and that there may be a people here whose God is the Lord.

There is a pretty guestroom in this new home and we should be glad indeed to have it often in use by those who love the Lord's work and who are our friends, though perhaps some we have never met.

You Do More Work

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and Quinine suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength - Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. If Thin and Nervous Try Bitro-Phosphate

While excessive thinness might be attributed to various and subtle causes in different individuals, it is a well-known fact that the lack of phosphorous in the human system is very largely responsible for this condition.

It seems to be well established that this deficiency in phosphorous may now be met by the use of Bitro-Phosphate, which can be obtained from any good druggist in convenient tablet form.

In many instances the assimilation of this phosphate by the nerve tissue soon produces a welcome change—nerve tension disappears, vigor and strength replace weakness and lack of energy and the whole body loses its ugly hollows and abrupt angles becoming enveloped in a glow of perfect health and beauty and the will and strength to be up and doing.

CAUTION:—While Bitro Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

Comb Sage Tea in Faded or Gray Hair

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Adv.

Rheumatism and Indigestion.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. All of these diseases are probably related and all are probably due in whole or in part to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

FROM MADISON CHARGE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: We are winding up our fourth year on this work, and moving time for us is near at hand. As that time approaches, our mind goes back over the years, and the question arises: What has been accomplished for the good of the Kingdom? And in looking over our records, we find that 150 names have been added to the church roll, 70 of these on profession of faith, while 123 names have been marked off, leaving a net gain of 27.

We have dedicated to the church in baptism 22 infants and children, and have gone to the city of the dead 40 times with the sorrowing. We have married only six couples. Subscribers to the Advocate have been increased from 13 to 28.

Our successor will find four good Sunday schools in operation, and one Epworth League.

The budget system of financing the charge was inaugurated two years ago, and is working to the satisfaction of all. Four years ago, the charge paid the pastor a salary of $1000. Our successor will be given a salary of $1500. Including credits, this charge subscribed 125 per cent on its allotment for the Centenary

FROM CORINTH, MISS.

My Dear Mr. Editor: Perhaps a few notes from First Church, Corinth, will not be out of place.

We have had a good year—"everything in full;" some old debts paid; fifty-six additions, thirty-six on profession of faith, and peace and harmony prevails.

We had a really great meeting in October. Rev. J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, General Evangelist, was with us for ten days. He is safe, sane, and old-fashioned in his methods and preaching. The meeting reached "high tide" at the Sunday afternoon love feast, the last day of the meeting. It was good to be there. I can heartily recommend Brother Hanes to any one who needs the help of an evangelist.

We are regretting the removal of our presiding elder, Brother Dorsey, made necessary by the law of limitation. He has wrought well, and is worthy, and well qualified.

We look for a great time at Aberdeen. R. O. BROWN, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS

Passed by Alexandria Methodist Church at their Fourth Quarterly Conference, Held Nov 10, 1919.

Be it resolved by the official members and by the congregation of the First Methodist Church of Alexandria, La., in Fourth Quarterly Conference assembled, That we hereby express our love for our pastor, Dr. S. H. Werlein, and our appreciation of his ministry in Alexandria. His preaching has been strong, forceful and spiritual, pointing men to a living Christ who can save unto the uttermost; in pastoral labors he has been abundant; in visiting the sick and needy and in searching out the unchurched he has been untiring; his spiritual-mindedness has been a benediction to us and to this community and his personal work for the unsaved an inspiration.

Be it further resolved, That in our opinion the cause of the Kingdom and of this church will be advanced by his return to this pastorate.

Be it further resolved, That we appreciate the able and unremitting efforts of our presiding elder, Rev. C. B. Carter, during his third year upon this district. We particularly commend him for his leadership and his work in the great Centenary drive.

Be it further resolved, That our presiding elder be requested to transmit a copy of these resolutions to our presiding bishop, and that copies be given to the press.

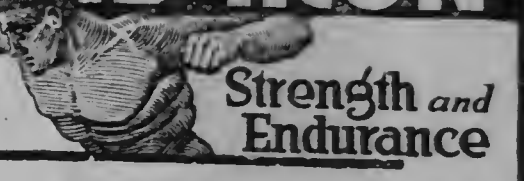
NUXATED IRON



For Red Blood, Strength and Endurance

THINK of the strong healthy men and women you know people who are prominent and who are doing things worth while and you will find that they usually possess remarkable force, vim and energy the kind that simply brim over when the blood is filled with iron. Iron is red-blood food—it helps put strength and energy into the veins of men and roses into the cheeks of women. Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new blood cells strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy and endurance into the whole system.

If people would only keep their blood filled with strength-giving iron by taking Nuxated Iron when they feel weak, run-down and nervous, they might readily build up their red-blood corpuscles and quickly become stronger and healthier in every way. Unlike the older inorganic products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, delicate people in two weeks' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

To have and to hold, to get and to gain, much and more—for these you plan and toil, strive and save. It's good, as far as it goes; but the crowd was at the ferry. The boatman charges no toll, except life and you. The river, be it Styx or Jordan, can't float weighty things as we weigh them. The safety signal is flying—safety first, last and always—yes, always.

"What you are, speaks so loud I can't hear what you say." Emerson is right. The silent forces in nature are the mightiest forces. Gravitation makes no noise, yet it runs the universe. Cohesion binds all matter in form with giant grip and is soundless. Sunshine lights half a world with glory and beauty, filling and flooding hill and meadow as gently as a fabled fairy's tread on daisies. Sunstroke hurls no bolt, but is deadly. Noise means friction, waste, loss of power in machinery and in life. Wise old bishop was he who said, "When you have nothing to say, say nothing." Believe me—about the golden barred gates of Silence, God's messenger angels stand waiting, ready to do his bidding.

* * *

"Father, who made the stars?" "I don't know, son." "Father, who made ev-er-everything?" The man did not know God and his evasions were pitiful. On the tragic ruins of a desolate life Job's friend told him, "Acquaint now thyself with Him and be at peace." What's the use of feeding on wind and groping in the dark—we only know what is revealed. The essence of life is divine. The glory of life is faith. Men may dodge and lie and shuffle, but life and destiny hold them with relentless grasp. No discharge in this war—it means victory or death.

* * *

It was refreshing to hear him talk. He was as broad as the ocean and as deep—in water. The winning smile that irradiated his countenance was like unto a reflection from a baptismal pool. Out of the depths he cried, and many heard. Liturgies, litanies, all the rich inheritance of beauty, life and spirit, enshrined and crystallized in creed and prayer, were abominations. Pleading for spiritual freedom, he would bind men in doctrinal bonds. We simply pitied him and were sad.

* * *

Striking preachers, flying preachers, quitting preachers! Some of us are still doing business at the old stand, and neither strike, fly, nor quit. Blessed is that servant that the Master shall find waiting—serving—when he shall call. The prophets have declared that the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ, but never that the kingdom of heaven should become the kingdom of this world. Somebody, signal down brakes—safety first.

Do justice to your brother (you can do that whether you love him or not), and you will come to love him.—Ruskin.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 66—No. 48. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South Whole No. 3327.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1919. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

(We are indebted to the Commercial Appeal, of Memphis, Tenn., for the following account of the proceedings ot the North Mississippi Conference. The account is written by Rev. E. H. Cunningham, a member of the Conference and one of the most efficient newspaper men in the church).

FIRST DAY.

The fiftieth annual session of the North Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in the First Methodist Church, at Aberdeen, Miss., on Wednesday morning, November 19, at 9 o'clock, with a great number of delegates and visitors present, Bishop John C. Kilgo, Charlotte, N. C., presiding. The usual opening devotional services were held and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper administered to a large number of ministers, laymen and women.

The first official act following the administration of the sacrament by Bishop Kilgo was the reading of a recent episcopal address to the Conference touching upon the need of a genuine revival throughout the land. This theme was concurred in by all the bishops. This morning the Bishop proceeded to read and discuss it, saying among other things, "The supreme need of the world to-day is a genuine, old-time revival of religion." "This can not be brought to pass by human plans and programmes; we can easily overrate the power of our plans and programmes and are in some danger of underestimating our absolute dependence upon God and the Holy Spirit."

"Amens" came from every section of the auditorium as the Bishop continued to read the address. The decay of religion in the home and the lack of family altars he deplored, and all Methodists were urged to restore the class meeting and the love feast so long honored by the church and practiced in the earlier days.

The Bishop said he had no sort of sympathy with the fads and fancies that have crept into our social structure and are seeking to make encroachments upon the church. The laymen were urged to assume control of all material things and leave the pulpit free for the preaching of the gospel, wholly and exclusively, and allow no programmes of nationalism or anything to be presented from the sacred desk except the preaching of the Cross. Oftentimes the ministers are asked to discuss health, sanitation, better orchards and all kinds of questions on special days.

Bishop Kilgo said to-day, "The church of the living God is for the preaching of the gospel and to save souls; allow no encroachments upon this high and sacred right."

After the address, routine work of the Conference was begun. John R. Countiss, Grenada, was elected secretary, and named as his assistant Randolph A. Tucker, Grenada. The statistical secretaries selected by the secretary and elected by the Conference were A. T. McIlwain, Senatobia; and William R. Lott, Merigold. The roll was called and all but a few ministers and laymen answered. The bar of the Conference was made to include the main auditorium and the time was fixed for opening each day at nine and closing at noon.

The Bishop called the names of all the presiding elders, their characters were passed and their reports of the year's work were received by the Conference. They were as follows:

Aberdeen District—T. H. Lipscomb reports that the average salary of the preachers in the Aberdeen District is now $1,200, which is an advance of 60 per cent, and that many church debts have been paid and that the year has been a prosperous one.

Columbus District—W. L. Duren, presiding elder, reports an advance in the finances this year of $15,000, exclusive of the Centenary, all the people having been faithful and loyal, contributing their share of service and interest to make this the good year that it has been.

Corinth District—T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder: 450 accessions to the church, 19 charges reporting an excess of $500 on salary, with the district exceeding its Centenary quota nearly $50,000. Rev. L. A. McKeown, of Iuka, a pastor in the Corinth District, presented Mr. Dorsey with a handsome gold watch as an expression of the love of the brethren among whom he has labored so faithfully the past four years. Mr. McKeown closed the presentation speech by saying: "Every one loves Brother Dorsey up there except the blind tiger crowd."

Rev. R. O. Brown, pastor of First Church, Corinth, added that the people had also presented Mrs. Dorsey with a check as a testimonial of their love and good-will toward her.

Durant District—W. A. Mitchell. Every pastoral charge in the district paid all salaries in full, and 17 of the 25 charges paid all benevolences in full. This has been the crowning year of Mr. Mitchell's four as presiding elder of the Durant District. The preachers and laymen of the Durant District expressed their appreciation of Mr. Mitchell and his splendid services in a substantial way also.

Greenville District—V. C. Curtis reports an increase of 50 per cent in membership. Revivals have been held all over the district and the amount of finances raised this year is without any precedent, as every demand of the church has been fully met and exceeded. Special mention was made of Clarksdale and Gunnison charges in the Greenville District. Clarksdale has, under the leadership of Rev. Nash Broyles, received this year 250 members. Gunnison paid its pastor $1,500 above his salary and has declared its intention of supporting him next year, in addition to their regular pastor, as the one whom they desire to help has broken down in health. They have assumed this in addition to their regular financial obligations, which is a thing of rare worth and bears beautiful testimony to the loyalty and generosity of the people of Gunnison.

Holly Springs District—J. H. Holder reports good revivals over the district, all salaries in full with live Sunday schools and missionary societies, making the year a splendid one.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION, November 27, 1919.

By the President of the United States of America.

The season of the year has again arrived when the people of the United States are accustomed to unite in giving thanks to Almighty God for the blessings which he has conferred upon our country during the twelve months that have passed.

A year ago our people poured out their hearts in praise and thanksgiving that through divine aid the right was victorious and peace had come to the nations which had so courageously struggled in defense of human liberty and justice.

Now that the stern task is ended and the fruits of achievement are ours, we look forward with confidence to the dawn of an era where the sacrifices of the nations will find recompense in a world at peace.

But to attain the consummation of the great work to which the American people devoted their manhood and the vast resources of their country, they should, as they give thanks to God, reconsecrate themselves to these principles of right which triumphed through his merciful goodness. Our gratitude can find no more perfect expression than to bulwark with loyalty and patriotism those principles for which the free peoples of the earth fought and died.

During the last year we have had much to make us grateful. In spite of the confusion in our economic life resulting from the war, we have prospered. Our harvests have been plentiful and of our abundance we have been able to render succor to less favored nations. Our democracy remains unshaken in a world torn with political and social unrest. Our traditional ideals are still our guides in the path of progress and civilization.

These great blessings, vouchsafed to us, for which we devoutly give thanks, should arouse us to a fuller sense of our duty to ourselves and to mankind to see to it that nothing we may do shall mar the completeness of the victory which we helped to win.

No selfish purpose animated us in becoming a participant in the world war, and with a like spirit of unselfishness we should strive to aid by our example and by our co-operation in realizing the enduring welfare of all peoples and in bringing into being a world ruled by friendship and good-will.

Therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, hereby designate Thursday, the 27th day of November, next, for observance as a day of thanksgiving and prayer by my fellow countrymen, inviting them to cease on that day from their ordinary tasks and to unite in their homes and in their several places of worship in ascribing praise and thanksgiving to God, the author of all blessings and the master of our destinies.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done in the District of Columbia, this fifth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-fourth.

WOODROW WILSON.

CALLING THE ANGELS IN.

We mean to do it. Some day, some day,
We mean to slacken this feverd rush
That is wearing our very souls away;
And grant to our goaded hearts a hush
That is holy enough to let them hear
The footsteps of angels drawing near.

We mean to do it. O, never doubt,
When the burden of daytime droll is o'er,
We'll sit and muse, while the stars come out,
As the Patriarch sat at the open door
Of his tent, with a heavenward gazing eye,
To watch for the angels passing by.

We've seen them afar at high noontide,
When fiercely the world's hot flashing beat;
Yet never have bidden them turn aside,
And tarry awhile in converse sweet;
Nor prayed them to hallow the cheer we spread,
To drink of our wine, and break our bread.

We promised our hearts, that when the stress
Of the lifework reaches the longed-for close—
When the weight that we groan with, hinders less,
We'll loosen our thoughts to such repose
As banishes care's disturbing din,
And then—we will call the angels in.

The day that we dreamed of, comes at length,
When tired of every mocking quest,
And broken in spirit and shorn of strength,
We drop, indeed, at the door of rest,
And wait and watch as the day wanes on;
But the angels we meant to call are gone!

"THE UPLIFTED CHRIST."

By H. P. Lewis, Jr.

As the church realizes the need of a great revival to do her part in saving the world from present perils, and seeks the way to bring it about, she is turning to the uplifted Christ as the only way.

Jesus claimed that His power to draw men to Himself rests in His followers' telling properly the story of the cross. Once He said, "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." Jno. 3:14-5.

Again He said, "When ye have lifted up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am he." Jno. 8:28. And still again, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." Jno. 12:32.

The one message that Peter and the early apostles always preached to the people was the story of the crucified and risen Lord.

On the day of Pentecost, he said, "Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know: Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain, whom God hath raised up. * * * Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ." Acts 2:22-24,36. This message, told in the power of the Holy Spirit, was what pricked them in their heart, and made them cry, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

Again, the day Peter and John went to the temple to worship, and healed the lame man, and a crowd gathered around them in wonderment at the miracle, Peter took occasion to say, "The God of Abraham and of Isaac and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his son, Jesus; whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go. But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses. And his name, through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all." Acts 3:13-16.

On another occasion, when the priests, the captain of the temple and others tried to silence them, Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them: "Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel, if we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole; be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:8-12.

Later, when the priests and other religious leaders had grown desperate in their efforts to stop the work of the apostles, and had them up again before the council, Peter and the other apostles replied with more courage than ever, "We ought to obey God rather than man. The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. Him hath God exalted with his right hand, to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins. And we are his witnesses of these things." Acts 5:29-32.

One of two things always obtained as a result of the Apostles' witness to the cross: Either it brought conviction that led to conversion, or conviction that brought on more bitter opposition. There was something doing in the hearts of the hearers when the apostles gave their witness to the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus.

After Paul's conversion, he became as faithful and true a witness to the cross of Christ as the other apostles. He wrote to one of the churches: "For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect. For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God."

At another time he wrote: "For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified." And still another: "But God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world." Again he wrote to another church: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

The one message of the apostles, with which they established the early church, was "Jesus and him crucified."

The preaching all down the ages that has brought conviction and conversion and saving faith to the people, has been the preaching of the cross. It is the story of THE UPLIFTED CHRIST that touches the heart and conscience of mankind, and draws humanity to Jesus. The Savior, bleeding and dying on the cross, has been the inspiration of our great living hymns. Toplady gave us:

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee;
Let the water and the blood,
From thy wounded side which flowed,
Be of sin the double cure,
Save from wrath and make me pure."

We never grow tired of singing Isaac Watts' great hymn,

"Alas! and did my Savior bleed?"

And Charlotte Elliott's,

"Just as I am without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me,"

has melted the heart of many a wanderer and sinner, and brought them home to God.

We will, no doubt, be singing till He comes again William Cowper's

"There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins:
And sinners, plunged beneath that flood,
Lose all their guilty stains."

Why are these hymns so dear to us? Because there is told in them the story of the cross and the atoning blood of Christ.

The question arises, "Why was Christ's death necessary? or why did he have to be crucified?" The answer thereto is found in a more perfect knowledge of the law of God and the principles of His Kingdom. God set the world in perfect order when He first made it, and pronounced the work of His hands very good. He prescribed obedience to His will as a condition for man to dwell in Eden. So long as man met these conditions, God came down in the cool of the evening and held sweet fellowship with him. Perfect obedience to God brought perfect harmony and peace in life. There was one tree in Eden that God forbade man to eat of, with the warning that in the day he ate of it, he should surely die. Man, tempted by the devil, disobeyed God, took of the fruit of the forbidden tree, and died to God. From that day to this, mankind has been depraved, with a nature in him of open rebellion to God, and with not enough strength in his better nature to conform to the law of God.

All the laws that God has given to mankind are perfect. As man gets acquainted with them, he finds the Psalmist correct, when he tells us: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever: the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." And man's better nature, responding to God's law, confesses, as Paul did in Romans vii, "The law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just and good."

As man acquaints himself with God's holy laws, he realizes that he does not and cannot in his own strength conform to them; and he is made to feel the penalty of the broken laws hanging over him. That penalty, as God told Adam, is death: not just the death of the body, but that of the soul. We read: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." "The wages of sin is death." This soul-death is final separation from God and His Kingdom. We read concerning the wicked: "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment." "But the fearful, and the unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers and idolaters, and all liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death." This is God's final penalty on mankind for breaking His law, and He has never changed it.

In order to maintain the dignity of His perfect law, there is only one of two things left to do:

either make man suffer the doom of his own sins, or find a substitute. In the old Mosaic law, that substitute was provided, so man could take the choicest of his flocks, an animal without spot or blemish, and offer it in sacrifice for his sins. Bringing this with repentance and confession before the priest; atonement was made for his sins. But this was only a temporary plan God provided to be followed till the true way was given. Since all men have sinned and fallen short of the glory of God, there is not, nor has there been a human being outside of Christ that is worthy to act as a substitute for man's sins. So God, in order to maintain the dignity of His law, and save man from eternal doom, had to provide a substitute to suffer for man's sins. It had to be equal in power and authority with the law. So, we read, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." And again: "For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly."

What was the real agony of His death?

The human suffering imposed was the greatest and most humiliating then known. Only the lowest type of criminals was crucified. So, "He made his death with the wicked," so that the vilest sinner may return and find refuge in His atoning death. Even on the scaffold, or in the electric chair, if the sinner will repent and believe on Him, he will obtain the same forgiveness that the dying thief on the cross did.

But that suffering alone does not satisfy the perfect law, or prove an adequate penalty. God has said: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." "And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Soul-death is final separation from the face of God; having the door of heaven shut so the soul can never enter. And that is the penalty God has fixed to sin. To meet that penalty for man, Jesus Christ had to taste it in order to satisfy God's perfect law. And He did.

As He approached nearer and nearer to the cross, the terror of the punishment gripped him more and more. Once He said: "Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour." And later, in the garden, He said: "My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here and watch;" and He, going a little farther, fell on the ground and prayed that if it were possible, the hour might pass from Him. And He said: "Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt." "And being in an agony He prayed more earnestly: and His sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." So great was His agony that God sent an angel to strengthen Him in order that He might live through the ordeal still ahead.

The road from Gethsemane to Calvary was a rugged one: deserted by His followers, passing through mock trials, humiliated, scourged, spat upon, "He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and, as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth." But that which He dreaded was not the humiliation man could heap on Him; it was the darkness yet to come over His soul. After being nailed to the cross, after having forgiven the penitent thief, and given charges to John and His mother, the darkness settled upon the face of the earth; the sun and the moon were darkened, and the old earth shook with a mighty earthquake, and God laid on Him the iniquity of us all; and in that dark hour, as God turned His back on His only begotten Son, and shut His face from His Son, Jesus had wrung from his lips: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" He, then and there, felt the pangs of a lost soul, and satisfied God's holy law, bought our salvation with the price of His own blood, and opened up a way with His own life for the sinner man to escape hell and get back into favor with God.

Surely, Isaac Watts caught the true vision of the cross, as is indicated in his hymn:

"When I survey the wondrous cross,
On which the Prince of glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride.

"Forbid it, Lord, that I should boast,
Save in the death of Christ, my God;
All the vain things that charm me most,
I sacrifice them to his blood.

"See, from his head, his hands, his feet,
Sorrow and love flow mingled down;
Did e'er such love and sorrow meet,
Or thorns compose so rich a crown?

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all."

"He tasted death for every man." And as this story of the UPLIFTED CHRIST is told to this old sin-cursed world, His drawing power will draw all men unto Him. Our business, brethren, is so to tell the story that the sinner may see his sins His blood had split, and helped to nail Him there.

God is mightily moving the church to-day with the rumblings of a great spiritual awakening. Jesus Christ died to save this old world back to God, and He is depending on His followers to tell the story of the cross, the story of His redeeming love, as the one message that will bring the world back to God.

Oh, that every believer may be made to cry from his heart:

"O Thou who died on Calvary,
To save my soul and make me free,
I'll consecrate my life to Thee,
My Savior and my God."

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM DR. JNO. W. BOSWELL.

Dear Brother Carley: I honor my friend and brother, J. J. Brooks, who for fifty years has been a faithful itinerant preacher. I am glad the Lord has been good to him through all these years. He has led a "charmed life." He was well born, well reared, and came to manhood with a clean record. He married well, and is justly proud of his wife and children. If he was ever sick a day, I never heard of it. He is greatly loved by the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, in which territory he was born, and from which he has never been separated.

I knew Joe when he was a small boy, probably ten years of age. His father, "Uncle Joe Brooks," was my first presiding elder. His home was the first place at which I stopped the day I arrived within the bounds of my first circuit. It was my birthday, the 30th of November, 1859. I was twenty years of age. That was sixty years ago lacking twenty-one days. I have never been out of the service from that day to this—have never located, was never on the supernumerary list, was never superannuated. Brother Joe joined Conference at Holly Springs, November, 1869. I am therefore ten years his senior in the regular work.

Joe was a lively and talkative chap—a great favorite with the neighbors, young and old. He visited them, and sometimes stayed all night. On one occasion he was kept up a little late. The next night Joe got drowsy soon after supper and wanted to go to bed. It was unusual. His excuse was that "Miss Maria," a maiden lady of age, "liked to have talked me to death last night." How Miss Maria fared at his hands he didn't say. Blessings on the boy! His father and my father were friends and comrades in the University, and he and I have been friends nearly all our lives.

When these lines appear our Conference will be in session. I desire very much to be on hand, and, God willing, I will be. But I can't make arrangements too far ahead. The strikes now on, and worse ones threatened, make it necessary, so far as travel is concerned, to plan only for the present. I pray that there may soon be a turn for the better in our country's affairs, but prospects are not bright.

Nor are condition and prospects in the church all encouraging. Affairs are in an inaccountable state. For twelve months preceding the close of the Centenary drive the church was never more active in all its history, never more successful in reaching its aims. This great drive should have been immediately followed by large increases in every department of the connection. Yet, strange to say, there has been scarcely any increase except in finances. The preachers are paid more money, and all the benevolences are better supported. But most of the Annual Conferences so far held report losses in membership and in Sunday school enrollment. In the latter the loss is alarming. And never were so few young men entering the ministry.

The war accounts largely for the shortage of young preachers, but not altogether. So much is being said about small salaries, starving the preachers, etc., that young men are deterred, especially educated young men who can make more money in secular pursuits. This smacks of the idea of men going into the ministry for what they can get out of it, instead of what, by God's grace, they can put into it—an idea unworthy of a man called of God to preach. Are there no consecrated heroes among educated young men?—men willing to work for souls and trust God for bread? I read an article a few days since in which it was said that if the matter were properly presented, and volunteers called for, even "high steeple" preachers in sufficient numbers would respond and serve mission charges. The statement was not unqualified. Behind it was the intimation that such a call would be answered if backed by an assurance of a living. Our "hill country" preachers go without any assurance of that kind. They are the heroes. It seems never to have occurred to some people that it takes no more to feed and clothe an educated man than it does an uneducated one. The trouble is not wholly there. It is in the fact that they are not willing to make sacrifices in order to serve poor charges.

How to account for the loss in church membership I do not know. Had there been no revivals in the church, the question would be easy. But all our Advocates report revivals and ingatherings, which, though not so extensive as in some years, it seems, should have gathered in as many as dropped out. Only one Conference of the year, as far as I have seen, has reported anything like a substantial gain. Nor can we account for the immense loss in Sunday school enrollment. Sunday school workers everywhere, including field secretaries, heads of departments and makers of our literature, never labored more assiduously than during the last eighteen months. They have gained only in efficiency in work. May the good results be seen in the future.

These facts should drive us as a church and individuals to a thorough self-examination. We should know as soon as possible whether we are affected to any extent by the false and destructive teachings of the past few years, or whether in the mind of the Master our financial success compensates for the losses sustained, or whether we are simply backslidden. Possibly some of us heard during the war that at its close society and the church would be revolutionized, and are waiting to see what will happen. Astonishing things have happened in legislation and in the industries of the country, but, so far, the church remains unaffected. What changes have taken place in the cities where errors and isms are incubated and hatched, and in some big universities where theological gymnasiums are conducted, doth not yet appear, but we who live in the country and preach the same old gospel in the same old churches know that nothing new or strange has come to pass. Is it our fault or only our misfortune that we are not having success? But we need not despair: God is faithful, and if we turn to him the channels that are now dry will be filled again, and we will have times of refreshing from his gracious presence.

In my reading I learn that the most successful revivals and the greatest ingathering of souls are effected through the ministry of those who preach "the old-time religion." The critics do not aim at nor achieve that kind of success. This is evidence that the gospel of the New Testament is still "the power of God unto salvation." Could we Southern Methodists be left undisturbed a while, and allowed to settle down and do our work, we would, under God, soon come out of our troubles, but Unification, the absorption of our church, like a great specter, stands before us and disturbs the waking hours and the dreams of not a few, both preachers and laymen. When that question is settled, and settled right, we will have peace and prosperity. May the good Lord hasten the day! JOHN W. BOSWELL.

Nashville, Tenn.

PROCEEDINGS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Sardis District—Dr. R A. Meek, presiding elder, reports a number of excellent revivals, 250 conversions, considerable increase in finances, with every charge paying pastor and presiding elder in full.

Winona District—Lee M. Lipscomb, reported all claims in full and a 50 per cent increase in finances the past four years. The greatest moral and religious advancement in this Conference is being made in the Delta. "I have never seen a people more liberal, more ready to meet all demands of the church, and they have a growing grip on God and eternal things."

The names of the superannuate brethren were called one by one and their names were referred to the committee for the same relation again.

Various communications were read and referred without reading. Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Millsaps College, Jackson, was introduced and presented his report to the Conference, which was a very satisfactory report, showing continued improvement at this institution of the church.

Dr. John W. Boswell, of Nashville, Tenn., introduced a resolution providing that the Joint Board of Finance set aside enough funds to pay the premium on the insurance of Rev. G. D. Newsom, who is a retired, afflicted minister and member of this Conference. The resolution was adopted immediately without any discussion.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb read resolutions adopted at a recent meeting of the elders and bishop of the two Mississippi Conferences in Jackson dealing with the need for a revival along similar lines emphasized by the Bishop's address.

Rev. J. A. Hall introduced resolutions thanking the Bishop and brethren for presenting these vital matters to the people at this time, and it carried.

W. T. Reeves, of Tupelo, one of the lay members of the Conference, made a speech urging that this episcopal address and the paper drawn up by the presiding elders be printed in book form and distributed to local church officials throughout Southern Methodism after being published by the publishing committee. The resolution of Mr. Reeves was unanimously adopted.

This afternoon Rev. J. W. Boswell, D.D., of Nashville, preached a stirring sermon. To-night was the annual anniversary of the Conference Board of Missions and the address was delivered by Dr. O. E. Goddard, of Nashville.

Prominent among the laymen of the Conference attending the sessions are Hon. G. L. Jones, of New Albany; J. D. Pennebaker, of Isola; J. J. Beck, of Drew; J. T. Mathis, of Leland; W. T. Reeves, of Tupelo; John H. Sherard, of Sherard; J. A. Pyle, of Iuka; F. A. Howell, of Durant; L. A. Worsham, of Corinth; W. A. Wilson, of Myrtle; W. E. Stokes, of Macon; George J. Leftwich, and P. W. Shell, of Aberdeen; S. N. Gilliland, of Kosclusko.

Mrs. S. F. Riley, of the Methodist Orphanage, Jackson, is present, but was called to Starkville this afternoon on account of the death of a relative. Mrs. J. M. Wyatt and Mrs. J. H. Haughton, members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Conference, are attending this session of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. R. A. Tucker, Grenada's popular Metbodist pastor for the past four years, Is wearing a new gold watch, which was recently presented to him. Every presiding elder that has served four years has received a present as an expression of love and good-will from his brethren, and in the majority of cases gold watches have been given.

Hence a brother with a humorous strain announced to-day, "It seems that our elders all need 'watching.'"

SECOND DAY.

The second day's session of tbe North Mississippi Annual Conference was marked by the dispatch of many important items. An address by Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D., of the Louisiana Conference in the afternoon and the celebration of the joint anniversary by the Board of Church Extension and Conference Board of Missions at the church to-night with Rev. Dr. Boaz, Louisville, Ky., as the principal speaker, held close attention.

All the ministers and laymen were in their place at the opening hour. Bishop Kilgo asked Rev. J. H. Felts to lead in prayer, after which the Bishop read a Scripture lesson from tbe Gospel of John, making suitable comment thereon, calling attention to the "reality and sovereignty of the Holy Ghost" as important truths for the church to-day to recognize and be guided by.

The following answered roll call: T. M. Bradley, Cleveland; J. H. Ingram, Evansville; J. T. Lockhart, Belzoni; J. L. Nabors, Kossuth; A. S. Briscoe, Duck Hill; W. V. Sbearer, Benoit; W. J. Wood, Winona; P. F. Luter, Tchula; Robert Ruff, U. S. A.; R. L. Lawson, Hesterville; J. A. Patterson, Yaiden.

Laymen present were: Whitman Davis, Macon; J. T. McLeod, R. E. Wilbourne, Lexington; J. T. Mathis, Leland; Roman Thayer, Greenwood; P. W. Shell, Houston; G. J. Leftwich, Aberdeen; G. L. Jones, New Albany; Mr. Stokeley, Drew; J. H. Sherard.

Rev. Lee M. Lipscomb, four years presiding elder, Winona District, and W. W. Mitchell, four years presiding elder, Durant District, were called to the chancel and presented tokens of love and appreciation by Revs. C. D. McGehee and A. C. McCorkle for their faithful services rendered the church within the bounds of their districts of the Annual Conference. At this point tbe Bishop provoked laughter when he said, "I now understand why so many of the bretbren want to be presiding elders—your custom seems to be to make them a present."

The Bishop resumed call of question 17, "Are all the preachers blameless in their lives and official administration?" Under this question the name of every preacher in each district was called, his elder answered in each case, "nothing against him," and his character passed.

The names of Revs. W. D. Wendel, Lexington, and I. F. Holland, Gunnison, were called, their characters were passed and their names were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations. They are of the falthful and true, but on account of being unable to carry the responsibilities of work because of illness, they are to be superannuated for the present. The Conference holds them each in high appreciation. Rev. W. W. Duncan's absence is noted because of illness in his family at Drew. The name of J. T. Simmons was called and he was granted a location at his own request, as was the case in that of the following named: J. R. James, H. M. Cockrum, N. N. Maxey, T. L. Huston, G. L. Lauderdale.

O. E. Goddard, Nashville; M. M. Black, Jackson; C. O. Chalmers, manager New Orleans Christian Advocate, were introduced.

Dr. Boaz, Church Extension Secretary, Louisville; B. F. Lewis, Manager Mississippi Orphans' Home, Jackson, and Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, Elementary Department of the Sunday School, Nashville, were introduced. Dr. Boaz and Miss Kennedy addressed the Conference on behalf of the work which they represent, and were well received.

The Committee on Admission into the Conference reported, presenting the names of several young men who knock at the door of the Conference as candidates for the itinerant ministry. Those received after passing due examination are: N. D. Guerry, Artesia; W. A. Wilson, Myrtle; J. W. York, Golden; W. J. Phillips, Iuka; Stanford Maxey, Hickory Flat; David Wasson, Glen Allan; W. J. Liming of the Holly Springs District, and W. O. Hunt of the Sardis District. R. G. A. Carlisle was readmitted.

The number of young men coming in as candidates for the ministry becomes less each year, and is a matter of much concern to the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training.

Hon. G. L. Jones of New Albany, one of the lay members, upon motion, asked the Conference to give one hour during its session to-morrow to hear and receive the report of the laymen. It was granted.

Rev. E. E. McKeithen, of the Northern Methodist Church, was received by transfer into the Conference from the Greenville District.

It was shown in an address of Dr. Boaz to-night that the Methodist Church, South, has in its Department of Church Extension a loan fund capital of $1,300,000 which may be borrowed for church building purposes at as low a rate of interest as 4 per cent. The capital of the department is, of course, very much greater than that of its loan fund. There is a fund upon which every Southern Methodist congregation may draw for donations to its own funds when a church building is to be enterprised. Reports show that many of the parsonages and modern churcbes in North Mississippi were bulit througb the aid of this fund, wbicb is in part maintained by a regular assessment each year on every pastoral charge in each Conference over the entire connection.

The afternoon was a busy one with the various committees and boards. The Board of Education at its meeting nominated Revs. J. R. Countiss and L. P. Wasson to attend a meeting of the Southern Metbodist Educational Association at Dallas next spring.

Two things are readily evident at this year's Conference: First, that the past year has been an unprecedented one in liberality, a greater amount being given to worthy church enterprises by Methodists, exclusive of the Centenary fund, than during any preceding year; and that there is a desire on the part of all people from the rural church to the city temple for a real and genuine revival of pure and undefiled religion.

It was said to-day that when our fathers desired a great blessing that "they agonized before the Almigbty and that when their children desire the same that we organize." It matters not how a revival comes, but that which seems to be uppermost in the thought of ministers and laymen alike is that results be reached and that a world-wide revival be begun.

Dr. Steel's address this afternoon was a plea for the return to the principles of our fathers in apostolic times and was one of the leading features tor to-day.

John H. Sherard read the report of the committee on the Memphis Metbodist Hospital, which was received. The report presented in part the following facts regarding tbe Memphis institution, In which the North Mississippi Conference has a vital interest. Tbe report follows:

"Dear Brethren—Since our last report to you as one of tbe four Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, owning the land and directing the erection and financing of the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, we beg to advise that a contract has been let by the building committee and approved by the board of managers involving about one-fourth of the amount of material and work that will be required to complete the first unit of the new building. This contract embraces the putting in of the reinforced concrete frame and floors, the excavating for the basement, the plumbing and electrical wiring, and calls for an expenditure of about $105,000. Tbe contract for the completion of the building has not been let, but the building committee is working out plans to secure the material and have the work done in the cheapest and best way possible under prevailing conditions.

"It is estimated that it will take $350,000 to complete the first unit now in the course of erection, which will give 150 bedrooms. This unit when completed will have all the operating rooms, laboratories, scientific appliances, machinery of every kind adequate for 500 beds, so when the additions are made they will be in bedrooms and not in machinery and appliances. Arrangement has been made with one of the strongest banks in Memphis and in the South, together with the individual members of the board of managers and friends of the hospital, to finance the enterprise to completion, and from this it will he observed that whatever delays or hindrances might arise in the future in the letting of the contract for finishing the building, it will be due not to the failure to get the money, but on account of the unsettled labor conditions and the exorbitant prices for the material.

"We submit the following as the financial report of the Methodist Hospital on Nov. 1:

Assets.

Hospital lot	$100,000
Amount expended on new building	84,757
Lucy Brinkley Annex building	102,000
Furniture and fixtures	20,000
Lot—Lucy Brinkley	15,000
Cash in Bank	4,000
Estimated value of unpaid subscriptions	25,000
Total	$350,757

"We recommend that the Annual Conferences composing the covenant to build the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., authorize the board of trustees created by said Conferences to fix the time and direct the number of days during the coming Annual Conference year in which to make a special drive to secure ample subscriptions to pay off all indebtedness. We also request that authority be given to said board of trustees to make the apportionment of the total amount needed to the four Annual Conferences and to the districts and charges in same upon a basis that will be equitable to them, having the right to call into counsel the presiding elders of each district.

"The following names of the board of trustees of your Conference expire at this Conference and we request the appointment of their successors:

"Rev. R. A. Meek, Rev. R. A. Tucker, John H. Sherard, M. C. Smith, W. T. Reeves and Mrs. J. M. Wyatt."

Third Day.

The third day's session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was greater in point of interest, attendance and consideration and dispatch of vital matters than has been any preceding day. Three special periods were occupied in attending to Conference matters and holding board anniversaries. The morning session of the Conference was featured by an hour set apart for receiving reports and hearing addresses from the lay delegates of the Conference, in which stirring talks were made by G. L. Jones of New Albany, S. J. High of Tupelo, W. E. Stokes of Macon, Dr. A. W. Minden of the State University, and D. H. Hall of New Albany. That the laymen of the Conference have been determining factors in reaching the Centenary quota of the several districts is well understood and at the laymen's session of the Conference to-day a fuller and heartier co-operation of their forces was pledged to the ministers in advancing all the material interests of the church.

One feature of the morning session was a brief memorial address by the Rev. John W. Boswell, of Nashville, on the late Rev. John H. Mitchell, who died this year. Dr. Boswell paid a tender and affectionate tribute to his life-long friend and brother in the ministry, concluding the address by calling to the chancel Rev. W. W. Mitchell, brother of the deceased, and presenting him with a bouquet of chrysanthemums to place on the grave of the deceased as a fitting tribute of love and affection from Dr. Boswell for the North Mississippi Conference.

The Bishop read a scripture lesson from the second chapter of Acts and made forceful and illuminating comment thereon, in which he stated that the church and the world need to-day a holy ministry, a consecrated choir, missionary societies and boards of stewards with "no ballroom artist as teacher in the Sunday schools."

Various matters concerning the coming revival campaign were called up and acted upon. This afternoon Rev. Henry T. Carley, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, addressed the anniversary meeting of the Board of Christian Literature. The audience pledged its support to the editor of the Advocate, after complimentary references to his able editorship by Dr. Boswell, and a rising vote of confidence and thanks was given. The feature at the evening hour was the observance of the anniversary of the Conference Sunday School Board, composed of the following members: Judge J. G. McGowan, Water Valley, chairman; James T. McCafferty, Starkville, secretary; J. S. Carlton, Sardis, treasurer; S. L. Pope, U. S. A.; J. D. Simpson, Baldwyn; Charles P. Moss, Shaw; A. C. McCorkle, Durant; A. T. McIlwain, Senatobia; Walter M. Campbell, Itta Bena; W. F. Rogers, Oakland; W. E. Stokes, Macon; W. A. Boone, Lem Seawright, J. H. Sherard, R. W. Sharp, Grenada; W. T. Johnson, Greenwood.

With the above seated on the platform, Judge McGowan presiding, the anniversary was held amid the enthusiasm and rejoicing of what the Sunday school interests have accomplished the past year. The principal speakers were Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, Superintendent Elementary Training, Nashville, and the Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference.

This afternoon was given over to the anniversary of the Board of Christian Literature and that of the publishing interests jointly. The members composing the above board are J. W. Dorman, chairman, Water Valley; J. M. Wyatt, Shelby; A. M. Bennett, Tyro; E. B. Sharp, Schlater; G. W. Gordon, Noxapater; D. W. Babb, Strongs; James E. Cunningham, U. S. A., and Carroll Varner, Hernando. It is gratifying to the Conference and to the people generally to note the return of the following ministers who have given their services to looking after the boys overseas and in the camps during the world war: Robert Ruff, W. H. Mounger, James E. Cunningham, S. L. Pope and J. M. Guinn.

Among the members of the legal fraternity who are taking part in the deliberations of the Conference as laymen are G. L. Jones, of New Albany; J. Lem Seawright, of Ackerman; W. E. Stokes, of Macon; George J. Leftwich, of Aberdeen; Thomas E. Pegram, of Ripley, and Mr. Ward, of Rosedale.

One room in the church building presents a busy scene like that of a counting room. It is the office of Revs. A. T. McIlwain, of Senatobia, and W. R. Lott, of Merigold, the statistical secretaries, who, with a big adding machine, tabulate the financial reports of every district and charge so that when the Bishop calls up the question, "What are the statistics for the year?" an answer will be forthcoming. When an adding machine was asked for the question that presented itself was, "What preacher knows enough about commercial affairs to use an adding machine?" But when Mr. McIlwain began using the machine all doubts vanished, as he was a capable banking man before entering the ministry.

An interesting item dispatched at the morning session was that of presenting a resolution providing that the date of the Annual Conference be changed. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, the preachers usually have to move in December and often near the holiday season, which is generally a cold and disagreeable time for the wives and children; be it

"Resolved by the present session of the Conference, That we request the presiding Bishop and presiding elders to hold the 1920 session of the Conference the first week in November, 1921 session first week in October and thereafter to hold all our annual sessions about the first week in September."

On motion the consideration of the above resolution was made the special order of the day at the morning session to-morrow. It is likely that the resolution will be adopted.

A plan to place an agent in the field to raise $250,000 for the retired ministers is being considered. The Conference now has about $10,000 for this fund and it is declared that to raise $250,000 more for these faithful old servants will be an easy matter. The address of Dr. Luther E. Todd, of St. Louis, last evening before the brethren created quite a bit of new and widening interest. Dr. Todd is secretary of the board representing this particular claim and is making admirable progress with his work in behalf of this important department of the church.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan of the faculty of Millsaps College was present this afternoon at the meeting of the Board of Education. Rev. B. F. Lewis and Mrs. S. F. Riley are representing the Methodist Orphans' Home in Jackson, and the report of that institution was submitted through a lay delegate, John H. Sherard, and in part is as follows:

Orphans' Home Report Made.

To the President and Members of the North Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session at Aberdeen, Miss.:

Dear Brethren: I take pleasure in handing you the annual report of the work done in our Orphans' Home at Jackson, Miss., for the year 1919. From every standpoint the year has been a very successful and profitable one. The health of the Home has been almost perfect. Aside from the ordinary ailments of childhood, we have had only two or three cases of serious illness during the past 12 months and no fatalities, and at present writing there is not a case of illness in the Home. Our school curriculum has been raised this year to the standard of the graded schools of the city of Jackson and we are using the same books and doing the same work here which is being done in the city schools, and from this time forward our pupils completing our grammar school course can be admitted to the high school of the city of Jackson without conditions. We are this year giving our children instruction in instrumental music as in the past, and have introduced some phases of Industrial work, having at present two classes in sewing, besides canning club and poultry organizations among our girls. We have three pupils in high school this year, two of whom will graduate in the spring. Three of our girls are in college, two at Whitworth and one at Grenada. The expenses of these girls are being met by friends.

Our Sunday school, Epworth League and other services have been regularly held and have been both pleasant and profitable. During the year, through the kindness of friends, we purchased a bus for the farm which has not only made it possible for our boys on the farm to come into the Home to Sunday school, but from 25 to 30 of our boys and girls to attend services in the city churches every Sunday morning. Several of our children have united with the church this year. Our farm and truck patch have been successfully cultivated and we are beginning to realize the fruits of our labors in these two departments and our boys are being taught to cultivate skillfully the soil and care for live stock. In financial matters we are glad to report that a larger number of our Sunday schools and churches and individuals have been making regular monthly contributions to the support of our Home than ever before in its history. Not only has the number of contributions increased, but the generosity of these friends is markedly manifest. In view of the exorbitant prices on clothing and provisions which still prevail, and of the fact that we are still denied free cars and rebates on freight, this has been most gratifying to your board of directors. As a result of this thoughtfulness on the part of our friends, we have been able to make some needed improvements on the property and to meet our bills very promptly. During the year, 60 children have been admitted into our Home, 66 have gone into foster homes and we have at present 173 children under our care. The term of office of the following directors expires at this session of your Conference. We ask that these vacancies be filled: F. O. Holmes and V. C. Curtis.

We also ask that you confirm the election of Mrs. W. W. Scales, Jr., representative of the Woman's Missionary Society, as a member of your board of directors. Below is our financial report:

Balance on hand January 1, 1919, $11,943.90; total receipts from January 1 to November 1, 1919, $33,454.87; total disbursements, January to November, 1919, $35,005.26; balance on hand November 1, 1919, $10,393.51.

Fourth Day.

The fourth day's session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South dispatched numerous weighty items to-day and the Conference is approaching the close of an epochal session. Morning devotions were conducted by Rev. S. A. Steel, Mansfield, La. The feature of the morning session was the reception of the class in full connection into the traveling ranks of the Methodist Itinerancy and the fatherly counsel of Bishop Kilgo conveyed to these young ministers in his address. The class received after completing the two years' probationary period were: Julian Duncan, Oxford; Marvin Scott, Black Hawk, and John H. Robertson, Hollandale. In addressing the class, which stood at the chancel to take the vows, the Bishop said: "Young brethren, study the Bible and work for distinct conversions. Do not pattern after modern preachers who, instead of calling mourners, send a little pack of blue and white cards through the audience with the statement that you may sign these cards, I will take charge of the cards and mail them to the judgment and have them on tap when you get there."

Rev. Thomas H. Lipscomb said that one of the preachers had suffered the loss of his parsonage and household goods, including his library, but before he had finished, the ministers, laymen and women, had rushed to the chancel and filled the

This young man is breaking home ties.

He is going out into a world that has not been made safe for young people.

No soldier on any battle-line salient is exposed to so many perils as the young men and young women who go out from the old home without Jesus Christ.

If the Church fails to help them, will they win in the fight for character?

Let us go to the shops, the offices, the schools, and the streets, and constrain the sons and daughters of millions of homes to join a Bible class in the Sunday school.

WISE PRESCRIPTIONS.

By Adelbert F. Caldwell.

If you feel a harsh word coming,
Don't expose yourself, but say
Something pleasant in a twinkling.
Anger quiets right away.

If you feel a frown appearing ('Tis a remedy worth while),
Think a happy thought—you've plenty,
Or enough to make you smile.

If you feel hard toward your fellows
(Maybe 'tisn't chronic now),
Seek to understand their motives:
It's worth trying, anyhow!

If you feel alone and friendless,
This prescription you should know,
Friends you have in rich abundance,
If a friend yourself you show.

If you feel things going criss-cross,
Don't complain with loud ado;
Make a self-examination—
P'rhaps the blame may rest with you!

CHIPS.

"Halloo, boy!"

"Halloo, man!" the answer came back quick as a flash.

"Stop a minute, will you?"

The boy stopped and turned about, grinning.

Mr. Arthur Milman, artist, had strolled beyond the village limits, looking for the picturesque to fill his sketch-book.

Catching sight of a tattered urchin, swinging an empty, tattered basket, it looked as if he'd found something to fill the bill, or rather a page of the book. The boy's face was keen, but full of a jolly good nature.

"What's your name, my son?"

"Chips!" the word came with a twinkle.

"Oh, I see! well, Chips, if you want to earn a quarter easily, you stand still a little while just as you are and let me make a picture of you."

Chips grinned in delighted appreciation, and the artist sketched away.

Chips was really a noted character—he was a monopolist. The men who owned the large wood-yard let him have all the kindlings. They were willing to do it without cost, in view of the fact that he was the mainstay of his mother, who was too feeble for much work. But Chips was no beggar; he meant to do business on business methods. Therefore, he paid a small price for the kindlings, and sold them out by the basketfuls, supplying most houses in the village.

Everybody liked Chips, he was so industrious, so kind to his mother, so ready to give and take a joke. He had a gay word for every housewife or servant maid; he grabbed off his cap and said, "Thank you," with rough politeness, every time he was paid for the kindlings.

It may be thought strange that other urchins did not poach on Chips' preserves. Indeed, it was tried once or twice, but Chips could fight as well as work, and he pounced on the offenders in a fashion not to be desired. After that, the manager of the wood-yard, wishing to give the boy the best chance, and not being devoid of humor himself, posted the following notice:

"The owners of this yard have sold the right to deal in kindlings to Richard Holmes, otherwise known as 'Chips.', Any one trespassing on these grounds will be handed over to the police!"

So Chips was really a monopolist, though he didn't know it until Mr. Milman, the artist, said so, after Chips had explained his ocupation.

Mr. Milman took a great liking to the boy, and one day he said to him, "I'm going back to the city pretty soon, and all winter long I'm to paint pictures. There are several things I'd like to put such a boy as you in. You could learn to take care of my rooms, and then pose for me when I needed you I'd give you let's see", Mr. Milman thought a minute, and then named a sum that made Chips' eyes dance.

"Think it over, and ask your mother."

Chips' face fell at the word "mother."

Chips marched off, frowning hard. That night he lay awake—an unheard-of proceeding. One thing he resolved. "I'll not trouble mother with it till I've settled it myself." It was not the first time he had shielded her from anxiety. Toward morning he went off to sleep.

When he awoke and had plunged his towsled head in cold water, everything cleared up. He knew!

It was like him to go straight to Mr. Milman.

"Well?" the artist asked.

"I've thought it over, sir! I'd like to go, but mother couldn't spare me. Yes, sir, I know it's big money to what I get now, but it's just this a-way. You wants me three months, say. Then I comes back, an' some other boy has my place, 'cause they can't have the kindlin' litterin' round. An' the wood-yard man has promised me a place 's quick 's I'm big enough so it's slow an' sure. But it's mother mostly. She'd grieve every minute. 'Tain't like she was strong. Thank you, sir, but I've 'cided."

There were pretty nearly tears in the honest eyes. Mr. Milman grasped the boy's hand; he never wanted so much to paint him as that moment.

"I'm proud of you," was what he said, "and when I come back next year we'll make up for what we can't do this winter, eh?"

As the boy turned away, the artist thought to himself, "Chips has a good head and a good heart."—Morning Star.

A WISE DOG.

There is a story of a French dog whose breakfast was forgotten, whereupon he ran out into the garden, and carried in a flower, which he deposited at his master's feet. It was a sprig of forget-me-not. The truth of this story is perhaps open to question, but a story almost as remarkable comes from a Florida correspondent whose veracity is undoubted. Jack is a handsome Newfoundland dog. Every evening at nine o'clock he is taken to walk by his master, who has an orange-wood walkingstick which he particularly likes and usually carries.

Every evening on the stroke of nine Jack rushes to the hat rack in the hall, noses about among the walking sticks and umbrellas, until he finds the orange-wood stick and immediately afterward appears before his master carrying it in his teeth. He wags his tail and prances delightedly about and shows as plainly as possible that he will be a broken-hearted dog if his friend and master omits the usual evening stroll

One evening the family were in the sitting room with some guests. A shower had come up, and it was raining hard when the clock struck nine. The strokes had hardly died away when Jack danced gayly into the room with the orange-wood stick in his mouth.

"No, Jack," said his master, "we cannot go to-night. It is raining too hard. We should get wet. Just listen to it rain, Jack."

With that the host turned his attention once more to his guests, and presently they heard Jack pulling over the things in the hat rack. They supposed he was putting away the walking stick like the clever dog that he is.

A few moment. later a beseeching little bark was heard. There in the sitting room door stood Jack.

He had an umbrella in his mouth. Every one flew for the rubbers, waterproof and hat of the man of the house, and that gentleman, bearing the umbrella so persuasively offered him, took Jack out to walk without further delay. Youth's Companion.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The longed-for opportunity to visit the North Mississippi Conference came with its annual meeting in the beautiful and historic city of Aberdeen, November 19. Our desire to see this Conference in session was all the keener because we had been denied the privilege last year on account of the epidemic of influenza, which made only an executive session possible.

An all-night journey from New Orleans, by way of Durant, was fully compensated for by the genial companionship of Rev. W. E. Thomas, superintendent of our missionary work in New Orleans, and the cordial greeting we received from friends, old and new, upon our arrival at Aberdeen. The pleasure of our stay was made perfect by hospitable entertainment in the home of Hon. and Mrs. G. J. Leftwich, where we were so fortunate as to have as fellow-guests Dr. Jno. W. Boswell, one of the grand old men of Methodism, and Messrs. Jones and Stokes, two leading laymen of the Conference.

There was an air of sadness throughout the Conference and the community on account of the recent death of Rev. J. E. Thomas, the beloved pastor of our church at Aberdeen, but Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, the presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, assisted by an efficient committee, left nothing undone for the comfort and convenience of visitors.

A full account of the proceedings of the Conference appears in this issue of the Advocate; we shall not, therefore, speak of the items of business that were transacted in the course of the busy sessions. We cannot refrain, however, from mentioning the courtesies we received at the hands of Rev. J. W. Dorman, the chairman of the Board of Christian Literature, and those associated with him in promoting this vital interest of the church. It was our privilege to have a part on the program at the Anniversary of this Board on Friday afternoon. Our remarks were given kindly attention, and there was evidence that the circulation of the Conference organ will be faithfully looked after during the coming year.

The North Mississippi is a great Conference, strong in its personnel, rich in its history, opulent in its resources, and devoted to the historic standards of Methodism. We regretted exceedingly that we were not able to stay till the close of its sessions.

collection plates full of the "coin of the realm" for Rev. W. L. Graves of Montpeller, who had sustained the loss. Mr. Graves thanked the Conference for the unsolicited offering which came as an expression of love and appreciation from many sources and hands.

Rev. W. M. Young presented a purse to Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, who goes to assume his duties as professor in the department of liberal arts in Emory University. Dr. Lipscomb has served three years as presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, and this token of high esteem and appreciation from his brethren is an evidence of their profound admiration for him as a man, as a minister and servant of God who cannot be swept from its orbit by any of the fads and fancies of modern materialism.

The question of moving up the time for the Annual Conference following a request to the Bishops was defeated by a substitute offered by Rev. W. C. Curtis. The substitute offered is the most brief of any resolution that has ever been acted upon by this body and is as follows: "Resolved, that we request our Bishops to hold our Annual Conference about the first week in November." Rev. J. R. Stephens, G. L. Jones and Rev. H. G. Roberts defended the original motion, but the substitute prevailed by a close margin.

This afternoon an inspiring and helpful sermon was delivered by Rev. J. H. Shumaker, Nashville, formerly a member of this Conference. Mr. Shumaker goes to Kosciusko to preach Sunday night, where he spent a pleasant pastorate many years ago. To-night the Conference Board of Education held its anniversary. The principal address was made by Dr. H. N. Snyder, president of Wofford College, his subject being, "Christian Education."

There was to-day considerable discussion among the brethren as to the indorsement or rejection of the well-known "revival programme" announced some time ago through the Department of Evangelism at Nashville. The Conference went on record as favoring the plans which each pastor might inaugurate without regard to any other. The letter from the College of Bishops strongly emphasizes the sovereign and supreme power of the Holy Spirit in bringing about a revival campaign and a strong resolution presented by the Rev. Thomas H. Lipscomb was adopted unanimously:

"To the Members of the North Mississippi Conference:

"Dear Fathers and Brethren: Whereas our College of Bishops has seen fit, in their godly judgment, to issue the church a call to humiliation, prayer and earnest evangelistic efforts to stem the tides of ungodliness and sin which now run high in church and State; and,

"Whereas, we recognize the timeliness of this message and rejoice in its spiritual insight, depth and genuineness, thoroughly in accord with historic and apostolic doctrine and practice; be it

"Resolved, first, by the North Mississippi Conference, That we appreciate greatly this deliverance, and commit ourselves unreservedly to such type of orthodox evangelical preaching and ministry as is indicated therein.

"Resolved, second, That we recognize in our chief pastors, our ordained and we believe divinely chosen spiritual overseers, and that we rejoice in their leadership under God, as provided in the economy of Southern Methodism.

"Resolved, third, That we recognize that to us as preachers and pastors is committed the supreme responsibility for the spiritual oversight of our respective charges under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and our rights and responsibilities we would guard against aggression from any sources which tend to make of us mere cogs in an ecclesiastical machine dominated and directed by outside agencies, to a degree destructive of individual initiative and intimate communion with the great Head of the church.

"Resolved, fourth, That we look with distrust and disfavor upon all plans which conspicuously fail to emphasize the fundamental doctrines which alone inspire Christian experience and faith, especially when such plans are accompanied by unsound official publications, boasting even that in the coming revival 'the ancient creeds and dogmas will not be brought out of the limbo of neglected things and set up as controlling principles,' and that 'there will be few tears and no shouting at all' in the approaching Pentecost.

"Resolved, fifth, That we repudiate as anti-Christian such utterances as the above quoted from 'the Centenary Bulletin' for July, 1919, page 11, under the caption, 'The Centenary Revival,' and that we affirm our faith, evidenced by history and experience, that there are no principles which can control the consciences of men, convert sinners and bring men to God other than the ancient New Testament principles of historic orthodox Christianity expressed in the creeds of Christendom, the articles of religion and the general rules of our church. We should like to inquire when and by whom any new creeds, principles or gospel have been formulated? And when and where they have been tested and found more effective in regenerating humanity than the old?

"Resolved, sixth, That we cannot co-operate with a plan plainly antagonistic to and repudiative of historic Methodism and evangelical Christianity, and we cannot approve or take part in revival efforts which effect chiefly an increase of membership. In this matter we entirely agree with the position of our Bishops. Our chief aim must be the regeneration of sinners and the edification of saints.

"Resolved, seventh, That we recommend that each presiding elder at the beginning of the new year call the preachers together for a special session of Bible study, examination, consecration and prayer, with the settlement of power from on high that the spiritual life of our churches may everywhere be quickened and revival fires of gospel christianity run Conference.

"Resolved, ninth, That pastoral services be held in every charge and church throughout our bounds at such seasons as may be deemed best, announced, and so far as may be practicable by the pastor and that everywhere midweek services in prayer meeting, Sunday-school, preaching services shall regard be made to come and to find in this hour when the world so sorely needs the wisdom and strength and pardon the divine ministry, that people meet in classes for prayer, to this end, and that the evangelistic literature offered publishers be read by our members and in our homes.

"Resolved, tenth, That these resolutions be adopted as a pledge of the fidelity to the principles given which, under God, we present our work for means to invite gracious [illegible] of God upon the labor in His name." Signed by John C. Kilgo, bishop; Thos. H. Lipscomb, R. A. Meek, T. H. Harvey, L. M. Lipscomb, J. H. Holder, W. W. Mitchell, W. L. Duren, W. C. Curtis, presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference.

Sullivan.

Fifth Day (Sunday)—Memorial Session.

Aberdeen was the center of religious activities in North Mississippi on Sunday. Hundreds of visitors reached the city on the late trains yesterday and on the early trains to-day to hear the sermon of Bishop John C. Kilgo, president of the 50th session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference and easily one of America's most distinguished pulpit orators.

The memorial session of the Conference this afternoon was the only session to-day, as ordination of deacons and elders and the annual love feast with the various preaching services featured the day. The old-time love feast began at 9 o'clock this morning, in which bread and water were taken by laymen, ministers, women and children alike not as a sacrament, but according to the ancient custom of the Methodists that has been practiced down through the centuries since the memorable days of John and Charles Wesley in England.

Rev. D. W. Babb presided and Rev. John Ritchie led in prayer. The audience sang such old-time songs as "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing," "Amazing Grace," "I Am Bound for the Promised Land" and "Old Time Religion," the chorus rolling on with increasing volume and fervor as hundreds of ministers and laymen stood and testified to the saving and preserving power of the grace of an Almighty Jehovah.

The First Methodist Church was taxed to its capacity before 11 o'clock, at which time Bishop Kilgo appeared and announced the song from the Methodist Hymnal, "Come, Oh, My Soul, in Sacred Lays, Attempt Thy Great Creator's Praise," after which the first and second lessons were read. The Bishop's text was taken from the 15th chapter of First Corinthians, the subject being, "Death, the Last Great Enemy, Shall Be Conquered." Vain would be any attempt to report adequately the occasion or to attempt to describe the effect of the Bishop's powerful logic, compelling arguments from God's Word or to portray his eloquent and irresistible presentations of truth dealing with the life that now is and that which is to come. There were those present who pronounced the Bishop's sermon to-day the greatest one they had ever listened to.

At the close of the morning service a class composed of eight young ministers were ordained deacons. At the close of the sermon to-night the class of elders was ordained. Rev. James H. Felts, pastor of the First Church of Columbus, preached the sermon at the First Methodist Church to-night.

Other leading ministers of the Conference filled the pulpits of the other churches as was previously announced.

Dr. R. A. Meek, presiding elder, Sardis District, presided at the memorial session this afternoon. Papers were read and loving and affectionate tributes paid the memory of the following saintly preachers who have gone to their reward during the past year: J. A. Bowen, Tupelo; T. G. Freeman, Grenada; J. H. Mitchell, Greenwood; H. C. Edmondson, Iuka; J. E. Thomas, Aberdeen.

Ministers and laymen who had known each through the long years of faithful service reviewed their records of unfaltering devotion and spoke words of love and kindness in behalf of the sainted dead.

The laymen at this session of the Conference have announced their desire, through G. L. Jones and W. E. Stokes, of being helpful in bringing up the already subscribed Centenary quota.

The Conference has been delighted by the sweet and inspiring music rendered by the choir during the sessions. The choir is composed of Mmes. W. M. Hatch, Donie Dykes Napier, J. H. Haughton, Preston Cornelius, Homer Hansel, Misses Willie Cunningham, Janie Maier, R. M. Boyd, Frankie Hill, Annie McFarland, Mr. W. B. McCluny, Neal McCaskill, assisted by Revs. J. H. Robertson, E. R. Smoot, C. T. Floyd, W. A. Bowlin, O. L. Savage, R. P. Neblett, Mrs. E. R. Smoot, and others.

During the Conference a pennant was delivered to Mrs. H. L. Talbert, Clarksdale, elementary superintendent of the Greenville District, for bringing her district the first to third rank standard. Mrs. Talbert is the elementary superintendent of the Clarksdale Sunday school. Two young ministers of the Conference who have had splendid revivals this year and reached their respective Centenary quotas are Revs. James D. Wroten, Ripley, and Olin Ray, Macon.

One of the preachers, Rev. G. W. Gordon, is very ill at the home of his Conference host, having taken ill with influenza since coming to Aberdeen. Prayers were requested for him at the memorial session this afternoon.

SIXTH DAY.

The final legislation of the 50th annual session of the North Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, embraced an extra session to-day, adjourning late to-night. The 1920 session will go to Charleston, upon invitation of Rev. John T. Lewis, and citizens.

Rev. A. C. McCorkle was appointed campaign manager for the superannuate endowment fund of the Conference, and will enter upon this newly created department of work at once.

The Board of Missions precipitated a lively debate upon the Conference floor by recommending in its report that the attitude of the Conference toward the new "inter-church world movement" "be sympathetic and helpful," and that two members of this body be sent as representatives to a convention called by this new organization to meet soon in Jackson, Miss.

Those favoring the recommendation in speeches were Revs. B. P. Jaco, E. Nash Broyles, James T. McCafferty, C. D. McGehee, E. S. Lewis, J. R. Countiss, Hon. Geo. J. Leftwich. Those opposing the measure were R. A. Meek, O. W. Bradley, W. L. Duren, W. W. Mitchell, John Ritchie, J. H. Felts and T. H. Lipscomb. A vote was taken and the amendment to eliminate that portion which recommended sending delegates prevailed and the Conference went on record as having no connection whatsoever with the Interchurch World Movement.

After the discussion and vote the Bishop took occasion to express himself freely concerning the movement, advising that the College of Bishops had already decided that the M. E. Church, South, could not fraternize with this organization.

A special collection to raise $4,000 for Millsaps College in each of the two Mississippi Conferences was announced and a subscription covering about $1,000 taken. An advisory board, consisting of one layman for each district, was constituted, as follows: Walter Rogers, New Albany; W. E. Stokes, Macon; R. E. Wilbourne, Lexington; J. G. McGowan, Water Valley; Herbert Holmes, Senatobia; H. L. Wilkinson, Cleveland; Geo. Stokely, Drew; W. T. Reeves, Tupelo.

Various Boards submitted their reports, which were adopted. Announcement of the meeting of the efficiency conference to meet in Grenada early in June was made.

The assignment of the ministers for the following year was read by the Bishop, after which the Conference adjourned with prayer.

LET HIM PASS.

If you say to yourself, "I will be a traveler, a statesman, an engineer," if you never unsay it, if you bend all your powers in that direction, if you take advantage of all helps that come in your way and reject all that do not, you will some time reach your goal. For the world turns aside to let any man pass who knows whither he is going.—East and West.

Never mind whereabouts your work is. Never mind whether it be visible or not. Never mind whether your name is associated with it. You may never see the issue of your toils. If you can not see results here in the hot working day, the cool evening hours are drawing near, when you may rest from your labors and then they may follow you. So do your work and trust God to give the seed you sow "a body as it hath pleased him."—Alexander Maclaren.

Mrs. [illegible] was born November 10, 1869. She departed this life October 17, 1919. She was married to W. P. [illegible] March 6, 1888. To this union were born nine children, four girls and five boys, all living. Sister [illegible] leaves a husband and all the children, the elder and two brothers and numerous relatives to mourn her departure. She professed religion in 1898, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South the same year, and was forever afterward, to the day of her translation to her home above, true to the teachings of her Lord and the church. Sister [illegible] was one of the most consistent members of the church that the writer ever knew. True to her Lord, devoted family and friend, true to every one. She lived the prayer life and believed that men "ought always to pray and not to faint." She lived and taught the same. The dear sister had for about two years suffered an irreparable loss when her self came to Sister Lucy to answer to the roll call in heaven. On October 19, the writer conducted the funeral assisted by Rev. W. B. Ellsworth, of Meadville, Miss. In the presence of a large congregation we committed her body to the earth to await the resurrection morning. May the good Lord sustain and keep her dear loved ones so that ultimately they can all meet and hold a happy reunion in Heaven, that will last forever. So, keep on, dear ones; we will see you again—we know where to find you. Her pastor, J. W. PEICE.

Perth, Miss., Nov. 1, 1919.

J. W. McGAHA was born in Madison County, Ala., May 7th, 1852. He moved to Arkansas, Miss., in 1877, and to Issaqueena County, Miss., in 1900, where he lived until his death January 18, 1919, at his home, near Carrsdale. He first married Mrs. Sallie Longer, in 1878. After her death, he married Miss Bettie Frazier, in 1896. He had six children by his first marriage and three by his last. Three of the former and two of the latter, together with his wife, nee Miss Frazier, survive him. He joined the Methodist Church in early manhood and lived a consistent member and a devout Christian ever afterward. The writer knew him intimately and does not think that he was ever associated with a purer character than he. He was one of the few men who ever manage large plantations in the Delta with negro labor and retain their piety. And this he did. It was his custom all of his married life to hold family prayers twice a day. He was loyal to his church, true to God and humanity, and affectionate with his family. And all who knew him well, loved him. J. H. PORTER.

Victoria, Miss., Nov. 4, 1919.

JAMES GRAHAM, after a life of 70 years on earth, has gone to heaven. He was born, lived and died in Wayne County, Mississippi. He was a man of choice traits. He loved his country, his church, his family and his God. He was one of the most faithful friends a pastor ever had—ever manifested it on many occasions. He was a steward in the Methodist Church—of which he had been a member over forty years. His sweetest pleasure was in service to his home and church. He was married to Mrs. Minnie Chapman, who shared his burdens and sweetened his life—and in his translation is left with five children and two brothers to mourn his earthly separation from a faithful husband, a loving father, and a true brother. In early life he accepted the Canonical principles of a Christian life, among which was daily prayer in the home, which altar abided until death. Dear ones of the home of the deceased, remember the words of the Comforter in those that mourn, and don't forget to pray. Be faithful to God, to the church and to humanity, the kindest and best thing you can do for the dear one gone. He shall live in the hearts of the good as long as memory lasts. He shall live with God. Let us meet him there. The writer of this has known the deceased for about fifty years, and was present at his death bed. He died as he lived, a Christian.

His pastor, J. M. [illegible]

Since our last meeting we have had the addition to our club—Miss Mary Reese, from Jackson, Miss.

The club is very anxious that every Mississippian shall know more about this training school. It really is worth the consideration of every one. We have a club, would be glad to get into touch with every Missionary Society in the State. Working together we can accomplish greater things for our Master than working separately.

Instead of short mite from Mississippi, make it fifteen for the new year. Let's work and pray to that end. Sincerely,

SAVING SOCIETY.

The sooner the church of Christ recognizes her true place in the winning of the world to Christ, the sooner will the world be saved. The opposite is true too, for the longer we give heed to such erroneous teaching, the longer shall we be in seeing the lost find Christ. No such thing is known in human nature as a real raise of the wholesale saving of society save as that society may be brought to Christ, one by one, and in Christ's way. Perhaps you may think that I have editors are unnecessarily alarmed. No, we are not needlessly alarmed. There is cause for alarm. There are many members of the gospel who are going around talking of saving society as a body. That can be done only when the individual members of that society shall first come to Christ.

It is the gospel that saves the individual one by one and nothing else will. If man is to be and all this talk of salvation of the community in any other way is mere talk. In any man point [illegible] where society has been saved as a wholesale way as a community. Nay—the plan of the gospel—her is not provided for.—Herald of Gospel Liberty

CHANCES WITH CHILDREN.

A great deal of incidental seed-sowing of truth among the children may be done by an earnest and tactful Christian man or woman as the little folks are encountered every here and there on the streets or in the conveyances. "Here a little and there a little" ought to be the inspirational precept of our religious pedagogy. Many a child will listen respectfully or even eagerly to some apt remark or pertinent illustration or beautiful story which conveys a moral meaning in a perfectly natural and unforced way. It is not really difficult to gain or perhaps also retain the interest of the young folks, but the real problem is what to do with that interest when once stirred up. There are ways, which a little practice will multiply, of making good things appear attractive to children, and of instilling into their minds, in brief, chance interviews, seed truths which will germinate in future years. The word opportunely spoken, in the plastic period of childhood or youth, may do more good than ten or a hundred words uttered later than the adolescent period. It will take time, and some self-denials, thus to improve, or it may be to hunt up occasions for the moral instruction and inspiration of the children, but such work is just the task indicated by Jesus Christ, who suffered the children to come unto Him. Half of us neglect inexcusably and lamentably numerous occasions for guiding and instructing our juniors. The chances with children to be improved are not really fortuitous, but providential openings. Let not then the poorest or unlikeliest child in the community fail of timely and sufficient moral help from somebody. And what if that somebody ought to be you?—Zion's Herald.

MY PEOPLE PERISH.

A Conference Missionary Secretary stated in our office last week that in his Conference there were fifty preachers short of actual demands. He further said that it would require at least thirty recruits each year for the next five years i norder to redeem the lost ground and to meet the advance requirements. The figures of this Conference may be larger than the average but the situation is a universal one.

If this is the situation facing the ministry at home, what about the demands for workers to man the strategic centers opening on the foreign fields? Shall there be any lack of response for men when the church begins to give of its money?

"My people perish for lack of knowledge." We are preaching the need for workers and giving the great commission as a basis for their response. But if our faith was adequate to meet the demands which we feel, or as large as the needs we picture, we would be swamped with volunteers for every available service.

Our people at home will perish and heathen nations will continue to perish unless our people have a more certain knowledge of world conditions. An occasional sermon or address on missions is good, but no field of literary pursuit would be satisfied with less than real study.

Our present missionaries were led to their service by the inspiration which comes from study of world conditions. The volunteers on our waiting lists have been students of Missions. If there is a live Mission Study Class in your church, the missionary fires will glow and there will be volunteers for every service. Try it! Organize a Mission Study Class and write for help.

PROMINENT NEW YORK SURGEON TELLS WHY HE BELIEVES IN

NUXATED IRON

SAYS IT IS THE MOST VALUABLE TONIC, STRENGTH AND BLOOD-BUILDER ANY PHYSICIAN CAN PRESBRIBE

Dr Kenneth K MacAlpine
A Prominent New York Surgeon, Member New York State Medical Society and Former Adjunct Professor, New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital

"The great strain of the present time should make the public generally realize the necessity of fortifying the blood and nerve cells by means of strengthening upbuilding tonic," says Dr Kenneth K MacAlpine a prominent New York surgeon and medical authority. "If people would only realize that iron is just as indispensable to the blood as is air to the lungs and be just as particular about keeping up a sufficient supply at all times there would, in my opinion, be far less disease resulting from anaemic, weakened conditions. For years it was a problem with physicians how to administer iron in a form that could be taken up by the system and increase the red blood corpuscles without upsetting the stomach, blackening the teeth or producing other disorders almost as serious as the lack of iron itself. But the introduction of Nuxated Iron has done away with all the objectionable features

[illegible] oral salts of [illegible] and [illegible] prescription [illegible] day with [illegible] to his work, tired out run down [illegible]

"Nuxated Iron, by enriching the blood and creating new blood cells strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the worn-out tissues and helps to instill renewed energy into the whole system whether the patients be young or old. In my opinion, Nuxated Iron is the most valuable tonic strength and blood builder any physician can prescribe."

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test. See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron [illegible] a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike [illegible] does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is prepared by reputable druggists.

A "Dead Shot" —Says Minister

Black-Draught Given High Praise As a Stomach and Liver Medicine by Well-Known Old Gentleman who has Used It.

Mineola, Texas.—The Rev. M. G. Jenkins, a retired minister of the M. E. Church, South, living in this city, says: "I have used Black-Draught as a stomach and liver medicine, and have never found its equal.

Once I suffered for two months with cramps and pains; tried everything I could hear of without avail, hut Black-Draught was a "dead shot."

I am known here and all over the State for my honesty and truthfulness. I am 78 years old and have used Black-Draught for years.

I can highly recommend it to any one as a liver medicine that has no equal. It is excellent for stomach, liver and other ailments. I use it for a bad taste in the mouth, headache and other sicknesses that come from the disorders of the liver."

Thedford's Black-Draught is purely vegetable, and acts actively on the bowels, gently stimulating the liver, and helping to increase the normal discharge of hile into the intestines.

It assists in the digestion of food and relieves constipation in a prompt and natural way.

Try Black-Draught. Buy a package of Black-Draught to-day.—Adv.

ADDITIONAL RULINGS ON REINSTATEMENT.

A series of decisions isued by the Director of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury provides more liberal conditions for reinstatement of lapsed or cancelled insurance.

The provisions of Treasury Decision No. 47, allowing eighteen months from the date of discharge for reinstatement upon payment of only two months' premiums on the amount of insurance to be reinstated, are retained. That decision is liberalized, however, by a new provision that men out of the service are permitted to reinstate hy merely paying the two months' premiums without making a statement as to health at any time within three calendar months following the month of discharge.

After the three months following the date of discharge have elaspsed, a statement from the applicant to the effect that he is in as good health as at the date of discharge or at the expiration of the grace period, whichever is the later date, will be required together with a written application for reinstatement and the tender of two months' premiums on the amount of insurance he wishes to reinstate.

In order to give all former service men whose insurance has lapsed or been cancelled, a fair chance to reinstate their insurance, including men who have been out of the service eighteen months or more, and who are therefore barred from reinstatement under the former ruling, a special blanket ruling is made which allows all ex-service men to reinstate their insurance before Decemher 31, 1919, provided that each applicant is in as good health as at date of discharge or at expiration of the grace period, whichever is the later date, and so states in his application. Of course it is necessary that he tender the two months' premiums on the amount of insurance he wishes to reinstate.

Service men who reinstated their insurance by payment of all back premiums prior to July 25, 1919, when the decision requiring payment of only two months' premiums went into effect, upon written application to the Bureau may have any premiums paid in excess of two applied toward the payment of future premiums. For example, if after a policy had lapsed for six months, a man reinstated and paid six months' premiums instead of two, he may secure credit for four months' premiums.

The provisions for reinstatement do not protect a man until he actually reinstates. If he waits, he may not he in as good health as he was at the time of discharge and consequently may not he ahle to secure reinstatement.

Don't put off reinstatement. Do it now!

When you make up your mind to get rid of disgusting Catarrh, follow this advice:

Go to your druggist; ask him for a HYOMEI Outfit (pronounced it High-o-me). DENATURED ALCOHOL.

Prohibition is revealing the wreckage wrought by liquor. Each year the legalized liquor traffic increased the number of degenerates, defectives, derelicts and alcoholics. The alcohol habit grew so strong that many habituals, when denied ordinary intoxicating liquor resorted to almost any kind of an alcoholic preparation. In some quarters these saloon-made victims are actually using diluted denatured alcohol for beverage purposes. Irresponsible druggists and other dealers have been selling denatured alcohol under such circumstances as to assure them it is used for beverage purposes. This brings on the most terrible results. If it is used for any length of time, blindness inevitably follows and its continued use results in death.

The Revenue Department has just issued a circular calling attention to the fact that denatured alcohol should not be sold for bathing or rubbing purposes, as it is highly injurious to the skin and animal tissues. The new regulation of the Department (T. D. 2914) requires on all new labels, after September 1, the printing in large letters in red ink under skull and bones symbol, the word POISON and at the bottom of label there will be printed the following:

"Completely Denatured Alcohol is a violent poison. It cannot be applied externally to human or animal tissue without seriously injurious results. It cannot be taken internally without inducing blindness and general physical decay, ultimately resulting in death."

This new order proves the necessity of safe-guarding most carefully the manufacture and sale of non-beverage liquors under prohibition. It is practically impossible to frame a law to prevent every degenerate from using a legitimate alcoholic compound for beverage purposes. It is equally inexcusable to enact a law which affords an easy means for diverting non-beverage alcoholic preparations to illegal beverage uses. The proposed prohibition code will reach many of these evasions that are now possible under existing laws.

In the light of these evasions and illegal uses of non-beverage alcohol, there is good reason for strengthening the pending Prohibition Code. It would be inexcusable further to weaken it.

Colds Cause Headaches and Pains

Feverish Headaches and Body Pains caused from a cold are soon relieved by taking LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE Tablets. There is only one "Bromo Quinine." E. W. GROVE'S signature on the box. 30c.

A WRONG AIM AND MOTIVE.

Weariness in well doing frequently becomes a stumbling block with serious consequences to character. It is emphasized by failure to keep the aim and motive for service in the foreground. Most excellent people sometimes, not through the cares of this world, but because of the cares of the church, fall into serious temptations. Service for humanity and as an expression of the Christian spirit becomes service for the church. With increasing efficiency comes a multitude of demands. Instead of recognizing these as an appreciation of value, they become a burden and often result in resentment.

Members of the family think that their loved ones are imposed. Self-pity follows very close, and with it comes a bitterness of spirit. The joy of service is lost. It is not easy for an active Christian to be always able to say with St. Paul, as translated by Weymouth, "But even the sacrifice of my life I count as nothing if only I may perfect my earthly course and be faithful to the duty which the Lord Jesus has entrusted to me of proclaiming as of supreme importance the good news of God's grace."—California Christian Advocate.

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. An [illegible] for this Department should be sent to Mrs. J. O. Shelling [illegible] Franklinton, La.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Not "Under a Bushel."

For below we are showing the report of the Franklinton Missionary Society as it was published in the Franklinton local paper. There is much reading matter in many papers that is not worth while; why not crowd it out with good things? Publicity of the right sort is our bounden duty. Let us have in every auxiliary an intelligent and industrious woman who shall watch for every opportunity to instruct and interest people in the Kingdom of God through the secular press.

The Woman's Missionary Society sent in its financial report to the Fourth Quarterly Conference held by Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District. We were [illegible] grateful to have Brother May say it was the best report he had yet heard. The budget for the year just entered four hundred ($400) dollars.

We feel, though, that the financial part is only secondary. Our spiritual development, especially in the number of praying members and willing workers, is what we are most thankful for. Our membership is larger and the attendance better than it has ever been before. Every department is at work except the Young People's Society, which work is carried on by the Epworth League. We have a fine League in the church.

Our Junior Society received the blue ribbon for being the best in the district and is second best in the State.

Our Mission Study class exceeds in attendance and interest any class that we have had before.

We have an active Superintendent of Social Service who looks after our community needs. We have packed and sent three boxes and will send another to St. Mark's Hall. Thanksgiving, which goes to show how busy the Superintendent of Supplies has been.

Every Wednesday is a red letter day for us. The first Wednesday we meet at the home of some member, at which time we have the Missionary Program from the Yearbook. The second and fourth Wednesdays the Mission Study Class meets, and the third Wednesday is for the business meeting. We plan something special for the fifth Wednesdays.

It is hard to understand how the other women of our church can get along without attending these meetings. The pleasant social intercourse, and the spiritual uplift which come from a consciousness of knowing we are about our Father's business, amply repays us for one afternoon a week thus spent. Very respectfully yours,

MRS J. L. BROCK,
Corresponding Secretary.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Missionary Conference held its annual meeting in the splendid little city of Shubuta, November 13-14.

The opening service was held Thursday night at 7 o'clock. After a most impressive devotional period conducted by the pastor, Dr. W. H. Huntley, a splendid address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. R. M. Hand, of the local society, to which response was made by Mrs. Wylie J. Ferguson, of Meridian, in her usual forceful and happy manner.

The principal address of the evening was given by Miss Ella Wayne Ormond, District Secretary, who brought to her hearers an unusually stirring and impressive message.

On Friday morning at 9 o'clock, the first business session was held, with Miss Ella Wayne Ormond of Meridian in the chair.

The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. J. L. Peebles, who gave a very timely and helpful talk on the 6th chapter of Ephesians.

The morning session was devoted largely to hearing reports from the auxiliaries, twelve of which had delegates in attendance. Some societies which had no delegate present had sent written reports, while others, which had neither delegate nor written report, were represented by the District Secretary, who had kept in close touch with the work during the year.

Reports of the Week of Prayer were fine, while reports from the Young People's and Junior Societies and Baby Divisions showed that those fields have not been altogether neglected.

That the emphasis which has been placed throughout the district during the year, on Stewardship and Mission Study has been productive of large results was apparent from reports on that subject.

An opportunity for round-table discussion being afforded, many bright and helpful ideas were exchanged by delegates who talked enthusiastically and wisely of their work.

Mrs. L. W. Smith, of Shubuta, delivered a strong address on the important subject of "Life Service."

Special attention was directed to the need of the following mission fields: Africa, Brazil, China, Cuba, Japan, Korea and Mexico.

The afternoon session was begun with a very impressive devotional period conducted by Mrs. G. H. Thompson, following which, addresses were delivered as follows:

"Intercession or Prayer Circles," Mrs. T. J. Norsworthy.

"Evangelism," Mrs. Daniels.

"Teaching and Practicing Tithing," Mrs. W. H. Huntley.

The Wesley House was represented by Mrs. W. J. Ferguson.

The evening session was devoted to the discussion of vital topics. Mrs. G. H. Thompson discussed the work of her department, Study and Publicity. Mrs. Ferguson talked of "A New Day For Missions."

Too much cannot be said in appreciation of the hospitality of the good people of Shubuta, or of the untiring efforts of Dr. and Mrs. Huntley, whose presence meant so much to the success of the meeting.

The meeting was a most helpful and delightful one and a large source of help to all who attended it.

SECRETARY.

OCTOBER BULLETIN OF ST. MARK'S HALL.

There was an excellent attendance at the monthly meeting of the Board of City Missions at Rayne Memorial. While all of the offices are still not filled, yet the reports of the chairmen of committees are very encouraging. Members of the executive committee were elected and altogether, the board is in better shape than ever before.

Notes of Interest.

The fall classes have been organized at the Hall, and already there are more volunteer helpers than at any time last year. This always means an increased attendance.

Camp Fire meetings have been changed to Saturday night because of night school. Seven of the group are thus keeping the law, "Pursue Knowledge."

The Junior Missionary Club had a pleasant walk to Bethany Home, where they sang hymns for a "shut-in" and her friends. It was hard to decide who was the happier—children or hostess.

The total attendance at the clinic this month came very near the one thousand mark. This includes patients, vaccination cases and visitors.

The enrollment of boys in wood-work classes is excellent. The Basket Ball Club was victorious in a game against Troop 34 Boy Scouts, and also won over the night school boys of Wiltz Gymnasium. They are now ambitious for a place in the city league. The enrollment of boys in all departments is 121.

A travel talk on Mexico by Miss Blanel was given to the members of the Mother's Club. Twenty-five were present.

Epworth.

The members of the Italian League had a pleasant Halloween social at St. Mark's Hall. There were about forty present. The program was well planned, and entered into most heartily. The evening closed by singing the American and Italian national anthems.

The following evening the Scouts and Camp Fire Girls with their friends celebrated Halloween. There were about fifty in this group.

Supplies.

Thirteen boxes from all over the State have been sent in. Auxiliaries: Jackson, box clothing; St. Francisville, clothing; Slidell, box boys' clothing; Plaquemine, clothing; Colfax, box canned fruit; Franklinton, clothing; Many, box of towels; Algiers, clothing; Pelican (S. S. Class), clothing, fruit, quilt; Second Church, New Orleans, clothing; Burlington, W. Va., box of new clothing, Young People's Society, Mansfield, clothing; Monroe, curtains for entire house.

Thanksgiving donations for baskets will be acceptable.

STATISTICS.

Number of visits made, 423; number of visits received, 513; number of visits to institutions, 20; letters and cards written, 26; enrollment of girls, 91; enrollment of boys, 121.

Wonderful Egg Producer.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

Try This For Your Health

For diseases which do not readily yield to drug treatment, such as chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, uric acid poisoning, and diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and liver, the best physicians send their wealthy patients to the famous mineral springs. Some even spent months at the Spas of Europe and were almost invariably benefited, or permanently relieved.

I believe that the Shivar Spring is the greatest mineral spring ever discovered, and I believe it so firmly that I offer to send you enough water for a three week's treatment (two five gallon demijohns) on my guarantee that if it falls to benefit your case I will refund the price. You would hardly believe me if I told you that only about two out of a hundred, on the average, say that they have received no benefit. The water is restoring thousands. It restored my health when my friends and physicians thought my case was incurable and I am willing and anxious for you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If I win you become a life-friend of the Spring. If I lose I will be sorry for you but I will appreciate your courtesy in giving the water a trial and will gladly refund your money on request. Sign the following letter:

Shivar Spring,

Box 17-E, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

Sage and Sulphur Darkens Gray Hair

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—Adv.

A WINTER IN FOREST CAVES.

How one European woman, with the aid of American missionaries, was able to save the lives of several hundred Armenians for many months, has been reported by a Near East Relief worker who is now caring for the suffering people in Turkey.

For an entire winter, several hundred Armenians hid in the forests near Trebizond. They made their homes in the caves and the ever watchful Turks in the town nearby did not permit them to come out of their hiding place even to get food and water. The Turks knew there were Armenians hiding somewhere in the vicinity and as this was the winter before the war ended, the American missionaries who remained at their posts did not dare to make any noticeable move to help the suffering refugees.

Often during the winter a woman would sneak through the Turkish guards and get to the American mission at Trebizond. When granted an interview with one of the missionaries, she would pull from some part of her ragged clothing a crumpled scrap of paper. On it would be written, "We are persons concealed in the woods. For the love of God send us money by this woman to save us from starvation."

When the town was bombarded by the Russians, many of the people from Trebizond fled to the surrounding villages. Among them was a European woman Madame Josephine, who had married in the east. She learned of the condition of these hidden Armenians and resolved to give them aid.

It is said that when Madame Josephine was first told of the horrible conditions under which these people were living, she fainted. She recovered, however, and worked out a plan by which she could prevent death of these refugees from starvation. It was she who made regular visits to the American Mission for aid.

Any large movement of food into the forest would have at once alarmed the Turkish watchers and not only would Madame Josephine have lost her life but probably all of the little group would have been put to death. An estimate was made of the amount of corn meal necessary to keep these people alive and money for this was supplied to the European woman. She arranged with peasants to bake the corn meal and send the bread into the forest. At no time was more food sent than might be taken for a supply of one family.

Many times during the winter Madame Josephine made trips to the American mission on foot or on horseback to obtain funds for carrying forward her relief work. Dressed as a peasant she excited no suspicion among the Turkish soldiers and thus was able to obtain the funds which kept this band of Armenians alive.

In addition to food, she carried bundles of clothing to the forest caves and on one trip the bundle contained clothes for a new-born baby, who got her first glimpse of this world amid all of the suffering of this cave life in mid-winter.

The little company was kept from death by hunger and exposure until April when the allied armies captured Trebizond and the people were permitted to come out of their hiding places.

The American missionaries who remained at their posts during the war were the first to give relief to the suffering Armenians, but there were few of them and the suffering was so great that they were absolutely unable to cope with the situation. They are now co-operating with the Near East Relief in its work of mercy among these Christian people.

THE COST OF FEAR.

"The main business of the war has been destruction and its chief motive has been fear," says Clarence H. Howard in a recent publication, "But its lessons will bring incalculable good. It has given us such a vision as we never had before of the total resources of the race and of masses power when even a portion of mankind bends its energies to the performance of a particular task.

"We are told by statisticians that the direct cost of the war has been about 175 billions of dollars or about $175 for every minute since Christ was born. And this under the chief motive of fear. The war has set a new standard for the future. It has shown us that the problem of bringing in the universal reign of fellowship and good will, of common effort for worthy purposes is simply a search for a motive.

"Think of the situation if only people would put rice and corn meal into the loaf instead of wheat flour, abstain from eating meat two or three days a week, cut down the sugar in the coffee cup, eat fruit canned instead of preserved, turn off an electric light except when absolutely needed and put every dollar's worth of saving into Government securities, and all in order that humanity might be given a better chance, that new opportunities might be put before our boys and girls, that men and women might be so trained and so inspired to new efforts for their own well-being that poverty and want and vice should become things of the past.

"Moved by the sense of fear, mankind has poured out $175 for every minute which has elapsed since the first Christmas Day at Bethlehem. And now how many minutes must humanity wait to see as large a portion of mankind exert itself as strongly, not under the whip and spur of fear, but in response to love and hope and fellowship?"

Eggs Paid The Pastor.

Mrs. Lena McBroon, Woodbury, Tenn., writes: "I've got more eggs than I ever did in my life, paid my debts, clothed the children in new dresses, and I paid by pastor his dues. I have money to spare now. 'More Eggs' is the remedy for me. I sold 42½ dozen eggs last week, set four dozen, ate some and had 1½ dozen left."

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, discovered the wonderful tonic, "More Eggs," that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens work all the time. You need this great egg producer. It means big egg profits for you. Don't delay. Send $1 to E. J. Reefer, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and he will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" tonic. A million dollar bank guarantees that if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. Send a dollar to-day. THE SEED WE SOW.

Never mind whereabouts your work is. Never mind whether it be visible or not. Never mind whether your name is associated with it. You may never see the issue of your toils. If you can not see results here in the hot working day, the cool evening hours are drawing near, when you may rest from your labors and then may follow you. So do your work and trust God to give the seed you sow "a body as it hath pleased Him."—Alexander Maclaren.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using the well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

REPORT OF A FINE WORK.

My Dear Brother Carley: Please allow me space to say just a word with refrence to two preachers, and two churches. It has been my privilege to assist Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson at Anguilla, and Rev. A. S. Oliver at Arden in revivals this year. The faithfulness, earnestness, and enthusiasm of these two servants of the church are and will always be manifest in these communities. At both places the congregations in 1920 will worship in beautiful, modern, up-to-date; brick churches. In either instance, only faith in God and confidence in folks, coupled with holy enthusiasm in the Master's work, could be the explanation of the work done. Happy the congregations in 1920 who have these men as leaders. They are worthy, and, I think, entitled to a vote of thanks of the Conference to which they belong. I know of no men who have accomplished as much, under similar circumstances and conditions. The Lord bless their hearts

May I say just here, it has been a year of rejoicing with me in the work. The preachers have been kind; I have had all the work I could do, and turned down enough metings to have kept me going three or four years. Wish I had space to make mention of all the men I have assisted in meetings. We have a body of noble, true, consecrated, holy men of God. The preachers, as a rule, are men of faith. God bless our Zion. Fraternally,

JAS. V. BENNETT,

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1919. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Reported by Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr.

The one hundred and sixth session of the Mississippi Annual Conference was convened in Central Church, Meridian, Miss., at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, Nov. 26, 1919.

Bishop John C. Kilgo called the Conference to order, and announced hymn No. 190, after the singing of which he administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, being assisted by Brothers C. W. Crisler, J. T. Leggett, J. M. Morse and J. R. Jones. Following this, the Bishop read to the Conference an address prepared by the College of Bishops to the church on present conditions of church and national life and as an earnest call for a great spiritual awakening.

The roll was called by Dr. A. F. Watkins, secretary of the last session, after which the Conference was duly organized by electing A. F. Watkins, secretary, G. S. Harmon and Jno. A. Moore assistant secretaries, and G. P. McKeown, C. E. Downer and W. A. Hays, statistical secretaries. The hours for meeting and adjourning were fixed, and the bar decided, consisting of the main auditorium of the building.

C. W. Crisler offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we accept as the basis and order of evangelistic work the address of the bishops, and ask the presiding elders to formulate a plan of work based on this paper, and that enough copies be printed to place one in the hands of every official."

Greetings from W. N. Thomas, chaplain, U. S. N., and W. B. Hogg, who had transferred to the Arkansas Conference, were read to the Conference.

Question 17 was called, "Are the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" and, beginning with the presiding elders, the characters of all were passed. Our men have been true to God and the church. The presiding elders reported the progress of the work in their several districts, showing that there have been many good revivals, much church building and improvements, and splendid progress in church finances, many charges paying bonuses on preachers' salaries.

The Bishop was requested, by a unanimous rising vote, to deliver a Thanksgiving sermon before the Conference at 10:30 a.m., Thursday. The characters of W. B. Waldrop, supernumerary, and all the superannuates were passed. J. B. King was placed back on the effective list. The following superannuates answered to roll call: I. B. Robertson, J. W. Brown, R. F. Witt, E. D. Phillips, C. M. Martin, I. L. Peebles.

Three of our preachers have died during the year. They are M. F. Adams, H. P. Lewis and E. H. Mounger.

The Conference rescinded its standing rule to devote the evening service to preaching service alone, in order that the different Boards may hold suitable anniversary meetings from time to time at that hour.

After announcements, the Conference adjourned in a body to the basement of the church, where the ladies had prepared a bountiful dinner for all. This is a new feature of our assemblies, and adds much to the enjoyment and value of the session.

Afternoon.

At 3 p.m. the Sunday School Board held its anniversary meeting, at which time a report of the field secretary, J. C. Chambers, was read, and Miss Minnie Kennedy gave an excellent practical address along Sunday school lines.

Evening.

At 7:30 p.m., Dr. H. Walter Featherstun preached, and, following his sermon, Dr. Luther E. Todd, of the St. Louis Conference, secretary of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, gave a stirring address on the cause he represents.

THURSDAY—SECOND DAY.

The Conference opened at 8:45 a.m. Bishop Kilgo announced hymn No. 351, "I Am Coming to the Cross." M. B. Sharbrough led in prayer. The Bishop read a lesson from Acts 11, and, from verse 24, gave an earnest address on how to start a Holy Ghost revival.

The names of absentees from the first day's session were called, and the minutes of the first session were read and adopted.

A special hospital committee, composed of L. L. Roberts, C. W. Crisler, H. F. Tolle, H. M. Ellis and C. A. Schultz, was announced to consider certain papers before the Conference.

A report from E. O. Watson concerning some phases of the War Work Commission was referred to a special committee composed of T. B. Holloman, C. F. Emery and J. L. Greenway.

Dr. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, addressed the Conference concerning the progress of the Methodist Hospital which is being built in Memphis. Vacancies on the Sunday School Board were filled by the election of J. V. Bennett and Z. Z. Linton as members of the Board.

J. R. Jones read resolutions signed by the presiding elders on evangelism and revival work, which resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Conference. Following are the resolutions as adopted:

"We, the undersigned presiding elders of your Conference, respectfully offer the following resolutions:

"Resolved, 1, That we hail with delight and great appreciation the address of our bishops on evangelism, as expressive of and appealing to the real spirit of Methodism, and as being in harmony with the traditions of our fathers, and of the apostolic doctrine and practice; and we most heartily commit ourselves unreservedly to the same.

"Resolved, 2, That we recognize in our bishops, our ordained and divinely taught overseers, and that we rejoice in their leadership as provided for in the economy of our church.

"Resolved, 3, That we recognize that to the pastors of the church is committed the supreme responsibility for the spiritual oversight and direction of their respective charges, and that we would protect them against all aggression from outside agencies that would in any way interfere with their individual initiative under the guidance of the Spirit.

"Resolved, 4, That we emphatically decline to commit ourselves to plans which fail to emphasize the fundamental doctrines which alone inspire Christian faith and experience, especially when accompanied by unsound official publications asserting that in the coming revival 'the ancient creeds and dogmas will not be brought out of the limbo of neglected things,' and 'that there will be few tears and no shouting at all in the approaching Pentecost.'

"Resolved, 5, That we cannot endorse from any source such plans or programs as are out of harmony with historic Methodism and evangelical Christianity, and seek chiefly an increase of membership by methods not productive of vital godliness or spiritual life.

"Resolved, 6, That we recommend that each presiding elder call together early in the year the pastors of his district for a season of self-examination, and prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, that souls may be converted and added to the church, and that to the same end each pastor be urged to call the godly people of his charge to meet as a whole, or in convenient groups, for Scripture study and prayer.

"Resolved, 7, That revival services be held in every church within our Conference at the earliest convenient season of the Conference year, conducted by the pastor, with or without the help of other pastors or of Conference evangelists; that in all such services the godly laymen be used to the utmost under the direction of the pastor and the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Also that in our regular preaching services, our prayer meetings, Epworth Leagues and Sunday schools, throughout the year, the evangelistic note be sounded and opportunity be given for persons to come to God through Christ.

"Resolved, 8, That these resolutions be adopted by a rising vote of the Conference, and the principles expressed therein be put into action not only during the year before us, but throughout the years to come."

Signed by: J. T. Leggett, W. B. Jones, J. M. Morse, Geo. H. Thompson, W. I. Linfield, M. B. Sharbrough, J. R. Jones.

A resolution to grant the boards of trustees and faculties of our colleges the right to control all intercollegiate sports was read, and it brought on quite a warm discussion. J. S. Purcell, H. A. Wood and C. F. Emery spoke against the resolution. C. W. Crisler and Dr. A. F. Watkins spoke for it. The liveliest interest and sharpest debate yet held on the Conference floor during this session ensued. The resolution was carried by a vote of 81 for and 54 against.

The hour for a National Thanksgiving service having arrived, the Bishop announced and the Conference sang hymn No. 279, and G. H. Thompson led in prayer. The Bishop read a lesson from He-

IN MEMORIAM—REV. J. H. MITCHELL.

By Rev. L. M. Lpscomb.

Rev. John Hudson Mitchell, son of Rev. Wm. B. and Mrs. S. Mitchell, was born in Lafayette County, Mississippi, February 10, 1855. He received his prlmary education In the country schools; was converted at Abbeville, Miss., In August, 1871; was granted license to preach at Water Valley, Mlss., by the quarterly conference of that charge, Rev. Amos Kendall being presiding elder. Thus at the early age of seventeen he felt the call of God to his life mlssion. By appointuent of his presiding elder, he spent the latter part of the year 1872 as junior preacher on Grenada circuit under Rev. Jas. M. Hampton, preacher in charge. He spent 1874 in business pursuits, endeavoring to secure funds to prosecute his studies in his high calling to preach the everlasting Gospel. In 1875 he served Greenwood circuit, Greenwood then being a straggling village on the Yazoo River, and all the contiguous territory a pioneer field for the itinerant. Some twenty-odd years later he returned to Greenwood, then a humming, growing city and one of the strongest stations of the North Mississippl Conference, and now as before, he did a monumental work both in building up the spiritual and other needs of the church. He was instrumental in erecting one of the handsomest and amplest church buildings in the Conference, and it now stands as a signal mark of his prescience, industry and skill. At the end of his first pastorate at Greenwood, he was discontinued, at his own request, to enter Vanderbilt University. Brother Mitchell was admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference at Aberdeen in 1877; was received into full connection in 1879, and ordained elder by Bishop Paine, November 20, 1881. At the Conference of 1876 he was appointed to Snow Creek circuit, where he remained two years. Then he served the following appointments: Pine Mountain, 1879; Early Grove, 1880; Booneville and Rienzi, 1881; Iuka Statiou, 1882-5; Corinth Station, 1886-9; Macon Station, 1890-93; Kosciusko District, 1894-97; Greeuwood Station, 1898-99; Winona District, 1900-03; Greenwood Station, 1904; Aberdeen District, 1905-08; Water Valley, First Church, 1909-11; Corinth District, 1912-15; Indianola Station, 1916-17. At the close of thls year his health forbade his continuing in the active work and he was superannuated and remained in this relation until his death, August 10, 1919.

Brother Mitchell was a delegate to the General Conference of 1902 and an alternate in 1906.

He was an honored trustee of Grenada College for twenty years and gave to it his fullest strength and devotion. As a pastor, he was dlligent, wlde-awake and untiring in his love and care for all within his reach. As a man, he was manly, cultivated, warm-hearled and always approachable by any, the poor or the rich. As a presidlng elder, he was wise, energetic, and faithful, givlng himself with all he had to the Master's flock and cause. He was considerate, careful, painstaking and evangelical, both in his administration and preacning. He was true and loyal to all nien, and above all deeply consecrated to his high calling in Christ Jesus. He was loved by all for his strong character, deep piety, generous nature, abounding human sympathies and warm heart for the smallest and weakest of God's struggling children. The wise and sainted Bishop Galloway said of him, "He is the greatest presiding elder in Southern Methodism." In his ministry of thirty-five years he served circuits, stations, missions, and four of the districts as presiding elder, and in every station of life he was true, effective, progressive; he was a prodigious worker, a strong, evangelical preacher, a wise counsellor, a loyal and diligent servant of the King.

As a friend, he was warm, cordial and true. As man, no breath of suspicion of uncleanness, insincerity, or dishonor was ever blown against his name. In 1881 he was happily married to Miss Mary Viola Cawthon, of Holly Springs, Miss. In his marriage he was most wise and fortunate, for his wife was a woman of rare common sense, splendid training, high ideals, and she made him a worthy and helpful companion. Being a woman of strong mind and gifted in seeing the first and deepest things in life, she not only rose to the demands of the best, but far exceeded most of her kind in the rare qualities of her mental and moral and social make-up, and thus she did more than being what many women content themselves with, a good housekeeper, a genial companion, etc., but Sister Mitchell entered into the whole realm of the larger, more intellectual activities of his calling, and she was the mightiest inspiration and strength to him in his arduous work aside from God's own truth and the power of the Holy Spirit. Of this union five children blessed their home, namely: Mrs. J. B. Wadsworth and Mrs. K. L. Gray, of Winona, Miss.; Mrs. C. C. Boyd, of Louisiana; Mary Lucile, who died in childhood, and J. Hendrix, who is one of the teachers in the public schools of Greenwood, Miss.

As a husband, Brother Mitchell was affectionate, kind and noble, and as a father, he was loving, true, thoughtful and careful as he could be. Brother Mitchell has gone from us, but we know where we shall find him. He lived his whole life in the light and hope and realization of the spiritual and heavenly. While his feet were here entangled with the earth, his eyes and heart and plans were yonder amid the eternal powers and responses of the soul.

Our work is here, but our peace, joy and satisfaction spring from the sources of our vision, thought, love and grip on the invisible, immeasurable, immortal centers of life.

Brother Mitchell fell on sleep peacefully and nobly after a long and strenouous life in the active itinerancy, to which he gave all the powers of his mind and soul from his youth. He spared not his strength, his time, or his life, but counted all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus his Lord.

He was faithful to every trust in life, the least details as well as the greatest. We shall miss him, for we loved him, but only let us be as true and faithful as he and we shall meet him again.

The dear Father of all our spirits and mercies make it light and full of peace for his dear bereaved wife and children who are left so lonely by his going!

"Up to the Bountiful Giver of Life, God's children are gathering home!" Home! home! home!

CONFERENCE IMPRESSIONS.

By Rev. Harry W. Rickey.

Ruston, from climate to co-operative citizenship, had a large part in making easier the burdens of the cabinet, the committees, the diversified activities of the Centenary Conference.

The Bishop's presidency, prayers, observations, sermon and spiritual guidance of his brethren was like oil on troubled waters. He is a mountaineer that walks with God—keen as a brier, mellow as a May morning, and not a man to be trifled with by the unwise. As a preacher, he excels in certain mental and moral traits that strangely stir the inner life of his hearers.

Our secretaries are exceptionally qualified for accuracy of detailed correctness of the complicated Conference minute business.

The impression made on sister faiths was that it was physically the best looking, best dressed and most intelligent body that assembles in the State.

The literary strength of written reports indicates a thorough study of the subjects committed to boards and committees for their consideration.

Such men as Doss, Goddard, Pinson, Snyder, Millar, W. S. Holmes, Frank Parker, Werlein, Means, Footeg Sexton, delivered messages that abide. We thank God for what we saw, felt and heard.

A LETTER—AND AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Rev C. C Miller,

Methodist Conference, Ruston, La.

Dear Brother Miller: It is with much pleasure and satisfaction that I enclose with this letter two checks, made payable to you, totaling three hundred dollars.

The following parties, responsible for the remittance, send you their best wishes and assurances of their affection and esteem: B. B Handy, G. W. Copeland, R. W. Germany, W. B. Clark, O. G Elliott, J. R. Tidwell, R. Cassidy, Chas. Garvey, W. T. Hunt, Harvey Tronsdale, W. M. Washburn, R. O. Randle, C. P. Gray, J. M. Munholland, Carl McHenry, and Young Women's Methodist Auxiliary, Mrs. J. C. Sadler.

If this sum had come to you a few years ago, it is the writer's opinion that you are so much like the most of us that you wouldn't have it now, and that in appreciation of that fact the tardy payment will be excused.

If you can't come to live with us, come to see us. The writer would rather have you as a neighbor down on Jackson Street than anybody he knows.

Your friend,

CARL H. McHENRY.

Monroe, La., Nov. 15.

Second Offense.

Twice since I left Monroe, one of the most delightful charges I have ever served, have these good people generously sent the undersigned a liberal remittance which they judged due on past salary. I am publishing their letter, not deleting names, for a twofold purpose: first, as an expression of my appreciation of these dear people: secondly, as an inspiration to the whole church, for I believe this to be a "record breaker." May God bless them, and may their "tribe increase."

To the good people of Monroe I would say, "I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all * * * I long to see you * * * that I may be comforted together with you by the mutual faith both of you and me."

I should love to dwell down on Jackson street as a neighbor to my friend, Brother McHenry, and I hope some day some little bird will whisper this to the good Bishop.

C. C. MILLER.

PAYMENT OF CENTENARY PLEDGES.

At the request of Col. J. E. Edgerton, Secretary of the Department of Finance, Missionary Centenary, we are again calling attention to the importance of paying Centenary pledges at the church where the pledge was made. This applies to pastors as well as individual members removing to another charge.

A Standard Plan has been promulgated by the highest authorities of the church, and should be the law and order for our church to follow in the collection of Centenary pledges. No pastor has any right to take his pledge card with him when he is transferred from his old appointment to a new one. The records of that charge have already been sent in, also of the district and Conference, conveying to the Centenary Commission the amounts which that charge, district and Conference have pledged, and these amounts have been entered accordingly. Should a pastor transfer a pledge card, the records all down the line would have to be changed, thus causing endless trouble and confusion.

Let pastors and laymen alike, when they move from one church to another, return their payments on pledges to the place where the pledge was made and the report if reported. This will keep all the records intact and the local church treasurers can rely and will not have to take care of the small amount of extra clerical work involved.

We hope all pastors will bear in mind this request of our Centenary Treasurer. The matter is one of supreme importance, and it is earnestly hoped that there will be no delay on the plan to collect all pledges at the church where they were made.—Centenary Commission.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

brews by an offering for the Methodist Orphans' Home was taken amounting to $196, and Miss Huston sang most sweetly "In the Beautiful Land on High." Bishop Kilgo read Matt. 24 35 for a text, and preached a great sermon on "The Enduring Word of Christ." He spoke of the present upheavals in revolutions, wars, contentions and strife all over the world as being the greatest and most general in the world's history; and that they have come when the world, from the common viewpoint, was farthest from the possibility of a great upheaval. Our only hope is to be found in the living Word, which abideth ever. On that we can stand, and to it we can tie our faith; and out of all the confusion and turmoil will come a brighter day only as we anchor our faith in the Word that abideth ever. He said the day should be a time for meditation and prayer. Following the sermon, announcements were made, and the Conference adjourned for the day.

Afternoon.

At 3 p.m. in accord with the announcement of the Committee on Public Service, O. S. Lewis preached to a good congregation that had assembled for the service. The Spirit of God was in the service, and at the close an altar call was made, and the altar and near-by pews were filled with preachers and laymen hungry for a closer walk with Christ.

Evening.

At the 7:30 service, the Board of Education had its anniversary, and addresses were made by Dr. I. W. Cooper, Dr. Rolfe Hunt, H. W. Van Hook, Dr. A. F. Watkins, and Robert Selby. A large, inspiring congregation was present and each speaker spoke with inspiration and enthusiasm, and presented the colleges and work they represented in a way that was instructive and edifying to all.

One of the features of the evening service was a solo sung sweetly and impressively by Mrs. J. A. Smith, "The Old, Rugged Cross."

THIRD DAY—FRIDAY.

The Bishop announced and the Conference sang hymn number 288. C. W. Crisler lead in prayer. The Scripture lesson was taken from Acts 4, following the reading of which the Bishop gave an earnest exhortation on the subject of a Holy Ghost revival. Among other things, he said that revivals are a result of reactions to lost doctrines.

Minutes of the second day were read and adopted. T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference, was introduced to the Conference.

Question 1 was called. "Who are admitted on trial?" and the following young men, who came knocking at the door of the Conference, were admitted: R. E. Simpson, E. H. Sells, B. H. Williams, M. K. Miller, and J. C. Jackson.

Question 2, "Who remain on trial?" T. M. Ainsworth, E. M. Allen and J. L. Carter were retained in the class of the first year, and M. L. McCormick, Otto Porter, W. N. Ware and S. B. Watkins were advanced to the class of the second year.

Question 3, "Who are discontinued?" None.

Question 5, "Who are readmitted?" None.

Question 7, "Who are received from other churches as traveling preachers?" D. W. Johnson from the Baptist Church.

Question 8, "Who are located this year?" M. W. David.

Question 9, "Who have withdrawn or been expelled?" None.

Question 13, "Who have been elected deacons?" (a) Traveling preachers, W. D. Barrett, V. G. Clifford, C. Y. Higginbotham, H. E. Raley, L. M. Sharp, J. M. Smith, having stood examination on the course of study, and passed in examination of character, were elected. J. A. Smith, with deacon's orders, stood examination on the course of study, and character was passed. Character of M. A. Massey was passed, and he was retained in the class of the second year. (b) Local preachers. R. D. Campbell, W. N. Ware, and C. N. Boyles were elected.

Question 15: "Who are elected elders?" (a) Traveling preachers, A. J. Beasley, J. B. Caln, H. C. Castles, S. F. Harkey, J. H. Jolly, C. P. Jones, A. A. Sims, O. C. Severa, and D. W. Ulmer were elected. R. A. Allums and J. T. Weems were retained in class of the fourth year. (b) Local preachers. None.

A constitutional question on Article 23 in our Articles of Religion as it applies to mission fields in countries other than those under the government of the United States, was submitted, and the change asked for was adopted by a unanimous vote.

A report from the Committee on Evangelism, read by D. C. Hull, which was declared out of order because it conflicted with a similar report made by the presiding elders the preceding day and adopted by the Conference, brought on the liviest discussion thus far, and consumed over an hour of the time of the Conference. Your reporter does not care to re-hash in this report the happenings of that time. Suffice it to say, the body of the Conference stood by the action of the preceding session, and seemed to prefer the leadership of the bishops and presiding elders in evangelistic plans to the so-called "Standard Plan" that provoked the discussion.

Upon request of the Conference, when the discussion was ended, the Bishop made clear the stand of the College of Bishops on the points raised in the discussion. At the close of the Bishop's talk, a resolution offered by Dr. I. W. Cooper, expressing appreciation of the explanations made by the Bishop, was adopted.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Education was read by I. W. Cooper, and adopted. The report is as follows:

"It is the sense of the undersigned, that it is an urgent need that, during the coming summer, Whitworth College should have increased facilities, namely, a new dining hall, gymnasium and swimming pool, and a three-story dormitory; also improved equipment for the science hall and library, to conform to the new requirements of the General Conference; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we ask the Mississippi Conference to endorse plans to make these improvements, to cost approximately $65,000. This is understood to give the trustees full authority to make the above improvements." (The writer got the information from Dr. Cooper that Walter Lampton one of our princely laymen of Magnolia, has promised to erect the swimming pool and gymnasium for Whitworth College at a cost of about $10,000.)

Following announcements, the Conference adjourned, and in a body went to the basement and partook of a bountiful dinner, without after-dinner speeches, prepared by the ladies of West End Church.

Afternoon.

At 3 p. m., Dr. Rolfe Hunt preached to a large congregation on the text, "O Thou that hearest prayer." The Spirit of God was present in great power, the Doctor had great liberty, and shouts and rejoicings broke out all over the congregation, and as the brethren sang "The Old-time Religion," those present crowded up to shake hands with the Doctor in appreciation of the message brought and benefit received. Many of the brethren felt that in spite of the sharp contention of the morning session over how the great revival shall be promoted by the leaders of the church, that it is coming and is fast sweeping down upon us. The hearts of the people and preachers are hungry for it, and God is satisfying that hunger.

Evening Service.

This hour was devoted to the anniversary of the Boards of Missions and Church Extension, and addresses were made by Dr. D. C. Hull, Dr. F. S. Parker, Dr. J. J. Stowe, and Dr. H. A. Boaz, of the Church Extension Board. One impressive feature of the evening hour was a solo sung very feelingly by Mrs. J. A. Smith, entitled, "Ready." Many hearty "Amens" were given expression to by the preachers as they caught the spirit of the song.

FOURTH DAY—SATURDAY.

Conference was opened by singing hymn 415, "Jesus, I my cross have taken," and prayer by Dr. I. W. Cooper. The Bishop read as a Scripture lesson a part of Acts 20. Dr. Watkins read minutes of preceding day's session, which were adopted.

At this juncture the Conference had a real treat in the way of a little program furnished by representatives of Whitworth College. C. W. Crisler introduced the young ladies, who are Misses Fannie Stevens of Forest County, Hattie B. Cox of Hinds County, Fannie Fondren of Hinds County, Helen Kearney of Madison County, who constituted the quartet; Miss Grace Kitrell of Jones County, the pianist, and Miss Virgie Cooper, who made the appeal to the Conference. After a rendering of an original wording to the tune of "The Little Brown Church" by the members of the quartet, Miss Cooper told their mission to the Conference, which was for an offering from the Conference towards a fund for building a Y. W. C. A. hut on the campus of Whitworth. Her appeal netted about $1100. And the brethren were glad to give it. Whitworth got a stronger hold on the hearts of the members of the Conference by this visit and appeal.

J. L. Sutton, of New Orleans, W. G. Henry of North Alabama Conference, H. T. Carley, editor of the New Orleans Advocate, W. L. Duren of the North Mississippi Conference and Dr. H. A. Boaz, Secretary of the Church Extension Board, were introduced to the Conference.

J. T. O'Neil read report number 1 of Commission on Finance, which was adopted.

Question 7, was called, "Who are received from other churches as traveling preachers?" D. W. Johnson from the Baptist Church.

Question 10. "Who are transferred to other Conferences?" J. L. Decell to the Pacific Conference, A. B. Barry to the North West Conference, H. E. Carter and H. P. Lewis to the North Mississippi Conference, E. C. Gunn to the Louisiana Conference, B. L. Sutherland to the Pacific Conference, R. H. Kleiser to the Kentucky Conference, W. B. Hogg to the Little Rock Conference, W. H. LaPrade to the North Georgia Conference.

Judge H. L. Austin offered a resolution touching the law on restraining the sale of tobacco to minors, which was referred to the Committee on Temperance and Social Reform.

J. W. Chisholm read the report of the Committee on Publishing Interests which was adopted, and, pending its adoption H. T. Carley, the editor of the Conference organ, addressed the Conference. The proposition Brother Carley made of sending the Advocate for one dollar a year to the members of any church where it is taken in every family where there is a member, should be an inducement to place it in thousands of homes where it does not now go. Many churches should include the Advocate in every home in the budget of the church.

S. F. Harkey and H. G. Hawkins were elected to fill vacancies on the Epworth League Board. Class for admission into full connection was called as follows: W. D. Barrett, V. G. Clifford, C. Y. Higginbotham, H. E. Raley, L. M. Sharp, J. M. Smith, J. A. Smith. The Bishop addressed them with a spirit of earnestness to be true to the vows and steps they were taking that deeply impressed the entire Conference, and which those young men will never forget.

J. L. Sells was elected to fill a vacancy on the Board of Education.

B. F. Lewis read the report of the Orphans' Home, which was adopted.

Dr. H. A. Boaz, General Secretary of the Church Extension Board, gave a great address to the Conference concerning the work of that Board.

J. R. Jones recommended the name of G. S. Harmon to the Committee on Conference Relations for the supernumerary relation.

W. W. Moore read the report of the Committee on Temperance, which, because the hour for adjournment having arrived, and seeing the report would bring on a discussion, the Bishop called to be the first order of the day at the next day's session.

H. A. Wood was elected to elder's orders, having met all requirements.

Announcements were made, the Bishop announced "Amazing Grace" to be sung, gave a feeling exhortation to the Conference and called for any one who felt that either he had lost the witness of the Spirit, or realized he did not have it, and wanted the prayers of the Christians that he might have it, to come and give him his hand. Two or three came at first. Then the Bishop, with deep emotion, said that he felt he was a fit subject for prayer. The remark somehow touched the chords of deepest emotions and heart-longings of apparently the entire Conference, and they came, weeping, crying, rejoicing, to grasp the Bishop's hand, embrace one another, and rejoice together. It was a scene that will stay with all who witnessed it as long as they live. We felt that the great revival was coming upon us; and through the strength of that wave of spiritual emotion, the preachers will go to their several charges made stronger for the work before them. After so long a time, we finally adjourned to dinner served by the ladies of Central Church in the basement.

Afternoon.

At 3 p.m., H. T. Carley preached a strong sermon on the principles of true greatness, taking as a basis the request of the mother of James and John for her sons. In this service those present heard with delight and edification a quartet rendered by the Millsaps Quartet, composed of Revs. C. W. Alford, R. E. Simpson, R. T. Hollingsworth and E. A. King.

(We cannot allow Brother Lewis's modesty to omit mention of the singing at this service of the quartet composed of the Lewis brothers—B. W., H. P., J. M., and O. S. It was an artistic and spiritual treat to hear them.—Editor.)

FIFTH DAY—SUNDAY.

This was a great day in the session of the Conference. At its close, and just before the Bishop ordained the class for elder's orders, he was in a reminiscent mood, and spoke of the blessedness of the Sabbath day, and especially this one. It was a day of mellowness of spirit and brotherly love. Doubtless all who have attended this Conference would testify that there has been more loving and embracing of one another among the brethren, more tears of real spiritual emotion shed, and more rejoicing than any we have attended in years.

The love feast was held at 9:30, being conducted by Brother Dan Kelley, who, on opening the service, spoke of the fact that the Moravians and Methodists have kept up the love feast; that the breaking of bread was a symbol of fellowship that dated back beyond the days of the apostles to the time of the patriarchs of the Old Testament. He then said that he wanted the first to speak who felt that God had done most for him. Many were soon on their feet, clamoring for a chance to witness to God's goodness to them. But Uncle Ira B. Robertson got in with the first testimony, followed by Brother R. Bradley, the now two oldest members of the Conference. Then for over an hour in rapid succession, many witnessed to the goodness of God in their lives. It was a joyous time, and the service ran right up to the preaching hour.

The Bishop took for his text Col. 3:1-4, and from it preached a sermon on the resurrection and the final second coming of Christ that was truly Methodistic, Biblically orthodox, and soul-inspiring. We realized that we were listening to one who was master of his subject, and who, in the freedom of the Spirit, painted the glories of Christ in us in a way that fairly lifted us to higher and better things in life. And the Lord was there to honor His Word.

Following the sermon, the class for deacons' orders were called, and were ordained. They are, W. D. Barrett, C. Y. Higginbotham, V. G. Clifford, H. E. Raley, L. M. Sharp, J. M. Smith, W. N. Wale and C. O. Bovles.

Memorial Service.

At 3 p. m., the Conference met in memorial session. M. B. Sharbrough presiding. Hymn 583 was sung, and I. B. Robertson led in prayer. Miss Mary Huston sang feelingly, "Will the Circle be Broken?" Brother Sharbrough read a Scripture lesson from 1. Thes. 4:13-18.

Question 21 was called, "What preachers have died during this year?" The names of M. F. Adams, H. P. Lewis and E. H. Mounger were announced. Memoirs were read, and the following brethren paid tribute to the precious memory of those that have passed from us: M. B. Sharbrough, C. W. Crisler, J. M. Morse, M. L. White, P. D. Hardin, I. B. Robertson, I. L. Peebles, J. R. Jones, W. B. Jones, W. W. Moore, J. E. Gray, C. F. Emery, R. Bradley, and P. H. Howse.

Two of those taken from us were ripe for the going; but it will be one of the unsolved mysteries till we all get Over There why one so young and promising as M. F. Adams should have been plucked from this world and transplanted in Heaven so soon.

At the evening hour Dr. W. G. Henry of the North Alabama Conference, who for five years was a member of our body, preached from the text, "I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God, to do less or more." Numb. 22:18. The sermon was in line with the spirit of the day, and of the highest order. At its close, many of the brethren crowded around Dr. Henry, thanking him for the great message he brought us. At the close of the sermon, the following class were ordained elders: A. J. Beasley, J. B. Cain, H. C. Castles, J. H. Jolly, C. P. Jones, A. A. Sims, D. W. Ulmer, O. C. Seavers, F. S. Harkey and H. A. Wood. D. W. Johnson, who comes to us from the Baptist Church in elders' orders from that church, received the charge to the elders.

It was a common remark at the close of the day's services, that this is the best, most spiritual session of the Mississippi Conference held in years and years. The revival spirit is on the preachers, and it is the kind that melts the hearts and brings the tears and produces the shouts. God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform.

SIXTH DAY—MONDAY.

The Conference session opened by singing 463.

The Bishop read Ps. 103.

Dr. D. C. Hull led in prayer.

The Secretary read the minutes of Saturday's session, and of the memorial session held Sunday at 3 p. m.

The report of the Temperance Committee, left on the table during Saturday's session, was taken up, and an amendment by H. L. Austin was offered as follows: "That this Conference memorialize and urgently request the Legislature of the State of Mississippi that convenes January, 1920, to enact a law, prohibiting the sale of cigarettes in the State, and to make the penalty heavy enough to be effective." The report, with the amendment, was adopted by the Conference.

"Who are received by transfer from other Conferences?" was asked and answered as follows: E. D. Simpson, from the North Mississippi, and H. G. Hawkins, from the Memphis Conference. G. L. Harrell was elected Conference lay leader.

Question 35, "Where shall the next session of the Conference be held?" Brookhaven was nominated by W. H. Lewis. Hattiesburg requested its session, but withdrew in favor of Brookhaven, and the next session goes to Brookhaven.

C. W. Crisler took the chair.

C. F. Emery read report of the War-Work Commission, which was adopted.

P. D. Hardin read the report of the Conference Endowment Fund, which was adopted. Two memorial funds were reported added—that in memory of M. F. Adams for $500, and H. P. Lewis, for $1000.

W. M. Sullivan read the report of Commission on Finance, which was adopted.

Various other committees made their reports.

In the report of the Board of Education, this item was mentioned: "Your Board, recalling the alarming proportion of physical unfitness found to exist among our young men who were called to the colors during the great war, and noting with hearty approval the growing and widespread interest in plans now maturing for the prevention and cure of diseases, especially among the young, respectfully recommends that the Conference request our State and national authorities to devise and make provision for a wise and adequate system of physical education and training."

In the report of the Board of Education mention was made of the Cooper Ministerial Efficiency Fund, which reported receipts this year of $831.72, and loans to the amount of $575, made to five ministerial students. This is one of the most worthy funds in the Conference.

Mrs. H. F. Tolle, a lady delegate to the Conference, had read before the Conference the following: "Please urge the preachers to bring their wives and children to the Divinity School, so the children can play on the beach, and the wives sail around with Captain John."

Signed: MRS. H. F. TOLLE, Delegate.

The reading of the statement caused some merriment; but on second thought, this good woman has suggested an idea that more of us should follow.

The Bishop resumed the chair.

Dr. J. A. Bray, a representative of the C. M. E. Church, made an earnest plea for his people. Some of his remarks:

"The Negro knows when he meets a first class white man." "The Negro knows when a preacher hits the bull's eye in his sermon." "If there is any preach in a preacher, the Negro knows how to get it out of him."

Question 18, "Who are supernumerary?" W. B. Waldrop and G. S. Harmon.

W. M. Sullivan and M. S. Enochs were re-elected on the Board of Trustees of the Mississippi Conference Orphans' Home.

W. T. Denman was elected to audit the books of the Conference Treasurer, and furnish his report to the editors of the Conference journal in time to include his report in the Journal of this session.

C. F. Emery, who for about 20 years has prepared the resolutions of thanks at the Conference session, read the resolutions to the Conference, which were adopted by a rising vote.

After the reading of the minutes of the sixth day's session, the Bishop led the Conference in singing, "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?"

He then called for a re-committal of the members of the itinerancy to the vows of consecration taken in ordination, and that the laymen present should give their best support to the work of God before the church. He then led the Conference in a prayer of re-consecration.

After making a few preliminary remarks, the Bishop read the assignments of the preachers to their new fields of labor for the coming year, the Conference sang "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow," and the Bishop pronounced the benediction that closed one of the best sessions of the Conference ever held.

PERSONAL.

The following connectional officers were present and introduced to the Conference the first day: Dr. F. S. Parker of the Epworth League Board, Miss Minnie E. Kennedy of the Sunday School Board, Dr. A. J. Lamar of the Publishing House, and Dr. J. J. Stowe of the Centenary Movement.

The presence of the following visiting brethren from other Conferences was noted: W. T. Andrews of the North Alabama Conference, and W. V. Shearer, W. J. O'Bryant and E. H. Cunningham of the North Mississippi Conference.

Dr. T. W. Lewis of the Memphis Conference spoke a few words concerning the progress of the Methodist Hospital building at the evening hour, Wednesday.

Dr. Luther E. Todd of St. Louis addressed the Wednesday evening congregation on the subject of the Superannuate Endowment Fund. Those present who heard his address and appeal will not soon forget the message he brought.

For the first time in the history of the Conference, there were lady delegates in attendance. Those present were Mmes. B. F. Lewis, H. F. Tolle, J. E. Oakey, Florence Sharbrough, and Miss Ella Ormond.

The Sunday School Board had in attendance at a meeting it held during the Conference the superintendent of the elementary department, Mrs. Sue Stewart Brame, and six district superintendents. They were Mrs. Z. D. Davis of the Port Gibson District, Miss Stella Provost of the Seashore District, Mrs. Lewis Wood of the Brookhaven District, Mrs. J. E. Oakey of the Newton District and Mrs. Hathaway of the Hattiesburg District.

Mrs. Zeb Clark and Miss Chesley Hagan from Vicksburg and Bovina, active workers in the Woman's Mission Society, were visitors at the Conference.

The following wives of preachers were visitors at the Conference: Mmes. J. M. Morse, P. H. Howse, W. H. Huntley, W. W. Murray, B. F. Jones, T. B. Cottrell, S. C. Moody, Hugh Castles, D. E. Kelley, C. C. Evans, A. J. Beasley, E. C. Gunn, W. E. Dickens, J. W. Chisholm.

Why he did it, we do not know; but our host, H. B. Watkins, on the first day of the Conference, at the dinner hour, when he called for speeches from the neglected men of the Conference, for men to represent the preachers, selected the thinnest, leanest, tallest, slenderest men in the Conference. But for one to represent the laymen, he selected the largest man in the Conference. In the light of that fact, behold the list: For the superannuates, T. B. Holloman; college presidents, A. F. Watkins; connectional men, F. S. Parker; pastors, C. W. Crisler, and presiding elders, J. R. Jones; while for the laymen, Jno. A. McLeoud.

Main Street, Hattiesburg, under the leadership of P. D. Hardin, has made a fine record for the year. The Centenary quota assigned to it was over-subscribed by 350 per cent, 166 have been added to the roll of the church, all claims were paid, and a bonus of about $300 was paid pastor and presiding elder.

The Hattiesburg District has the distinction of having been the first district to secure and oversubscribe its Centenary quota, which it did under the leadership of its presiding elder, W. B. Jones, and the well organized laymen and preachers, by a margin of $10,000.

Harrisville charge, C. H. Ellis, pastor, increased in subscriptions to the Advocate over 700 per cent, from 6 to 43. Such progress and development has been made that next year Braxton, a point on the charge will be made a half-station.

W. A. Terry winds up his fourth year at Broad Street, Hattiesburg, and reports 150 per cent raised on Centenary quota; all lines of church work progressing well, and a handsome bonus paid on salaries of P. E. and P. C.

Brookhaven, H. W. Lewis pastor, has experienced a great revival during the year, a kind true pastors long for, resulting in 50 or more real conversions, and greatly quickened interest in all church activities that continues to grow. The pastor's heart is happy.

The old Sharon charge, one of the oldest works in the Conference, has made wonderful progress during the past few years under the leadership of F. L. Applewhite. Two fine revivals were held this year, and the charge shows an increase in

The Home Circle

IN THE LAND O' DREAMS.

Where do I go in the Land o' Dreams?
  Why, mother dear, don't you know?
I follow the trail of the white moonbeams
  Straight to the sunrise glow.

And all night long o'er that starry way
  With the friends from my little book,
I sing, and dance, and laugh, and play,
  With never a backward look.

I find the sheep for Little Bo-Peep,
  And put Humpty back on the wall;
While all the world is still asleep
  I pay Mother Goose a call.

When I grow hungry, I eat of the pie
  Of little Jack Horner the brave,
Or taste the tarts of the Queen of Hearts
  That were stolen away by the Knave.

I frolic thus in the Land o' Dreams
  With my friends who are loyal and true,
But, mother dear, with the morning's beams
  I hasten me home—to you!

JERRY'S CHOCOLATE CAKE.

"When I am a man," said Jerry Whitamore, searching his plate anxiously for crumbs of vanished cake, "I am going to have a whole chocolate cake to myself—a whole, big, round chocolate cake, mother. I am, indeed, and nobody shall have a bit of it; I would like to see how it feels to eat a whole cake by myself."

"You need not wait until you are a man," said his mother. "I will make you one to-morrow."

"Will you really, mother, all to myself?"

"Yes, on one condition—that you will not give anybody a bite of it while it lasts."

"Oh, I can easily promise you that; for I don't want anybody to help me to eat it, I can tell you."

Mrs. Whitamore sighed a little and wondered if Jerry was as selfish a little boy as he thought he was; but she made him the cake. As soon as the icing was firm Jerry cut a big slice for himself and sat down on the kitchen step to eat it. His little brother Rob came and stood in front of him, with his hands behind his back.

"Wis' I had a piece," said Rob, looking at Jerry.

"Mother," called Jerry, "can't I give Rob a piece?"

"Certainly not," answered his mother.

"Go away, then Rob, and don't watch me eat it," begged Jerry. But no; there stood the little man eyeing the cake until it was gone, while two big tears rolled down his cheeks.

"That piece didn't taste good one bit," said Jerry to himself. "I won't eat any more when Rob is around."

The next time he took a piece he slipped out of the door to hide himself in the woodshed. Bounce, the little black-and-tan terrier, thinking he was going out to play, slipped after him; but just before the couple got out of sight the mother called: "Jerry, remember not to give Bounce any cake."

"Oh, isn't that a pity!" said Jerry to Bounce; and then he had to eat his cake with Bounce begging for every bite. It was worse than Rob, because he couldn't explain to the dog.

"There! That's two pieces of cake spoiled for me," grumbled Jerry. "Eating a whole cake isn't half as much fun as it's cracked up to be."

When the tea bell rang, Jerry was just as ready for bread and butter and milk as if he had not tasted anything for twelve hours; and here on his upturned plate was a half of what the Whitamore children called a "snowball." It was a white cake, white inside, with white crumbs and citron, and round and white outside, with particularly nice sugar icing. Nobody made just those cakes except Aunt Martha Mason.

"That cake was sent to Rob, Jerry, and of his own accord he asked me to save you a piece;" when, lo! to everybody's surprise, big, boyish Jerry burst out crying. "I hate chocolate cake, mother!" he said. "I never want to see another piece as long as I live!"

So Mrs. Whitamore knew that Jerry had learned his lesson. She did not believe he would ever again think anything sweeter that he kept to himself. "Suppose we bring out your cake and eat it for supper," she said to her little boy.

Jerry's face cleared in a minute. "O mother," he said, "that would be so nice."

And I think that if Rob and Bounce had been allowed to eat all that Jerry wanted them to have they would have both dreamed of their great grandfathers that night.—Children's Paper.

JIMMY'S TEXT.

One day it was pouring down rain, and Aunt Carrie was getting short of stories.

Jimmy Bates said: "Let's play church."

There were five Bates children and two cousins. They put rows of chairs together for pews and the big armchair for the pulpit, with the hassock for a step to get up. The pulpit was so fine that each wanted to be the minister. But Jimmy said he ought to be, because he knew more texts, so he must be the "goodest."

"Why, Jimmy!" said Aunt Carrie.

But the others said he might if they could take turns passing the plate. The plate was mother's card tray. They had buttons for money. They began by singing a hymn. Then Jimmy, with grandpa's spectacles way down on his nose, mounted to the pulpit. How they all envied him!

"My friends," began Jimmy.

"You should say 'bréthren,'" said Helen softly.

"And brethren," added Jimmy crossly, "my text this afternoon is: 'Do unto others as you would'"—

"O Jimmy," wailed a voice in the first row, "you can't have that. You know you took my ball away from me this morning, and I wanted it so."

"Never mind," said Jimmy. "My text to-day is: 'Judge not'"—

"But, Jimmy," piped up another voice, "you said you guessed Benny Green played truant yesterday, because he wasn't in school."

Jimmy swallowed very hard; and, thumping the back of the chair with his fist, he said: "Here's another: 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

"O Jimmy!" howled the whole congregation "not that! You ate up all the jam at the dolls' tea party, so we didn't have any."

At this the poor little minister broke down and cried. Aunt Carrie said: "I know the best text of all: 'Love one another.'"

Just knowing texts isn't much use unless we try to live them.—Exchange.

"TOUCH WOOD! TOUCH WOOD!"

Who of us knows just what is meant when a person, speaking of his having escaped some misfortune, suddenly is warned to "touch wood?" A young woman happened to use the phrase when talking to an English minister, and she was startled when he gave her the historic meaning of the superstition.

When a person "touches wood" to avert ill luck, he unconsciously depends on the virtue once supposed to rest in the wood of the cross on which Christ died. A reference to this belief doubtless is found in these words ascribed to the evil one:

> Great is my might, but against the clan
> Of this king I have no charm:
> If they touch water, if they touch wood,
> I cannot work them harm.

After all, it need not be merely a baseless superstition, as the minister pointed out. Whenever we are really afraid of what the future holds for us we can protect ourselves by reaching out to Christ, represented by the Christian Cross. If in our moments of fear, of doubt, of weakness, we will simply "touch the cross," we can receive the spiritual strength, comfort, cheer that will go far to avert the worst of the future's disasters.

Mere wood, of course, is powerless to help us, but a thought of our Savior, who gave to the wooden cross a meaning that will outlast time itself, is all powerful at any time.—Selected.

Despise not those of spiritual vision, or those who dream. They may not always be the wise judges of their own visions and dreams—such matters require an afterthought and a comparison with the recorded word, and further proof—but God has many times thus sent men in quest of truth. The prophets, the sacred poets, ancient and modern saints came from this class.—E. N. Evans.

GARLAND, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ray, died on November 1, 1919. He joined the Methodist Church at the age of nine years, under the pastorate of Rev. W. F. Rogers. Garland was just 21 years old when God said, "It is enough—come up higher." The influence of the life of this noble boy was good. We cannot understand why he was called away, just as he was entering into promising young manhood, but God saw in his wisdom that it was best. Just before death came, he told his parents and friends that he was ready. He said, "It is not guess-work—I know I am ready." Oh, may the Spirit of God so burn in the hearts of the people throughout this land and country, that we all may be able to say as Garland did, "It is not guess-work — I am ready!" The funeral service was conducted at Nebo church, by the writer. A host of weeping relatives and friends followed the body to the cemetery where it was laid to rest, there to await the resurrection morn. We weep not as those who have no hope. Garland has gone on just a little ahead. One by one we will all soon be gathered there, to part no more.

J. C. McELROY, Pastor.

Chester, Miss., Nov. 24, 1919.

NEHEMIAH PALMER HOBGOOD, the son of Henry Hobgood and Mary Jane Austin, was born in Tunica, La., June 5, 1852, and died in St. Francisville, La., October 9, 1919. Interment took place the next day at Tunica, La., services being conducted by the Knights of Pythias and his pastor, Rev. H. C. Murphy, assisted by the writer. Brother Hobgood was reared in Tunica and educated at the school for boys in Baton Rouge, La., which was conducted by the late Prof. W. H. N. McGruder, and his training was so proficient that Mr. Hobgood was fitted for a life of usefulness in business circles, as well as service to the church, which was rendered with ability and faithfulness. Brother Hobgood was married on November 20, 1873, to Miss Mary Conville White, of Tunica, La., who died in 1903, leaving to him the care and education of six children, who survive their father as follows: Miss Katherine, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Captain J. L. Row, of Torras, La.; Miss Agnes L., of New Orleans; Dr. John H., of McNary, La.; Mrs. R. G. Osterberger, of St. Francisville, La.; William Conville, of St. Francisville, La. All of these children, now grown to womanhood and manhood, are an honor to their parents and to the State. One sister survives him, Mrs. Lucretia Row, of Vincent, Ala. Brother Hobgood was a good man, a member of the M. E. Church, South, since young manhood, filled with the milk of human kindness toward his fellowmen. He lived respected, and died regretted. This writer became acquainted with Brother Hobgood about twelve years ago, and always found him the same sweet-tempered Christian gentleman, a pleasure always to greet and converse with. After a long illness, in which he was partially blind and stricken with paralysis, yet nevertheless fully conscious, a few days before his death it was my privilege to aid the pastor in administering to him the Lord's Supper; at which time he expressed himself as depending upon the sustaining faith which had for so long been his comfort and delight. He was fond of the old Methodist hymns and at the Tunica church and at the grave his favorite passage of Scripture and favorite songs were used, while a large concourse attended with bowed heads among whom were many colored people who loved him as a father. Thus we bid farewell to a good friend "till we meet again" on the bright, celestial shore! His friend.

H. S. JOHNS.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, we, the members of Pisgah Sunday school, feel our great loss in the death of our superintendent, Mr. J. M. Burford, who served us so faithfully for eighteen years, also in any office of the church that was put upon him, and

Whereas, we would show our love, affection and appreciation; therefore be it resolved:

First—That while we bow in submission to His will, we do so with sad hearts, that he will not meet with us on earth again, nor shall we hear his humble voice pleading for us in prayer.

Second—That we extend to the family, who will so much miss his dear face and fatherly counsel, our deepest sympathy.

Third—That a copy be sent to the family, a copy be sent to the Panolian, and a copy be sent to the Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mr. W. S. Jones, Miss Katherine Jones, Miss Allen Childress, Committee.

Batesville, Miss., Nov. 18, 1919.

A STATEMENT BY REV. A. D. MARTIN.

Dear Brother Carley: Permit me a little space in the Advocate. Six years ago, feeling the deep call to preach and the urgent need of the French field, I decided to go into the mission work, sacrificing to the very limit. For six successive years my average salary has been $500 per annum. With the high cost of living, and a large family to support, I am unable to work longer as a French missionary.

On the above small salary, I bought me a horse two years ago to reach my appointments, which are far apart. Since the beginning of this year, I broke my buggy; therefore I was dependent on Miss Ella Hooper, deaconess, who has a Ford, and by going with her, I managed to get to my appointment at Point O'Chien, fifteen miles from here. I feel like pleading for the above place, as they have just come out from Roman bondage. My first year as pastor of that place, I received 20 members who were formerly Catholics; the second year, 8, and this year, 15. All of the people are French, and I beg the good brethren to look after them, for they need a shepherd.

It is rumored that I was a delinquent, and that through stubbornness I refused to go to St. Martinville this last year. But, brethren, I want to say that I have been obedient to my superior all these years as a French missionary, and would have gladly gone to the above place, if only I had had the money to move on. One hundred and fifty dollars out of my small salary was kept back, thus making it impossible for me to move. Some of the good brethren of the Lafayette District will please remember, that a part of the above sum was raised for me at our last district conference at Lake Charles.

While I must regretfully retire, caused by too small a salary for me to live and support my family on, I hope and pray that the good work will go on and on where I have so faithfully labored in this white field ready to harvest. My earnest prayer is that these people, who are waiting, pleading for the Gospel may be reached. This is a great and needy field, and the people are susceptible to the Word, which is a lamp to our feet and a light to our path.

CHRISTIANIZING THE FORCES OF SOCIAL UNREST.

By Robert E. Speer.

[illegible] we are to go on [illegible] The church must [illegible] chapel [illegible] are [illegible] and direct them toward Christian results. Nothing else will suffice to save the world from intolerable social injustice on the one hand or Bolshevism on the other. The church is the one force strong enough and Christian enough to save the situation.

However, it can be done only in the spirit of Christ. There must be an honest, open-minded effort to understand the viewpoint of the masses and the courage to stand for the correction of the crying social ills from which the world is confessedly suffering so terribly. No wholesale denunciation of the revolutionary spirit will suffice. It cannot be successfully combated that way. Indeed, it thrives on unreasoning opposition. It must be disarmed by the spirit of fairness and its followers won to the Christian program of brotherhood which the church alone is able worthily to present.

The church to-day is facing no more important issue than this, both from the standpoint of its obligation to the world and from that of its own prestige and preservation.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFIES AND DARKENS HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! It Darkens Hair so Naturally That Nobody Can Tell.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days. — Adv.

Salts if Backachy and Kidneys Hurt

Stop Eating Meat for a While if Your Bladder Troubles You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

METHODISM NEEDS THE POWER.

By Gipsy Smith.

If the Methodist Church is to win one million souls for Christ and the church it must give itself to prayer. We are not definite enough in our prayers. We are too general when dealing with God. He desires us to be specific. We all must become specialists.

To save one million or to save one soul there must be some remarkable change in the atmosphere of many churches. Prayer will change that atmosphere.

There is no reason why the Methodist Church should not only save one million, but it should save the world. It has the machinery and the numbers. It needs the power. What God wants is a people not only willing but full of holy daring. But, why should it be considered a daring thing to ask God for what He has promised? He has promised the uttermost parts of the world. We should walk up to the eternal throne and take what God offers.

We do not pray as we ought. We make prayer. We talk a lot of stuff to God. We tell much we know, but do we really pray? Prayer is a cry, a volume contained in the silver cell of a tear-drop. Prayer moves God. The vices of to-day hold the crowds around as in the days of John Wesley, and as I look at this devil in the world, I hear the same reply of Christ: "This kind cannot go out but by prayer and fasting."

We must get alone with God in prayer! Exchange.

AFTER ALL, IT IS RELIGION.

The church has always claimed that the solution of man's problems was to be found in the realm of religion. This position has been hotly contested. Many have claimed that man's condition can be improved only by giving him higher wages and better living conditions. Others have thought that if he should be properly educated he would be contented, while some have contended that if his environment is changed he remains little better than better. These different theories have had large support during the past few years. The church has gone on saying that unless the heart of a man is changed he remained little better than the brute and can not be depended upon to live happily and righteously with his fellows.

Now comes one of the greatest authorities in the country, saying: "The solving of the labor problem is wholly a question of religion. The wage workers will never be satisfied with higher wages and shorter hours any more than you or I are satisfied with more profits and bigger houses to live in. Things never did satisfy any one, and never will. Satisfaction and contentment are matters for religion."

These are surely prophetic words. Every minister of Jesus Christ should read and consider them as a support of the gospel he has been preaching since the day he first opened his mouth in the name of Christ. Roger W. Babson spoke the words just quoted. He is one of the greatest statisticians, also an economist, whose words are authority for hundreds and hundreds of leaders in the money markets of the world. When he says, "The solving of the labor situation is wholly a question of religion," that is a clincher for the gospel of Christ. His preachers have been saying that for nearly, if not quite, two thousand years. It surely is a fact that the laboring man can not find more contentment in wages and shorter hours than the rich man does. With this fulcrum let us turn the heart of this unhappy world to look toward Christ.—Western Christian Advocate.

THE BREATH of the FOREST

THAT KILLS CATARRH GERMS.

While lecturing in London, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement, a total temperance orator and leader of international fame, who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble.

He went to inland Australia where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forests, especially the Eucalyptus trees. This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment, Hyomei.

Hyomei is a germ killing vapor treatment, formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. This medicated air is especially effective in treating Catarrh and colds of the head, Catarrhal Coughs, Bronchial Catarrh, Spasmodic Croup, Catarrhal Laryngitis or Hay Fever. It destroys the catarrhal germs and restores health.

Sold on a positive guarantee of satisfactory results or money refunded. Complete outfit $1.00, extra bottle inhalant 50c. At druggists or by mail if your druggist cannot supply it. Booth's Hyomei Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Are You Losing Your Grip on Health?

Physician's Prescription to Increase The Health and Strength of Anaemic, Run-down Men and Women

As a result of the tremendous strain which the war has put upon so many people, the nerve cells have become depleted, the whole system weakened and the reserves of men and women are today losing their grip on health simply because their blood is thinning out and possibly starving through lack of iron. It is through iron in the red coloring matter of the blood that life sustaining oxygen enters the body and enables the blood to change food into living tissue muscle and brain. If people would only keep their blood filled with strength-giving iron by taking Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and rundown they might readily build up their red blood corpuscles and quickly become stronger and healthier in every way. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numerous cases are reported where the strength of weak, nervous, "run down" people has been more than doubled in two weeks' time in many instances. The manufacturers guarantee successful and satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. Nuxated Iron is on sale at all good druggists.

Sunday School

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL, THE GREAT EVANGELIZING AGENCY.

By Charles D. Bulla,
Corresponding Secretary of the General Sunday School Board, M. E. Church, South.

"The best means of defense is to attack." So runs a maxim of the world's greatest military strategist. Church leaders are face to face with some stubborn facts. Millions upon millions are without religious instruction. We cannot save people unless we teach them, and we cannot teach them unless we reach them.

The Sunday school is the only agency that undertakes to train a whole generation in religion. If we fail to bring people into the church school, not many of them will come into the church. Eighty-five million people in the United States are outside of the Protestant Sunday schools. Multitudes have gone astray, some in the way of indifference, some in the way of unbelief, and some in the way of sinful indulgence.

Moved with a Christlike compassion, we must seek them out, bring them in, lead them to the great Shepherd of the sheep. The day demands an aggressive movement for the extension and promotion of Sunday school work.

114 EGGS A DAY NOW INSTEAD OF 25 A DAY

That Means About $105 Extra Income Per Month for Mrs. Ropp.

"I have 200 hens, including late pullets not old enough to lay and had been getting 25 to 30 eggs a day. Then I tried Don Sung in the feed, and am now getting 107 to 114 eggs a day."—Mrs. Essie B. Ropp, R. R. 2, Littles, Ind.

Mrs. Ropp got this increase of 7 dozen a day in the middle of winter. At 50 cents a dozen, 30 days a month, this makes $105 extra income a month. The Don Sung for her 200 hens cost her about $2.50 per month. You can see how well it paid her, and we'll guarantee it will pay you. Here's our offer:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pay for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days, and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

FROM ST. JOHN'S, MEMPHIS.

Dear Mr. Editor: The eightieth session of the Memphis Conference has just been held in St. John's Church. Many said that it was the best session ever held. The opening sermon was preached by Bishop DuBose. Bishop Murran was at home during the entire Conference, and, at the invitation of Bishop Atkins, presided over some of the sessions. Bishop Atkins presided with his accustomed ease, grace, and characteristic ability to dispatch rapidly business without rushing anything or neglecting the smallest matter of importance.

A number of the connectional men attended, and from time to time made forceful speeches on the various interests of the church.

This is one of the great Conferences of the church, and the reports showed gratifying progress along all lines.

The Memphis District, on a Centenary quota of $300,000, had subscribed over half a million dollars.

The Bishop made five new presiding elders, no one of whom had ever occupied the office before, and to each of whom the appointment seemed to be a surprise. They are all capable young men of fine spirit, and will bring things to pass for the Kingdom of God in their respective districts.

It was a pleasure to the writer to meet in the great congregation on Sunday morning the Rev. Robert Randle, of the Louisiana Conference, and on Sunday evening to have the privilege of shaking hands with Dr. Sam Steel, of "The Pelican Pines," who, by the way, had preached a great sermon at our First Church that morning.

On Conference Sunday there were eighty Methodist preachers occupying pulpits in this city.

St. John's is one of the great churches of Methodism. There can nowhere be found a more intelligent, cultured, and loyal people. The membership is rapidly growing, and a constantly increasing corps of consecrated workers keep the wheels of progress going in every organization of the church. It was a happy year that the pastor spent in this delightful fellowship and work last year, and it is with a larger vision and greater faith that he is now entering into the work of his second year in this great charge.

It was with much interest that I secured the first available copy of the Louisiana Conference appointments, for I shall never cease to feel a keen interest in the men and charges of that Conference. They are bound to me by indissoluble bonds of Christian love. May this be the most blessed and fruitful year in the history of the men and charges.

Long live the Advocate, its editor, and its readers.

WILLIAM H. COLEMAN.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 29, 1919.

WHEN THE CHURCH WANTS A MAN.

Frequently the church advertises for a young man for the ministry. You will read in this paper such notices. A man of the world will read them and smile. The district superintendent carefully states the kind he needs for a special charge. He must be young, perhaps unmarried, a good-looking fellow, with perfect health and no physical blemishes. He must be a college graduate and seminary trained. He must be easy of approach and have the qualities of a good pastor. Then, to the amazement of the man of the world, he offers such an equipped man one thousand dollars a year.

Recently a representative of the government read such a call for ministers. He smiled and said: "The government will give that young man two thousand dollars. In the business world men are wanted. The young man the church offers one thousand dollars, the merchant and the banker and the manufacturer will pay twenty-five hundred. No wonder the church is short of men to supply its ministry."

Nevertheless young men of talent are giving themselves to the Christian ministry. They could succeed in any business enterprise. They could turn the same talents which the church capitalizes at one thousand dollars into three or four times as much. With this knowledge they choose the ministry. God only knows why. For he called them, and they heard his voice. They could not be untrue to the heavenly vision.

The ministry is not a money-seeking calling. Those who enter it realize this and enter with the feeling that they have closed the door behind them as far as accumulation of this world's riches is concerned. They do it gladly. Now the church is awakening to the fact that her ministry should be provided for, that it should be paid a comfortable salary, and that in the end of life every man should have a provision that would make him comfortable and thankful. This obligation comes from the sense of justice born in the life of the day. The church must take care of its servants or be condemned.

GOD'S HANDWRITING.

He writes in characters too grand
For our short sight to understand;
We catch but broken strokes, and try
To fathom all the mystery
Of withered hopes, of death, of life,
The endless war, the useless strife;
But there, with larger, clearer sight,
We shall see this—
His way was right.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Woman's Meeting at Annual Conference in Ruston.

During the afternoon of Conference Sunday in Ruston, a meeting of the women was held in the Presbyterian Church. The attendance was large and evinced a wide interest on the part of the delegates, visitors and townswomen.

Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, Conference President, sounded the key-note in her excellent address, "Giving Your Best." She was followed by Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, on "The Young People," who demonstrated her consecration to her splendid task in the tenderness and earnestness of her appeal.

Mrs. A. P. Holt concluded the program with a fine address on "Our Volunteers and Scarritt." Having made a recent visit to that institution, she was prepared to give a vivid picture of its attractive and uplifting surroundings. She pleaded with the women to remember in prayer the Louisiana girls and representatives, who are taking our places at the front.

At the close the women were glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of meeting these leaders and getting into a more intimate fellowship.

Louisiana's Representatives.

The women of the Louisiana Conference will want to know the names of the choice young women who are standing in their places in the foreign and home fields.

We have Miss Helen Johnson, of Opelousas, who has labored for some years in one of our most difficult fields, Brazil.

Miss Annie Belle Williams is from South Carolina, but has been taken by the Woman's Missionary Society of First Church, Shreveport, as their own missionary.

Miss Pauline Randle, daughter of that faithful veteran of Louisiana Methodism, is in Korea and completely in love with her work and surroundings.

Miss Eliza Iles, another of Louisiana's own daughters, is pastor's assistant in Beaumont.

Miss Mary Daniel is at Mary Elizabeth Inn, San Francisco. (It will be of interest to our women to know that Miss Grace Gatewood, for several years deaconess at First Church, Shreveport, is at the same place.)

Miss Cora Godat rejoices daily that it is her privilege to serve God in home mission work.

Miss Clara Chalmers is teaching in Mississippi with success and will be ready for foreign service next year.

Misses Audie Reynolds, Glenmora, and Julia Reed, Lake Charles, are at Mansfield College, getting ready for their courses at Scarritt.

Miss Nannie Cumpton is another of Louisiana's fair daughters who wishes to serve in a special way.

Three high school girls have offered themselves for definite service. Misses Ruby Landon, Florence Smith and Carrie Vinyard. Misses Inez Manchester, of Jena, and Lois Yawn, of Merryville, are likewise volunteers in the Master's cause.

Let us remember all these dear young women in special prayer that great joy and progress may mark their work.

Report, Executive Committee Meeting.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Society was held in Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La., at 2 p. m., November 15, 1919. The following officers were present: Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, President; Mrs. A. P. Holt, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Supt. Young People's Work; and Mrs. R. H. Wynn, Supt. Study and Publicity. Mrs. C. E. Fike, Lafayette District Secretary, attended the meeting also.

The Corresponding Secretary was authorized to have post-cards printed, notifying the District Secretaries to furnish her with a full report each quarter, alphabetically arranged, with the membership of auxiliaries not reporting that quarter written in red ink.

The time set for Annual Meeting was the first week in February. An Executive Committee meeting is to be called for Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock prior to that meeting. The hostesses are to be requested to have any social event scheduled for Tuesday afternoon if possible.

In reply to letter from Miss Pauline Randle relative to her desire to pay back the amount of her scholorship to Scarritt, Mrs. Holt was instructed to state that she could make quarterly payments of a minimum of $10 a year if she wished to do so.

At present the pledge stands as follows: Alexandria District—amount pledged $810, paid $520, due $290; Baton Rouge District—amount pledged $410, paid $231, due $179; Lafayette District—amount pledged $1010, paid $640.63, due $369.37; Monroe District—amount pledged $750, paid $485.75, due $264.25; New Orleans District—amount pledged $1080, paid $700.89, due $379.11; Ruston District — amount pledged $950, paid $530.15, due $419.55; Shreveport District—amount pledged $3000, paid $1675.39, due $1324.61; total amount due on pledge, $3225.89.

Respectfully submitted.
MRS. R. H. WYNN.

Message From Mrs. H. R. Steele.

There are 510 new Mission Study classes on record in the Southern Methodist Church this fall. Has yours been listed yet? Be sure and notify your Conference Superintendent of Study and Publicity, Mrs. R. H. Wynn, Ruston, La., and send post card to Mrs. H. R. Steele, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., at the same time.

Mrs. Steele reports 154 new Young People's classes, compared with 131 this time last year; 191 Junior Study classes compared with 144 last year. There are 377 Bible Study classes, with only 221 in 1918; 81 for Young People this year, and only 26 last year.

She urges a Mission Study Class in every auxiliary in the Conference, and a report and a card from each class. This is not asking one whit too much of us, sisters! Let us set ourselves the task of complying with this request. District Secretaries, please cooperate by stirring up your auxiliaries, urging upon them the great advantage and pleasure of starting a class.

Mrs. Steele states that the November issue of the Missionary Review of the World is an Americanization number and will be most helpful in the study of home mission book, by Charles A. Brooks.

She urges the women to subscribe for the Missionary Review of the World to get a broad outlook that will likewise be most encouraging.

December in the Missionary Society.

Harvest Day. Very early in the month—regular or special meeting. If special meeting, program may be had from November Voice of 1918. There are also suggestions for service in November Voice of 1919. All dues and pledges should be paid in full at this meeting. Let Treasurers appoint committees and begin rounding up all members that have not paid in full.

Election of Officers for 1920. If the society prefers, a committee may be appointed to study the situation prayerfully and make the nominations.

Or, after a season of prayer, the nominations may be made in the December meeting. Much depends on a right choice of leaders for the coming year.

Special Officers' Conference. The retiring officers should meet the new officers and give full information regarding their work, and together they should lay plans for the new year.

Order Pledge Cards. January is the pledge month. Cards for taking the pledge can be had free in any numbers from the Home Base Secretary, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. The use of pledge cards has greatly increased the pledge in many societies. Order Now.

Order Leaflets for Installation Service. These will be needed when the officers take up their duties in January. Order Early.

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever and the grip, is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid, there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.—Adv.

If Thin and Nervous Try Bitro-Phosphate

While excessive thinness might be attributed to various and subtle causes in different individuals, it is a well-known fact that the lack of phosphorous in the human system is very largely responsible for this condition.

It seems to be well established that this deficiency in phosphorous may now be met by the use of Bitro-Phosphate, which can be obtained from any good druggist in convenient tablet form.

In many instances the assimilation of this phosphate by the nerve tissue soon produces a welcome change—nerve tension disappears, vigor and strength replace weakness and lack of energy and the whole body loses its ugly hollows and abrupt angles, becoming enveloped in a glow of perfect health and beauty and the will and strength to be up and doing.

CAUTION:—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

Gentlemen:—I was bothered with Kidney and Bladder Trouble for about twelve years, and finally got so I could not walk without a cane and had to be careful how I stepped. Letters From Rheumatics.

Possibly you have imagined that you could not get your own consent to write a testimonial letter, but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of rheumatism you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring. This water overcomes many diseases, including Indigestion, Gout, Uric Acid Poisoning and Liver and Kidney diseases, but no patrons of the Springs are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water that those who have been relieved of their rheumatism. Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the Management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick Headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisoning matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of Stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefitted. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr Rhodes, of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The Water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McCann of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

PAINE COLLEGE PROSPERING.

By A. D. Betts, President.

More than a month in advance of the opening of Paine College, all space in the boarding department has been engaged. A long waiting list of applications will be on file. This institution for the training of preachers and teachers for the colored people is deservedly popular. If there were room, fully one thousand students could be secured each year. The Centenary funds will make it possible for Paine College to do a much larger work.

An unusually strong faculty has been secured for the coming term. Four of them hold the degree of Master of Arts. Two new white teachers of rare accomplishments have been secured. Rev. Ray S. Tomlin, of Missouri, has just finished his theological and post-graduate work at Northwestern University, and comes to Paine College to be the Dean of the Theological Department. He was to go to Africa as a missionary, but was hindered by providential reasons. Miss Louise Young, Memphis, Tenn., a graduate from Vanderbilt University and an A. M. from Wisconsin, will have the chair of English. Miss Young has taught at Bryn Mawr College, and has been Dean of Women in Ramline College, St. Paul. When our most talented young Southern people undertake work for the Negro here in our Southland, it evidently heralds a new day in race adjustment.

Rev. Oscar M. Hawkins, a pastor in Augusta, gives a part of his time to the Theological Department. He is a finely trained young man, having studied in Central College, Mo., Vanderbilt University, Emory University, and Chicago University. He is a grandson of the late Dr. John Matthews, one of the greatest preachers Southern Methodism ever produced.

Three of the theological students of Paine College are volunteers for mission work in Africa. A deeply religious spirit prevades the institution, and it is hard for a student to get through Paine College without becoming a Christian. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington is the new chairman of the Board of Trustees, chosen to succeed the late Bishop McCoy, who was such a friend to the cause.

THE HUMAN NEED OF CHRIST.

One of the surprises of life is the discovery of the illimitable need of humanity. It is easy to understand the need of the slum, but it is startling to find that the need of the palace is equally great. It requires no effort to realize that ignorance is full of need, but to many it is a great surprise to learn that cultured wisdom has need fully equal to that of ignorance. We never question the reality of the need of men whose lives are foul with loathsome and disreptable sins, but many find it hard to understand that the respectable, and the clean, and the godly have all but equal need. The whole world is needy, and the cry for help goes up from every stratum of society in every land under the sun.

We need so many things. We need sympathy, we need strength, we need patience, we need courage, we need light and guidance and comfort, and we need them every day. It may be that men look at us almost with envy and wish that their lives were as untroubled and serene as ours, and all the while our hearts are crying out for sympathy and help that no one knows we need. Strong men do not usually spend their time in either complaining or weeping, and many a man busies himself in comforting others and helping others when his own heart is nigh to breaking and his own strength is almost spent. Harry Lauder, singing his songs to amuse the soldier lads while his own heart was over the sea in France by the grave of his only son, is a picture of many heroic men and women who bury their own private sorrow as they try to comfort others. Not until the future shall reveal the secrets of human hearts shall we know just how much it cost men to be sunny, and bright, and cheerful; not till then shall we understand just how great was the private need of the world's burden bearers. There have been many brave souls who have followed their Master so faithfully that they also have done as He did, who when His own sad end was just before Him, and in the very shadow of His own cross, gathered His disciples about Him and said, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." The Christian Guardian.

A PSALM OF PRAISE.

By Willie Conger Page.

We thank Thee, Lord, for the heart-beats of life;
For health, and happiness, for love without strife;
For the soft breath of spring—the song of bird and bee;
The pink glow of dawn—for the grass, and singing tree;
For the diamond of the dew-drop—the opal of the sky;
The music of the murmuring brook of mountain peaks high;
For the swell of the ocean, its tempest grand and wild;
For the love of our neighbors—the trust of a little child.
For peace, joy and freedom—our country broad and fair;
But most of all we thank Thee, for Thy love and tender care.

Wonderful Egg Producer.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3259 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

RESTORES VITALITY

Gives Strength to the Nervously Weak and Run-Down.

Peptiron is both medicine and food for the blood and nerves. It is in full accord with advanced science as to the proper treatment of anemic and neurasthenic conditions, in which the need of more and better nourishment is so apparent. It combines iron and manganese with nux, celery, pepsin and other tonics and digestives. It supplies the deficiency of red blood corpuscles in anemia, repairs the waste of nerve tissue in nervousness, gives color and stamina, and restores vitality.

"I was run down and nervous. Peptiron has done me great good." Serena Rifenburg, Tivoli, N. Y.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used anually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

CONCERNING THE METHODIST HOSPITAL.

The annual report of the Methodist Hospital submitted to the North Mississippi Conference, which was published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of November 27, stated that the contract had not been let for the completion of the new hospital building. When this report was written on Nov. 1, and approved by the Board of Managers of the Methodist Hospital, that condition prevailed, but since that time the Building Committee on November 18 awarded the contract for the completion of the new building and the same will be continued without hindrance until completed.

The estimate as to the additional amount that will be required to finish the building was given at $350,000, but the contract calls for an expenditure of $400,000 in addition to that which has already been spent on the new building. The Building Committee felt that it was wise to continue the work and, therefore, let the contract.

Three of the Annual Conferences that belong to the covenant to build the Methodist Hospital have approved the suggestions of the Board of Managers for an early campaign to raise the additional amount that will be needed to finish and furnish the building. When the building is completed and furnished, it will mean an outlay of $650,000 or $700,000, but, better than that, the Methodist Episcopal Church South, will have one of the best equipped hospitals in all the South with which to dispense the highest service unto the suffering and the sick. Yours very truly.

TOO OLD TO LEARN.

A short time ago, a man down in Kentucky celebrated his 131st birthday. He celebrated it by exhibiting himself at a county fair "to raise money to pay off the mortgage on his farm." What a terrible record of wasted years that celebration completed! After a life of endeavor more than double that of the average man, he was reduced to exhibiting his gray hairs and infirmities to settle a portion of his debts.

There can be no other reason for such necessity than lack of thrift and saving. He undoubtedly had strength and health above the average or he could not have doubled the span of life. He must have had uncounted opportunities. The development of his State and the nation has forced thousands such into his path. Yet he obviously did not seize or take advantage of them, through lack of thrift.

It is not unreasonable to suppose that he earned more than a mere living throughout more than half his existence. Had he but practiced regular saving throughout a portion of those years, he would have been so far removed from poverty that a mortgage on his farm would have been an absurdity. Few will refuse to concede that it was possible for him to have saved 50 cents a week during half his life. That sum deposited at 4 per cent interest compounded quarterly, the rate now paid by War Savings Stamps, from the time he was 21 until he reached 66 would have given him approximately $3,264.13, more than enough to have lifted his mortgage.

Instead of being assured of life without financial cares, he has struggled on for 66 years after, for the bare necessities of existence. The road of thrift, which may, perhaps, have been more difficult a hundred years ago, has been made smooth for present-day investors. There are few citizens of this country who cannot save something every week. The government savings securities, Thrift Stamps, War Savings Stamps, Treasury Savings Certificates and Liberty Bonds, give opportunity for both safety and profit for all such sums, no matter how large or how small.

Few men would care to live to be 131 if the chief interest in life left at the end of that time was what it was necessary to hand some one who allowed them to live by the grace of a mortgage. Investment in government securities will provide both for the present and the future.—U. S. Treas. Dept.

Renwar vs. Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." EDITORIAL COMMENT

GOODNESS IS ITS OWN REWARD.

Nine years ago an old tramp went to a home, asking for food. The fifteen-year-old daughter of the home called him in, gave him his dinner, two dollars in money, and a pleasant word. Recently she received notification that the tramp, become a prosperous farmer, had died and left her in his will $65,000. In speaking of the occurrence, the girl is reported to have said: "I didn't know it was that old man who was my fairy godfather, but I did know it would be some one. I have always believed that if I was always good-natured and smiled at every old person who seemed to be unfortunate, that some day I would be made very happy by one of them." We rejoice with the young lady that one of her air-castles has become a reality; but if $65,000 is her only reward for being good-natured and kind, she is still poor. Those who do good have a treasure in the heart that is worth more than all the money in the world. Goodness is its own reward.

HE FORGETS THE GAIN.

The chairman of the board of directors of the Family Liquor Dealers' Protective Association has lately emitted a tremendous wail of distress because wholesale liquor dealers and distributors face a loss of hundreds of millions of dollars by reason of the Government's failure to terminate war-time prohibition. He asserts that there are 70,000,000 gallons of whiskey now stored in bonded warehouses, for the disposal of which the owners should have at least four or five months in order to avoid financial loss. In other words, these dealers should have the privilege of pouring 70,000,000 gallons of whiskey down the throats of the American people within a period of a few months for the sake of the dollars it would enable them to save. It is a pretty bald proposition—but liquor dealers are not given to considering the finer values of mind and spirit. Cash is worth more than character any day of the year, according to their standards. But we should not think of the loss of the liquor dealers without, at the same time, thinking of the gain to the nation. Sober men and women, well-fed and well-clothed children, happy homes—these are what constitute real values in the life of a nation. The gain is infinitely greater than the loss.

FOR WHAT IT IS WORTH.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, former chief chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, is reported to have said recently that any man can live well on 11 cents a day. The diet prescribed is cornmeal mush and plenty of it—3 cents worth of meal and 8 cents worth of milk. We are not in a position to try it just now, but we pass the suggestion along to our readers for what it is worth. We hope, however, that the price of corn will not be unduly advanced by reason of a greatly increased demand for mush—good old cornmeal mush.

THE COAL STRIKE.

The country is today in the midst of the most serious fuel shortage it has ever experienced. The restrictions upon the use of coal are more stringent than they were at any time during the war. Business throughout the country is greatly demoralized, and much suffering is inevitable as the weather becomes more severe. The cause of this deplorable situation is a strike of the coal miners for more pay, shorter hours, and better working conditions. The mine owners and operators have indicated their willingness to accept the wage scale proposed by the Government, but the miners themselves maintain that the increase offered is not at all adequate, and their leaders have contended vigorously for still further concessions. Prospects now are good for a working agreement in the near future, though relations between the contending interests are still strained. The Government has realized the seriousness of the situation, and has proceeded vigorously to do all in its power to protect the people against a fireless winter. The whole trouble is in the age-long conflict between the two forces of capital and labor. These have not yet been able to find a proper basis of agreement, and the whole world has to suffer while they fight over their differences. When the principles of Christianity become operative in the industrial world, these tragic situations will disappear. In the meantime, we are under urgent obligation to preach and practice the everlasting truths of the Prince of Peace.

A SPECIAL PROPOSITION.

We are sincerely desirous of enabling the Advocate to do the utmost amount of good in forwarding the interests of Methodism in Louisiana and Mississippi by getting it into every home represented in the membership of as many churches as possible. In order to accomplish this, we make the following special proposition:

WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR ONE DOLLAR.

In connection with this offer, we call attention to the following specifications:

1. The offer expires absolutely on March 15, 1920.

2. The terms of the proposition must be strictly interpreted. The paper MUST go into every home represented in the membership of the church. For example, if 100 families are represented in the membership of the church, 100 papers must be subscribed for. If a small child is the only member of the church from a given family, the paper must be sent to that child.

3. This is not a club offer. We cannot accept a club at this price, no matter what the size of the club may be. The proposition applies strictly and only to those cases where the ENTIRE MEMBERSHIP receives the paper.

4. The cash MUST accompany every acceptance of this proposition; if check is sent, let ten cents be added for cost of collection. (Many of our readers are not aware of the fact that the New Orleans Clearing House Association has an inviolable rule which requires the banks to charge a minimum fee for collection of out-of-town checks. This fee must be paid by all depositors, regardless of the size of the account carried.)

5. Unless otherwise announced in future issues of the Advocate, renewals may be included with new subscriptions.

6. If there is any uncertainty about any feature of this Special Proposition, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.

We are making this proposition, not to put money into the treasury of the Advocate—the price is too low for that—but to put the Advocate into as many homes as possible. Let our churches take advantage of it, either by making a complete canvass of their congregations, or by making provisions for it in their budgets. From the very nature of the case, no better proposition than this can be made.

THE NEW CONGRESS AND THE PEACE TREATY.

The old Congress adjourned after having refused to ratify the treaty of peace with the Central Powers because of provisions in the Constitution of the League of Nations that were thought to be inimical to the best interests of the United States as an independent and self-sustaining nation. The treaty could have been adopted with reservations and compromises, but the President held steadily to his position that it should be accepted as written. It is impossible to forecast what the action of the new Congress will be. There can be no doubt that the American people as a whole are anxious to have the whole matter settled in a way that will hasten a return to normal conditions, and that they are in favor of some form of international organization that will make future wars impossible. But there is strong and determined opposition to any agreement that will, in any degree, limit the right or the power of the United States to exercise its authority in connection with vital national policies unconditioned by any obligation growing out of its assent to the League. The probabilities are that some form of compromise will ultimately be found that is acceptable to the President, and that the United States will duly take its place as one of the signatories to the covenant that will, it is hoped, usher in a new order of things in a world that has been cursed by wars throughout all its history.

A HARD LESSON TO LEARN.

We all look forward with joy to the time of reaping, but we too often forget the condition of a bountiful harvest—careful planting and faithful cultivation. It is a difficult lesson to learn that work—hard work—is always the price of success.

FAMILY LIFE.

By Wm. C. Allen.

So let us love, deare Love, lyke as we ought:
Love is the lesson which the Lord us taught.
—Edmund Spenser (Sixteenth Century).

Yesterday I listened to two ghastly tales of domestic infelicity among people of my acquaintance. Such stories are all too familiar. It is declared on governmental authority that for every eight marriages consummated in the United States, the past few years, there has been one divorce. Flaring headlines in the newspapers gloat over the scandals of the hour. Young folks often talk sarcastically, bitterly, flippantly of the most sacred human tie. Too commonly marriage is entered into about as some persons buy goods in a big department store—if you do not like your new acquisition, exchange it. Disappointed pecuniary anticipations or wayward passions may prove that the contract has not been based on the purity and richness of genuine affection. But there is another side to the story. How often do we see the strength of the man and the gentleness of the woman blended in the insoluble happiness of the wonderful love that is sanctioned and sanctified by Christ. Real Christian wedlock is the most beautiful institution in the world.

Years ago two young school teachers ceded their hearts to one another. They were members of one of the smaller denominations that exercise a loving church care—some would say strictness—over the matrimonial intentions of its people. Children came into their home. The father became a successful and honored merchant in one of our larger cities, but service for the church and work on behalf of human welfare claimed much of his attention. The mother, with graciousness and dignity, presided at a bountiful board where guests were always welcome. To quote Wordsworth:

Her very presence a sweetness breathed, toward all creation.

Through laughter and tears, they maintained their youthful integrity toward God. In old age reverses swept over them. They bowed beneath the humiliations of the hour, but kept their faith—they continued to find refuge in mutual comradeship and love. The gallant old gentleman, when returning from his daily toil, would, as in his prosperous days, bring home bits of candy or tiny flowers, and lay them in the hands of the woman of his heart. Then, after fifty-one years of hallowed wedded life, she left him. For a few swift months, without a murmur, his flagging steps revealed the fortitude of an aged man living above his lot—even as the English poet saw it—

I could have laughed myself to scorn to find
In that decrepit man so firm a mind.

Then he, too, passed on to the Beautiful City, to join forever his beloved, where there is neither marriage or giving in marriage, but where they are as the angels of God.

Why do people not love more than they do? Why do they permit themselves to be swung by passions or swayed by the fears that destroy love? Why are hearts sore when love would heal them? Why does malice so often embitter when love would sweeten them? Why are men and women sullen and cold when they might, with the fullness of love, be blithsome and gay? Is it a failure to estimate correctly temporal and spiritual values, or is it pride, that makes so many people unhappy because they neglect to love?

I ask the men and women who may read these lines to do all they can, in conversation or by example, to portray the alluring possibilities of Christian love. I ask parents to guard the companionships and books they place before their children. I ask all to praise and not discourage, to cure and not wound, to love and not strive. I ask the church members everywhere to strengthen our national career by becoming the glad interpreters of pure domestic joy.

OUR FORGOTTEN BENEFACTORS.

By John A. Rice, D.D.

There is a touching story in the ninth chapter of Ecclesiastes of a little town with few men in it against which a mighty king laid siege, to the dismay of all the people. When hope was darkest, a poor wise man was found, who, by his wisdom, delivered the town. The pessimistic author adds with sorrow: "Yet no man remembered that same poor man."

Only a short while ago the whole world was stampeded by the Central Powers whose hitherto invincible armies were preparing for a final onsweep against the Allies. Civilization, we were told, was in a perilous and dancing balance. When the strategic moment came, the President asked Congress to enter the strife and called for men. Thousands of our noblest youth, with all the idealistic enthusiasm that ever stirred the red-blooded sons of any people, left their schools, colleges and universities, their business and their professions, gave up their hopes of achieved careers, bade a fond farewell to loved ones and went with glad hearts to answer the call of humanity for helpers to save and rebuild the world. Then came the principle of universal liability to service, and thousands more were called for. They, too, answered, for the most part, without complaint. And two millions of as splendid soldiers as ever took up arms gave all any man ever had, gave every drop of their royal blood, with all their hopes and all their fears, to "make democracy safe for the world." Most of them have come back. Some have not. Thousands of them, their bodies shot to pieces, must now go the long way of privation and pain, their purses empty, their souls intrepid still. They saved the world, themselves they cannot save.

And have we forgotten? Are we so fickle that the tears wrung out of our grief and the prayers out of our anguish are already only at best a fading memory? The shouts of welcome with which we greeted our returning heroes—have they so soon passed into silence? And have we even now gone back to our old greed and vulture-like prey upon each other? Was it, after all, as President Wilson said in the West, a commercial war? Were ten million men, or thereabout, offered up at so much per head? Were the nations capitalizing our sighs and our sobs? Was it gold rather than freedom we suffered so for? Were our precious boys led as lambs to the slaughter that predatory wealth might control the markets of the world?

One hesitates to answer these searching questions in the affirmative. Yet there are distressing signs all around us.

There is already talk of the next war, and from the same class of people that are first in war always. Military training is beginning to be called for. A nation that fought to end war now getting ready for another!

The conditions we sought to end in Europe are rife in America. A little group of men ask the Chairman of the Steel Company for an interview and get no answer. Even the President of the United States cannot secure a hearing; nor the biggest stockholder in one of them. Autocracy! Yes, that very thing is abroad in every part of the world, more terrible than ever. A few packers make us pay increasing prices for necessities in spite of all the Government can do. And the autocracy of capital is answered by autocracy in labor. Strikes are everywhere.

Money? Yes, money for everybody but the soldier. Forty thousand of their brethren made themselves millionaires, many of them under the pretext of patriotism, thus turning the blood of our boys into cash. Not a few of these so-called patriots were serving the Government with one finger and themselves with both hands. And what is the sum of it all? Three hundred and fifteen persons with incomes of five hundred thousand and up, one hundred and forty-one with incomes of a million or more, countless thousands with money they never even dreamed of as possible to them—fortunes on fortunes everywhere. And the soldiers who made it all possible? Well, they came back without money enough to buy a decent suit of clothes, many of them on their old jobs at the same price, while their former pals are rolling in wealth, or leisurely drawing larger salaries, and not a few without any jobs at all. They gave up all at their country's call. They got a shabby suit of clothes alone, without hat, shoes or any other necessity in return! They are turned loose to find their way in the face of cold competition, while the newly rich flaunt the trappings of power in debauching extravagance all around them. Is this justice? Who knows what justice is? Even Plato failed to trace it among the citizens of his Republic. Do we get as reply, "That is the way of the world?" Then the way of the world is wrong, terribly wrong. "Can't be changed," you say? Human nature has always been such and acted thus. But human nature has been changed and can be further changed." The social order is final?" Who made wrong the final word anywhere? The customs of peoples have been changed a thousand times. Read Anglo-Saxon history. We have been boasting of changing the world. Let us begin at home. Let us begin with our soldier boys.

Let us, first of all, have Congress pass a law providing a large bonus for them, not as a bonus, but as a partial recognition of their unspeakable sacrifice. Make it liberal. Make it two years pay (ten years would be small) at least, in cash. Then provide a means of taxing those who made money out of the war to pay it. Present each of them with a ten-thousand dollar paid-up life insurance policy. Mobilize the machinery of the Government to throw open the gates of life to every one of them, to the wounded in particular. See to it that no soldier or soldier's family suffers want or cowers under the lash of outrageous fortune. There is surplus cash enough in the country, realized from these four years of conflict, to do all this and as much more as right demands.

Then the monuments—what shall they be? A few slabs of stone or marble here and there? Now and then a meager building we needed and would have secured anyhow? A few fading flowers and fine words? Whatever the form of our memorials, it is a matter of grave concern whether they be adequate to express a people's gratitude for heroic service sacrificially rendered. If it is to be in the form of a building, no State can afford to let less than a million dollars measure to those who come after, our debt to those whose vicarious blood has written a new charter of affairs in the world. These are times when only small men think in small figures. The day of littleness is gone. The hour of bigness has struck. We owe something to ourselves. We cannot afford to earn the contempt of our children, and our children's children forever. The soldiers are asking nothing. They have their reward in the higher things of the spirit and in the well done of to-morrow. It is we ourselves that are now on trial. More than a hundred cities have already determined to erect monuments of one kind or another. Let us hope that art will have her inning now. It will be tragedy not to allow only the masters to express our appreciation to all mankind of the noblest heroism that ever blessed an age, and not to provide them with ample resources for the execution of their most perfect dreams.

But when all that is done, we shall only have suggested the reaches of our obligation. This can be fully met only by the faithful discharge of our brotherly duties to each other and to all men. Whenever one fails to act the man in his talk, in his trading, in his labor, in the intimate relations of home, church, school, state, commerce and industry and in the closer touch of man with man everywhere, he is a slacker, a coward, a traitor to the sacrifice of our sons, a betrayer of his country and his country's cause. For him the last four years have had no meaning. It were better that he had not been born, for he has descerated his own soul and earned the relentless frown of an age.

Here then is the field for the new heroism, the child of that our boys showed in France. This war will never end. For ours is a flying goal. Righteousness, peace, and the joy of holy living, enlarged, intensified and enriched from age to age, will draw us on forever.

W. A. BELK—A MEMOIR.

By Rev. Isaac D. Borders.

William Alexander Belk was born in Clay County, Mississippi, March 15, 1860. He peacefully breathed his last in his home in Holly Springs, Miss., October 13, 1919. Ushered into the world as the lowering clouds of civil war were darkening the Southern sky, he leaves it as the smoke of the greatest battles human beings have ever fought begins to clear away. They were strenuous and strainful days for the babe and the lad in the gloomy years of the War between the States and the subsequent reconstruction period, which was perhaps worse. Many were the privations and the hardships endured and the hard lessons learned. But he survived them all, grew strong through them, and became a towering figure in the field of statecraft and jurisprudence of his native State. As we who survive view it, he leaves us at a time when his ripened experience and matured judgment would have been of incalculable benefit to his commonwealth and to his Nation could he have been spared to assist in the solution of the multitudinous problems which remain after the great World War.

By dint of heroic endeavor, through patient sacrifice, he succeeded in educating himself to the point of becoming a really scholarly man. Following his graduation from Iuka College, he taught many years, superintending the public schools in West Point, Tupelo and Water Valley. Graduated from the University of Mississippi as a Bachelor of Law, he removed to Holly Springs for the practice of his profession in 1895, immediately entering upon a successful career at the bar. His talents and his forensic ability united with his tastes to incline him to political life, and he filled some kind of public office much of the twenty years, his chief service being in the State Senate.

It is not, however, of his outward life that I would write; this is known and read of most who read these lines. It is of that inner nature which he rarely revealed, which only his intimate friends could know, but by which he should be judged; such is the task I modestly essay. Not many of his associates really understood the deeper currents of his soul. Every man's spirit is built in layers; there is a surface which all eyes can see, succeeding laminae penetrated to various depths by observers of varying sympathies, and finally an inner core which only God knows. Brother Belk and I became very close friends during the three years I was his pastor, and not infrequently he gave me revelations of his innermost soul which I fancy were altogether unsuspected by those whom he met in the ordinary and superficial contacts of the street. Of these confidences I am not permitted even now to speak; it is enough to say that they immensely heightened my admiration for him and gave me a sympathetic understanding of his life denied to most men.

As superintendent of the Sunday school, as one of its teachers, as a steward, as a lay leader, and in various capacities he gave large service to Methodism. A frequent and always interesting contributor to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, there are many who will miss the flash of his facile pen. A very simple faith was his, and orthodoxy and the traditions of the fathers and old-time religion found in him an earnest champion; we shall greatly need his like in the days that are dawning upon the church.

He was happily married, January 31, 1884, to Miss Nellie McKinney, of Athens, Ala., and the sorrowing widow, a daughter and two sons survive him. The beautiful home was a seat of a very gracious hospitality and the citadel of a charming family life and love. It is darkened now, but there streams upon it the glorious light of the Sun of Righteousness, for they who mourn are not as those who are without heaven's comfort. It will greatly assist to cheer them to be assured that a great host of friends throughout the church feel themselves bereft; a mighty man is fallen and the people grieve. But he died serene in the faith, triumphant over the great enemy even at the last. Like the ox figured on the old Roman coin, standing between the altar and the plow, ready for sacrifice or for service, Brother Belk said as he went down into the dark valley, which for him streamed with the light of glory, "I hate to leave my folks, but if God wants me, I am ready." Patience, suffering souls; we shall see him again!

Independence, Mo.

AT THE PRISON CONGRESS IN NEW YORK City.

Dear Mr. Editor: With your permission I shall attempt to jot down a few happenings on a recent trip to attend the session of the American Prison Reform Association held in New York City.

Having been appointed a delegate to this conference by His Excellency, Governor Pleasant, and also appointed to represent the Louisiana State Penitentiary by our genial general manager, Hon. H. L. Fuqua, it was easy to pack up for the 3,000 mile trip to the congress, which met at the Pennsylvania Hotel, October 20-24 last.

Traveling at the clergy rate is certainly a great accommodation, and as little more would be expended, I made up my mind to try to see a few other places while going and returning. Accordingly, leaving Baton Rouge on October 15, I set my face directly toward Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio. Arriving at Cincinnati between trains I had a great desire to visit the Zoo, and must say that I was fully rewarded for the trip out there. Suffice it to say, should any of your readers ever visit that city, I trust they may go and see that wonderful collection of wild animals, now so well tamed and many of them so easy of approach.

Leaving Cincinnati, I was enabled to stop for several hours in Columbus, Ohio, to visit the Ohio State Prison. There I found conditions entirely different from those here in Louisiana. While a few men were out on farms, most of the prisoners were employed in factories making blankets, cloth, automobile license plates, etc. The men looked well, however, and showed signs of kind treatment.

From Columbus to New York City is only about fifteen hours, but the sad part of it was I missed the mountains by being asleep in a Pullman. However, as we turned the sharp curves frequently I realized from the swaying to and fro of the car that it was "mountain scenery" on the outside. When returning I had a fine view of the Blue Ridge range in Western North and South Carolina.

Arriving at New York, I went to the quarters engaged in the Pennsylvania Hotel, a sky-scraper of nearly twenty stories, with 2,200 rooms and baths. Every room is equipped with every known convenience and servidor service. My room had six electric lights, hot and cold water in both wash basin and bath, servidor service and a free copy of the New York Times every morning with "we wish you good morning" stamped upon it, and the price was but $1 a day.

Of the Prison Congress I could write much, but I found the problems of the northern prisons, which were discussed more than southern problems, were mostly of a scientific nature, involving studies in psychology and psychiatry. However, there were many addresses of inspiration, which I think I can make practical use of in my work here; the one of these to interest me most was along the line of crime prevention.

It seems to me that there should be more of this sort of work done. I have seen the effects of crime in ruined homes, loss of years to otherwise good people, lost opportunities, etc., so that I feel more effort should be directed to arrest the criminal before he comes to prison, or rather before he violates the penal code and thus becomes a criminal. This can be best accomplished by enlisting the whole thinking population in eradicating plague spots of vice and immorality, and teaching every one to work in lines of usefulness and remuneration, and old-fashioned honesty.

Of course, while in New York I rode in the subways, on the elevated trains, the surface cars, the taxis, and even the "rubber-neck" two-story busses. Perched on the top, I made two trips sight-seeing on Fifth Ave. and Riverside Drive. As I liked the Cincinnati Zoo so well, I took in the Zoo at the Bronx Park, which was more extensive than the former, but Cincinnati has prettier lions and larger snakes than at the Bronx. After going up in the Woolworth Building, the tallest in the world, a trip to Brooklyn, the Battery Park and the Aquarium, which is the largest fish exhibition I ever saw, the Curb Market and many other places too numerous to mention, I left New York for the South.

A stop of several hours in Philadelphia gave me the opportunity to visit Liberty Square on Chesnut street. Here are to be found those buildings famed for their doings in the commencement of our national history. In Congress Hall I saw the place where Washington stood when he took the oath of office as the first President of the United States, and also the little balcony in the front of the building from which he delivered his first inaugural address. Next and adjoining is Independence Hall, where the Liberty Bell first sounded out the notification to the public that the Declaration of Independence had been signed. These buildings are now converted into museums, and many curious things connected with our beginnings as a nation are to be seen. The Liberty Bell, of course, takes precedence of all others.

The next stop was at Washington, where I was joined by Dr. J. L. Sutton, he having preceded me to Washington, where we spent several days. Our visit Sunday morning to Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was a notable and enjoyable event. This beautiful church is built of white Georgia marble, costing, it is said, one million dollars, and considered the handsomest church in Washington. Dr. Chappell, the pastor, a brother of our Dr. Chappell of the Sunday School Department, is enjoying a large measure of success, thus vindicating the wisdom of building that church. The congregation was immense, over 2,000 with about 150 standing in the aisles to the close of the service, with the large galleries upstairs filled. It is said to be this way every Sunday. The income of the church is said to be about $20,000 annually by offerings. The steward who informed us said that they received as a rule through the offerings during the fall and winter months an average of $500 every Sunday. The pastor's salary is $4,200 annually, and of course there are many expenses.

The preaching of Dr. Chappell, while not intended to be scholarly, was of the very highest order, according to my judgment, and was intensely human, and evangelical to the core. He interspersed his sermon with anecdotes by way of illustration, and the congregation both laughed and wept. Eight or ten persons joined the church at the morning service, some on profession of faith; one was baptized.

On Sunday evening we attended Calvary Baptist Church, where we heard General Ballington Booth speak on the work of the Volunteers of America. Of course, it was a great service, and the collection which followed was a wonder. The Adjutant could hardly take it home! There were $20 bills and all kinds of money. If anyone doubts this, ask Dr. Sutton.

We saw the National Capitol, the House and Senate in action, and other features of beautiful Washington. I went up the Washington monument, and over into Virginia, while Brother Sutton visited a boys' school out in the country.

Altogether, the trip was worth while, and the clergy rate made expenses lighter than one would suppose. I would therefore remind the preachers that if they would "see America first," they had better be in a hurry while Uncle Sam still issues clergy permits at half rates, good all over the United States.

Yours fraternally,
H. S. JOHNS,
Chaplain Louisiana State Penitentiary.
Baton Rouge, La., November 10, 1919.

To those great minds digging deep into the rich treasury of nature and finding hidden stores of truth, there comes a deep and sincere spirit of reverence and joy, akin to that which is felt by those who dwell in the secret place of the Most High. Nature, in her profoundest depths, is a sincere worshiper of the Creator. Men of great souls are never scoffers or irreverent. Nature is but the material manifestation of God. Ignorance of the material world and natural law is a handicap to the true and broad interpretation of His written word.—E. N. Evans.

METHODISM IN CLARKSDALE, MISS.

(We take the liberty of reproducing from the Clarksdale Daily Register of November 17 the account below of the progress of Methodism in the splendid little city of Clarksdale, Miss. Rev. E. Nash Broyles is the gifted pastor under whose leadership such great results have been achieved. —Editor.)

In view of the meeting of the North Mississippi Annual Conference at Aberdeen on Wednesday, November 19, the local Methodist church has completed its report for the year's work. As exhibited in the report the year has been a very fruitful one.

The Woman's Missionary Society has increased its membership more than 40 per cent, until now it has 124 members and has raised during the year approximately $2400. The bazaar just finished netted them more than $1000. Their meetings have been regular and well attended; and the programs have been interesting and instructive.

The Sunday school is not surpassed by any Sunday school organization of the Conference. Its workers are consecrated and spiritual and its attendance has maintained a high percentage. The work done is thoroughly in accordance with standards advanced by the General Sunday School Board and most efficiently executed by well prepared teachers. Two classes in teacher training are preparing teachers that will equal those of any other school in the church. In membership, the Sunday school has increased 65 per cent during the year, having now a total of 412.

The Centenary cause was taken care of in the early part of the year with a subscription in cash and notes of more than $10,000, the cash in hand running above $2500.

The pastor, presiding elder, local, district, Conference and general work have all been paid in full or more. More than $7000 has been paid on the church debt.

Every department of the church has worked with harmony and efficiency and, financially, the income during the year has been more than $20,000.

During the year 251 members have come into the church, making now a total membership of 541, after deduction for all losses. There have been 36 removals by death and otherwise. Losses, of course, are to be expected. The church membership has had an increase since the last Conference of 65 per cent.

Of the cradle roll department, 42 infants and small children have been haptized. Of those members who have come into the church on profession of faith, 37 have been baptized. The local church has taken the responsibility for the building of a church and parsonage in China and for the support of a missionary. The church in China will bear the name: "The Clarksdale Methodist Church." These causes constitute the specific purposes for which the Centenary funds already subscribed will be directed.

When the sun is setting here, it will be rising on "The Clarksdale" church in China. When it is setting there, it will be rising here. So from henceforth we shall have the unique experience of having the sun never set on Clarksdale Methodism.

LET US GIVE THANKS.

"What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?" (Psa. 116:12.)

The Psalmist had been delivered from mighty trouble. God had just put away the chastening rod and David rose again to the stature of a godly giant. He who orders and governs all, from the "fall of a sparrow to the sweep of a planet," had delivered the Psalmist to sorrow and travail. "The sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of hell gat hold upon me: I found trouble and sorrow." But he arises from his humiliation. His winged soul, now chastened, purified, unconfined, mounts upward in sweeping, ever-widening circles singing this sublime psalm of thanksgiving. The peak of his emotion is reached in the impassioned period: "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?"

Unlike the Psalmist, too many of us fail to see a beneficent spirit in the recurring periods of sorrow and joy. Sorrow comes we know not why. We criticize, complain of God's injustice, and come from under the chastening rod having lost all the disciplinary value the ordeal was meant to bring. When the period of deliverance is come and the joyful Davids are exclaiming, "Thou, O God! hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling," too many of us recognize this return of peace as a natural sequence, forgetting that all that affects human life and its relations is not accidental, but is designed and ordered of God.

The President's proclamation has been published, and grateful Thanksgiving Day has come and gone. The American Indian observed six thanksgiving occasions a year; let us be thankful that we observe only one if we must be pagan as he—filling the stomach and starving the soul. "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?"

This has been for the American people an unordinary year. They seem to be a chosen and peculiarly favored people. God's smile is turned this way. Peace is still enthroned. The land is blessed with plenty. So, around twenty million happy firesides the fathers of America will gather with their family circle with their children upon their knees and their wives by their side, happy and prosperous, praising the Almighty for the blessings of life. Contrast this with fathers and husbands of the old world with their gloom and mourning in broken firesides where hunger crouches, famine lurks, and disease treads. God prosper us in the ways of peace, and teach it to those of the old world!

Barring an industrial unrest which fortunately has not thus far assumed very serious proportions, there was never so much for which the nation should be happy. Friendly relations with the nations abroad are enjoyed. At home, the lines of class distinction were never so completely obliterated, the highest claim to recognition never so completely admitted to the humblest man as at this Thanksgiving. If there was ever a tendency upon the part of the moneyed class to dominate, how completely the effort has failed, for the honest laborer with tanned face is the recognized peer of any with his gold and soft white hands. And though a companion to the smut and the grime and the consuming heat of the furnace room, if he is honest and knows his job, he is a hero and a king among men.

Then material blessings for which, this thanksgiving season, we are grateful, who can appraise ther worth? From out her lavish horn Autumn has poured ungrudgingly every product of the soil. The hand wooed the soil no more persistently or ardently than in former years, but fields and meadows responded with a harvest whose worth is greater than we ever knew. The national strength which a year ago was mightily engaged in the crude art of destruction, is transfigured, finding expression this Thanksgiving in a grand, spectacular assault upon the harvest fields.

Our armies have been demobilized, but men in unending columns with a rhythmic swing are treading the plains. The war horse has been unharnessed, but proud steeds drawing peaceful chariots are charging along the highways. The wide-spreading tumult is one of peaceful sounds, and happy voices singing the songs of the harvest. In many ways things, institutions, and methods which have tormented and destroyed society are this Thanksgiving transformed into instruments of blessing.

"What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me? I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all his people. I will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the Lord."

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

"Thursday, November 13," is date of the Advocate which has just come in and been read—Conference announcements and all. On the title page appears the picture of Rev. J. E. Thomas, and, being in a community where once he served as pastor, it has given occasion for thought as I have heard on all hands the high esteem in which he was held—his very name as ointment poured forth—and I have said, "Why should it not be so with us all?"

"The Rod of a Coming Preacher," by Stauffer, on page ... has much to give us pause. It recalls a conversation, recently, with one of our thoughtful and most liberal laymen, in which he deplored our present-day disposition of seeking for popular preachers by the pews and the "evident decline of the ministry," as he termed it, in the too frequent question, "How much does it pay?" as to appointments.

While with other callings and lines of business "money may make the mare go," such must find no echo with the ambassador for Christ. He must learn the lesson that "to him to live is Christ," and "in whatsoever state, therewith to be content." His must be a remuneration in souls—souls for his hire must be the full proof of his ministry in the eyes of men. In connection with this thought, come the lessons from that lamented patriarch, Rev. H. P. Lewis, of whom Dr. Watkins writes so well, and who will live in memory while others who sought the things of the world will be forgotten.

Those facts revealed by the Centenary Campaign by Brother Holmes are worthy of and should have careful, prayerful consideration by the church. His discoveries in the Baton Rouge District obtain too largely throughout our territory, and call for correction. Especially would we emphasize that feature which applies to Sunday schools on the circuits—the utter impossibility of the pastor's presence calls for a greater interest on the part of our laymen. Having lived within the bounds of a circuit and being especially interested in the Sunday school movement, I have found our greatest need in that work to be consecrated, equipped laymen. Were it not for a few zealous women, this work would go undone; and while I would in no wise discount or discourage their interest, there would be a greater interest in the community and a greater work for the church if the laymen would take the lead. A brother of another communion said to me recently, "A church without a Sunday school is a dead church."

Men who can discourse well on other topics, refuse to teach the boys of the community in the lessons of truth and morality. Fathers who can preside with dignity over political or other gatherings, hesitate to lead in one of the greatest movements of modern times. "The church without a live Sunday school, is a dying church" applies to Methodism as well as others.

"MARCHING ON."

By Rev. A. H. Williams.

The Methodist Church, we are told, is "marching on," and the $53,000,000 recently provided for mission purposes would appear so to indicate, and all the more when we consider with this the fact of the triumphant "Centenary Celebration." Expensive preparations, at least, are being made in an effort to be in proper readiness for a stupendous service of some kind. Bishop Mouzon, at Columbus, probably indicated the programme in part when he said, "Christianize America." The Bishop, however, was most applauded, and was honored with the Chautauqua salute, when he mentioned "wiping out altar against altar" among American Methodist Churches. To some this may have indicated a desire on the part of the Bishop for a union of American Methodist Churches; to others it may have suggested the elimination of the M. E. Church, South. But to none, perhaps, did it signify the withdrawal of the M. E. Church from the Southern territory of the United States, nor was the thought specially entertained as to who was responsible for the altar against altar among the American Methodist Churches.

"Go teach all nations," said the Savior, and "The world is my parish" was the slogan of Mr. Wesley. There may be too many churches, and more of the Methodist kind than are strictly needed, but, also, there may be a superfluity of "stores against stores" in many of the towns, and more or less of needless competition in the political world; but in a free country there must be competition in the different professions and pursuits. The candidate for office would like it, no doubt, if the "other fellow" should stay out of the ring entirely, and this same would often suit the merchant. St. John, even, was of this mind when he found "others casting out devils in the name of Christ." John possessed authority, but was impressed that he must monopolize and forbid proceedings, unless the others should join his company. No church may secure exclusive control of the plan of God's great salvation, or very often, of a given territory—generally there are others. John was much disturbed and reported to the Savior; the Master said, "Let them alone; they that be not against us are for us." Competition was allowable so long as John was intact and free in his own movements.

A great school had for a motto among the pupils, "Rivals in a divine art." Churches, it may be said, are rivals in the divine art of doing good. To the church at Philadelphia, of the Revelations, it was said, "Hold fast that thou hast, that no man take thy crown." Also it was said to this same church, "Behold I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." God is supreme and can care for churches when they care for themselves and for His work.

A "Church Alliance" might be desirable at times, but alliance with God is the greatest essential. America and France, with England and the others, were a wondrous alliance, and were used of God in the colossal effort to overthrow the agency which threatened to destroy the liberties and peace of well-nigh the entire race, but the country of the American soldier remained independent; and this was also true of France and of all the others.

The American Methodist Churches might combine, and yet remain independent—unless, perchance, some special communion should wish to be supreme and to play the monopolist.

Two chief reasons are mentioned by such as favor Methodist Unification: 1. To prevent "Overlapping and altar against altar;" 2. To make stronger the Methodist movement for extending the Kingdom of Christ. But a Methodist "Alliance," minus the abolition of a well defined church identity, could make possible these worthy and much desired purposes. The M. E. Church, South, as a distinct denomination, precisely as now existing, and the same of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with any American Methodist Churches—white or black—which might wish to enter the Alliance, would, of course, make a great ecclesiastical combination. A "Commission" appointed by the General Conference of these several American Methodist Churches could easily take in hand any work upon which the churches should probably unite. Any business upon which two or more churches should combine might be referred to this Commission for management—provided always that the indorsement of the General Conferences of the churches concerned should be secured and proper provisions made for the expenses of the enterprises undertaken. The question of "altar against altar" could easily be handled by this Commission.

This would make possible a united Methodist Church on all questions demanding a combined effort, and at the same time leave each church intact as to name and method, and free to proceed in a manner peculiar to itself, being at liberty to withdraw from any joint enterprise by giving proper and due notice, and also to dissolve connection with the united Commission, should conditions appear to make needful. Under this plan Ephraim could find no cause to vex Judah, and Judah naturally could possess no antagonism toward Ephraim. This, too, would harmonize with the plan of the National Allies, which resulted so effectively in protecting the liberties of humanity and the interests of the countries immediately concerned.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has done amazingly well in extending the Kingdom of Christ, and by His favor and help can, no doubt, proceed, as always, to carry out the high purposes of church organization. But "Help us to help each other, Lord," is in order among churches, just as among individuals. Proper independence, however, is better than "surrender," and liberty is preferable to unification entanglements and the consequent "yoke of bondage."

BAPTISMAL EVANGELIZING.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

That ritualism is one of the rocks on which vital Christianity has been wrecked is a matter of common history. On this rock Judasim went to pieces, and Romanism became not only an obsolete religion, but a monster machine of religious bigotry and of spiritual persecution. And on this same rock of formality and ritualism, the church of England had become almost Spiritless when the Holy Club at Oxford, led by the Wesleys, began its revitalizing work in the eighteenth century. And if the modern Christian churches do not fall at the same point, then history will be changed.

The deeply spiritual mesages of Bishop Kilgo at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, in which he so earnestly exhorted our pastors to preach the old doctrines, and to demand of our people a genuine spiritual life, were from one who had the vision of a prophet. But over against this recognized danger of ritualistic death, there was the other question of adding members to the church, for without a normal increase the church would die for lack of a constituency. Therefore, the writer suggested during an enthusiastic and spirited discussion of the subject on the floor of the Confcrence that our strongest competitor sister denomination, the Baptist church, was making a problem in evangelism that our leaders seemed to know but little of, in the matter of making an idol of water baptism. Following this suggestion on the floor of the Conference, a brother preacher took us to task for being too much concerned at this point, and seemed to think that the trouble was more imaginary than real. But it so happened that that very day, in the home of the good Baptist hostess where we were being entertained, we picked up her church paper, the Baptist Chronicle of Nov. 13th, and read this report of evangelism on Pecan Island, La., Rev. S. O. Oliver, of Abbeville, being the pastor evangelist:

"Some thirty-odd years ago there was an organization on Pecan Island known as the Pecan Island Baptist church. Rev. Joe Berwick, who had been their pastor, went over to the Methodists and the church finally disbanded, yet some of the old members are still living on the island. In the meantime, other Baptist folks came to the island, some of whom had been baptized by Brother Lucus, Brother Schilling and Brother McLendon. Last year Brother Weil went down on the island and baptized several. Brother Harvey Roberts, who had been baptized by Brother E. B. Black and ordained by the Jennings Baptist church, and is now living on the island, baptized several young people.

"I went down and remained a week with these good people and organized them into a Baptist church, after doing some very plain preaching along doctrinal lines. Besides effecting the organization, we baptized four, three of whom were Methodists, and three others have been approved for baptism."

We take it for granted that this is no exception to the reports common from Baptist meetings, and that the type of evangelism practiced in this meeting is common in practically all of the present-day Baptist revivals, as all who attend their meetings know.

From this report it is evident that a water-god of baptismal ritualism was as real as Judaism's standing on the street corners in pompous prayers and in meaningless fastings and almsgivings; or as Romanism's sacred days and religious seasons, that are only substitutes for vital piety.

It will be observed, by careful reading, that the emphasis in this revival effort was on water baptism, "plain preaching on doctrinal lines," and the peculiar note of triumph in the "baptism" of three Methodists, three-fourths of the total number baptized.

This type of evangelism grows out of the theory that baptism is vitally important and that "we are the only church authorized to administer it, and all those who claim the right except our ministers are impostors, with no authority from God to baptize; and so we must utterly disregard their so-called baptisms." Given, then, first the ritualistic water-god, that our "baptism" is the paramount thing in evangelism, and then that since we have the only true church of Christ, it is our business to proselyte all heretics to our membership, and give them our indispensable water-god blessing, it is the natural thing that this evangelist should say nothing about a regeneration or reformation, and make so much of baptizing again these Methodist converts who had received only a heretical baptism. Religious bigotry, it will be observed by all students of history, develops in three stages of (1) seclusionism—"we are the 'IT' ecclesiastically"—close communionism; (2) proselytism—"subdue all heretics to our true faith"; (3) persecution—"if we can't persuade them, we will compel them." The Baptists seem to have reached the second stage of this program. Whether they will ever get to the last stage remains to be seen, but the Jews and the Romanists did, and this is sufficient to warn the Christian world that religious bigotry is dangerous.

Of course, our duty as a church to preach a spiritual gospel and to continue to lead the world-wide forces of allied Christianity is clear, and if we cannot live with such a program, then we should uncomplainingly "die the death of the righteous." But, in the meantime, had we not better keep our eyes open and our ears unstopped to what is going on about us and teach our people likewise to see and to hear?

PLEASE CORRECT.

Dear Brother Carley—Your printer in The Advocate of November 27 makes me say that "Uncle" Joe Brooks and my father "were friends and comrades in the University." That sounds nice, but it is not true. Neither one ever rubbed his back against a university wall. They were friends and comrades in the itinerancy—the traveling connection of Episcopal Methodism.

Nor did I at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference present Brother W. W. Mitchell with a "bouquet of chysanthemums" to place on the grave of his brother John. It was a bouquet of pure white roses, as fine as I could procure at the big Aberdeen greenhouse.

First Installment on Centenary Pledges ☛Past Due!

It is conservatively estimated that the income of the membership of our Church for 1918 was more than one billion dollars. A tenth of that amount is more than one hundred million dollars. Who can claim, with his hand on the Bible, that less than one-tenth belongs in the Lord's own treasury? If a Jew's religion four thousand years ago was worth that much to him, who has the effrontery to deny that a twentieth-century Christian is under even greater obligationns to Him through whom all wealth comes?

GENEROSITY IN PROMISE IS A GOOD THING, BUT 100% HONESTY IN PAYMENT IS BETTER.

Second Installment on Centenary Pledges Due January 1, 1920

We talk boastfully about our great generosity in promising $53,000,000 in five years. Of course, when we do that, we are thinking of our contemptibly low standard of giving in the past. The point is that we haven't even scratched the surface of our resources and have not yet reached the point of JUSTICE to the Lord, to say nothing of GENEROSITY. No Church that has any pride can afford to fall below 100 per cent in collection of Centenary pledges.

DON'T WAIT TO BE ASKED, but see the Centenary Treasurer of your Church or mail him a check. In case of removal, pay your Centenary pledge at Church where pledge was made. HANDSOME IS THAT HANDSOME DOES.

"Oh, mother, please come quickly and see what I've found."

"What is it, dear? Bring it into the kitchen. I'm so busy with my baking I can't go out just now to look at anything."

"All right then," and in a moment a small, excited boy rushed into the big kitchen and held out for his mother's inspection a tiny yellow kitten.

"Look at this mother," he said joyously.

"Why, Douglas Brown, where in the world did you ever find it? I never saw such a homely little kitten in all my life. It's thin and dirty and my—what a horrid color! You'd better take it right back where you got it. Don't you think we have enough cats of our own with Blackie's three babies, without adopting homely stray ones?"

"But, mother, please let me keep just this one. It'll surely get run over by the automobiles if I put it back in the road. And besides, we've never had a yellow cat before. All of ours are just the common colors like gray and black and white. I know it'll look lots better after I've washed it, and I just love it—it's so cute."

"But, Douglas, think of seven cats! Why, I'm nearly crazy now with so many under my feet. I don't approve of your keeping it at all, but you can ask your father when he comes in to dinner."

"Goody—he'll let me keep it, I know," and the boy, hugging the kitten up close to him, ran out of the house and down to his favorite seat on the stone wall to wait until his father should come into sight.

Some time later, when the big man and the little boy walked into the house there was a very happy expression on the latter's face as he said: "It's mine, mother. Daddy says I may keep it forever and ever"—

"Oh, wait a moment, Doug," interrupted his father, "not so fast. I didn't say anything about forever and ever. I told you I had decided we would keep only one of the new kittens, but that for three or four weeks you could put your yellow friend in the barn with Blackie's family and let her bring them all up together. We'll keep our eye on them, and then when they're big enough to take care of themselves, we'll decide which one we want to keep and give the others away. But mind you, I want a cat that's good for something—not one that's just handsome and nothing else.

"Come, let's go out in the barn now while mother is putting dinner on the table and see how Blackie likes her new baby."

But Blackie didn't fall in at all with Mr. Brown's plans, and would have nothing to do with the little yellow kitten. The moment Douglas put it down beside the other kittens in the big basket she spit at it and humped up her back as much as to say, "Don't come near me, you homely thing, I want nothing to do with you. My three beautiful kittens are enough for me to take care of. Be off at once."

Then Douglas said appealingly: "Oh, daddy, please let me take the poor little thing into the kitchen and keep it in a box back of the stove. Blackie will never let it stay here without hurting it. But I'd love to take care of it."

"I'm willing, Douglas, but you'll have to ask mother what she thinks about it. She's the one that has the say about the kitchen, you know."

"You ask her, too, will you please, daddy?"

"Why, yes, Doug, if you want me to. But come, she's calling us now."

Mother did not yield at once to the request that was made to her, but after much arguing and teasing was finally won over. She told Douglas that he might keep the yellow kitten in the kitchen if he would promise to take all the care of it and keep it out of her way as much as possible.

"It won't be long before you'll be giving it away anyway, so I guess I can stand it for a few weeks."

Then followed a most interesting time for Douglas. From the very first he had taken a strange interest in the little stray kitten, and gave it as much care and attention as ever Blackie gave to her babies. And he was quickly rewarded for his trouble, for although little Yellow Coat did not grow beautiful she was clean and fat, quick as a flash and the best natured little kitten in the world. Even mother admitted this. Of course it was still a horrid yellow color, with one ear half gone and its tail just a mere stub but its eyes showed the stuff it was made of and promised well for its future.

But mother still regarded it with disdain and Blackie treated it in the most scornful of cat fashion. Each day when she brought her young family into the kitchen and caught sight of the yellow kitten she would draw them aside as much as to say: "Don't go near Yellow Coat. She is only a wild thing and won't stay here long. Did you ever see a decent cat of such a color as that? You, my beautiful kittens, will stay here always, but in a few days this young upstart will be gone."

Now, as the days went by, Douglas became more and more attached to Yellow Coat and could not help saying often: "Oh, daddy, when are we going to know which kitten we shall keep? I just can't bear to think of letting Yellow Coat go. I love her more than all the others."

"Wait a little, boy; I'm pretty fond of Yellow Coat myself, but I want to be sure"—

"Sure of what, daddy?"

"Sure that she's worth keeping Doug."

And then one day something happened that made Father Brown sure which kitten he wanted to keep.

It was at noontime when father and mother and Douglas were in the kitchen. Blackie was there, too—all close to the stove with her family. They had finished drinking their milk and sat winking and blinking in the warm sunshine.

"My, aren't they handsome kittens!" said Mother Brown. "I hardly know which one is the handsomest. What do you think, father?"

But father did not answer for just then there came a loud purring and scratching at the screen door, and Douglas ran to unlock it.

In bounded little Yellow Coat and made straight for the spot where Father Brown was standing. She looked proudly up in his face and then dropped a big mouse right down at his feet. Around it and around it she walked and then rubbed up against his leg for praise.

Father didn't say anything for a moment, but looked first at Douglas and then at mother and smiled.

Well, well, you're what I call a smart kitten, Yellow Coat, and I guess there's no question but that you're the fellow we want to keep. What do you say, mother?"

"But the others are so handsome, father."

"Yes, but 'Handsome is that handsome does,' and Blackie and Silver Tail and Spotty will do for the beauties of the family. What we need now is a cat that can catch mice; the barn's got altogether too many of them. Are you satisfied, Doug?"

"You bet! I knew all along we'd keep Yellow Coat, for I knew what kind of a cat you wanted."

And as Douglas took the yellow kitten up in his arms Blackie gathered her family about her humbly and walked through the kitchen into the woodshed, as though she realized what was in store for her three beautiful kittens.—Exchange.

THE REVIVAL.

A significant feature of present-day Methodism is the earnest desire, manifest in all quarters, for a revival movement that will make the church a vital spiritual force in a world that is sadly confused and troubled, that will bring anew the joy of salvation to thousands of church members who have become lukewarm in their faith and experience, and that will bring other thousands who have never known the Lord into a conscious relationship to him through the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit. This intense longing for a fresh work of grace in and through the church is evidenced by the words that are being spoken and written by those who are the recognized religious leaders of the people, and by the plans that are being made by the duly constituted authorities to prepare the church for just such a gracious outpouring of the Spirit of God as will satisfy the deepest yearnings of our heart.

The recent Address of the College of Bishops dealing with this subject is such an appeal as should bring us all to a serious and prayerful self-examination before God that we may discover the state of our own hearts and the motives that actuate us as we continue in the ministry to which we have been called. It is such a document as reveals to us the intensely spiritual concern our chief pastors feel for those over whom they have care, and the passionate longing of their hearts for an enduement of power that will make the church of God mighty "as an army with banners."

The definite plans of the connectional boards of the church and the action of Annual Conferences in dealing with this parmount issue, all look forward to a year of evangelistic effort that ought to make this a memorable period in the history of the church. From every direction the call comes to give the gospel to the world and to bring the world to Christ. High over all, we believe that God himself is calling us to a service that will stir our own hearts and bless a multitude of lives for which we must give account.

We cannot begin too soon to get ready in our own lives and in our work with our people for this visitation of divine grace. It will come if we long for it and get ready for it. Never has God failed to satisfy those who hungered and thirsted after righteousness. The prayers of his people have always been heard and answered. The past glows with the record of what "the arm of the Lord hath wrought" in turning the people unto himself through the faithful efforts of those whom he had called into his service. As we give ourselves now to self-examination, prayer, the reading of the Word and meditation upon the truth contained therein, to the preaching of the cardinal doctrines of evangelical Christianity, and to consecrated service for the spiritual awakening of the church and the world, we shall hasten the coming of the day and the hour that will mark a new era in the religious life of the land.

WE'LL DO IT THIS TIME.

At its meeting last October, the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate unanimously authorized a campaign to raise the subscription list of the Advocate to a minimum of 10,000 by March 15, 1920.

The question of raising the subscription price to $2.00 a year was seriously considered. Most of our Conference organs have already gone to that price, and we are informed that one, at least, has definitely decided to put its price at $2.50 a year. This general increase has become necessary on account of the tremendously increased cost of every item connected with the printing business. It is in keeping, too, with the higher price levels of all commodities.

Instead of increasing the subscription price of the Advocate, however, our Committee chose the alternative of raising the number of subscribers to a minimum of 10,000 by the date mentioned above—March 15, 1920. The Manager of the Advocate was instructed to prorate among the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences, on the basis of the present number of subscriptions from each of them, the neccessary number of new subscriptions to bring the total number to 10,000, and to furnish these figures to the members of the Publishing Committee from each Conference for distribution among the districts. These figures were included in the report of the Conference Boards of Christian Literature and were adopted by each of the three Conferences. The action of the Publishing Committee thus became the action of the Conferences as a whole, and we confidently expect the goal of 10,000 subscribers to be reached even before the date set—March 15, 1920.

We are confident of this result because we know the mettle of Louisiana and Mississippi Methodist preachers, and because we know how ready our people are to respond to any call in the interest of the church. We are entering upon an unusual era in the history of religious activities. The church is face to face with the greatest opportunities—and the greatest responsibilities—that have ever confronted it. We believe it has the will to DO what needs to be done if it can be brought to KNOW what the need is. No better way has yet been devised for keeping our people constantly in touch with the vital activities of our own great Methodism than by the circulation of our church papers. We are thoroughly convinced that no pastor can do a better thing in the very beginning of the year's work to promote all the interests of the church throughout the year than to put the church paper into the homes of all his people. A ten days' intensive campaign to this end would be an investment of inestimable value in promoting the interests of the church that will occupy the attention of preacher and people alike throughout the year.

Brethren, a little work now in extending the circulation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate will be richly repaid in the days to come by the intelligent and helpful co-operation that will inevitably grow out of reading the Advocate week by week. We count on you to do your part in developing a mighty host of intelligent Methodist church members in our three patronizing Conferences through the circulation of your own official church paper—the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

THE BAPTIST $75,000,000 CAMPAIGN.

We were informed on Monday of this week, by Rev. J. L. Wise, pastor of the Valence Street Baptist Church, of this city, that a telegram from Dr. L. R. Scarborough, of Nashville, Tenn., General Manager of the Campaign, stated that the pledges had totalled over $80,000,000 at midnight Sunday, with reports from several States lacking. The quota for New Orleans Baptists was $87,000; the pledges amounted to $172,000. We congratulate our Baptist brethren upon the magnificent success of their campaign, and bid them Godspeed in their great forward movement.

WHAT WE WANT.

We want to publish in the Advocate this year at least one report from every pastoral charge in the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences. There are nearly five hundred of these charges: it is evident, therefore, that the reports will have to be brief, and that they will have to be distributed throughout the year. But we hope that every pastor will take the time and the trouble, if trouble it is, to let the church at large know how the work is progressing in his charge. The reports need not be long—it is surprising how much can be told in a hundred words—but they should be clearly written. We know that this news from the churches is read with great interest by many people, and we hope to have an unusual amount of it this year. Let the reports begin to come in.

MEETING OF CHURCH EDITORS.

The editors of Southern Methodism will hold a meeting at Birmingham, Ala., on December 17, for the purpose of considering various questions in connection with the interests they represent. Those in attendance will be the guests at luncheon of the Alabama Christian Advocate on the day of the meeting.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"Dr. Holloman's letters alone are worth the price of the Advocate," writes an appreciative subscriber from Utica, Miss.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell writes from Fresno, Cal., that he is becoming adjusted to his work, and that the outlook is encouraging.

"I am delighted to be returned to Winona station—these are fine people," writes Rev. J. B. Randolph, of the North Mississippi Conference.

Mrs. H. N. Brown, of the Lafayette District, was the first woman delegate to answer "present" at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference.

Two highly esteemed friends from Pocahontas, Miss., Messrs. Baker and Dewees, honored the office of the editor with a call while in the city recently.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, who was appointed to the Slidell charge at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, honored the Advocate office with a call while in the city a few days ago.

We are glad to learn that Sister Massey, wife of Rev. J. M. Massey, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, is slowly improving in health after an illness of many months.

Rev. J. S. Rutledge has made a fine beginning in the new year's work at Denham Springs, La. He received two members into the church, and secured a new subscription to the Advocate the first week. Good!

The official board, the Sunday school, and the Woman's Missionary Society of Newton, Miss., adopted strong resolutions expressing appreciation of their pastor, Rev. W. A. Hays, and asking for his return for another year.

The Daily Democrat-Times, of Greenville, Miss., makes editorial mention of the return of Rev. E. S. Lewis as pastor of the Methodist church at that place, and pays him a high tribute as citizen, Christian gentleman, and preacher of the Gospel.

Rev. R. P. Fikes, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, but now of the Western North Carolina Conference, was appointed to Biltmore station at the recent session of his Conference. This is a beautiful little town very close to Asheville, N. C.

Brother P. A. C. Voss has been superintendent of the Sunday school of Felicity Methodist Church, this city, for twonty-three years. The teachers of the school presented him with a Bible recently as a birthday present in recognition of his faithfulness.

Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, in requesting us to change his Advocate from Zachary, La., to Estherwood, La., asks us to say that mail addressed to him at that point will reach him promptly.

Mrs. P. A. Cooper, a venerable saint of West Point, Miss., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for thirty years. She speaks of it as having been a great blessing in her life.

We are authorized to announce that, by an adjustment since the adjournment of the Mississippi Conference, Dr. C. M. Chapman will go to Poplarville, Miss., instead of to Newton, Miss.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, who was appointed Conference evangelist at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, will make his home at Canton, Miss., at which place he may be reached by correspondents.

Mr. Paul I. Templeton, of Meridian, Miss., requests us to state that he is open for engagements after December 15 as pastor's assistant or evangelical singer. He has had considerable experience in this kind of work.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer preached at Second Methodist Church, New Orleans, on the Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. J. A. Alford, was attending the sessions of the Louisiana Conference. He reports a good congregation, and a fine attendance at Sunday school.

Sister W. A. Powors, of Gilead, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, expresses her interest in the coming of a great revival to the church, and asks the readers of the Advocate to join her in prayer that its coming may be hastened.

Rev. W. L. Broome, formerly of North Mississippi, has been transferred from the East Oklahoma Conference to the West Oklahoma, and stationed at Norman. Our people are planning to build a great church in that university town in the near future.

Rev. R. E. Simpson, who served efficiently as pastor of South and East McComb, Mississippi Conference, after the transfer of Rev. A. B. Barry to the North West Conference, has re-entered Millsaps College, where he will receive the A. B. degree next June.

Sister Laura L. De Lap, of Natchez, Miss., has been a member of the M. E. Church, South, since September 16, 1856, and a reader of the Advocate most of the time since. She is strong in faith and happy in the conscious presence of the Lord whom she loves and serves.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, the presiding elder, announced at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference that the debt on the district parsonage of the Shreveport District has been entirely liquidated. This is one of the finest district parsonages in the Conference.

Rev. and Mrs Geo. Avery are happy over the arrival in their home of a son, George, Jr., on November 27. The Advocate extends congratulations. Brother Avery, who is well known in Mississippi, has recently joined the Texas Conference, and has been stationed at Katy, Tex.

We regret to learn of the death of Mr. J. W. Setloon, of Springfield, La., on Sunday night, December 7. He was a prominent citizen of the community and a member of our church. The interment took place on Tuesday afternoon, with Masonic rites. The Advocates extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Rev. W. B. Baker has been cordially welcomed by the people of his new charge, Verona, Miss. The good women of the church had the parsonage in readiness—fires lighted, dinner on the table, and the pantry well filled with good things to eat. No wonder Brother Baker writes: "I'm sure we have a very fine people to serve."

A personal note from Rev. R. G. Moore, of the Department of Geology, Soochow University, Soochow, China, speaks in high terms of the presidency of Bishop W. F. McMurry at the recent session of the China Mission Conference. Dr. E. H. Rawlings and Miss Mabel Howell were also visitors from the home land whose messages were inspiring.

Rev. E. M. Shaw expresses great pleasure in being returned to Houston, in the North Mississippi Conf., for the third year. He loves his people and they love him—as is evidenced by the many kindnesses he and his family have received at their hands. Plans are now being made to build several Sunday school rooms this year, and to repaint the church.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, one of our most gifted ministers, formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, was appointed to Winfield Memorial, Little Rock, Ark., at the recent session of the Arkansas Conference. This is a great church, with a membership of about eleven hundred, and a Sunday school of more than a thousand members.

Rev. W. N. Thomas, of the Mississippi Conference, a chaplain in the U. S. Navy, is now stationed at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Fort Lyon, Colo. He is ministering to nearly one thousand sick men and about two hundred on duty. He was welcomed home from sea duty by a two-months-old son, who is developing rapidly in the health-giving climate of Colorado.

Rev. W. W. Jones, formerly of Lula, Miss., has been warmly received by the people of his new charge, Shaw, Miss.

Rev. J. M. Alford has been cordially received at Mangham, La., on his return for the third year as pastor of that important charge. Not the least important of his plans for this year, is one to put the Advocate into every home in his charge.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Raleigh charge, Mississippi Conference, adopted resolutions expressing the high appreciation in which Rev. W. L. Linfield, for four years, presiding elder of the Newton District, is held, and expressing regret that the law of the church made necessary a severance of the kindly relations that had existed throughout that time.

Mr. A. L. Dietrich, well known in the Sunday school work of the church, has been appointed business manager of the Southern Assembly at Lake Junaluska, N. C. Extensive improvements are being made on the grounds and buildings at Lake Junaluska, and tentative programs have been outlined for many gatherings next summer at that beautiful spot.

Rev. Payton A. Sowell, a superannuate member of the Tennessee Conference, who made his home in New Orleans for awhile, is now living at Lawrenceburg, Tenn. He wields a facile pen, as our readers know, and the Lawrence Democrat his home paper, is publishing a series of interesting articles written by him concerning the days of the War Between the States.

Rev. N. E. Joyner affirms that "the reins have fallen to him in pleasant places" in Baton Rouge, La. The people loved their former pastor, Rev. C. A. Battle, and they know not how to do otherwise as to the new one. Brother Battle accomplished a great work at Baton Rouge during his five years' pastorate, and Brother Joyner has "entered into his labors."

Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, formerly presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference, left several days ago for his new position as professor of English Bible and University pastor, at Emory University, Georgia. Brother Lipscomb's record in the work of his Conference is ample proof that he will fill admirably the responsible position to which he has been called.

Owing to the fact that Bishop James Cannon, Jr., has been elected chairman of the Educational Campaign Commission, and also chairman of the Executive Committee of the Commission, his address, until further notice, will be No. 2, Evelyn Court, Nashville, Tenn. Residence in Nashville will enable him to give the great work to which he has been called the attention its importance deserves.

Unfortunately, the appointment of Rev. Julian S. Duncan did not appear in the list of appointments of the North Mississippi Conference furnished the Advocate. We take pleasure in stating that it is Robinsonville, Miss. We take pleasure, also, in expressing our appreciation of many courtesies at the hands of Brother Duncan while we were in attendance at the sessions of his Conference at Aberdeen.

The first round of quarterly conferences for the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, reached us too late for insertion in this week's Advocate. It will appear in full in next week's paper. The first few dates are as follows: Fernwood, at Fernwood, Dec. 28, 29; Magnolia, Dec. 28, 29; Tylertown, at Tylertown, Jan. 4; South and East McComb, at East McComb, Jan. 11; McComb Centenary, Jan. 11, 12.

Dr. Chas. F. Smith, for four years presiding elder of the Beaumont District, Texas Conference, is now stationed at Lufkin, in the Timpson District. The report of the Beaumont District for last year was most gratifying—614 additions to the church on profession of faith, collections for benevolences paid in full, salaries paid in full, 117 per cent subscribed on Centenary allotment. Dr. Smith has many friends in Mississippi, of which State he is a native.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss., passed highly complimentary resolutions concerning Rev. M. B. Sharbrough upon the completion of his fourth year as presiding elder of the Port Gibson District. The conference also unanimously asked for the return of Rev. N. B. Harmon, under whose pastorate the church has had a remarkably successful year. A debt of $9275 on the Annex was paid, and more than $1400 was paid on the Centenary pledges.

The women of the Montpelier circuit, North Mississippi Conference, faithfully co-operated with their pastor, Rev. W. L. Graves, in his work during last year. At Prospect Church, they painted the church inside, put in new lamps, paid their Centenary pledges, and helped pay the pastor's salary—all with "Sunday eggs." At Foster's Chapel, they gave the pastor and his wife a "good will shower," which was greatly appreciated. At Woodland, they beautified the choir and the chancel, and maintained a wide-awake Missionary Society.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, recently transferred from the Mississippi Conference to the Louisiana Conference and stationed at Rayne, La., passed through New Orleans last Thursday en route to his new home. While in the city he honored the Advocate office with a call. Many of our readers will recall that Brother Gunn has contributed a number of exceedingly interesting articles to the Advocate concerning his experience as a chaplain with the American Expeditionary Forces in France. We extend to him and his accomplished wife a most cordial welcome to the itinerant ranks in Louisiana.

THEY HAVE ACCEPTED THE SPECIAL PROPOSITION.

The Special Proposition to churches to put the Advocate into every home represented in their membership, which appears in another column in this issue, was made by the editor in person at each of the three patronizing Conferences. The first definite acceptance of the Proposition came from our church at Bernice, La., on Thursday, December 4, in the form of a check for $36.10 and a list of names representing every family in the membership of that church. The progressive board of stewards of that church, under the leadership of the faithful pastor, Rev. W. A. Mangum, included the amount in the budget, and acted promptly.

The second definite acceptance is from First Church, Baton Rouge, La., whose wise pastor, Rev. N. E. Joyner, informed us on December 5 that his splendid board of stewards included this item in the budget at its meeting on Monday evening, December 1, and that the names, accompanied by check, will be sent as soon as the list can be made out. This means that probably more than 300 copies of the Advocate will go to the membership of that wide-awake church each week.

We have received assurances from other churches that will take similar action in the near future. We will publish promptly the list of all churches accepting the Proposition.

A WORD OF THANKS FROM THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE, JACKSON, MISS.

Due to the pressure the last hour of the session of our Conference just closed in Meridian, I did not deem it wise to ask for even one minute of the time of the Conference to express to the preachers and laymen and members of the Methodist churches in Meridian our thanks for their thoughtful and generous contribution of $181 for the Methodist Orphanage on Thanksgiving morning.

I am taking this opportunity and this method of expressing to all who had part in this offering, my personal thanks for this act of appreciation, and thanks for the nearly two hundred children in the Orphans' Home for this thoughtfulness on your part. I trust each will appreciate the reason for my not doing this at the time.

With many thanks for the thoughtfulness and helpfulness of our pastors during 1919, and asking your continued co-operation in this work, I am

Yours fraternally,

B. F. LEWIS, Supt.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 3, 1919.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Only four missing! A letter received from Mrs. Reinbert, Superintendent of Publicity of the Keithville Auxiliary, brings to us the following interesting news:

"Keithville Missionary Society has sixteen members, every woman member of our church except four. The Mission Study Class is nearly as large as the auxiliary, having fifteen members. During the Week of Prayer every member of the society attended, with the exception of one, who was prevented by illness. We are trying to emphasize the extreme mission of the church—the saving of the world to the abundant life in Christ."

Harvest Day at First Church, New Orleans.

There is a new song of praise in the hearts of the women of First Church since their splendid Harvest Day celebration. The attendance was large and one could feel from the very beginning that the Spirit of God was present and that these good women had indeed come rejoicing, bringing in their sheaves of service.

The business program was skillfully led by the faithful president, Mrs. I. N. Niebergall. All reports were good. The financial report showed that the society had about doubled its pledge over last year.

The chairman of the nominating committee was introduced and in less than five minutes the report was adopted and every officer for the year was elected. Not one woman said, "I will have to beg to be excused." And, by the way, the new officers were the old officers to a woman, each gladly accepting her office for the year. This unusual harmony and devotion to service made it good to be there.

Mrs. C. F. Niebergall was in charge of the Harvest Day program. The curtain was drawn back and there stood a miniature harvest of corn and pumpkins and the like—a good background for Mrs. Niebergall's Scripture reading and her remarks, so full of love and devotion and thanksgiving to God. Mrs. Habans, all in white, stood in the midst of the harvest of plenty and told so beautifully of His wonderful goodness to us. But alas! there had been war, and the sheaves of famine and pestilence must be brought in. Peace and Plenty were there to remind us that "God is in his heaven and all is well with the world." The girls of the Young Women's Missionary Society represented War, Famine, Pestilence, Peace and Plenty. But this was not all. Each officer came, bringing in her sheaves of service. It was lovely, as each came to the platform, giving her sheaves to the Lord of the harvest, and telling what a joy her work had been during the year. Little Miss Emma Caffery came forward and spoke for the Juniors of the church, proving to all present that it was not just to treat the children as Cinderellas, but to be real fairy godmothers of love to lead them into loving service for Him. Little Miss Marian Niebergall was the Cinderella of the occasion—a neglected Japanese girl, hungering and thirsting for His love. Her dejection was complete. Little Miss Frances Foster was lovely as the redeemed Japanese girl, so changed because she knew Him.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Mission Study.

The reports of the conferences going in to the Central office show cause for rejoicing. There is an increased interest in the work, and more earnest study is being done, as will be noted by the following facts: There were 510 new adult classes formed and reported this quarter, 154 new Y. P., and 191 new Junior classes. North Georgia leads in Mission Study and North Alabama in Bible.

North Mississippi "also ran." We should and could have a class in every auxiliary in the conference. It is one of those things we "mean to do, we certainly mean to," but the three simple things necessary to be done, are not done. They are these:

1. Call the women together.
2. Decide upon book and order.
3. Send in card to Mrs. Steele, and your conference superintendent of Mission Study.

Try it if you never have. If you have already had one, revive the charming sensations you had and do it all over again with a new book, and some new additions to the class.

Do this now. What's the use of doing it if you wait a day too late?

MRS. FANT.

Shelby.

"Shelby Auxiliary celebrated Armistice Day by closing its accounts for the year, with every item up in full. We have thus a margin of four weeks to make preparation for a great "Harvest Day" celebration on December 3. Everybody is happy over it." (Shelby was the first last year to report a fine increase.)

This from Black Hawk.

"The Woman's Missionary Society observed the week of prayer and we feel it was a success. Each one seemed to get a new vision of what the Woman's Missionary Society was doing and could do to save the world. Our offering was possibly not what it might have been, yet we feel that God will bless our efforts."

Pickens to the Front.

"We have thirty members in our Society. During the week of prayer we never had less than sixteen present, and some days as many as thirty out. Our Thank Offering is eighty dollars now. The last day of the meeting, which was a bad day, five out of the sixteen present were charter members, and helped organize forty years ago. Miss Burton made a fitting talk and presented each of the five with roses, and they in turn responded with beautiful words."

NORTH MISSISSSIPPI NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The presence of Dr. J. W. Boswell at the recent session of our Conference was a benediction to us all.

Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, General Elementary Superintendent, rendered valuable service to the Sunday School Board and made a telling address to the Conference at our Sunday School Anniversary.

The Sunday School Board appointed Mrs. L. G. Fant, of Holly Springs, Conference Elementary Superintendent, appointed Mrs. W. T. Boswell, of New Albany, Conference Superintendent of Missionary Education, and Rev. J. E. Stephens, of New Albany, Conference Superintendent of Teacher Training.

These three workers are the best available people to be had as heads of their respective departments. Surely every presiding elder, pastor, superintendent, and teacher will co-operate with them to the fullest extent.

May we take this as our promise: "If you will ask, I will do." All power is back of this word. Then, "Let go, and let God." With this promise we dare to aim to bring our Conference to the Third Rank Standard during the year. The following is an outline of the aim for the Conference:

1. General Board plan of organization of field forces adopted by Conference Board.
2. Full-time employment of Conference Field Secretary.
3. At least one Department Superintendent.
4. Meeting of Conference and district officers held annually.
5. Fifty per cent of districts attaining Third Rank District Standard.

The first three points have been attained, the fourth point can be met easliy. The fifth point is where the work comes. Let all our forces center on that one point and make it a reality. You have a right to ask: "What is the good of all this standard business?" Here is the answer: It is a consecrated, organized effort to reach every individual for whom we are responsible and bring every one to a saving knowledge of Christ and train every one thus saved to be used of God to save others. It can be done if we go at it; and if we fail to do our best—then what?

The first thing we are called upon to do is to get back all the people we have lost out of our Sunday schools during the last two years and get all others possible. Ought this to be done? Of course it ought to be done. When? The sooner the better. The General Sunday School Board has planned to help in this task during the months of November and December. November has gone. So it must be done now. Some one might ask why not do this when the weather is good or wait until spring opens? The officers of the General Board will have something else to do then and so will we all. Now is the time. The hard part is to begin. Any school that cares to use the instruction and free printing of the General Board can write to Dr. C. D. Buila, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., or to your Field Secretary, R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

SOME THINGS UNCLE BILLY SAID AT THE TEACHERS' MEETING.

"Of course, Sister Jenkins, it is true that ev'ry good thing we have came to us out o' the past; but the past didn't give 'em to us just to glorify itself with, but for us to use in beautifyin' the present an' savin' the future."

"Paidology means child study, 'stead o' money study, like the first part o' the word seems to indicate. But I'm terribly 'frald most parents study money a heap more'n they do children."

"No soldier on a battle front is exposed to more perils than young folks who go out from home without Jesus Christ. An' that's why I want us to get everybody we can reach into this Sunday school."

"Le's join the Membership Campaign."

GOOD NEWS.

Many of the nervous, pale and debilitated are being helped to recover health and strength. This is good news.

They are taking Peptiron, which combines iron in the most agreeable, effective and up-to-date form, overcoming all the objectionable features of older and other preparations of iron. It comes in chocolate-coated pills—does not injure the teeth, does not leave an inky or metallic flavor in the mouth, and does not cause constipation.

Peptiron is a thoroughly scientific preparation, the ultimate result of careful study and research by one of the most successful of pharmaceutical chemists. It is a real, not a make-believe, iron tonic, especially beneficial in cases of pale, thin blood, weak, unstrung nerves, mental and physical exhaustion—makes the young more vigorous and the old less feeble. Peptiron is sold by all druggists.—Adv.

10 HENS LAY 8 EGGS A DAY. HOW IT'S DONE

Mr. Davis Shows How to Wake Up Idle Hens. Easily Tried.

"I have 10 hens and was getting 1 and 2 eggs a day. Since using Don Sung, my hens have improved so much that I am now getting 7 and 8 eggs a day. The results have been wonderful."—Henry Davis, 1324 30th St., Newport News, Va.

Mr. Davis wrote this letter in February, after a severe test in the coldest weather. Try it, as he did, and watch your hens stop loafing and start laying. Here's our offer:

Give your hens Doon Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She Mixed Sulphur with it to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

Black-Draught Cleans the Liver

Enthusiastic Texan Tells of Bad Fix He Was in and How He Got Out by Using Black-Draught Liver Medicine.

Holland, Texas.—Mr. J. N. Messer, who lives a short distance from here out in the country, says: "Black-Draught is without doubt the best liver medicine made. I do not hesitate to say it will do all it is recommended to do and more.

I am strong and healthy, but we all need a little active medicine once in a while, and Black-Draught is good enough for me. It does the work well and cleans the liver, carrying away bile, the easiest of any purgative I have ever seen.

Once, some years ago I had slow fever and my stomach was in a bad fix, and Black-Draught gave me relief and helped me a wonderful sight. It cured me of indigestion, and the bad feeling after eating. I keep it for my family, they use it and have for years, and too it saves doctor bills and is not expensive.

A stitch in time saves nine, and most sickness is caused by a bad liver. A few doses of Black-Draught fixes that, and I don't see why people don't use it, and they would see as I have, what a help it would be."

Ask your druggist for Thedford's Black-Draught.—Adv.

Labor endears rest, and both together are absolutely necessary for the proper enjoyment of human existence.—Robert Burns.

FROM REV. HILARY S. WESTBROOK.

My Dear Brother Carley—The year which has just passed was a most delightful one with us here on the Silver Creek charge. We had good revivals in the charge at each church, and the lives of the people were deepened spiritually. We had only a few accessions to the church, as almost all are already members of some branch of the militant church. The pastor's and presiding elder's salaries were paid in full, and about one hundred per cent more was paid on the benevolent claims than last year.

Truly, this has been the best year of our ministry. The people were thoughtful and kind to us all along during the year. Never have we served a finer and truer set of people than some of the people on the Silver Creek charge. Little did we think when we left on the morning of the 25th ult., for the seat of our Annual Conference, which was held in our immaculate new Central Church, at Meridian, Miss., that we were going to be assigned to a new field of labor for the new Conference year, but when the Bishop came on the scene on Monday morning, December 1, to read the appointments, we were appointed to the Montrose charge, in the Newton District, for another year.

We feel that when the new pastor, the Rev. H. J. Maddox, shall come to his splendid new charge, he will find the people true and kind, and ready to receive their pastor and his family among them. I bespeak for the pastor and the good people a gracious year in the Master's work. May God continue to be their defender and attend all of them with his free grace and heavenly benedictions in their work for Him is the prayer of their former pastor. God bless them continually.

Yours in His name.
HILARY S. WESTBROOK.

THE INTERCHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT IN MISSISSIPPI.

The Interchurch World Movement will hold its first State Training Conference for Mississippi in Galloway Memorial Methodist Church of Jackson, December 15 to 17th, inclusive.

This will be one of the most important and far-reachinng religious gatherings in the history of the State. Leading ministers, laymen and laywomen, from every county in the State will be present at this conference.

It is distinctively and fundamentally an Interchurch Conference. All denominations now participating in the movement, directly and indirectly, have selected denominational representatives who are expected to attend this conference. Invitations have been sent from the state headquarters in Jackson, Mississippi, to all such delegates.

The Interchurch World Movement has the indorsement of sixty denominational boards and interdenominational agencies of North America. It is a sympathetic, co-operative, interchurch movement, for the purpose of unifying the spiritual, moral, social and material resources of the evangelical Christian churches, that they may speak with one voice and act with one mind in those things that are common to all fraternal Christian bodies in order that the full impact of the spiritual and moral power of evangelical Christianity may be felt in any part of the world at any given moment in a united effort to find a Christian solution of the grave and world-inclusive problems of the present day—a solution that is definitely and fundamentally Christian.

The cardinal principle upon which the entire movement rests as a foundation, both sure and steadfast—a principle that must commend itself to every thoughtful and progressive Christian—is that of safeguarding and conserving the sacred and cherished family life of every denomination. Any statement to the contrary from whatever source is misleading and has no foundation in fact.

It is the first sane and untrammelled effort, since apostolic Christianity was shot to pieces by selfish and sinister influences, to bring together in cooperative effort all of the truly evangelical churches of Christ.

I solemnly believe that God has created this movement for such a time as this. It is at once the most miraculous evidence of the presence of God in the truly Christian life-forces of today and prophetic of the hastened coming of that Kingdom wherein we shall realize the essential democracy of the commonthweaith of God.

JAMES O. GROGAN,
Field Representative Alabama-Mississippi.

Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

YOUR CATARRH MAY LEAD TO CONSUMPTION

Dangerous to Use Treatment for Only Temporary Relief.

There is a more serious stage of Catarrh than the annoyance caused by foul breath, sores in the nose, nasal discharges, stopped-up air passages, and other distasteful features.

The real danger comes from the tendency of the disease to continue its course downward toward the lungs, where it may act as the exciting cause of dreaded consumption. Your own experience has taught you that the disease cannot be cured by sprays, inhalers, atomizers, jellies and other local applications.

S. S. S. has proven a most satisfactory remedy for Catarrh because it goes direct to its source. Get a bottle today, begin the logical treatment that gives real results. S. S. HAVE YOU SCROFULA?

How Sure it Is an Open Question as Many Think

It is generally said that scrofula is caused by impure blood, and in many cases it undoubtedly is. Scrofula in the neck affects the internal organs, especially the lungs, and if neglected may develop into consumption.

It causes many troubles, and is aggravated by impure air, nervousness, dull, bad days when you have no energy and want of proper exercise.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the medicine that has been used with so much satisfaction by three generations, is wonderfully successful in this ailment of scrofula. Give it a trial.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed, take Hood's Pills.—there is nothing better for biliousness or constipation.

Weak, Thin, Nervous People Should Tak Bitro-Phosphate

What It Is And How It Increases Weight, Strength and Nerve Force.

Judging from the numerous preparations and remedies which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, pale cheeks rosy and nerves strong, there are thousands and thousands of men and women who have tried these various means of getting a little more flesh and nerve strength without success.

Thousands and thousands are now trying to start some new treatment in the hope that it will succeed where others have failed. One preparation that will accomplish the object of the extreme specialist seems to be Bitro-Phosphate, which is inexpensive and is said to put on flesh and create strength in almost all cases within a reasonable length of time, or money back.

By feeding the nerve centers and by supplying the body cells with the necessary nourishment, Bitro-Phosphate should soon show a welcome transformation in the appearance, the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight is usually accompanied with a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes brighten, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION—While Bitro-Phosphate is unexcelled for the relief of nervousness, general debility, and those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing food.

subscriptions or magazines for the coming year. It matters not a bit to me what the Young Christian Worker, as the only Missionary paper for children published in our church, Miss Ethel Powell says she considers it invaluable in any Methodist home where there are children, because it not only teaches missions but because it develops the child so thoroughly with the mission work of the church.

I would urge every second vice president in the Conference to make a special appeal during the month to place the Y. C. W. in every Methodist home. This may seem an insignificant task for the month, but it may become the most significant work of the entire year. In the past missionaries have pointed that the call came through the printed page. Let us work in faith, believing that in the future North Mississippi shall have volunteers who shall go out as a result of our work in placing this missionary periodical in the hands of the children we are always dealing in futures.

One pastor of my acquaintance became so impressed with the importance of having the children of his church read this paper, that he paid for twenty subscriptions. He could think of no other way in which five dollars could be invested with such promise of great returns.

Perhaps many others will follow this preacher's example. Perhaps the Juniors would like to make a house to house canvass. However that may be, it is our work to get the Young Christian Worker in the homes of our people. We can do it, if we will.

Starkville, Como, Lexington, Kosciusko, and New Albany reported the

It don't make a mite o' difference how good a program you had planned for that missionary meeting if nobody wuz there except the pastor's wife and old Miss Ann Simpkins, who's deef in one ear and can't hear out o' the other.

The newspaper that printed the picture and story of a girl teaching a monkey how to talk and smoke would just as lief have told its readers about the cannibal chief who had been won to Christ by the foreign missionary.

Publicity ain't such an almighty big word as words go, but it's just about the biggest thing in the world when it comes to results. It's what put over the liberty loans and spoke for the Red Cross. It's sendin' the Centenary "over the top," and it'll give your little old, dry-as-dust missionary society a new lease on life if you'll use it right. I'm strong for publicity, I am. observance of the Week of Prayer service, with a splendid program rendered at each place.

WOMEN IN FEDERATED MISSION WORK.

The Federation of Woman's Foreign Mission Boards of North America is composed of forty foreign mission boards, the Foreign Department of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, and the Student Volunteer Movement. The purpose of the Federation is to promote greater efficiency in the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, to stimulate united prayer and study, to secure a fuller development of resources and a truer conception of the scope and purpose of woman's work for missions.

The work of the Federation is done through standing committees. There are four committees on home base and two on foreign fields. The committees on the home base develop plans and methods by which missionary information may be imparted through lecture courses, institutes, conferences, and normal study classes, promote student work in schools and colleges, establish summer conferences, and arrange for printing all publications authorized by the Federation.

The committees on foreign fields encourage the establishment of union institutions in non-Christian lands for the higher education of women and the preparation and publication of Christian literature for women and children in mission lands.

A work is possible through federated effort that is not possible through single boards or societies. Local missionary federations have been established in more than three hundred communities and are affiliated with the National Federation.

Women are strengthened by fellowship with women who are working for the same great cause and are made more efficient by knowing plans and methods which have been tried by other women and by other boards. The Federation has kindled greater interest and enthusiasm in the missionary enterprise, has enlarged the vision of the women of the church, and by mutual sympathy and united prayer larger plans have been made for the extension of the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ.—The Missionary Voice.

THE EUROPEAN DELEGATION.

(A word from Miss Bennett.)

Home again, and oh! so glad to be back in my native land where no yawning shell holes greet the eye, and where the sight of little starved, homeless children with a nameless burden in their faces does not sadden the heart on every hand.

We sailed from Montreal on the 29th of August, and reached New York on our homeward way, Sunday, October 26. The expressed wish of the Board of Missions had been that we begin work in stricken Belgium at once, so, after a brief stay in London, where we met and conferred with men who were already doing relief work there and in other parts of Europe (and were in a position, therefore, to give us much desired information), we crossed the English Channel and went at once to beautiful Brussels, the capital city of Belgium.

Brussels seemed the logical center for any work that we might begin. The Protestant Church, dating back to Huguenot days, has in the city a small orphanage, poorly housed and insufficiently equipped, giving shelter to fifty-three children. In God's providence, we were able to buy a good piece of property, with a boys' school building on it, just opposite this little orphanage, with the hope and desire that, co-operating with the membership of this Protestant church, we might be able to move these children into that building when it could be furnished and put in order and, in addition, make provision for a hundred more. This was our first seed-planting in Europe. We also secured a large house on one of the prominent corners of two of the best streets in the city, with the thought and prayer in our hearts that here a good, modern publishing plant, a tract repository, a small hall for religious and other services, and an up-to-date religious book store might be established. In connection with this, we hope that in the near future, in a house just back of this, a group of able deaconesses and trained nurses may live, working throughout the city wherever the need seems greatest. I write just this little word of information, love, and greeting to my sisters of the missionary society throughout the church, asking them to pray earnestly, daily—yes, many times during the day, that God will raise up workers who may be quickly prepared to enter this wide-open door and make known Jesus Christ and His love to this fine, lovable people. A Paul may plant, an Apollos may water, but God giveth the increase.

Eat Less and Take Salts for Kidneys

Take a Glass of Salts If your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

JOHN WANAMAKER, WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CHAIRMAN.

Hon. John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, has just been elected Chairman of the Executive Committee of the World's Sunday School Association. Mr. Wanamaker succeeds H. J. Heinz, who died in May of this year, at the very time when the Annual Meeting of the Executive Committee was in session. Mr. Wanamaker has been actively engaged in Sunday school work since January 17, 1818. In just a few months he will have 72 years to his credit for continuous Sunday school membership and he is still on duty every Sunday. He is superintendent of the Bethany Presbyterian Sunday School of Philadelphia, which reports an enrollment of 2555. In 1889 he became actively interested in the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association and has been its President since 1894. Not only does this active business man hold these Sunday school offices, but he fills them with service. When Mr. Wanamaker was Postmaster-General he continued his activities in the Bethany Sunday school in Philadelphia and made it the rule to return each Saturday from Washington that he might be in his place in the home school on Sunday.

James W. Kinnear, a well known lawyer of Pittsburgh, was elected Vice Chairman of the American Section of the Executive Committee. Mr. Kinnear was one of the Sunday school tour party that visited Japan in 1913, and he plans, with Mr. Wanamaker, to attend the World's Sunday School Convention in Tokyo next October.

Wonderful Egg Producer.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3259 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

REWARDS OF SERVICE.

The world commonly thinks of reward in terms of material well-being. Wealth, place, power are the things that are looked upon as rightfully belonging to those who have served their fellow-men in the various walks of life. But these things are purely incidental. They are satisfying in a certain sense, if rightfully obtained and rightfully used, but their possession is not necessarily proof of merit. The true rewards of service are to be found in the consciousness of duty well performed and in the sense of God's gracious approval. Happiness is conditioned, not upon what we have, but upon what we are. Days and months of bitter toil may be our portion in the place we are called to fill; want may be our constant companion; sorrow may get hold upon us, and disappointments may meet us at every turn; but we may continue on our way with a song in our hearts if we know we have faithfully done our duty under all circumstances, and if we hear the voice of Divine approval whispering in our ears, "Well done." Service then is a joy, no matter what the cost may have been.

STILL A DEFICIT.

The Secretary of the Treasury has announced that the disbursements by the Government in October—$576,349,205—were the lowest in any month since June, 1917. We are glad to learn from this statement that the expense of doing business "of the people, for the people, by the people" seems to be growing less. Lest we should rejoice overmuch, however, the same statement informs us that the current deficit for the month was $319,239,450. This reminds us of the Negro's definition of a deficit: "It's what you got when you ain't got as much as you had when you didn't have nothin'." There is some comfort in the thought that we are gradually cutting down expenses; but it takes some of the joy out of life to know that our expenditures are still in excess of our receipts. Perhaps some of our readers will be able to bear personal testimony to the truth of this reflection.

"THEY SAY, AND DO NOT."

A recent dispatch from Washington announces that the Government will abandon all attempts to control the distribution and sale of sugar, and that after the dissolution of the Sugar Equalization Board on December 31, the Government will confine its efforts to the prosecution of profiteering in sugar. We wish the Government well in its efforts to mete out suitable punishment to the unconscionable scoundrels who have taken advantage of the necessities of the people to enrich themselves in many kinds of business—but we are not expecting to hear of any convictions in the near future. We shall, however, probably hear a good deal about the appointment of boards of investigation, and have the privilege of reading voluminous reports from said boards. It is an old fault "to say and do not."

MORE ABOUT EDUCATION.

The following headlines in newspapers have attracted our attention recently: "Seventeen per cent of city teachers quit positions;" "Attendance at schools shows big decrease;" "Teacher shortage menace to New Jersey children." In the body of the articles just cited, the one explanation offered of the shortage of teachers and the decreased attendance of pupils, was the fact that such small salaries are now being paid that competent men and women prefer some other occupation, in which they can earn at least a living wage, and that parents are unwilling to send their children to schools where there are not enough teachers to take care of the work to be done. On the other hand, we have just read a press dispatch from abroad to the effect that there are more students in German schools today than ever before in the history of that country. We do not vouch for the truthfulness of the facts alleged above—we simply give them as they have been presented to the public in the daily press. But we do take advantage of the opportunity to repeat what we have had occasion to say before—as a people, we are simply playing with this tremendously important and urgent matter of the proper education of our children. Our school buildings in many places are inadequate, our equipment is often sadly insufficient, our teachers are so poorly paid that the great majority of them have to live a kind of beggarly, hand-to-mouth existence, and our whole educational system is in danger of going to pieces for lack of intelligent interest and a liberal policy on the part of the public at large. It is not hard to get private capital and public appropriations for enterprises that are manifestly profitable from a material point of view, but there is another story to tell when the appeal is for things that have to do with the mind and spirit. We do not at all believe that education can take the place of religion—"religion is the chief concern of mortals here below"—but vice becomes rampant and moral disintegration inevitably takes place in the life of a nation when it allows its educational system to fall into decay. We have, as a people, been very greatly interested in the making of money; the time has come when we ought to devote a fair share of our attention to the incomparably greater work of making intelligent men and women of the precious children whom God has given into our keeping. How long shall we continue to give stones to our sons and daughters when they are crying for bread?

A "DRY" CHRISTMAS.

The hopes of those who have eagerly awaited the decision of the Supreme Court in the belief that it would nullify the war-time prohibition law, were blasted last Monday, when the Court handed down its decision. The Court unanimously decided that the war-time act is constitutional, that the signing of the armistice did not abrogate the war powers of Congress, and that President Wilson's statement, in his message vetoing the prohibition enforcement act, that the war had come to an end, was not a proclamation announcing the termination of the war. The decision of the Supreme Court must, of course, be accepted as final. We may look forward, therefore, to a Christmas season that will not be a time of wild revelry by reason of the licensed sale of intoxicating liquor. And on January 16 the prohibition constitutional amendment will become effective, thus forever, we hope, making illegal the liquor business in the United States. Except for the tears shed by confirmed topers and those whose business it has been to coin dollars out of the heartaches of wives, mothers, and children, Christmas this year will be "dry." We thank God for it.

A FATHER'S HEART.

Felipe Angeles was executed in Mexico a few weeks ago as a leader of the revolutionary forces. We know nothing of the merits of the charges against him—whether he deserved death or not—but his last message to his son, Alberto, in New York, came from the heart of a good father: "Let the family know that I am serene and contented. I hope that you will be a good man, a patriot, and a hard worker. I want you to love your mother, sister, and brothers very much. Kisses and embraces." We pass it on as a good message from thousands of fathers still living, to sons for whom their hearts are yearning.

DRIVING BACK THE ENEMY.

Dr. William C. Gorgas, former surgeon-general of the U. S. Army, returned recently to this country from South and Central America, where he led the fight against yellow fever, made by the Rockefeller Foundation. He confirmed, in a statement to the press, the report that this terrible scourge has practically been exterminated in those countries, where it has claimed its victims by the thousands for centuries. Thus again we have a demonstration of what medical science has been able to accomplish in driving back the enemy of human welfare and happiness. We do not hope that death will ever be conquered save by the power of Him who rose from the grave; but many diseases will ultimately be banished from the face of the earth by intelligent application of the laws of health as they have been revealed by scientific research. The greatest victory in this direction is yet to be won, however, in the eradication of tuberculosis. Well has it been called "the great white plague." According to recent figures, the United States lost more people by tuberculosis last year than she lost soldiers in France during the war. And the tragedy of it all is, that it has been thoroughly demonstrated that this disease is preventable. According to the most authoritative specialists in its treatment, it can be absolutely wiped out in a comparatively short time if a sufficient amount of money can be secured and if the people will give intelligent co-operation. It is a pity that those who are fighting it should have to depend so largely upon the sale of Red Cross seals, at a penny apiece, for their necessary financial resources. Even in that way, though, progress is being made. It is a small thing—but it enables everybody to have a part in a great cause.

COURAGE.

By Rev. L. W. Smart.

Courage is the dynamo of character. We cannot climb very far up the pathway of human achievement without its help. We may have large visions; our hearts may be stirred with noble emotions; in the chamber of the brain we may map out large and comprehensive plans; in the depths of us may glow the fires of ambition; there we may nurture the highest ideals; but unless we have back of these the spirit and power of courage, these offspring of the soul may be stillborn. It takes courage to bring them to light. Much that is noble in life, much that is evocative of human admiration, is only the child of courage, mothered by her in the tender years, nurtured by her into the strength and heroism of manhood, and tended by her through declining years and ultimately brought by her, like Caleb of old, into the peace, quietness and triumph of a green old age. If we were to stand by the bier of one that had lived to a ripe old age, and call imagination to our aid, we might read in the hieroglyphics of the sallow skin and sunken eye, the furrowed brow and silvered hair, the story of those silent heroisms, those secret struggles and hidden triumphs, the unrecorded conquest of the inner man, conquests that have been blood-bought, have made their terrific drafts upon the supply of courage, that shall never be revealed till the leaves of the judgment book unfold.

As we would look upon such a face, we would seem to hear, far in the distance, the rumble of life's hard-fought battlefield, and all unconsciously there would come to our remembrance those lines of the past, "Soldier, rest, thy warfare o'er."

Courage has done her noble work. What measure will ever be sufficient to measure the length, the breadth, the height and the depth of that supply of courage which is necessary to bring a man home again with everlasting joy upon his head?

It takes courage to go forward in the dark, to walk in the blazing light of the busy noonday of life, to descend into the depths or ascend to the mountain heights; courage to dare the difficult—defy the impossible and take the frowning fortresses of fortune. It takes courage to follow our convictions, to cherish our ideals and possess our integrity inviolate. For the lack of it, most of us are not half the men and women we might be.

We all recognize how prone we are to a mood of disheartenment. We are so readily discouraged. We become discouraged in so many different ways—lack of success, our state of health, our friends, our families—and in a hundred different ways discouragement casts its dark shadow across our pathway to chill our brightest days and deprive our lives of much that is good and beautiful.

But we can fortify ourselves against this malady that may paralyze the splendid energies of life. The Bible is the best source of help we can get.

Again a disheartened soul has been revived again by coming to drink from the crystal depths of the fountain of the Living Word. My dear readers, I want you to come again to that old fountain, and bid it minister to the refreshment of your souls.

The story of David as mentioned in I. Sam., 30th chapter, brilliantly illustrates how sheer courage in the brave man turned defeat into victory. Pillage of the Amalekites against David: six hundred soldiers against him; home gone, friends gone, family gone, nothing left him but his own sword, his God. But David encouraged himself in the Lord. That is the thing that links victory to defeat. That is what courage is ever doing in the "last ditch" battle of life. Courage! Oh, my dear readers, let faith summon it into your lives! Fortunes may crumble into useless dust; riches may take into themselves wings and flee away; health may vanish like the dew of the morning on the rose; hope may plume her wings for distant flight; but David encouraged himself in the Lord. So may we encourage ourselves. This seems a small thing to bring into one's history, but oh, how it puts to flight the armies of aliens, stops the mouths of lions, gives strength out of weakness, sweeps mountains into the sea, transforms maps of nations, and verily diverts the current of human history! "But David encouraged himself in the Lord."

Blessed are those of us who, in the school of life and experience, learn the lesson of self-encouragement and self-reliance and are assiduous in the practice. We who have grown older in Christian experience have discovered that if we do not encourage ourselves, no one will do it for us. It is only on the surface that our friends can comfort us. Away in the interior land of the soul, the conflict and carnage wage, whose existence can scarcely be dreamed of by the outside world. It is for the distraught soul in such an hour, where, perhaps, the soul is facing defeat, that David's words come to our rescue. David teaches us the transcendent importance of self-reliance.

The problem of character is one we must deal with single-handed and alone. If we are to exercise ourselves to godliness and sobriety, we must have that self-reliance, that moral and spiritual resourcefulness which will enable us to meet the issues alone. Sooner or later we must discover that in this game of life we must go it alone. David encouraged himself. So may we encourage ourselves.

Now, if we follow on a little further, we shall discover that religion is ever the basis of this true self-reliance. Many times man's extremity proves God's opportunity. The secret of David's marvelous self-reliance lay in his religion. He was at his wit's end, but not at his faith's end. He knew how and when to fall back on God. To do this at the right time and in the right way and place, imparts a calm and dignity to life that redeem it from many a useless sorrow and anxiety.

Divinity, however, is not always the first recourse of humanity. Too often it is the last. How pathetic it is to see those who all their lifetime have disregarded the laws of God, ignored the claims of the church, and turned a deaf ear to the appeals of Christ, coming at the eleventh hour to desire the holy offices of religion! They have not counted God among their resources; and however successful they have been in the things of this world, they find themselves helpless in the "swellings of Jordan."

Blessed are they who, in the early morning of life, learn to put their reliance in God, while life's sun is still in the east, rather than where the westering lights cast long shadows beyond them and they discover that they have only a few more steps to take and that they must lean upon the Everlasting Arm even if they take these. David encouraged himself in the Lord, his God. The roots of all true strength and courage run far down into the springs of eternal life.

As I am writing, I am thinking of the hand that was nailed to the tree, the pierced hand of the Son of God, reaching down from the cross and resting in benediction upon the shoulders of the down-trodden, disheartened, discouraged, sin-driven children of men, and drawing them into the strength and sweetness of his rest. Behold his hand stretched out still, and with his gracious and loving encouragement he bids us "Come."

SIBERIA AS A MISSION FIELD.

By Bishop Walter R. Lambuth.

Vladivostok has been a center of interest during the entire world war. This was due to its being Russia's only port on the Pacific, to our soldiers' having to enter Siberia at this point; and to the fact that several of our missionaries were in this district rendering heroic service to the American and other forces—among them Doctors Manget and Polk and Miss Pitts of China, under the Red Cross. "Such urgent and persistent calls came for volunteers from the American Red Cross for work in Siberia," writes Miss Atkinson, "that the entire staff of the hospital followed the examples of the doctors and nurses from so many other mission stations and answered those urgent calls. They left in September, taking with them the two senior classes in the Medical School and the Nurse Training School." Rev. C. T. Collyer went out from Korea under the Y. M. C. A.

Our missionaries of the Korea Mission have become interested in Vladivostok and Eastern Siberia because of the migration of Koreans into the Kando across the Tumen River and from the north bank into the valley of the Amur and Osuri. It is estimated that there are over fifty-five thousand who belong to this exodus, and of this number nearly 10,000 are in Vladivostok and its vicinity. These poor people have left their little home and become wanderers, partly because of the meddlesome and oppressive measures of the Japanese, and partly for economic reasons—farming land being more fertile and cheaper than in their native land. Not a few of these are Christians, and are as sheep scattered without a shepherd.

Brother Collyer made a report of his work, and graphically outlined the situation to us at our Annual Meeting and convinced all who heard him that we should stand by our soldiers during the year to come and do all we can for the Koreans who will be there permanently. I give his report substantially as he made it that the church may know something of the needs and be ready to strengthen my hands in providing for the same.

There is an organized Presbyterian church among the Koreans within three miles of Vladivostok—the only one in Siberia proper—though there are a few groups of believers. In the Kando, just north of Korea, the Presbyterians—American and Canadian—are doing excellent work. To the Koreans, Siberia is a land of promise. Farming and quartz mining for gold is carried on by them. The Russians like them and give them a square deal, which is all they ask. The winters are very cold, but the Russian house has walls a foot thick, and a big stove kept at work night and day makes things comfortable. There is almost no spring, but summer bursts upon the land almost upon the heels of the thawing snow, and the growth of vegetation is marvelous.

Brother Collyer left Wonsan in January of this year and arrived in mid-winter, but threw himself at once into the Y. M. C. A. work among the soldiers, the Red Cross taking the refugees as its share. Under the Kerensky administration the Association entered Russia, and did such notable work in Petrograd that it was called the "Light House." There have been as many as 135 secretaries in Siberia working with Americans, Russians, Czecho-Slavs and others. The Czechs are a most interesting people. From the days of John Huss they have been struggling for political and religious independence. They fought their way, during the war, out of Russia through the mountain passes and across Siberia. Finding no ships to transport them around to Europe, they armed and cut through the enemies' ranks back to Irkutz. Here in this terribly cold place they made a successful stand. The river at this point freezes from the bottom up on account of a glacier nearby, a rare exception in nature. Xenophon and his army of Greeks endured no greater hardships, nor made more heroic resistance than these men. Their situation and their spirit made such an appeal to the Y. M. C. A. that a special Czech department was created, a steamboat chartered, and a tour of the Volga made by the secretary, one member of the party being a Russian priest. After the entertainments, came the Christian message as the climax of it all. Marvelous opportunities! No wonder that Mr. Collyer's imagination was kindled and his heart stirred. He occupies a responsible position on the central staff, as personnel secretary.

He brought out some significant facts in his report, which I am attempting to reproduce. Such was the state of things, at one time, that secretaries were instructed not to go on the streets unarmed. He saw men shot down in every direction. The Cossacks deliberately fired upon the patrol. Saloons and gambling hells ran wide open, and vodka and women were the two elements of demoralization. A man could not walk down the street without being solicited. The "American Cafe" just opposite was notorious as being the worst place in the city of Vladivostok. Vice stalked abroad. The city had been for years the center of the white slave traffic, and had now become a veritable sink of iniquity.

In the midst of all this were 4,000 of our American boys, with a probable addition of from 2,000 to 4,000 more during the winter when campaigning was impossible. The only agency which stood for a wholesome life was the Association. "The recording angel alone can tell what has been done to help these soldiers in the hour of fierce temptation."

A warehouse on the wharf between two warships was transformed into an International Hut. Here at the twenty tables, with stationery furnished, letters could be written to home folks; there was an exchange desk in one end of the "lounge" where groups of men could rest and talk; on the side was the tea counter where American and Russian ladies served tea, coffee and cocoa, sold candy and doughnuts to the 200 fellows in line who were as eager to get to say a word to a genuine woman as to receive refreshments. These women realized their opportunity and met it, not by indulging in cant or goody-goody talk, but "by putting Jesus Christ into every act of service, even to the offering of a cup of tea."

The well filled library, the gymnasium, the baths, the basket ball, the wrestling match and the cinema, rounded out the equipment of this wonderful warehouse which was said fully to equal the Eagle Hut in London. No wonder that the Bohemian highest authorities gave unstinting praise of this work. The Czechs were most appreciative, said the "Y" was the only institution for soldiers, and familiarly styled a secretary, "Uncle." In recognition of his financial service and diminutive stature, Brother Collyer had the additional sobriquet of "Kopeck," the smallest Russian coin. Later he won the name, "Dad." In three months he handled $1,500,000 at the exchange desk. Money sharks were constantly at the heels of the boys. A tall Indian sheik with red turban was employed as doorkeeper. One of these sharks forced his way in, and "Dad" tried to put him out. Seeing the struggle, three doughboys ran up, picked the fellow up bodily and crossing the street dumped him out on the other side of the railroad tracks. He left "Dad" alone after that.

"The railroad officials and men," says Brother Collyer, "suffer most from isolation. It is in the lonely hours that temptations are severest. Club cars have been fitted up by the 'Y.' Bunks and a cook stove are in one end, and a cinema and phonograph in the other. All come to the entertainment, the car is packed, then follows the message, and that in turn, by the samovar with tea and doughnuts. Finally a familiar talk about home folks. So big a place has mother and home in the hearts of these men that at the close of a prayer in which mothers, wives and sweethearts had been mentioned, the crowd clapped their hands. It was not reverent, but it was tremendously human, and I am sure the great Father of us all did not find fault with it." If our soldiers remain through the winter, our Commission on War Work must provide what is necessary for this field. I understand there are only two chaplains, and one of them a Roman Catholic. There may be more. If not, we must bestir ourselves.

I have reappointed Rev. C. T. Collyer to the Y. M. C. A. work at the urgent request of Mr. G. S. Phelps, Secretary. Mrs. Collyer goes with him to "mother the boys." She is a noble woman and can be counted on to do her part. After consultation with Dr. Rawlings, I have sent Revs. M. B. Stokes and J. S. Ryang to study the field as it relates itself to the Koreans, organize groups of our people if they find them, and prepare the way for further effort. This is largely at the insistence of the Board of Missions of the Korea Annual Conference, which requested that evangelistic work in Siberia in behalf of their countrymen be undertaken, and at least six hundred yen, already in hand, be applied to that end. What could be more touching than this devotion to Christ and loyalty to his cause? Out of both poverty and suffering they have given freely, and it may be said of them as of the Thessalonians, that "from them sounded out the word of the Lord." I trust it may also be recorded of them that their faith to God-ward is spread abroad. Let us hope that to the lonely exiles who wander without settled habitation, the gospel which shall be preached through the messengers whom we are sending, shall come not unto them "in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."

Wonsan, Korea, Sept. 12, 1919.

PLACE THE "FORGOTTEN MAN" ON YOUR CHRISTMAS LIST.

By Luther E. Todd, Secretary.

Once again the Christmas bells are about to ring. Throughout this land millions of souls will rejoice, because by their generosity they caused a little good cheer to trickle through deprivations and distress into the lives of the needy. In making up the list of those who shall receive of your bounty, you have included many who are worthy. But I am wondering if you have failed to include one who has spent himself unreservedly, even to the point of old age and physical disability, in the interests of humanity, and who now waits patiently and uncomplainingly for deliverance from the painful conditions of poverty in which he exists. I refer to the superannuated preacher of the M. E. Church, South. Have you forgotten him?

The last General Conference created the Board of Finance and chargod it with the sole duty of caring for the superannuates. It authorized the Board to raise $10,000,000 as an endowment for the support of these grand old men. But it directed that the Board could not carry on an organized campaign to raise this money during the present quadrennium, as this period was reserved for the campaigns of the Missionary Centenary and of the General Board of Education, in neither of which is the cause of the superannuates included. However, it did give liberty to the Board of Finance to accept voluntary gifts to the Superannuate Endowment Fund from any who might be inclined to make them.

Therefore, I appeal to the members and friends of the M. E. Church, South, to make this Christmas of 1919 memorable by an avalanche of voluntary giving to the Superannuate Endowment Fund, such as will encourage the leaders of this sacred cause and hearten the drooping spirits of the superannuates. These lines will likely be spread before the eyes of 150,000 of choice Southern Methodists. Just think what even a small gift to the S. E. F., from each of them, would mean in the aggregate! If they would average the small sum of $5 each, it would add $750,000 to the fund—which in itself would be nearly $200,000 more than the church has secured for this purpose through twenty years of effort. Why, the annual interest for yearly distribution to the superannuates, from that possible $750,000 would be $45,000, forever—and this alone would be nearly double the highest annual amount ever received from the fund by the superannuates in any year.

But our people should not be content with gifts in small amounts, if they are able to give in large sums. O, you who have made fortunes during the past few years, seize this opportunity to do a really big thing for the most neglected and appealing cause before the church. To do so will guarantee the brightest and happiest Christmas you have ever known.

Here are a few ways to respond, from which choose the one best suited to your condition:

(1) Cash contribution in any amount.
(2) Annual payment subscription, extending over any number of years.
(3) Gift of one or more liberty bonds.
(4) Gift of war stamps.
(5) Gift of any amount on annuity plan (write for information about this or inquire of your pastor).
(6) Purchase annuity bond in any amount for some superannuated preacher who has done you great service, making him the beneficiary as long as he lives—then the money will pass to the General Fund to help all superannuates forever.
(7) Purchase Life Membership in our Conference Claimants Club (Triple C). It will cost you in cash as many dollars as there are years between your present age and eighty (80). A beautiful certificate and a gold-plated, enameled pin is presented to every life member.
(8) The very least you would consider doing is to become an annual member of our Conference Claimants Club (Triple C). This requires three things, namely: (1) Pay one dollar cash; (b) be a constant worker and booster for the cause; (c) answer the annual roll call with another dollar until you choose to discontinue your membership.

Since the latter part of August I have been passing up and down the whole church, visiting Annual Conferences. I have personally met and talked with hundreds of superannuates, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Gulf to the "famous line." While writing the lines of this Christmas appeal in their behalf, their battle-scarred faces come before me. They have been characterized as the "Forgotten Men" of Southern Methodism. But they shall not be overlooked this Christmas time, if I can help it. What say you?

WE NEED TO BELIEVE.

By Payton A. Sowell.

Walking as we are in the midst of such mysteries as are about us, and realizing the changes that beset our lives, we need to have faith—faith in something other than ourselves; faith in some One—some real One. We must put responsibilities on some One. For—where are the ages gone? Where are all their treasuries gone? Where are their generations gone? Where are all our companions gone? Where are we going? What can we do—if we do not believe? The birds of the air, as well as those of the barnyard, are happy, because they believe. They are expecting to be fed by One who is invisible. The great flocks of migratory birds believe food awaits them in the far South, when the snows cover the Northern fields. Shall they be wiser than we? We cannot possess a great peace without a great faith—a great faith in a Great One.

Prayer is not a sign of weakness, but of strength. Paul's paradox, "When I am weak, then am I strong," explains it. When the weakness of human resources is revealed, then are we ready for the strength of God.—Willis A. Ellis.

A FAITH THAT CANNOT KNOW DEFEAT.

An Interpretation of the Underlying Faith of the American Nation in the Triumph of Law and Love, and in the Coming of Peace Among Nations and Brotherhood Among Men.

By William Pratt Tillett.

I.

The War of Love 'Gainst Love of War.

Because God called, and clear His voice
And duty left no other choice,
Because 'twas love that led us in
Man's wrongs to right, men's rights to win
And bear our flag in fields afar
In war of love 'gainst love of war;
Because no selfish end we've sought;
Because for weak 'gainst strong we've wrought;
Because for world-wide peace we've fought
Nor ever counted price or cost
In sacrifice or treasures lost,
But, with full might, for all that's right,
Against all wrong, we still shall fight,—
We dare believe that glad new day
Will come, for which we fight and pray,
And Angels long Amen to say,
When for their crimes men make amends,
When hates all cease, and all war ends,
And those long foes shall all be friends.

For faith can never know defeat
That has in war of love its seat!

II.

The War of Love for Love of Law.

Because all law we hold in awe,
In war of love 'gainst breach of law
Our nation its stern duty saw—
For wars of love 'gainst wars of hate
In law's defense are just and great;
Because no man to man is true—
And this is law for nations, too—
Who dares the reign of law decry,
And laws of God and man defy;
Because Jehovah hath decreed
That earth's oppressed ones shall be freed,
And nations who obey His will
Have sworn His word quick to fulfill—
We dare believe the day has come
When law-defying kings are dumb,
And anarchy, where'er it reigns,
Law-loving men shall bind in chains;
When men shall righteous laws obey
And love for law o'er earth have sway.

For faith can never know defeat
That has in love of law its seat!

III.

The War of Love for Law of Love.

Because with faith we dare to hold
That golden rule, not rule of gold,
Shall be for men, and nations, too,
The rule of life the whole world through,
And rich and poor alike must see
From golden rule no man is free;
Because we seek with all our heart
To serve all men and do our part,
Nor greed of gold nor jealous hate
Shall make our love of right abate,
For love that shares in generous deed,
And joys to meet another's need,
Must triumph over selfish greed,—
We dare believe the day's at hand
When all true souls in every land
In League of Love for Right shall stand;
When all one golden rule shall own,
And love on earth shall claim the throne,
And God in heaven as Love be known.

For faith can never know defeat
That has in law of love its seat!

IV.

The War of Love for Brotherhood.

Because we fight for brotherhood,
For all men's rights and all men's good;
Because pure love inspires our fight
With might of love 'gainst love of might,
With might of love for love of right,
Because in earth or heaven above,
No power can cure earth's ills but love,
But storm-like wins its way
Wherever love 'mongst men has sway;
Because, those armed with cause full just,
In love's omnipotence we trust,
And cause so just can never fail
Where God makes truth and right prevail,—
We dare believe the day draws nigh,
When men shall build a throne so high
For truth and right that all shall see
That men to men must brothers be,
That love alone can make earth free
And bind the world in unity.

For faith can never know defeat
That has in might of love its seat!

FAITH AND SUPERSTITION.

By E. N. Evans.

The difference between faith and superstition is that faith has a correspondent reality which manifests itself to the senses and leads to a knowledge of its objective, while superstition, having no such corresponding reality, weakens and dies in the light of knowledge. Much that is called religious faith is little else than a pious superstition. This blind faith has done much to give us false ideas of both God and man. That so-called faith which believes the whole Bible, from "Genesis to Revelation," and still knows not nor understands the significance or implications of its teachings, is nothing of which we ought to boast. Truth makes us free only as we come to a knowledge of it. God is known to us only by the manifestations which he makes of Himself to us. These manifold manifestations may be divided into three classes: Nature or the material world; spiritual visions, experiences; and the inspired word—the Bible.

The remarkable thing about this matter is, that the harmony in the testimony is greater than the friendship of the witnesses. Each class of witnesses seem satisfied with their own testimony and distrustful of the other. These three lines of testimony converge and center in Jesus the Christ.

It may be well that these all work on independent lines and solve their own propositions, but they are none the less mutually dependent on each other for the full truth. The fullness of the truth is always harmonious.

The materialist is inclined to become an agnostic and iconoclastic. The spiritualist is inclined to become unreasoning, self-sufficient and intolerant. The theologian is inclined to dry-rot, with an air of superiority and dogmatism that would ignore the spiritual and experimental, and damn the materialist.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Noting that our capable presiding elder, Brother T. H. Lipscomb, has been chosen to serve in a new and useful field, thus severing the ties of co-operative fellowship and service as our presiding elder; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the Board of Stewards of the Tupelo Methodist Church, in called meeting assembled, keenly regard the loss of Brother Lipscomb from the field of active service in the North Mississippi Conference, and especially will his proficient service be missed in the Aberdeen District, and our church.

Resolved, That the love and prayers of our Board of Stewards go with Brother Lipscomb in his new field, with our heartiest hope that Providence will ever watch over him and guide him in his endeavors to uplift humanity and uphold God's Kingdom on earth.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in our minutes, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy be sent to Brother Lipscomb.

IN LUCK AGAIN—AND TO MEMPHIS.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.

Telephone long distance: "Come, be my guest during session of Conference; here's your ticket and all expenses." So all aboard at Greenwood, 5:30 p. m. Tuesday, the 18th. Now, who says I'm not correct in "Better to be born lucky than rich"? Sam may be lucky (?) in his house and lot; but as long as this kind of thing keeps up with me, I'll go him one better—whatever that may mean in the game. Tom Sawyer and his friend Huck "ain't in it at all."

Phillips, Minter City, Webb, Sumner—all familiar names, but on a line not traveled before; fields white with cotton and full of black hands gathering the fleecy staple.

If corn was planted, there is no evidence of the same. Only the high price of the staple will enable the planters to operate another year. This delta country is a marvel of productiveness and development. Many are living today who have seen it grow from a wilderness to an almost unbroken plantation in the highest state of cultivation, with "trunk lines," "loops," "spurs," villages, towns, cities, fine residences, attractive churches, automobiles and everything else that goes to indicate wealth and progress.

The object of my outing is to see the Memphis Conference in its session, of which St. John's in Memphis is host, with Coleman as headmaster. It doesn't mean that these brethren are hard to hold down that there are three bishops here, although the trio—DuBose, Murrah and Atkins—figure with Atkins at the helm. Tom Lewis is more pleasing than usual because of a recent event in his career. "Referendum" Clark is well-kept and smiling as usual. I can just shut my eyes and I am in Meridian or Aberdeen—"Nothing against him, Bishop;" "Had a good year," etc., etc.

Memphis is growing by leaps, and these people are counting their numbers in the hundreds of thousands. In the days of Dr. Warner Moore and about the time Sam was starting on his circuit of eleven Conferences, First Church was First Church sure enough, but today there are several "First Churches" here.

My time is up, and with a good-bye to my boy and his hopefuls, I turn face toward Meridian, where the old mother Conference meets, and where I trust to see "ye Editor." Till then, good-bye.

November 20.

REMINISCENT—THE NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

By Mrs. Robert Kemp.

In the reminiscent age, growing "tedious" and "tiresome" is a criticism of the old, which I had resolved to avoid, but, Mr. Editor, you have demoralizing to good resolutions along that line, in your appeal to long-time readers of the Advocate to speak out, so here I am.

One of my earliest recollections is of the weekly visits of the paper to our home, which was a resting place for the early itinerant. Holland McTyeire was there when editor of the Advocate during the first years of its existence. He was a man of striking personality. I remember him as if it were only yesterday. I was at the General Conference at New Orleans, the first year after the war, when he was elected bishop.

Dr. Keener succeeded him as editor. Some years after, when he was bishop, my husband and I had the honor of having him in our home, into which the Advocate came soon after our marriage.

Next on the tripod was Linus Parker. The paper was a no less welcome visitor, for its pages were filled with the same able and spiritual articles as in the days of his two predecessors.

After him, came my kinsman, C. B. Galloway. We were neighbors during our childhood. He was a manly, lovable boy. Faithful to duty, he absorbed his education. The Christian man of intellectual strength was foreshadowed in the life of the boy. On his election as editor of the Advocate I said to him, "You must not break the succession—every editor has left it to take the higher office of bishop." I was gratified but not surprised when he followed in their footsteps.

I am still taking the paper, but, Mr. Editor, could not you and your publisher consider the claims of the old eyes and give us blacker print? I pore over it sometimes with a magnifying glass, thinking it would be best to stop it, but I cannot, and hope to read some, if not all of it, to the end.

I was born within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference; tradition made me familiar with the names of its founders and those who enlarged its borders. When I grew up and became identified with its activities, I think I knew the names of nearly all of its members, and watched their careers through the columns of our paper, from their first circuits up higher to its (so-called) best appointments. Most of them have gone up still higher to their reward and through these same columns the last tribute to them was paid, but with me remains the benefit of their Advocate articles.

Now, Rev. Mr. Peebles, that vigilant defender of the faith, has had to cease from active work. I shall never forget the impressions received during a protracted meeting which he held for us many years ago. I know his labors will cease only with his life. And now, they have superannuated Rev. Mr. Holloman—"What, Tom Holloman?"—with whom we could no more associate the idea of old age than that of his laying down his work. Do you remember, my superanuated brother, the first years of your pastorate in Canton, when your health failed and you refused the rest the official board urged you to take, insisting you did not need it, until my husband closed the argument with the words, "The church is closed to you; if you do not need a rest, your congregation does?" They had trouble keeping you away until you were really benefited. Such a man as that, has to be told when he should cease work. I do not think you are convinced there is any necessity for that now. I know you remember the exacting invalid of your flock who made you sing during the whole of your pastoral visits. I am not sure you were not sent for sometimes just to render that service. Nothing soothed the tortured nerves like your voice in song; I remember, and am grateful still. We sent for you when sorrow came into our life, after you left. No, my brother, you will still work, if it is only to comfort and help in times of trial; what more Christlike work can you do?

We turn to the present and rejoice that, as our church is meeting new conditions, the Advocate is stressing the necessity for spirituality underlying every new effort. Guide us, Mr. Editor, in the paths of "Scriptural holiness"—which Methodism was raised up to "spread over the land."

WHO HAVE GONE FOR HIM.

By Rev. S. A. Neblett.

Thirty new missionaries sailed during 1919 for the various foreign fields of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Counting the wives of the married missionaries this number is increased to forty-four.

By fields they are distributed as follows: Brazil, 5; Cuba, 4; Mexico, 6; Belgium, 1; Congo Belge, 3; China, 5; Japan, 3; Korea, 3. Twenty-one have been sent out by the General Board and nine by the Woman's Missionary Council.

By appointment, 11 are to engage in evangelistic, 15 in educational, 2 in medical, 1 in Sunday school, and 1 in industrial work. Some of the evangelists will also do teaching, and the school men and women will do a good share of evangelistic work. They have dedicated themselves to the great task, and will seek to invest their talents in every way that promises to contribute to the accomplishment of the task. All in their several ways heard the Master's query: "Who will go for me?" and answered it with their lives.

Those who have gone to Brazil are Rev. and Mrs. Howard I. Lehman, Miss Eula Harper, Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Moore, Rev. D. L. Betts and Miss Fannie V. Scott. The Cuba Mission has been re-enforced by Rev. and Mrs. W. K. Cunningham and two children, Rev. and Mrs. Walter Dibrell and three children, Rev. and Mrs. Milton C. Davis and child, and Miss Anne M. Craig. To Mexico have gone Rev. and Mrs. Clifton B. Harbour, Rev. and Mrs. O. E. Rice and two children, Rev. and Mrs. Dennis Macune and three children, Misses Nora E. Darwin, Sarah E. Warne and Dora L. Ingram.

Doctor David Sloan has the honor to be the first missionary to be sent by our church to Belgium. He will open and work in Brussels and employ his splendid gifts in the administration of the work in Belgium and northern France.

The hearts of the laborers in the Congo Belge, Africa, have been made glad by the coming of Mr. C. T. Schaedel, Rev. Ansil Lynn and Rev. J. J. Davis.

While conditions in the Orient have been very unsettled, some re-enforcements have been sent to those fields. Rev. and Mrs. Clinton J. Bushey, Prof. and Mrs. J. W. Dyson and child, Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Henri and Misses A. Alsup and M. Clark, were sent to China; Rev. and Mrs. I. L. Shaver, Prof. Sterling Fisher, Jr., and Miss Blanche D. Hager joined the forces in Japan; while Korea saw the arrival of Prof. and Mrs. J. Earnest Fisher, Rev. and Mrs. Thomas J. Carter and child, and Miss Carrie Turner.

During 1919, twelve missionaries who had been in the homeland on furlough, some of them rendering fine service in the Centenary Campaign, returned to their respective fields. In addition to these there were a number of teachers, not regularly appointed missionaries, who went out to teach under contract in our church schools.

By a peculiar providence, ours was the first religious organization to enter Palestine after that historic country was rescued from the Turk. The Nile Printing Press, at Cairo, Egypt, distributes the Scriptures in Arabic-speaking countries. They were hindered from going into Palestine for lack of funds, though they had already selected five colporteurs for that work. We took over these workers and provided the support for five more.

A year ago the foreign department announced that thirty new missionaries would be needed in 1919. The church was called on to pray for that number. Now, the Master gave us very definite instructions as to prayer for more laborers. God has a way of answering our prayers according to our constancy and faith. Undoubtedly some have been praying for the thirty new missionaries and their faith has been rewarded.

I cannot, however, escape the conviction that had more of us prayed constantly and trustingly, the number of new missionaries would have been much larger. The need for 1920, when the enlargement of activities provided for by the Centenary is being undertaken, is much greater than that of the past year. We must literally pray a hundred and fifty men and women into the foreign field in 1920, and at least a thousand into the pastorate and missionary enterprises of America. Is our faith equal to the task? If we give ourselves to great intercession, there can be no doubt as to the results.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

After Conference, "The shouting and the tumult dies, the captains and the kings depart." It was strenuous, it was trying work, earnest work, hard work. Conflicting claims arose, and like a certain classical ghost, would not down; important questions—important alike to the preachers, the people, the church—demanded settlement. Some were adjusted, some were not, some were beyond human control. In all charity let us conclude that the administration did the best for all concerned, with an emphasis on the all. For true charity is a garment that clothes and shelters; it does not stifle and smother. Dicken's wrote "Great Expectations"—he should have attended an Annual Conference for data. His pen might have had a keener point.

The people—God bless them evermore—were glad we were among them, and every man was a king, every woman a queen in their homes. I hope all of the delegates showed, too, they were of royal blood. Young Steel, not Dr. Sam, shouted when he was sent to New Orleans as a missionary in a day when there were no churches and nothing else much to cheer a preacher. So he did the cheering and went to heaven on the wings of the yellow pestilence. God said to Moses, "The spirit that is in thee, will I put upon them." Numbered among the cloud of immortal witnesses the souls of such men are like shining stars—light and guidance.

It was an oleaginous crowd. Like bees about the honeycomb, they swarmed in the exchange lobby. Blue prints fluttered and crinkled, men studied geography as never before in their school days. It is a fascinating game. Men grow rich in a fortnight. Money is the cheapest thing in sight. All service is at a premium. Gushers, leases, titles, abstracts, rigs, etc., etc., are the staple subjects of conversation. I understand that no shady, fraudulent work is tolerated in the trading—a man's word is his bond. The problem is finding housing room for the crowd. An ordinary furnished home rents for $300 per month. But they don't crowd the churches much. The Sabbath is unknown or neglected. It is all wonderful, sometimes tragic, sometimes sad, for death comes in the midst of life. But the mourners do not go about the street—they have not the time. Some of our best people are rich, and using their money wisely and well. May God give them sustaining grace. But space and paper cost money nowadays and our organ owns no oil leases or stocks.

Great is the presiding elder—"First in war, first in peace"—and first in the hearts of the country preachers. They truly love him with an enduring passion, that revives every quarter. In town he is chief financial executor and minister when he fits in. He is the bumper and buffer for all hard knocks. The devil and the deep blue sea crush isn't a circumstance to the places he is sometimes caught. Deal tenderly and considerately with him, brother—you may be one. Sing, oh, sing, "Some sweet day!" Roaming a district is a man's job and making appointments in the cabinet requires the patience of a saint, the wisdom of a sage, and the courage of a martyr—all joined with good, common sense and religion. To know men is the greatest of worldly wisdom. Books are written by men; what there is in them lived as thought in men before written. Some day a great appointment will be read by the Chief Head and Bishop of the College of Bishops, presiding elders, preachers and laymen. If there are complaints, we shan't hear them out of the eternal silence.

Whenever Bobby's mother gave him money for candy, she advised him to buy a little of good quality rather than more of a cheaper kind. Childlike, he was loath to do this, but one day he came back home with a few pieces of excellent candy, and when he had finished it he remarked: "Mother, I see now that the cheaper it is, the gooder it ain't."—Boston Transcript.

Evangelism in the Sunday School

Clear the track, the boys are coming!

Boys will be boys; yes, and boys will be men—home-makers, Church-leaders, and nation-builders.

Tousled-haired, sun-tanned lads are the stuff of which sun-crowned men are made.

Jesus was a boy in a carpenter's home and shop in Nazareth and in his Father's house in Jerusalem, and so hallowed youthhood forever.

He "advanced in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men."

Boys are mischievous, irrepressible, and expensive, but they are worth their weight in gold; they are our boys.

The Sunday school is out to get boys in.

What shall it profit us if we shall gain the whole world and lose our boys and girls?

Membership Campaign Leaflets, Visitation Cards, Wall Mottoes, and Leaflets on Evangelism will be furnished free on application. Address Rev. D. Bulla, Director of the Campaign of Evangelism in the Sunday School, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. The General Sunday School Board, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Home Circle

JOHNNY.

He can scamper a mile to the baseball field,
And he never feels the heat;
But oh! it's so far to the corner store—
So far for his aching feet.

He can run to see the circus come in,
And stand and watch by the hour;
But the postoffice building is so far away,
And there might come up a shower!

He can get up at five on the Fourth o' July—
It's really no trouble at all;
But eight is too early on all other days.
And his mother may call and call!

He can sit up all hours to frolic, and not
Get sleepy or tired a bit:
But if there's a lesson, or problem to do,
He goes fast asleep over it!

O Johnny, dear Johnny, how funny you are!
And when will grown-ups understand
That hard things seem easy, and easy ones hard,
To youngsters all over the land?

THE OIL CAN.

"It's not my fault."

"Who said it was? If you take things to yourself that were never meant for you, you'll just have to be uncomfortable. So there!"

The door across the hall banged, and Cousin Molly looked up, somewhat startled, as the steps approached her room with a tread more like a stamp than anything less emphatic.

"What's the matter?" asked the visitor mildly as a flushed face looked in at her door. "Come in; do."

Pauline flung herself down into the nearest rocker with a very ill grace indeed. "Kit always gets rubbed the wrong way somehow. It's not my fault; I don't know anything to make her flare up so. She always thinks I'm blaming her."

"Carries a chip on her shoulder, eh? That's unfortunate."

"I never meant to say that she was to blame because—"

"Never mind what. She has a chip on her shoulder ready to be knocked off, and you've forgotten your oil can."

"My oil can!" Pauline sat bolt upright in surprise.

"You remind me of a story I once read in a book written by a wise woman about a workman she saw in a trolley car. He was a shabby, poor-looking man, and he sat near the door. It was winter, and every time a passenger boarded the car or left it the door had to be opened and then shut again to keep out the bitter cold. It was one of those sliding double doors that squeak. You know the kind in the old-fashioned cars?"

Pauline nodded.

"Well, the squeaking kept getting worse and worse, it seemed, until it was driving all the passengers nearly crazy, and they were getting more irritated and annoyed every minute. Finally, the shabby workman rose deliberately and bent over the door frame—I don't know what you call it, but the metal part which the door slides on, you know. Well, before any one knew what he intended to do he had pulled out of his pocket a little tin oil can and began oiling that metal slide. When he sat down again the door had stopped squeaking, and every one, including the conductor, drew a sigh of relief.

"'How did you happen to have that with you?' somebody asked this public benefactor.

"'Wa-al,' he drawled, 'I mostly always carry it around in my pocket. Seems as if I allus everywhere find so many things that squeak.'"

Cousin Molly stopped and looked steadily at Pauline. "See the point?" she asked. "It's a good thing to have some sort of oil can handy when people's tempers get squeaky. There are so many squeaky things in the world that it's best to carry your oil of kindness with you all the time."

Pauline was very sober. She sat a moment longer, then rose. Her step as she went back to the room across the hall was no longer a stamp.

"Kit," Cousin Molly heard her say gently, "it wasn't your fault at all. I'm sorry you misunderstood me. Come, let's be friends."—Comrade.

A NOBLE BEAR.

"At our Bear Dens—which have held at one time 17 species—our star is old Ivan, the largest carnivorous animal in captivity," Dr. William T. Hornaday tells us in the course of an article on "The Brown Bear of Alaska," in Boys' Life for November.

"He was caught by Belmore Browne, the artist-explorer of Mount McKinley, at Port Moeller Bay, east coast of the Alaskan Peninsula, on May 24, 1903. He shot Ivan's mother and carried out her cub in his blanket. Now Ivan stands about 51 inches at the shoulders, he weighs about 1,200 pounds, and in his winter suit of long, wavy, yellowish-brown hair he is as handsome a bear as we ever knew. Even the most indifferent visitor notes that his bulk is enormous, and that his proportions make him a model for the artist or sculptor. The commanding portrait of him that Carl Rungius painted last year for the Zoological Society is a masterpiece, and well worthy of the finest bear in captivity.

"Old Ivan is as good-natured and reliable as he is big and handsome. If he has a mean trait, we do not know it. It would not be wise for a keeper to come within his grasping power, because with the kindest intentions in the world he would want to play with a man in a way that could easily prove fatal to the party of the second part.

"Ivan has for a cage-mate and companion a female bald-faced grizzly bear that is about one-half his size and strength; but never does Ivan abuse her, or rob her of her food. He plays fair. Each day the two bear keepers, armed with a broom, pail, shovel and an assortment of life-preserving pick-handles, enter Ivan's cage to do the housework. As the lock rattles, Ivan comes to attention. As the first keeper steps in he says firmly:

"'Go on up, Ivan. Get out of here!'

"Straightway the great beast rises and ambles off to the rear, and with striking play of mighty limbs and paws scrambles up the rocks to the level top of his sleeping dens. That is his place when the cage below is being cleaned, and he knows it well. From that high point he is merely an interested but passive spectator of the domestic drama going on below. If he grows weary and makes a move to descend too soon, a keeper sternly says, 'Ivan!' and down he sits again."

LITTLE SUNBEAMS.

"What would my little pupils like to sing this morning?" The primary teacher's voice sounded sweet and cheery, and her eyes were wonderfully bright, as she looked into each eager little face in front of her. The children had seemed restless, and she thought it would be a good idea to brighten them up with a little song that they all liked.

"I should like to sing 'I'll Be a Sunbeam,'" came in a chorus of voices.

"Why, that is a good choice! But I wonder if my little pupils know what it really means to be a sunbeam. What do you have to do to be a sunbeam?"

"I know," said Fred Moore. "You have to keep your face clean, so that it will shine."

"You just have to smile all the time, so that your face will always look bright," said Mary Ashton's soft voice.

The teacher nodded her head. "Yes, you are partly right. A sunbeam is always bright, but that is not all. Did you ever see a sunbeam that did not shed its brightness on everything around, making all living things glad just to be alive? And that is what I want all of my little pupils to do—to look bright themselves and then to give joy and gladness to every one they know."

Mary Ashton's face looked radiant as she hurried in from school. She was thinking how she was going to try to be a sunbeam for everybody.

"My little girl is just in time to run over and take this warm lunch to old Mrs. Powell, who is not very well today," said Mrs. Ashton.

Mary's face did not change, but still wore its cheery expression as she looked at Mrs. Powell's door.—Selected.

THE BIGGEST MAN IN METHODISM.

The pastor is the biggest man in Methodism. We do not say this to reflect in any way upon the position of those outstanding men who have come to be recognized as leaders among us, but to call attention to the fact that, after all, the pastor is the man who carries the responsibility and who does the work in every one of the great enterprises in which we are engaged. We know perfectly well that a great organization must be divided into departments, and that over the whole there must be competent and efficient supervision on the part of those who are especially called to that important work. Our bishops and connectional officers are a necessary and integral part of our system of doing things, and we gladly honor them for their work's sake as well as for their own. But they would be powerless to move a single wheel of our vast machinery were it not for those other men—a noble army of them—who stand ready to see that the whole is kept moving in the most direct and economical way.

It is the pastor who stands in immediate relationship to and direct touch with the membership of the church, whose is the mind and whose are the resources that make possible the accomplishment of any task to which we may set our hands. The bishops may specify and the connectional officers may amplify, but it is the pastor who carries the message to the people and enlists their attention and interest in the program that has been outlined for achievement. If the pastor fails of his duty, all have failed.

We have scant sympathy with the note that we sometimes hear of complaint against the rank and file of the ministry for their apparent failure to enter as enthusiastically into the multitudinous lines of work that are presented for their co-operation, as those who are especially charged with those interests think they should. The fear has already been expressed that the minister has almost lost his preaching function by reason of the many material enterprises he has to look after in the average congregation; there would seem to be a real danger that he may become nothing more than a cog in a wheel which turns and turns and turns without his knowing anything of the why's and wherefore's. These preachers are our biggest men in the sense that they are absolutely necessary to the accomplishment of the work that the church has been called to do, and they should not be forcibly deprived of their powers as self-thinking, self-acting, responsible men placed in positions that require great judgment, skill, and godly wisdom.

We do not mean to suggest that there is any excuse for a preacher's refusing to give due consideration to all the interests of the church whose trusted agent he is. It is a recognition of his ability to handle difficult and intricate matters that he is given an appointment, and for him to fail to do all he can to promote the interests of the church which has so honored him, is to prove himself unworthy of the honor which has been bestowed upon him.

We are entering upon what ought to be—what promises to be—the greatest era in the history of the Christian church. A new vision has come to those who have walked in the Way, and a new hope is beating in the hearts of those who have labored with the Master through all these years: This world is to be sanctified in every phase of its life by the ministry of those who love Christ and look for his appearing. Methodism has her part to play in making real this vision and this hope and she is bending herself to the task with courageous determination and invincible faith. Upon her preachers—her great men—rests the weight of a mighty responsibility. We dare say that they will prove faithful.

DEATH OF REV. G. W. GORDON

It is with great sorrow that we learn of the death of Rev. G. W. Gordon, of the North Mississippi Conference, at the home of Mr. Jeff D. Coburn, Aberdeen, Miss., at 7 o'clock, p. m., Sunday, December 7. Brother Gordon was stricken with pneumonia soon after his arrival at Aberdeen to attend the sessions of his Conference, but was unable to be present at a single meeting. The burial took place at Vaiden, Miss., on Monday, December 8.

Our deepest sympathy goes out to the wife and little daughter who have been so sadly bereaved. We trust a suitable memoir will be furnished us for publication in the near future.

A DEFINITE PLAN FOR THE YEAR'S WORK.

In Methodism, the old year ends with the adjournment of the Annual Conference, and a new year begins immediately. With joy or regret, we look upon the record of the past; with faith and hope, we turn our faces to the future. What has been done, has been done; what the days to come will bring forth, no man can tell.

We know, however, that almost infinite possibilities lie wrapped up in those days that are ahead of us. It is a thrilling prospect that lies out before our eyes. Our blood tingles—or it should tingle—as we behold the golden opportunities ahead of us, and as we realize how fruitful the fields may be in which we are called to labor.

But if we are to have the desires of our hearts fulfilled in carrying out the work that we have been appointed to do, we must enter upon that work with a clear understanding of its nature, and a full realization of the steps that will be necessary to bring about the results we so ardently desire. We are appointed to establish, maintain, develop, and extend the interests of the Kingdom of God; and to accomplish those ends, we have the full command of all our own powers, the actual and potential co-operation, material and spiritual, of a multitude of devout men and women, and the promised help of an omnipotent God. With these resources at our command, we are able to accomplish that whereunto we have been called.

It is true, nevertheless, that our success in any given undertaking, no matter what our resources may be, is dependent upon the way we use those resources. If we neglect them, misuse them, or squander them, failure, partial or complete, will be the end of all our efforts.

It is essential, therefore, that we enter upon the year's work with definite plans for its accomplishment. Even a poor plan is better than no plan at all. The random shot seldom secures the game. An indeterminate policy in the management of a business enterprise rarely accomplishes satisfactory results. An indefinite plan in the work of the church nearly always leaves much to be desired at the end of any given period. The really successful pastor is always the one who has "planned his work and worked his plan."

There is always room for improvement in every situation. The spiritual life of the present membership of the church may be deepened; the membership may be increased; the Sunday school may be better organized and its attendance enlarged; the work among the women and the young people may be made more effective; the prayer meeting may be revitalized; a better financial system for the church may be installed; improvements on the property of the church, such as repairing, painting, remodeling, rebuilding, may be needed; the social life of the people may need development and direction; new forms of work may need to be undertaken. The wise pastor will make a careful survey of his whole field of labor, outline a comprehensive and definite program for the year's work, and give himself diligently to the carrying out of his plans in an efficient and determined way. Otherwise, "a good year, Bishop," will be but the vague expression of the unrealized hopes of a year's work.

DEATH OF REV. T. J. EMBREE.

Rev. T. J. Embree, a member of the Louisiana Conference, who received the superannuate relation at the recent session of that Conference in Ruston, La., quietly passed to his final reward at his home in Slidell La., on Saturday night, December 6. The funeral services, which were held on Sunday afternoon, were conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. N. Harrison, assisted by the presiding elder of the New Orleans District, Rev. J. G. Snelling.

Brother Embree was transferred to the Kentucky Conference a few months ago, but, after reaching his new field of labor, he suffered a complete breakdown in health, which necessitated his giving up all active work. He was transferred back to the Louisiana Conference that he might be among the brethren with whom he had spent so many years in faithful service to the church. He made his home at Slidell, where his many friends showed the affectionate esteem in which he was held by providing amply for his material needs. His funeral was largely attended by the citizens of the community where he spent the last years of his active ministry.

We extend our deepest sympathy to his grief-stricken family. We hope to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

DON'T WAIT.

The Conferences are over, the preachers have moved, and the work of the church is being planned for another year. We wish to urge upon our brethren the importance of including the Advocate campaign in the "list of first things" to be carefully looked after. There are several considerations why this should be done. In the first place, the sooner the people begin to receive the paper, the better it will be for all concerned. They will begin to get in touch with the larger work of the church, and their interest will be reflected in greater activity in the affairs of the local church.

In the second place, the early part of the Conference year is the logical time for putting into effect and carrying to a successful conclusion a program that can quickly and easily be carried out. "Begin the year right by taking the Advocate," would be a good slogan for the next few weeks.

In the third place, the action of the Publishing Committee, endorsed by the Conferences, looked to the securing of the minimum number of 10,000 subscriptions by March 15. That date was thought to give ample time to every charge to make a thorough canvass, and, at the same time, give the Advocate assurance of sufficient resources to meet its needs before the year had far advanced.

We earnestly hope that the campaign will be entered into at once and heartily, and that we may be able to announce within a few weeks that the minimum number has been reached. This can easily be done if all our preachers will begin immediately to put the matter before their people.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt has been warmly welcomed for the third year by the splendid people of Shelby, Miss., one of the choice appointments of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. M. Hebert, presiding elder of the Houma District, Louisiana Conference, requests us to announce that Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir has been ap-

Rev. Robt. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage at Ruston, La., was in the city recently, and paid the editor's office an appreciated call. We are glad to learn that the plans for the enlargement of tho work under his care are steadily going forward.

Rev. John F. Foster, the newly-appointed pastor of our church at Franklin, La., was in the city last week on business connected with the publication of the Annual of the Louisiana Conference. He honored the Advocate office with a call, giving an interesting account of his new field of labor.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham is serving for the third time in less than twenty years his "home church," Aberdeen, Miss. He was licensed to preach and ordained at that place, as was his father beforo him. Naturally, he is bound to the splendid people of his "new" charge by the tenderest of ties.

Rev. W. A. Terry, after a successful four years' pastorate at Broad Street, Hattiesburg, Miss., is hard at work in his new charge, South and East McComb. He and his family were given a cordial reception, the parsonage at South McComb having been made ready by thoughtful hands for their occupancy.

The American Tract Society has designated January 25 as Christian Literature Sunday. All Christian organizations aro urged to observe the day with appropriate services, in order that the function and power of Christian literature as an Americanizing and world-evangelizing force may receive its proper recognition.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb is on familiar ground in serving the Clinton charge, Louisiana Conference. He was born just ten miles from Clinton, and was reared in that community. Ho was given a royal welcome by those good people, who have known him all his life. Six namos wero added to the church roll at the first service of the new Conference year.

Rev. R. A. Clark, for three years pastor at Covington, Tenn., was made presiding elder of the Union City District, at the recent session of the Memphis Conference. Brother Clark is an alumnus of Millsaps College, and formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference, who has done a fine work in all the charges he has served. We doubt not that he will be equally efficient as a presiding elder.

Rev. R. S. Isbell, an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. R. R. Redditt, of Columbia, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Saturday of last week. Brother Isbell is in the city for an operation on his eyes, which, it is hoped, will completely restore his sight. It is a benediction to be brought into contact with these veterans of the Cross whose faith is undimmed and whose hearts are still young.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, well known to readers of the Advocate, and, indeed, to Methodists generally, was granted a location at the recent session of the Little Rock Conference that he might devote all his time to evangelistic work. He will make his home at Dallas, Texas, where he has bought a beautiful home in the Oak Cliff section of the city. The Daily Texarkanian, of Texarkania, Ark., gives in its issue of November 29 a copy of the highly commendatory resolutions adopted by the Ministers' Alliance of that city in connection with the removal of Dr. Copeland to his new field of labor.

A SPECIAL PROPOSITION.

We are sincerely desirous of enabling the Advocate to do the utmost amount of good in forwarding the interests of Methodism in Louisiana and Mississippi by getting it into every home represented in the membership of as many churches as possible. In order to accomplish this, we make the following special proposition:

WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR ONE DOLLAR.

In connection with this offer, we call attention to the following specifications:

1. The offer expires absolutely on March 15, 1920.

2. The terms of the proposition must be strictly interpreted. The paper MUST go into every home represented in the membership of the church. For example, if 100 families are represented in the membership of the church, 100 papers must be subscribed for. If a small child is the only member of the church from a given family, the paper must be sent to that child.

3. This is not a club offer. We cannot accept a club at this price, no matter what the size of the club may he. The proposition applies strictly and only to thoso cases where the ENTIRE MEMBERSHIP receives the paper.

4. The cash MUST accompany every acceptance of this proposition; if check is sent, let ten cents he added for cost of collection. (Many of our readers are not aware of the fact that the New Orleans Clearing House Association has an inviolable rule which requires the banks to charge a minimum fee for collection of out-of-town checks. This fee must be paid by all depositors, regardless of the size of the account carried.)

5. Unless otherwise announced in futnre issues of the Advocate, renewals may be included with new subscriptions.

6. If there is any uncertainty about any feature of this Special Proposition, the matter should be taken up with us by correspondence.

We are making this proposition, not to put money into the treasury of the Advocate—the price is too low for that—but to put the Advocate into as many homes as possible. Let our churches take advantage of it, either by making a complete canvass of their congregations, or by making provision for it in their budgets. From the very nature of the case, no better proposition than this can be made.

ANOTHER "ADVOCATE-FOR-EVERY-HOME" CHURCH.

We have just received the following note from Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La.: "The Ruston Board of Stewards voted, on December 1, to place Advocates in the budget for every family in our membership. Will send list very soon."

It is especially gratifying to note that some of our largest churches are acting promptly in acceptance of our Special Proposition to send the Advocate one year for one dollar where it goes into every home represented in the membership of the church. We trust many others, large and small, will follow the good example that has thus been set. It is an investment that will pay rich returns.

A SUGGESTION TO LAYMEN.

There are, doubtless, laymen in every charge who would be glad to have a definite work to do that they felt sure would be for the benefit of the church. To all such, we make the suggestion that they inform the pastor that, with his co-operation, they will undertake to put the Advocate into every home represented in the membership of the church. We know there are cases where this desirable result could be achieved almost over night; and we are sure the service rendered would be a splendid one. What say the laymen?

"AN ADVOCATE IN EVERY HOME."

The following churches have accepted our Special Proposition, and have made arrangements to put the Advocate into every home represented in their membership:

Bernice, La., Rev. W. A. Mangum, pastor.

Baton Rouge, La., First Church, Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor.

Ruston, La., Trinity, Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor.

THE CUB—WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH IT?

By Robert B. Eleazer.

The tiger of militarism is dead, so we hope and believe. It took four years of bloody struggle and ten million lives to accomplish the result. Now, even before the horrid carcass has been buried, there are those who would have us take to our bosom the beast's cub, compulsory military training, forgetful or indifferent that it was from just such a beginning that the monster of German militarism grew. We talk much of permanent peace and progressive disarmament. Yet it is proposed that we discredit all our professions by the introduction of a system of universal military training which tends directly to the production of war.

Universal military training has a twofold result, natural and inevitable. It keeps alive and cultivates the spirit of war among the people adopting it. It carries the constant suggestion and prophecy of war. It leads people to expect war and think war and get ready for war. Consequently it puts them in a frame of mind to make war or accept it on much slighter provocation than would otherwise avail.

Not only so, but to other nations it is a standing threat and provocation. Seeing a neighbor nation adopt universal military training, they are led to suspect, then to fear, and then to hate. In the meantime their own program of training will have been put on by way of self-defense, so that we shall still have a world prepared for war at an instant's notice, watchful, suspicious, supersensitive. The fuel is all laid, the tinder in place, and only the spark of some unfortunte word or action is needed to start another world-wide conflagration.

Such are the logical results of universal compulsory military training. It is the cub of militarism. Whatever advantages it may offer by way of physical development are infinitesimal, as compared with its tragic and logical possibilities. Besides, these advantages can be secnred equally well by a system of athletic training in the schools.

If we desire permanent peace, as we say we do, we must kill the cub ruthlessly, along with its dam.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it has pleased the Almighty to remove from our midst by death our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. W. G. Oswalt, who has for many years occupied a prominent place in our midst, maintaining under all circumstances a character untarnished, and a reputation above reproach;

Therefore, be it resolved, That we, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church, South, Dundee, Miss., with sorrowing hearts bow in submission to the will of the loving Father, feeling that he knoweth best and doeth all things well.

Resolved, That this faithful member, loving wife and mother, constant friend and unselfish helper, may prove to be as a guardian angel and a daily inspiration to her loved ones and to the members of our society.

Resolved, That we desire to express to the bereaved loved ones our deepest and most heartfelt sympathy. And while we know our loss is her gain, may we truly realize that God and heaven are nearer because of the treasure that is now over there.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the husband, a copy to the family, a copy be spread on the minutes of our society, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

THE ALTAR IN THE HOME.

John Wesley's mother wrote: "As soon as they could speak all the children were taught the Lord's prayer, and required to repeat it every morning and every night. They were soon taught to be still at family prayers, and to ask a blessing immediately after, which they used to do by signs before they could kneel or speak."

Once in each week she had a private conference with each child on something that related to its "principal concern." On Thursday she "talked with Jackie" (John). When, twenty years afterward, he was considering a complete renunciation of the world, he writes this model mother: "In many things you have interceded for me and prevailed. If you can spare me only that little part of Thursday evening which you formerly bestowed upon me in another manner, I doubt not it would be as useful now for correcting my heart as it was then for forming my judgment."

No marvel that from such a home went forth sons and daughters to bless the whole earth and every aftertime and among them the leader of the evangelical revival of the eighteenth century—the providential founder of our Methodism.—Selected.

SAMSON WAS HISTORY'S COLOSSAL FAILURE; FIVE REASONS FOR HIS DEFEAT.

"They trimmed him."

In these words Dr. Samuel Graffiin, a Young Men's Christian Association religious worker, sums up the story of the failure of Samson, says Frank G. Weaver, in "A Voice in the White Way Wilderness" in the current issue of ASSOCIATION MEN. Samson's failure is one of the popular stories with Broadway crowds which Dr. Graffiin tells. He gives the hundreds of men who pause to hear him red-blooded talks and makes them think. Samson is picked as history's greatest failure and these five reasons for his downfall are given to be carried around in the backs of men's heads for future reference:

"He was where he ought not to have been. (No man ever got a trimming if he stayed out of doubtful places.)

"He was doing what he ought not to have done. (You never heard of a man being buncoed if he was doing the right thing.)

"He was self-sufficient. You couldn't tell him anything. He had a swelled head. (The man who won't listen to advice is a goner.)

"He was asleep when he most needed to be awake. If ever a man needed his eyes open it was Samson when his head lay in Delilah's lap. (You can't go to sleep and succeed.)

"He trusted in himself when he most needed God. (Never was there a man to escape failure if God had departed from him and he 'wist not.')"

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOLS NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Winona school reported $125 to the Centenary fund, $112 to the Syrian Relief Fund, $50 to the Methodist Orphange; 26 members of the school were received on profession of faith. The average attendance of the teachers was 88 per cent for the last three quarters. This school made excellent progress during the year.

The school at Clarksdale had the remarkable increase of 65 per cent in its membership. A large portion of the teachers are taking the training course. When the new church building was completed, it seemed large enough to accommodate the school for years to come, but the school has outgrown the capacity of the building. There is a constant flow of people into church membership through the school. The pastor, the superintendent and teachers place a high estimate upon the school as an evangelizing agency.

The following schools have specials as enumerated: Tupelo (Baraca class), Japanese preacher, $150; Tremont (Bible class), 1 share, Mexican Methodist Institute, $10; Okolona, native evangelist, $900; Columbus, First Church (Class No. 12), evangelistic work, China, $10; Macon, language teacher for P. L. The 28th of this month is the time to renew pledges and take new pledges. The schools that have not accepted five cents a member per month can take part in the work of making our Savior known to those who have never heard his name. The monthly missionary program is in the Magazine. Do not let anything crowd out this important message. Write to Mrs. W. T. Boswell, superintefindent of Missionary Education, New Albany, Miss., for any help or information you need.

Forget some things, but do not forget the campaign for new members for your Sunday school. Make the effort whether you think it will pay or not. Try it and see if it will not bring in returns. If you do not get one new member, it will do good to go out after them.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

We have been rained in since Conference, and washed out. I hope from now on appointments may be reached without a skip.

We expect to be in our own office on Capitol street by January. This will give us more room and better facilities for doing our work.

We are anxious to hold at least one Conference Standard Training School in each presiding elder's district. I hope to hear from the brethren right away in regard to this. We are desirous of having Three Standard Training Schools.

We are planning Conference-wide Elementary Conference in Aprii. All pastors, presiding elders, superintendents, and elementary workers are invited. Let each school select delegates and be sure that they get off to the Conference. The place will be announced later.

Every pastor who has not been visited will be, or be asked to allow us to spend a while with him real soon.

The final reports on the Sunday School Day contributions have not reached me yet; as soon as they do, I will announce the leading ones through the Advocate.

Pray for the work and workers.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The day is upon us to advance the interests of the "Evangelistic Campaign." Be sure to read the December number of the Sunday School Magazine, in order that you may be informed on this great campaign. Let us begin the work of this campaign regularly and put on the membership campaign first. Some pastors are now planning to do this. Write Dr. C. D. Bulla, Nashville, for leaflets or information.

The work for this year will be well directed itineraries and institutes. It will be possible for the Sunday School Board, through its Field Secretary, to give much help to this work. You will not get your people to go very far away from home to attend institutes, so we hope to bring them closer home. Any pastor or Sunday school superintendent can write the Field Secretary at his home address and he will assist him in planning for his Sunday School Institute. We are expecting to hold over two hundred of these sub-district institutes.

The next Conference-wide Sunday school meeting will be the Wesley Bible Class Federation Meeting, at Noel Memorial, Shreveport, about the middle of March. Keep this event in mind.

Write to your Field Secretary for any information in the Sunday school work and he will give it to you or get it and send it to you.

Best wishes to all the Methodist families and the world.

THE NEW PASTOR AT MAGEE, MISS.

"Come, ye that love the Lord, and let your joys be known." Naturally, when people love the Lord, they like to let their joys be known, as joy is the very fruit of love. David spake much of his joy.

The writer and family arrived at Magee, Miss., their new field of labor, on Friday evening, December 5. We were met by Dr. T. J. Burnham and Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Brown, a committee representing the official board and the Sunday school.

We were driven in a car to the parsonage, where we met a band of ladies, consisting of Mrs. H. C. Calhoun, Mrs. L. J. Walters, Mrs. P. F. Watters, Mrs. Hatcher, Mrs. (Dr.) Walker, Mrs. G. T. Everett, Mrs. Annie Berry, representing the Woman's Missionary Society. They had everything nicely arranged and furnished, which added to our joy. Then we were ushered into the dining room, where we found a nice supper prepared and spread on the table waiting for us. You can very well imagine how greatly this supper was enjoyed. No one can fix such a supper, save a band of ladies representing a missionary society such as they have here in Magee.

After supper, we were taken by surprise by a band of young people representing the young people of the church. Their business was to shower the parsonage with groceries. Of course we were happy. I felt as David did when he said: "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

My first sermon was preached to a large congregation. Everything seems to indicate a good year at Magee. Brethren, pray for us.

HOW THIS NERVOUS WOMAN GOT WELL

Told by Herself. Her Sincerity Should Convince Others.

Christopher, Ill.—"For four years I suffered from irregularities, weakness, nervousness, and was in a run down condition. Two of our best doctors failed to do me any good. I heard so much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others, I tried it and was cured. I am no longer nervous, am regular, and in excellent health. I believe the Compound will cure any female trouble."—Mrs. ALICE HELLER, Christopher, Ill.

Nervousness is often a symptom of weakness or some functional derangement, which may be overcome by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as thousands of women have found by experience.

If complications exist, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions in regard to your ailment. The result of its long experience is at your service.

For Sore Throat

Rub the chest vigorously with Yel-O-Pine Croup and Pneumonia Salve, then saturate a piece of flannel with the Salve. Warm it before the fire and press it firmly over the chest and throat.

Take a chunk of the salve about the size of a pea and spread it inside the throat. If the case is obstinate melt a bit in a spoon and breathe it through the mouth and nose. The next morning the head, throat and lungs will be cleared and the soreness gone. Ask your dealer for Yel-O-Pine Salve.

Yel-O-Pine Croup and Pneumonia SALVE

BEGINNING AT RIENZI, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We arrived at Rienzi last Thursday was a week ago. The good people here gave us a very warm reception. We are about moved and settled in our new home, though our baggage, that was shipped by freight, hasn't all come yet, though we are faring fine.

We have been remembered with many good things, such as back-bones, sausage, canned vegetables, jellies, fruits, preserves and groceries. These things are always highly appreciated by the preacher and his family, especially by the preacher's wife. We hope to have a good year.

With best wishes for you and the success of the Advocate,

MRS. R. G. A. CARLISLE.

FROM WINNSBORO, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We had a great Conference at Ruston. I believe that it was ono of the most spiritual that I have ever attended. The spirit of fellowship among the brethren was simply fine. It is a great privilege and great blessing to meet one another after the year's work has closed. For the fourth time I was sent to the Winnsboro charge, and I am praying and believing that this will be the best of the four. We have been kindly received. Our congregations here last Sunday morning and evening were fine. Of course they came to hear the new preacher—ha! ha!

Pray for us.

Fraternally,

S. D. HOWARD.

HOW TO KILL A MINISTER.

1. Tell others that you don't like him, but never tell him why. If you told him why you don't like him, he might show you where you were mistaken; then you would need to apologize to him for talking behind his back.

Ousts Rheumatism.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. 2. Criticize his sermons. Say he's too old-fashioned in his theology, or he's too liberal; his sermons are too long; he is too closely confiied to his notes; he's tiresome, stupid and monotonous. Never tell him his sermon helped you; that might make him puffed up.

3. Complain because he doesn't call as often as you think he ought to. Forget that he has several hundred other people to call upon, that he must prepare two sermons each week, must marry the living and bury the dead, and be all things to all men on all occasions that he may win some.

4. Criticize his family, especially his wife. Say, "She takes up too much of his time, she tries to run the church, she is not in sympathy with his work, she has too many hats, she dresses too well, or not well enough."

5. Go to some other church because you don't like your own minister, and because the other minister is more sensational, more dramatic, more educated, more orthodox, more heterodox, more social, and more anything else that suits your fancy.

6. Always look for your minister's weakest points; never look for his strongest qualities. To look for his strongest qualities might mean to be convinced that with all his failings he has consecrated himself to the high calling of God for your salvation, that he has sacrificed a larger income for a mere living wage, and that he has cast in his life with the people of God, to the end that men may come to a saving knowledge of the truth.

There is nothing else.—Newell Carroll Maynard, in "The Congregationalist."

U. S. NEEDS COMMON HONESTY.

By Roger W. Babson.

When last in Italy I was shown some beautiful and almost unbreakable vases. All that I saw, however, were very old. I asked why they were not made today. They answered me by saying that the making of them was a lost art. They knew all of the ingredients excepting one. There was something which those old masters put into the clay which gave it its wonderful luster and strength. That "something" had been lost and forgotten. Until it is found this beautiful ware cannot be reproduced.

During the last years I have been making a study of business conditions, aided by a large corps of experts. One of my associates specializes on prices, another on localities, another on labor, another on foreign trade, another on railroads, another on crops, and so on. For many weeks we have been studying the high cost of living. We have been delving into the history of the figures of that era when eggs were twenty cents a dozen, butter thirty cents a pound and flour five dollars a barrel. We have been trying to find out what it was that existed then which does not exist today. There must have been something. Everything is due to something. The fact that the cost of living is so much higher today than it was ten years ago means that something is lacking today which we had ten years ago.

While making this study we have been surprised to learn many things. We have found that the average storekeeper is telling his customers one thing and the men from whom he buys his goods an entirely different thing.

We have found that many manufacturers are misrepresenting their goods, selling shoddy for wool and paper for leather. We have found that clerks, street car conductors and other employes handling money are becoming literally highway robbers and that stealing is becoming almost a fad. We have found political candidates willing to promise anything to get elected, while government and city officials are willing to say that black is white to hold their jobs. Senators and congressmen no longer ask whether a thing is right or wrong, but whether it is proposed by a Republican or a Democrat. We have found labor notoriously bad without any more desire to render service for the wages received than are the employers to help out their customers. The attitude of both employers and wage-earners seems to be to do as little as possible and get as much as possible. The idea of rendering a useful day's work for a useful day's pay or of giving a useful day's pay for a useful's day's work seems to be lost sight of. People no longer ask themselves whether a thing is right or wrong, but are content to ask themselves whether or not something will satisfy their desires. If a person wants a thing, that seems to be a sufficient reason that he should have it. Of course all this is very wrong and harmful.

These are a few of the things which we have found. I would not dare to tell you all the things for fear the paper would not print them, but in learning these things we discovered what it is that our manufacturers, merchants, banks and workers lack today. We have discovered what must again become common if our present prosperity is to continue and the cost of living to be reduced. That something must be revived and must again be demanded by all. That something is "common honesty."—Selected.

induces sleep. To avoid indigestion, restlessness and the "dark brown" taste in the morning, take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after eating. It supplies just the right elements to aid in digesting food, rests the stomach, provides properties to relieve the tendency to gassiness and sour risings, morning biliousness and consequent absence of appetite for breakfast. To make a practice of always using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after eating is one of those precautionary measures that repay immensely. This is an age of prevention and these tablets are designed to promote liberty of eating and the good-fellowship that goes with a good meal. 15 EGGS A DAY FROM 23 HENS, IN WINTER

Mr. Duni's Hens Increased Every Day. Plan is Easily Tried.

"We have 23 chickens and hadn't had an egg all winter. In five days after feeding Don Sung, we got four to five eggs a day; in three weeks, we were getting 10 to 12 eggs a day; in five weeks we got 15 to 19 eggs a day."—John Duni, Box 102, Cherry Valley, Pa.

Mr. Duni started giving his hens Don Sung in January, in zero weather. He now keeps his hens busy in cold weather, when hens usually stop laying. A trial costs nothing. Here's our offer:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

If Thin and Nervous
Try Bitro-Phosphate

While excessive thinness might be attributed to various and subtle causes in different individuals, it is a well known fact that the lack of organic phosphorus in the human system is very largely responsible for this condition.

It seems to be well established that this deficiency in phosphorus may now be met by the use of Bitro-Phosphate, which can be obtained from any good druggist in convenient tablet form.

In many instances the assimilation of this phosphate by the nerve tissue soon produces a welcome change—nerve tension disappears, vigor and strength replace weakness and lack of energy and the whole body loses its ugly hollows and abrupt angles, becoming enveloped in a glow of perfect health and beauty and the will and strength to be up and doing.

CAUTION—While Bitro Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

A FINE WORK AT HAMMOND, LA.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, of Hammond, La., held its last meeting for the year and annual election of officers at the home of Mrs. H. H. McCain, on December 2, 1919. The new officers are as follows:

Mrs. W. J. Dunn, President.
Mrs. Chas. Straeck, Vice-President.
Mrs. H. H. McCain, Treasurer.
Mrs. C. B. Johnson, Secretary.

The Hammond society has been engaged for the past few years in paying off the parsonage debt, in addition to its regular missionary work. This debt will be canceled very soon, however, and the society will be enabled to devote its entire time and attention to enlarging and broadening its own particular work.

For the past two years the meetings have been held in the homes of members of the society, and immediately after the close of the business session a social hour and light refreshments follow. This has done much to add interest to the meetings and to bring the workers closer together.

This organization boasts 37 members.

MRS. W. E. COPE,
Publicity Superintendent.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Miss Estelle Haskin, one of the educational secretaries of the Board of Missions, has charge of publicity work and is very anxious that it be pushed with all possible vigor. She is desirous of knowing to what extent the monthly bulletin is used. In the Louisiana Conference an average of 24 has reported its use. A full report on this item is requested.

It is very important that the daily and weekly press be utilized for the dissemination of missionary and other church news. Please send me clippings from papers demonstrating the sort of help the newspapers are furnishing us throughout the State. It has been repeated many times that if our women secure space in their local papers and deliver with promptness a class of copy that appeals to the public, the editors will gladly give space. Clippings received by me will be turned over to Miss Haskin for her use after I have noted same.

If your auxiliary has no publicity superintendent, the president should look after this feature.

The time for election of officers has arrived. It is earnestly hoped that names of new officers will be sent promptly, so that the work will suffer no suspension.

If you have not observed the Week of Prayer, do not let this fine opportunity for a beautiful service pass by unused. The life-plays lend themselves nicely to large or small groups, are entertaining and bear a message not soon forgotten. "The Sick in China" has such pathos that scarcely a dry eye was in evidence when it was given in Ruston recently.

THE GREAT GUEST COMES.

While the cobbler mused there passed his pane
A beggar drenched by the driving rain;
He called him in from the stony street,
And gave him shoes for his bruised feet.
The beggar went, and there came a crone,
Her face with wrinkles of sorrow sown;
A bundle of fagots bowed her back,
And she was spent with the wrench and rack.
He gave her his loaf and steadied her load
As she took her way on the weary road.
Then to his door came a little child,
Lost and afraid in the world so wild—
In the big, dark world. Catching it up
He gave it the milk in the waiting cup
And led it home to its mother's arms,
Out of the reach of the world's alarms.

The day went down in the crimson west,
And with it the hopes of the blessed Guest.
And Conrad sighed as the world turned gray:
"Why is it, Lord, that your feet delay?
Did you forget that this was the day?"
Then, soft in the silence a voice he heard:
"Lift up your heart, for I kept my word.
Three times I came to your friendly door,
Three times my shadow was on your floor;
I was the beggar with bruised feet;
I was the woman you gave to eat;
I was the child on the homeless street.

EGGS
ALL WINTER

Mrs. Charlotte Green writes: "My hens have laid all winter since giving them 'TWO for ONE.'"

Pullet
Egg Producer

"TWO for ONE" is the marvel of all egg tonics. It is the most remarkable producer of eggs ever known to the poultry world. "TWO for ONE" is making records every day in egg production that were never before believed possible. Flock owners all over the country are amazed with the results. The most experienced poultry experts say they have never seen the like of it.

"TWO for ONE" is not a mere food. It is an egg tonic in the truest sense of the term—a scientific preparation in concentrated tablet form—the result of scientific research and experiment. Every factor entering into the matter of egg production was scientifically studied.

As a result you have in "TWO for ONE" a tonic that conditions the hen for the utmost in laying capacity—that builds muscle and bone—that stimulates active functioning of the hen's reproductive organs—that insures fertile eggs and 100% hatchings—that makes the laggard lay and increases the production of active layers. A pullet that gets more eggs for you winter and summer than you ever thought possible.

Where Drugs Fail

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from Shivar Mineral Water. If you suffer from chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer as printed below. His records show that only two in a hundred on the average, have reported "no beneficial results." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful spring. Simply sign the following letter:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17H, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:—I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and, if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA Pittman.

GOOD NEWS FROM BERNICE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: As per your proposition to our Annual Conference, the board of stewards for Bernice Church are mailing the inclosed check to cover the subscriptions for the Advocate to come to each family in the church for a year. Part of the names on this list are already subscribers, but to make it 100 per cent, we are renewing these also.

On our return from the Annual Conference we received a warm welcome, and, a few evenings later, a large pounding. The good people up here do things in a large way.

Bernice Church is among the "first churches" of the Conference in its progressive spirit, if not in numbers.

Dr. Henry held our first quarterly conference Nov. 25. We had a good conference, with splendid reports, and a bright outlook for the new Conference year.

Sincerely,
W. A. MANGUM.

TUBERCULOSIS, THE SCOURGE OF HUMAN RACE, CAN BE PREVENTED AND CURED.

Tuberculosis, the great scourge, which claims more lives than cholera, that Asiatic guest which comes out of India, than the Black Death of the Midle Ages, or than smallpox, is preventable and curable. So declares John B. Huber, M.D., writing in the September ASSOCIATION MEN on "The Captain of the Men of Death." It is preventable by means in theory that are simple; and he adds:

"Pasteur, the Father of Preventive Medicine, declared: 'It is within human power to banish all parasitic diseases from the face of the earth. And we could, if we would but use ordinary determination, if we would but concentrate our efforts on the problem, and if we would apply only the ordinary intelligence which the dear Lord has given all of us, we would, in a generation, practically wipe tuberculosis out of human experience. And for such a campaign every state and city health department in the country, and especially the National Association for the 'Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis' at Washington, will supply all the necessary information, all the ammunition and all the effective generalship.

"A crazy notion? If, after the discovery of vaccination by Jenner, any one had predicted the practical extinction of smallpox, people would have wondered what business such a prophet had outside an insane asylum. And yet a case of smallpox today is so rare that immediately upon the press report of it the 'stricken community' goes way up in the air with fright. And I affirm that, in so far as its disease aspects are concerned, tuberculosis is an easier disease to prevent than smallpox."

EDITORIAL COMMENT

TOO MANY TOOLS.

We do not know that the world is especially in need of the multitudinous movements that are being enterprised to-day—though it may be—but we feel reasonably sure that more action on the part of some of the organizations with which we have been blessed for many years would redound to the benefit of all concerned. It is barely possible that some vast field of needful activity has thus far been overlooked, which we should enter completely equipped for adequate cultivation; but the probabilities are that others are already diligently at work at the same task we fain would undertake. Too many tools may interfere with the workmen.

SHALL WE HAVE COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING?

There is a determined movement on the part of some of the military authorities of our country to bring about the enactment of a law that will provide for compulsory military training of our boys and young men. Personally, we are unalterably opposed to the enactment of such law. We believe in a program of preparedness that will make our young men physically fit, and that will have in readiness a man-power that will be ample for emergency calls; but we are not in favor of legislation that will develop a militaristic policy, a militaristic spirit, and a militaristic national program. Instead of heading toward war, we want to head away from it; this we can never do if we train our young men in the profession of arms and instill into their minds the idea of unceasing military preparation. Our nation has proved itself willing and able to fight when fighting is necessary—but we do not want to help in bringing the necessity about.

ON A BUSINESS BASIS.

A recent advertisement in the Congregationalist, of Boston, Mass., has attracted considerable attention. It is by a young clergyman seeking a position as pastor. It reads as follows: "I am thirty years old, studious and quiet; not a whirlwind; at social gatherings I am pleasant, but make no pretensions of being the biggest fool in the crowd; I am not a public entertainer, but a gentleman; neither am I a prize fighter nor a gymnast; I am not a howling success with young people; I regard the eight-hour day as sound in principle, and good even for ministers; I am diligent in parish, but do not like tea; I neither smoke, chew, nor drink; I pay my debts; height, 5½ feet; weight, 120 pounds; I want $2500 a year; I do not want much to do with women's clubs. Apply, Rev. XXX," etc., etc. We are wondering if he has been overrun with inquiries from congregations who want to employ a minister on a strictly business basis. We admire the young man's frankness, whether we agree with his conception of the minister's functions or not. We are glad that preachers in our church do not have to advertise for places at all—our efficient system takes care of them—though they do not always get exactly what they want. We have never looked upon the appointment of a preacher to his charge, however, as a commercial transaction.

CHRISTMAS.

We pause in the midst of what we are pleased to call the most momentous happenings of the world's history to celebrate the one event that gives significance to all time—the birth of Jesus. We may not know exactly the day or the hour when He made His advent, but we do know that all things have been different since His coming. As we look back to His earthly ministry, we marvel at the simplicity of His life and the sinless beauty of His character. Our hearts, too, are moved within us as we contemplate the miracles He performed in healing men's bodies and in cleansing their souls. As we look about us, we gaze with wonder upon the evidences of His abiding presence and of His continued power, and we cannot refrain from the joyous exclamation, "Behold what God hath wrought!" In spite of the dark days of war and of men's hatred to men, the light is still streaming upon us from the hills afar, and a voice, as clear as the notes of a bugle, is sounding above the tumult and the shouting, calling us to high emprise in the days of men's need. As we think of the future, our spirits are stirred with the sure hope we have of the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth—that Kingdom of which Jesus spoke so confidently and so beautifully some twenty centuries ago. We recall the promise of the angel—"He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end"—and in the realization of the fulfillment of that promise we join in the chorus of the angelic host, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will toward men." Christmas, 1919, is a good day.

GNATS AND CAMELS.

We have been greatly interested lately in reading of the discovery by the vigilant police force of New Orleans that punchboards, at ten cents a "punch," are being operated in large numbers in saloons, drugstores, and small grocery stores, and their consequent arrest of the violators of the law, while, at the same time, they seem utterly unable to secure evidence against the "big" gamblers who are commonly reported to be doing a flourishing business at the race track and at various well-known places in the city. They may be proceeding upon the principle expressed in the adage, "Take care of the dimes and the dollars will take care of themselves;" or they may be "straining out the gnats and swallowing the camel"—a not altogether uncommon practice. We should be charitable in our judgment, however—some of us may be guilty of the same fault in other matters.

BUT THE APPLES STILL FALL.

An Italian scientist, Professor Maiorana, has declared, according to dispatches from Rome, that Newton's theory of gravitation is only an approximate hypothesis, and that we still have much to learn concerning the laws that govern the motions of celestial bodies. Maybe so; all we know is, apples still fall and the earth "resolves itself around on its own axletree once in every twenty-four hours, subject to the Constitution of the United States," as Artemus Ward used to say. It will take more than Professor Maiorana's "ball of lead floating in mercury" to convince us that the laws of physics will have to be restated. We remark, also, in passing, that "the faith once delivered to the saints" is holding its own pretty well in the face of attacks by free-thinkers, agnostics, atheists, et al. Thank God, Jesus Christ is the same, yesterday, to-day, and forever.

THE TYRANNY OF STYLE.

According to newspaper reports, a young lady in New Orleans reported one day last week that two men had entered her room during the night and cut off her hair. A careful investigation revealed the fact, however, that she had clipped her own locks and had manufactured the story of violence to avoid a reprimand from her relatives with whom she was living. Her excuse was, that she "wanted to be in the style like other girls at school." We do not judge harshly this fifteen-year-old girl for her foolish act, because many women of mature years are likewise in bondage to the same tyrant. It is a pity that so many people will go to such lengths to obey the silly mandates of the irresponsible master of styles.

A RARE SPECIMEN.

He lives in Chicago, and he is the manager of one of the great hotels of that city. Recently, according to newspaper reports, he announced a wholesale reduction in room rent and restaurant prices in his hostelry. In explanation he made the following statement: "The only way to get rid of the 'vicious circle' of increasing prices and increasing expense, is for some one to knock the rim off it. I don't know how we can get reduction of prices unless some one starts it. That's what we've done, in the hope that the movement back toward reasonable profits will spread through all lines of business. Everybody knows this is a day of extortion. There's no use denying it. 'Get it while the getting is good,' seems to be every one's motto. Our hotel could have advanced rates last night to a $5 minimum for every room, and we could have made $2,000 extra as well as not. We could do the same thing through the whole month of December, this being the biggest convention month in the history of Chicago. Our banquet halls are taken for the next two months. Accommodations everywhere are at a premium. Business was never better. We're cutting our prices because we want to be fair with the public." We hope the gentleman has not been misquoted, though we confess his statement does read like a story out of a book of fairy tales. "We want to be fair to the public!" We should like to see him—he is a rare specimen.

GATHER US IN.

Gather us in, Thou Love that fillest all!
Gather our rival faiths within thy fold!
Rend each man's temple veil and bid it fall,
That we may know that thou hast been of old;
Gather us in!

Gather us in! we worship only Thee;
In varied names we stretch a common hand;
In diverse forms a common soul we see;
In many ships we seek one spirit-land;
Gather us in!

Each sees one color of Thy rainbow light,
Each looks upon one tint and calls it heaven;
Thou are the fulness of our partial sight;
We are not perfect till we find the seven;
Gather us in!

Thine is the mystic light great India craves,
Thine is the Parsee's sin-destroying beam,
Thine is the Buddhist's rest from tossing waves,
Thine is the empire of vast China's dream;
Gather us in!

Thine is the Roman's strength without his pride,
Thine is the Greek's glad world without its graves,
Thine is Judea's law with love beside,
The truth that centers and the grace that saves;
Gather us in!

Some seek a Father in the heavens above,
Some ask a human image to adore,
Some crave a spirit vast as life and love;
Within thy mansions we have all and more;
Gather us in!

BE FILLED WITH THE SPIRIT.

By Rev. John G. Gebhard, D.D.

St. Paul wrote these words to the saints at Ephesus thirty years after the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. Declaring their chief duty to be, "Understanding what the will of the Lord is," he pointed out to them the only way to attain to this understanding—namely, by being filled with the Spirit of the Lord. Our Lord Jesus Christ perfectly understood the will of His Heavenly Father, being conceived by the Holy Spirit, and filled with the Spirit of his Father. And what was true of the Divine Master, he declared to be true of his servants. For them, too, only by being filled with the Spirit of God, could they be enabled to understand the will of God. After the resurrection and ascension of their Lord, they must therefore refrain from entering upon the work to which he had called them until they, too, had been filled with the Holy Spirit, a gift which the Father had promised to bestow.

Prayerfully they waited until the promise came, with at least three mighty and startling results, in addition to the miraculous gift of tongues—enlightenment of their understandings, so that they understood the Scriptures as they never had before; fortifying their wills, so that they forthwith wielded the Divine Word as the very Sword of the Spirit; and power in prayer.

The successful preaching of the gospel must always depend upon the possession of these three qualifications in the preacher, understanding the Word, power to persuade men, power with God in prayer. Nor can any merely assumed gift or limited reception of the Holy Spirit supply the need. Being filled with the Spirit implies that the needs of the world lying in sin are so deep and desperate; that the provisions of God's gospel of grace in the gift of His Son are so unfathomable in the mysterious and richness and wonders of eternal love; and that prevailing intercession for the coming of the Kingdom, despite all the powers of evil, demands something more than half measures.

"Filled, filled, filled with the Holy Spirit," sounds forth again and again and again in the opening words of the book of Acts. "They were all filled with the Holy Spirit," "Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit," "The disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Spirit," "Paul, filled with the Holy Spirit."

St. Peter said that the Pentecostal filling was not a special blessing for the Apostles and Disciples of the upper rooms only, but declared that the gift was a promise of the Father unto all His people, unto their children, and unto all that were afar off, even to as many as the Lord God should call. And St. Paul, long after Pentecost, put the straight question to twelve disciples whom he found at Ephesus, "Did ye receive the Holy Spirit when ye believed?" The answer being "No," the apostle immediately instructed them as to their duty and privilege in this matter, laid his hands on them, and they, too, received the gift of the Holy Spirit.

We are living in the dispensation of the Spirit; the needs of our world of today are unspeakable; the ungodly are putting forth their efforts without measure, to secure unholy ends; and God pours out His Holy Spirit without measure to save men from sin and death. "He giveth not the Spirit by measure."

Is not this a fitting time for every minister to ask himself the question, "Am I filled with the Spirit of God? Have I searched the Scripture to learn what God means His Holy Spirit to be to His church today? Do I know the Spirit of God as Jesus said His people should know Him? Have I proclaimed the whole truth concerning the office and work of the Holy Spirit in regenerating dead souls, in making Jesus Christ eternally real to them as their Savior to the uttermost, and in clothing them with power for service and His faithful witnesses? Have I, as definitely and fully, received the invisible Spirit of God into my life, to be my enlightener, guide, comforter and sanctifier, as the disciples of old received the visible Lord to be their Savior?"

And is not this a fitting time for every professing Christian to ask himself, in all sincerity, "Have I received the Holy Spirit since I believed? Am I filled with the Spirit of my Lord? Are glorifying Jesus and being like Him the chief aim and joy of my life?"

We have no sympathy with distorted and eccentric views on this subject, but we do believe that the neglect of the duty and privilege of being filled with the Spirit of Christ lies at the door of the weakness and inefficiency of the church in soul-saving and soul-building to-day. We do believe that being filled with the Spirit is the door to untold riches of blessing.—Christian Intelligencer.

VIMY AND VERDUN.

By Elmer C. Gunn,
Ex-Chaplain U. S. Army, A. E. F.

A crescent-shaped wave of a ridge, with here and there a lone stump of a tree rearing its head to heaven; a desert with little sign of vegetation save an occasional straggling shrub fighting impossible odds in order to make itself a place; great craters gaping so that often their rims touch each other; no place on that tremendous crescent, several miles from point to point, where one may lay his finger on a spot which has not been disturbed by concussion; all around the inner side of the ridge, at close intervals clusters of graves marked by white crosses; in the center of it all a magnificent pile of stone so arranged as to suggest the beautiful stained-glass windows of the cathedrals of France, the pile capped by a marble cross; near the monument the remains of a French house of which nothing is left save a little mound of dull red brick dust, and—think of it—half a dozen rose bushes offering their few little blossoms to make the desert a better place and crown the graves of the Canadians—this is Vimy Ride on a day in May, twenty-five months after the furious struggle gave it to the Canadians and wrote their names high on the scroll of heroes.

To one's right, as one approaches the Ridge, may be seen what is left of a thick wood. This was the strongest point of the German position, and from it as a pivot they built a line of "pill boxes" half the extent of the Ridge, and, so they thought, made themselves a defense that would never be taken. But they figured without knowledge of the fearless fighting qualities of the Canadians. On a morning early in April, 1917, soon after America entered the world struggle, the Canadians, following a terrific artillery barrage, stormed the Ridge, and, though sacrificing many thousands of their picked troops, carried the strong positions of the enemy and held them against some of the fiercest counter attacks ever put over.

It was at Vimy that an American aviator belonging to the famous Lafayette Escadrille fixed the Stars and Stripes in the wings of his plane and for the first time in history flung its beautiful colors to the breeze in the face of an enemy on European soil.

Vimy will live in history as one of the great victories of the war, and what a place of pilgrimage it will be for the thousands of our neighbors to the north! "How many hopes lie buried here!" one thinks as he stands with bared head reading the names of the Canadians who fell and who lie sleeping in one of the many cemeteries. Yet one realizes that it is always far better to have fought and died as did they that April day in 1917 than live the life of a craven spirit who never saw the glory of the vision splendid nor felt his heart thrill at the call of a noble ideal. "Come on, who wants to live always!" said an American sergeant who fought for us in Belleau Wood. And, after all, when one travels through the wreckage of the Old Front and realizes what heroes were made there, one feels that those who died in the struggle had found the secret of life, though the years of their earthly pilgrimage were few.

From Chauteau Thierry to Verdun, the route is through Epernay and Chalon-Sur-Marne. At the latter place there is one of the largest and oldest of the American Red Cross huts. It is what is called a "Two Flag Hut," which, in this instance, means it is run for French soldiers by the American Red Cross, the workers being American women. It has a very interesting history. Time after time it was the object of fierce raids by the German airmen—once the workers were kept underground twenty-four hours while battles between the French and Hun fliers raged more or less furiously above them. In the midst of the great drive in the spring of 1918 the hut was evacuated for several days.

From Chalons-Sur-Marne to Verdun is at present a three-hour trip for local trains. The wreckage of war is in evidence all the way. First on traveling northward one notices the effects of airplane bombing—villages in which troops were billeted for rest and relief purposes being subject to raid after raid by German airmen. Next one's attention is drawn to well-ordered cemeteries, in which there are long rows of white crosses. These are the trade-marks of memory, and their number is inconceivable. When one takes into consideration the fact that fifteen hundred thousand French soldiers alone are buried in an area the total of which is no larger than the State of New York, and that hundreds of thousands of English, Belgian, Russian and American soldiers have also found their last resting place within the same area, one begins to realize what a burial ground this is. Approaching the Old Front from any point in France, one first notices well-ordered cemeteries, well cared for, name tags of those who lie there tacked on the center of the wooden crosses. Close to the trenches, and in the hundreds of acres of the old No-Man's-Land, solitary graves are to be seen, in many instances nothing showing save the wooden cross, which stands a silent witness that here an unknown soldier lies buried. "An Allemand" (a German) is often the words one finds on the cross.

The world-wide extent of the war is indicated by a glance at the cemeteries—Canada, Australia, the U. S. A., France, Africa, India, South America, England, New Zealand, Ireland, Scotland, Servia, Russia, Germany, Austria—in fact all the Allied and Central Powers are represented here. In Lille I met a "stranger from New Zealand" who had traveled more than half-way round the world for the privilege of looking upon the graves of two of his sons, killed, the one at Ypres and the other at Hubutesne.

There is little need for me to write of Verdun. "On ne passe pas" will henceforth bo her watchword. To stand on top of the famous citadel and look off toward Belfort, Douamont, Vaux, Dead Man's Hill, Hill 304, to view the wreckage of the world-famous city and realize that this was once a home and business center for thousands of people, to see the ragged trees that furnished shade for parks and avenues, to catch a glimpse of the cathedral, which is a total ruin—all this is like being in the midst of a hideous dream. But here is where history was made by the heroic Frenchmen. "No One Shall Pass" said the gallant warriors, from pollu to generals, and though hundreds of thousands from each of the opposing armies lost their lives in the long struggle, the Germans never got nearer than Douamont, nearly five miles away.

In Europe I have found people who live for art, for pleasure, for religion; I have learned something of the splendid spirit of effort and sacrifice that built their magnificent cathedrals; I have caught a glimpse at least of the throbbing love of home—sometimes spoken of by us as "patriotism"—that caused the men of Europe to die by millions on the field of battle for the protection of home and the honor of civilization—and the women to tend the fireside and keep glowing the glory of faith sublime in the ultimate coming of the dawn of a better day. It has been my priceless privilege to look on while the sun of a godless ambition for world domination, which rose on the bloody battlefields of the Sedan of the seventies, set, never to rise again, behind the Forest of Argonne, the mud of Flanders and the hills of the Vosges. I watched the stars of hope as, coming out one by one, they lighted the world with a mellow, subdued radiance while shining on the still gory and corpse-covered waste of No-Man's-Land. I saw at last the glory of the dawn of a better day spread over the hills like another Eastertide reflected by the documents called the League of Nations and the Treaty of Peace.

It has been a cause of surprise to me that men say we are IN ALL THINGS far in advance of Europe. I found there that which we will never have in our own fair land—not because of lack of ability, maybe, but because of a lack of application. Europe has her glory in art, in architecture, in loyalty to many worth-while things as well as in the proved presence of a noble spirit of self-sacrifice. Europe is great, but it is possible for us to be even greater than she if we will give complete right of way to the ideals and principles which have come more and more to dominate us as a nation.

EVANGELISM.

By Rev. C. M. Chapman, D.D.

When Christ ascended He left the promulgation of His mission in redemption to His followers. His commission to evangelize, as given in Matthew, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations," etc., is but the continuing of His purpose and the infinite plan of world-salvation. The conception of the church today is a realization of His mind of salvation unto the uttermost. Nothing less than willingness to meet the world-cry of need, is worthy of the representatives of a compassionate Lord. There is no limitation to His love, and there can be no prior claim to His grace. "Freely ye have received—freely give."

The concentration of the apostolic life in fellowship with the Christ, gave a vision and courage that daunted not at daring deeds and death. Generalization of Christian forces has been a patent waste of the church. In the last years we have again and again desired to read our chart, correct our course, hasten our speed. Modern means of communication have called for readjustment of our missionary programs. We cannot be used of the Spirit to convert the 20th-century-world with medieval plans. A horseback preacher cannot meet an automobile condition. The world does not need a "new gospel," but a true interpreter of the sympathetic and saving force of Christ, as it glows in the message of the inspired Word. The mission of the church is not to defend itself against heresy, or to build up a social organization that will meet material ends, but it is a divine force to save a world in sin.

I am not sure which is the greater "revival," the spiritual force that gives the church a new vision of its obligation, or the "shout of joy in the camp" of the saved. Neither comes separately, but as cause and effect; it follows, that a church with a saving vision of desire in purpose and plan is rewarded in fruits of salvation of the unsaved.

The church no longer has time or patience to debate non-essentials. The emphasis, or acid test, is no longer on what one believes, but what one does to exemplify the life and will of our Lord. We are not hunting heretics, but workers. Our schools are no longer polemic forums, but social incubators of Christian forces, a united army to charge a common enemy, leading by being willing to be led,

Are we to stop, with present conditions and attainments, to extend our mutual congratulations and enjoy personal advantages and exchange needed service for fellowship? When we look on "the field white unto harvest" and hear again the words of Him who gave His life for these, "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest"—I am sure we cannot. Is this touch of responsibility laid upon a few? To whom did our Lord refer in "Go ye"? Can the intervening time of twenty centuries slacken the personal obligation of His word? Does world-wide inclusion lessen personal application? Can a Christian be listless to world missions, because, perchance, it does not call him by name or distribute alms before his door? Is the center of world missions to be found in the peripheral of universal need of salvation, or in the personal inclination or desire? Has the church a right to choose its attitude towards missions—as it chooses its form of architecture or its rules of decorum? What is the greatest need of the whole church today? Would our highly-organized, highly-efficient, modern church receive the suggestion that the most needed thing to-day, universally, is a revival that will sweep all our Christian forces into wider action to meet a greater need than ever before in its history? Will this revival come by preachment of "election or decrees?" Will it come if we accept the material standards for social improvement in community ideals? Will we grow into it by the law of selection and rejection of State or national ideals? Or will it come only "by fasting and prayer"? When we expatiate on "A Needed Revival," where should personal thought of application go—to a great nation, far away, whose sin is chronicled in the morning paper, to a great city whose municipal government is under ban of public opinion, to a segregated district where social sin is rife, to my home group-life of fellows who are not living up to my standard, or should it go first to my heart and fill me with an ever-living consciousness of what salvation has meant to me, and that this saving force will not live in isolation or inactivity? In contemplation of such application, should I catch this holy fire of enduement, what would be the Christ-life way of its use? Would not my mission of first importance be to impart its benefits to members of my home? Following these, would it be normal in me to carry such blessing to my fellows, allied or grouped with me in business, or social daily contact? Could my church use one so inspired by such a conscience, so sensitive to the justness of the call of grace unto salvation with an obligation to give to others? Could I answer the world-call of missions by first applying its blessings and obligations to myself? I believe here is the secret of our present Centenary Missionary Program. It seeks to adjust our normal Christian relation to the natural order of cause and effect, that for us to be worth while as a world missionary, we must make a personal application of its blessings and obligations. It is making salvation a conditional proposition, and is rendering a scriptural interpretation of our Lord's word, "Whosoever shall save his life, shall lose it; but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." Social altruism will not answer the divine call.

A socialized gospel of spiritual regeneration is the one need of the world. We hear much cry for old-time religion and old-time experience of grace—it is but a melancholy cry of impotency or undue reflection on a too impressionable past. Past experience nor present attainments will satisfy a just and exacting present obligation. We must "dare and do, or die." In our age of Christianity and its forces, we do not face so great an evil as infidelity, or agnosticism, but a deadlier foe—the conservatism of indifference, narrow action as the product of contracted vision, the sin of self-centered satisfaction with present Christian progress. I seriously doubt whether a church is Christian that does not exist for missionary purposes. It may be the "club-house" of a social unit of community life who meet regularly for the purpose assumed, to pray and recite a creed and ritual. We must, as a Christian church, keep our mind upon our "charter rights," or the inspired purpose for existence—to save a world from sin.

Evangelism is, then, the force in action of an evangel. When applied to Christianity, it is the urgency of the message of salvation, as wrought in Christ's blood for human redemption, to every lost man to be reconciled to God.

THE INASMUCH MISSION.

Four men who had long been social outcasts founded two years ago in Philadelphia the Inasmuch Mission. One of them had never known any other world than that of the slums; the others were men who were from respectable families and had been well educated; drink had pulled them from a high level to the lowest. They were unkept, besotted "hoboes." They met by chance in a Philadelphia mission, and something—conversion, or salvation, or redemption—lighting within them the old fires of self-respect, led them to vow that they would be men again, and that they would work together to give material and spiritual help to the fallen of the city.

They have kept the vow, and from the start their work has been successful. Although their combined capital was only twenty-seven cents the mission they established fed and sheltered within a year 12,000 homeless people and found employment for 1,200 men. The founders opened the mission in a mean street, from which the owner of the buildings had driven the criminal and vicious tenants. Decent people would not live there. The owner gave the mission the free use of the property, and when it was seen that the four men were in earnest in their determination to succeed, financial aid followed. They now occupy several houses, and also have a large tent where in the first year 28,000 people attended religious and social meetings. Some wealthy persons in Phliadelphia have agreed to build for the use of the mission a hotel with 800 rooms. It is to be on the plan of the Mills Hotels in New York.

Much of the wonderful success of these men is doubtless due to their intimate knowledge of the class they are trying to help. They know from experience every scheme and subterfuge of the imposter; they know equally well when a man sincerely wishes to make a first start nd they know how to help him do it. Two years ago these men were human derelicts. In view of what they have done, who shall say that any man is too far down to be reached and brought back to a useful and upright life? Their work gives a new beauty to the motto of their mission: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—The Youth's Companion.

ADDRESS OF DR. GEO. R. STUART IN WELCOMING SOUTHERN METHODIST EDITORS, MEETING IN FIRST CHURCH, BIRMINGHAM, ALA., DECEMBER 17, 1919.

To the Editors of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

As the pastor of the church in which you have been invited to meet, I beg the honor of extending to you a cordial welcome. In extending my greeting, may I presume to say that I am wondering if our church will ever realize the value and power of the religious press, and render an adequate support?

In former years, the message was received through the ear, by the voice: the preacher, the stump speaker, agitator and reformer moulded and shaped public thought. To-day, the people are reached through the eye, the flash of the electric light, the dodger, the folder, the pamphlet, the booklet and bill board. If we desire to influence the world on any point, we buy a newspaper, magazine, bill board or advertising agency or expert paragrapher. The press is the pull and the push. Every organization, business, social and political, seems to have discovered this except the church.

I am wondering if you unappreciated and unsupported, self-sacrificing toilers for the church and for the age will let the chill of our indifference utterly freeze you out. Some of us recognize the hnge task you have, which you are so worthily executing, in catching the flux of human thought and moulding it into that sane and Christian form worthy to be dominant. Some of us recognize your power to set in motion and keep in motion the vital and valuable machinery of the home and the church. We recognize that the active and useful men of our church read your papers, and the inactive, critical and dead-weight members do not; that every cause of the church is announced, fortified, and urged through your papers; that every theme of Christianity is given a fresh and up-to-date putting and is sent forth to your readers in this new and vital form; that the church paper is the preacher at the fireside and in the private office. We recognize the power reposed in you by virtue of the following facts: First, you have been selected and elected to the tripod because of your assumed ability to guide the thought of the whole church; therefore, your message, whether in editorial or contributory column, carries your endorsement in a commanding and compelling force. Second, messages sent forth in hooks and periodicals carry the thought of preparation and deliberation which gives them a power over the oral messages, which are presumed to be given out more or less extemporaneously. Third, it is recognized that you have constantly before you the exchange list of periodicals which give the thought of the country at large, and you have the best opportunity to get the consensus of deliberate thought on all subjects, and, therefore, are able to send forth your messages under the "multitude of counsel," in which is great wisdom. Fourth, it is understood that, in addition to your clipping scissors, you have the power to lay under tribute the best thought; and from your teeming columns may sparkle the gems from the whole church. With such prestige of authority, opportunity and resources, you speak with a power far superior to any other messengers who go forth to the church and the people. Fifth, when your audience is considered, your opportunity and power become appalling. While the words of our preachers reach only a few hundred, our editors speak to multiplied thousands in every issue. The message of the preacher falls on the air and goes with the moment. The message of the editor lies on the table and desk of home and office the year round. Sixth, the preacher gives his message in public with all the inconveniences, discomforts and the distractions incident to promiscuous crowds. The editor comes silently into the home and the office and finds his reader in his leisure, meditative hour, in the most impressionable and mobile state of mind and heart possible. Seventh, the preacher prepares and essays to deliver; he remembers and forgets, leaves out and puts in, enlarges and abridges, runs out and runs over, shoots effectively and flashes in the pan, succeeds and fails, by moods and circumstances; the editor with pencil and eraser, time and quiet, writes and re-writes, reads and re-reads, and sends forth beaten oil. The preacher fixes the hour, the place and the specific topic and compels the auditors; the editor steals into his home and office and awaits the meditative, receptive hour, awaits his chance of place and situation, awaits the easy chair, slipper, gown and fireside. By a score of attractive head lines he gives the choice of subject and thus approaches the reader in the most suave and winning way possible, and seizes, per force of fact and circumstances, the most powerful opportunity to hold, impress and convince. Eighth, the editor gives his readers the choice of taking the message by bits as time and taste suggest, of reading and re-reading; the preacher forces him to take it all at once, whether he wants it or not, and forces him to hold it or lose it on the spot. The preacher furnishes the food and insists on feeding his auditor; the editor furnishes the food and gives the reader the delightful privilege of feeding himself at his own option and in his own way. If you claim that Pentecost was symbolized by the fiery tongue and that the Holy Spirit accompanied the spoken word, let it be remembered that the written word is a tongue and the Holy Spirit acts through the read word, the same as the spoken word. Some of the most significant conversions of past history have been through the reading of the Word of God, of some paragraph or chapter from some pen dipped in the well of prayer and faith, whose message has gone forth with burning power. There is no function given to the pulpit that may not he claimed hy the press, except physical magnetism, and that repels about as often as it attracts. Away with the false assertion that the preacher has left the ministry and taken an editorship! Let us assert with fresh emphasis that he has enlarged his ministry by increasing his power and multiplying his audience. In this great evangelistic movement, may we hope that our editors will betake themselves to prayer and holy consecration, that the paragraphs may burn and blaze with holy fire.

I am wondering if you men in your council cannot devise a plan by which you may extend the circulation of your papers to penetrate the homes of the careless and the indifferent. Is it not time for us to begin at the heginning and put the propaganda where it is needed? Cannot you edifors so arrange your territory as to avoid duplication, and give us a plan that will put the local organ and the general organ of our church in every Methodist home?

I wish to express my humiliation in the fact that the so-called Christian Science Church, which is neither Christian nor science, is giving the world the only great international religious dally paper. The Christian Science Monitor is a distinct challenge to our great church at this time when we are planning great world work.

As the pastor of one of our great churches, I beg to offer my hearty co-operation in the accomplishment of the large and worthy task you have in hand.

CHRISTMAS EVE.

By Ulysses Grant Foote.

The hour gives tongues to lifted spires;
Then hush falls low o'er fen and hills,
Where Luna's bowl her silver spills
Ahove that coast whose sunset fires,
Re-lit some Pilgrim's fond desires.
A spirit moves down from the hills,
Where meadow brook its music trills.
Which lends the pines a thousand lyres.

Those bivouacs of the nation's dead,
Where crosses rank with row hy row,
Are covered by their sheets of snow.
In love for them our hearts have hled;
Rememb'ring them our prayers are said:
For Christmas Eve lets mem'ries flow—
Flow sad and sweet as hrave men know—
Full tides for them—our honored dead.

There comes no joy to hroken hearts,
Though angels sing it with a will,
If with the song men's hate must kill
Our human love and leave hate's smarts.
Our love must hold the broken parts
Of life with wound to wound until
All joints renew; all hopes fulfill:
Through Love we see God's human parts.

My memory threads a way that's dim,
And aisled through years to long ago
Where Christmas came, and candle glow
Halo'd the scene with golden rim.
A lad was there, brown-eyed and slim—
All those who sit in shadows know!—
One passed just now! I saw him go!—
Did I see mine?—Or saw I Him?

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

S. A. Steel.

Paying compliments is a fine art. Some people do it so gracefully that it greatly enhances the pleasure of receiving them. We had a great service at Hope, Arkansas, during the meeting of the Little Rock Conference. After a speech longer than the seminary sermonette, a lady came up in the crowd, and said: "How glad I am that Dr. Steel didn't strike for shorter time!" Beat that if you can.

What do you reckon I found in my mail when I got home from my spin among the Conferences, Carley? A card from the Bogalusa yarn-spinner, showing a picture of the Bogalusa pines! Well, I give it up. My pines at Camp Idlewild look like bushes beside the tall pipe-stems of Bogalusa. Bogalusa pines are doubtless well known in lumber circles; I'll make my pines known in literary circles. I wonder if the fairies flock among the Bogalusa pines as they do among the Pelican pines? If so, we should look for something fine to come forth. It's up to the scribbler who haunts the woods down there.

I have moved my library to Camp Idlewild. It was temporarily housed in the stable around at the parsonage. As I was loading the wagon with genius, the new-arrived Mistress of Melrose Manse appeared on the scene. "Why, Dr. Steel, you don't look like a superannuated man." "I'm not," I replied. "Then, why did you ask to be superannuated?" she asked. "I didn't," I replied. "Well, who did?" she inquired. Just so. Who did? I'm not kicking ahout it; but right is right, and it is right that my friends should know that I had nothing to do with it, and was not consulted about it. The only sin I have committed in the matter is that I have lived to be seventy years old, and I am too glad of that to be very penitent. Mrs. Battle made me laugh when she said she thought I am a rich man, and was retiring to a fine farm: What a brilliant imagination she has! She actually looked incredulous when I told her that I do not own a foot of land, and that Camp Idlewild is on another man's land, who kindly allows me the pleasure of the pines out there. My only investments are in the bank of heaven. If that fails, I'm a goner. But they won't get me to the poorhouse as long as I'm able to move a muscle. The only excuse for Lazarus's crouching at a rich man's gate, and being a beggar, is that he was sick; and the rich man deserved to be sent to hell for not having the afflicted man sent to the sanitarium for treatment. I don't know what I would do if ill-health should overtake me; but, thank the good Lord. I'm sound as a dollar, if Bishop Kilgo does think I'm a "worn-out preacher."

By the way, what is the matter with our Bishop? He seems to think the whole world is going to destruction, except the Salvation Army. I have lived longer than he has, and according to my experience, it is a hetter world than it has ever been in my day. He needs to force himself, if necessary, to look on the hright side of things awhile. I attended the Memphis Conference, after the Aberdeen meeting, and the Little Rock Conference after the Memphis meeting; and I was glad to hear from both Bishop Atkins and Bishop Mouzon a much more cheerful note. I know he has good reason to be gloomy when he has to associate with some folks, hut he must not discourage the rest of us because so many bad folks are in the world. There now!

Some time ago I asked what spiders were made for, and received some interesting letters in reply. The editor was shrewd and shunned an answer. Now let some bright boy or girl who reads the Advocate tell me what "grand-daddy long-legs" are good for. The spiders have disappeared, and the grand-daddy long-legs have come to Camp Idlewild. I didn't invite them, for I don't like them. They have no manners. Speaking of manners, I got me an apple pie for lunch out at Camp Idlewild, and was just about to use my knife on it, when lo, Sister Steel unexpectedly appeared on the scene! You should have seen me drop that knife. And speaking of pies, a pie is no good unless the under-crust is crisp. Mutt was excusable for eating the paper plate on which his pie was served, thinking it was the crust of the pie. Some pie crust is about like that.

Battle starts off well and I anticipate a fine year for him.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Let every preacher in the North Mississippi Conference begin at once, and continue without recess, a program of information on the crying need and just claim of the Conference claimants for an adequate support.

1. This can be done by preaching on the subject, and by other methods which will be revealed to the preachers who have a vision of our task and a passion to relieve the distress of our brothers. A proper atmosphere is fundamental to the success of any movement, and the preacher can create this by giving thoughtful attention to publicity.

2. Report prospects. Let every preacher keep his ears and eyes wide open to discover individuals who may indicate in some way their willingness to do something for the Superannuate Endowment Fund by way of donations or otherwise. Let the names and addresses of these prospects, together with the facts of their susceptibility, be reported at once to your field agent. I want every preacher in the Conference to feel that he is a special agent in the interest of the proper support of this great cause, and by promptly reporting said prospects to me, he can do much towards making full proof of that agency.

I shall be glad to receive any information or advice that any one may from time to time see fit to give me; so let's get busy for this great cause for God and our brothers in this hour of great need.

After some days of trying to find me a house in which to live, in many towns in the bounds of our Conference, and failing to do so, finally I am at present located with Rev. R. O. Brown, in the district parsonage at Durant; so those who wish to write me should address me at Durant until further notice. Your brother,

A. C. McCORKLE,
Field Agent for Sup't Endowment Fund.

"THE NEW CONGRESS AND THE PEACE TREATY."

Mr. Editor: Pardon my criticism of your Editorial Comment, but, believing as I do that the Methodists ought to have a fair and unbiased understanding of the attitude of President Wilson and the exact situation of the Peace Treaty, I ask space to criticize one statement which appears in your editorial on "The New Congress And The Peace Treaty," page 1, issue of December 11, 1919, in which you state: "The treaty could have been adopted with reservations and compromises, but the President held steadily to his position that it should be accepted as written."

I wish to call your attention to the fact that the peace treaty presented by the President to the U. S. Senate about the 1st of July, 1919, was not a document prepared by the President of the United States to be considered, approved, or amended, and then submitted to the other Powers for consideration, but, under the Constitution of the United States, the President is charged with the duty of negotiating treaties with foreign powers, which, when negotiated, must be submitted to the Senate of the United States for approval before the treaty becomes effective, or for its disapproval. The Senate of the United States must either approve or disapprove, but has no power whatever to negotiate a treaty or to amend a treaty.

A treaty is a contract between two or more nations, just as a contract is a contract between two or more persons. And a contract is a meeting of the minds of two or more persons, or two or more nations upon a particular thing. In this instance, the treaty is a pact constituting a contract between thirty-one different nations, including the United States and Germany. This contract was agreed upon between the representatives of these thirty-one nations, including the United States and Germany, and then was referred to the ratifying powers of each nation for its approval, or disapproval. In the United States, the ratifying power is the U. S. Senate.

Now, as a matter of fact, the U. S. Senate has never voted on the question of ratifying or rejecting the peace treaty at any time, but the Republican Party and a few who were elected by the Democratic Party, submitted about forty-five amendments in the way of reservations, all of which were voted upon in one way or another, and then voted on a resolution to approve the treaty of peace with Germany as amended, which was defeated. But no vote has ever been taken upon the peace treaty of Germany as it was presented to the Senate by the President.

Now, supposing that the ratifying powers of each of the thirty-one countries to which the treaty of peace with Germany was presented, had passed forty-five reservations and amendments, all of a different character, and then approved the peace treaty with the amendments and reservations, there would have been 1395 peace treaties. And it could not be said that the minds of any two nations had met on any particular thing contained in the peace treaty with Germany. And, therefore, it could not be said that any peace treaty existed between any of the nations.

Therefore, Mr. Wilson is conciusively right in his stand that the Senate has no right to amend the peace treaty in any way, but must approve or reject it as submitted. T. M. EVANS.

Gulfport, Miss., Dec. 16, 1919.

(We are very glad to give space to the above statement by Brother Evans. The "Editorial Comment" referred to, however, does not, in any sense, bear upon the question raised by him—it simply stated the situation as indicated by press dispatches. We fail to see wherein that statement was either unfair or biased.—Editor.)

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Your joint evangelistic committee, which met in New Orleans on December 18, set February 15 as the day on which to begin the survey for the evangelistic campaign, and February 29 as the day on or before which the survey should be finished. The Survey book, all necessary blanks, cards, etc., will be mailed to each pastor in time to reach him before February 1. You will need the fourteen days to familiarize yourself with the plans. If this material for the survey does not reach you before February 1, please notify me and it will be sent again at once.

I need not exhort on the advantages of making this survey. So many successful pastor—evangelists have found it such a help that they now insist on the taking of this census before the meeting begins. This survey, or census, will discover, first, how many Methodists there are living in your community who hold membership elsewhere; second, how many unconverted people in the community would be Methodists if converted; third, how many people have no church choice and are, therefore, the common responsibility of all the churches in the community.

Judging by the communities in which the surveys were made, there are more than three hundred thousand Methodists living in communities with membership elsewhere. Shall we allow all these—or any considerable per cent of them—to be lost to the church? We ought to reach and get reunited with the church a quarter of a million of these now unidentified Methodists in our spring campaign.

Do not let the word "parish" confuse you. Dr. Zumbrunnen, in the Survey book, uses this word in the sense in which the early Methodists used it—that is, the immediate community surrounding your church—not the political division ordinarily called a "county."

The meeting in New Orleans was enthusiastic and optimistic. Remember once more—if the material for the survey is not in your hands by February 1, notify me and it will be sent you by next mail. Yours for a great revival,

O. E. GODDARD,
Centenary Building,
Nashville, Tenn.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

The spirit of Christmas is the spirit of the Christ, and the spirit of Christ is the spirit of service. The press recently carried a story of service in a certain town in North Mississippi. A kind-hearted Christian woman, a representative of a well-known organization, found a little boy about to follow a circus. He had tired of the life in the beginning and was crying bitterly. She persuaded him to return home, and she went with him.

There she found a family of children, motherless and worse than fatherless. The good woman did not simply say, "Be ye clothed and fed, and decently reared." She asked the oldest girl, who was trying vainly to keep the little family together, to tell her father to come to see her. Then she found homes for the children and waited for the interview with the father. The girl had said he wouldn't come. The neighbors said he wouldn't come They said he was a "bad egg."

The man did come, however, and with tears streaming down his cheeks, he said, "Lady, you are the first one who has had a kind word for me." With difficulty the lady persuaded the father to allow the children to be taken into homes where they might grow into decent men and women. She secured a position for him in a nearby town, and he earnestly promised to be a better man.

Deeds like this one, performed sometimes through the church, sometimes through such organizations as the Red Cross, and often by individuals, are in keeping with the spirit of the Christmastide, the spirit of service.—Contributed.

CLERGY CERTIFICATES—1920.

Ministers of the Methodist Episcopapl Church, South, will doubtless recall the fact that Clergy Certificates which have been issued during 1919, and which are now being issued, are limited to expire one year from date of issue.

Ministers desiring certificates for 1920, who now hold certificates bearing limit of say January 15, or even February and March dates or later in 1920; holders of such certificates should not now apply for certificates for period beyond December 31, 1919. They should wait till about two weeks before expiration date of old certificate, which date can be determined by an inspection of inside of back cover of certificate. The foregoing does not apply, of course, to ministers whose certificates, even though limited to a 1920 date, may have all been used and now desire new certificates for immediate use Cordially yours,

CHRISTMAS AT HOME.

By Charles D. Bulla, Corresponding Secretary of the General Sunday School Board.

Through the window of Christmastide I look upon my boyhood days at the old home. This is what I see: A path leading from the gate by the side of the road to a substantially built farmhouse with porch extending across the front; to one side, the deep well, with an oak bucket hanging above the cool water; in one part of the smoke-house, the cured meats; in the other—well, a lot o' things; the great barn, with its granaries, hay-mow, tool chest, and warm stalls; stretching away in every direction, orchard and vineyard, pastures and fields; the schoolhouse, the nearest building on the right. Early in my career I got mixed up with the alphabet and multiplication table in the district school, and I have not succeeded in wholly disentangling myself to this day.

The old-fashioned Christmas came to that home. Of course the children found out that Santa Claus and father were one and the same person. But for all that there was an unfailing interest in the reindeer and sleigh and the strangely-filled stockings. What if father and mother were in partnership with the kindly old man from the land of snows?

I live over again those long-past winter evenings. The chores are done; supper is over; the family gathers about the blazing logs in the great fireplace. Father sits at the right humming a hymn and working out plans for the welfare of the children. On the other side, mother is sewing by a small table. The fire-glow from without and the heart-glow from within glorify the care-worn face of the angel of the home. The children—boys and girls—busy with their school lessons, round out the charmed semicircle.

The Seth Thomas clock on the walnut mantel strikes nine; apples and nuts are brought in; a hungry boy finds a roasted potato in the hot embers. The day is done. It is an hour of holy calm. A chapter is read from the Bible; God lowers a ladder from the skies; the hearthstone becomes a bethel; prayers ascend to the throne of grace, and down the shining way angel-answers descend in benediction. Home and heaven overlap.

The home is the most influential factor in the building of character. The Christian family is a school of all the virtues. The supreme need of our day is a revival of hearthstone religion. The Sunday school seeks to supplement the home. The home ought to co-operate with the Sunday school.

JOKES.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D.

Certainly that first item in the personal column of the Advocate of this date, December 11, is a great joke. Your "appreciative subscriber from Utica" calls for two tips of the hat and they are hereby extended. That my scribblings should be a compensation to any reader of the paper is an incentive to write again and an assurance that "all's well that ends well," and that "love's labor is not lost." Hats off, friend!

While some of the fellows at Meridian said "write more," none said as much. And that reminds me of Sam's joke about his wonderful teeth, which suggests that I can go that one better by recalling the story of the two negroes running from the bear, when one said, "Nigger, ef you can't do no better than that, let somebody run what kin run." So here goes to Sam: that Columbus ride on Susanna brought out a full set—upper and lower—within two weeks. Now, beat that if you dare.

Yes, and Shultz, of Gallman, is given to joking some, but Sam over-matched that by giving those Galimanites the best week they ever had, I dare say.

Speaking of jokes, wasn't that a stupendous joke over the church at large when those fellows put Sam on the superannuate list? Well, there are some jokes hard to catch—like the boy's picture, "This is a cow."

From rumors before Conference and the after-appointments, Bishop Kilgo himself is not above perpetrating an occasional joke, even though it may fall upon a "beloved."

There are jokes and jokes, and this will be the greatest joke of all should it appear in your Christmas issue. Health, happiness and many returns to the Advocate force of that season.

Getting home from Conference with almost a first-class case of flu, I have spent the time with the children in the Delta, and what a time of rains and wind. Moving seems a contagion with the colored folks—in every direction they go; but the planters say there is abundance of labor. Only a patch here and there remains of cotton to be picked.

EVANGELISM AMONG CHILDREN.

By J. J. Stowe.

It is of the utmost importance that the children of our Methodist families, and other children properly coming under our influence as a church, should be reached by the Gospel message and brought into a definite Christian experience. There are two erroneous views concerning this matter—one, the child taught certain portions of Scripture and certain statements of a creed, thereby becomes a Christian. The other erroneous view represents the opposite extreme, that a child in order to become a Christian, must know the agony of an accusing conscience portrayed in the 51st Psalm, and must have a cataclysmic experience, in order to be saved. Some difference of opinion will also be found as to the age at which a child may come into a conscious relationship with God. Upon this last point, no definite age limits can be set, for a precocious child, properly trained, may much earlier make a definite surrender and exercise an actual faith than another child less favored by nature and environment.

It is possible, on the one hand, to urge these things upon the child too young to comprehend the message and make a decision in matters so vital. More often we commit the opposite mistake, that of allowing the child to drift until wrong habits of thought and life have built a barrier between the child and God.

A word of caution is needed as to another mistake too often made, that of substituting church membership for a definite experience with a child. With a child, as with an older person, church membership should be an expression and evidence of a surrendered heart and of a vital faith, and not a substitute for these things. Let it then be clearly understood that our object is not simply to instruct a child, though that is important, nor win the child to church membership, though that, in its place, is right and proper, but to lead the child into a consciousness of God's presence and into a life of love and obedience.

Methods employed in working with adults may be most unwise when applied to children. Stories calculated to harrow the feelings of a child should never be employed; the emotions of a child should not be unduly aroused. Again, children are given to move en masse, accepting propositions that they do not comprehend, or following the course they do not understand, simply because they are urged to do so, or because they follow the example of other children.

There may be little danger in dealing with hardened adults, that their emotions will be too greatly aroused, or the individuals will simply follow the crowd. The case, however, is very different with children, and this gross injustice to them should never be done. It is an easy matter to induce children to join the church. It is not church membership alone that the child needs, but a vital Christian experience, for which church membership should, but does not always, stand. Motives of fear should never be appealed to in dealing with children, and harrowing death-bed scenes are entirely out of place.

The deep conviction for sin which must and does come to the adult who has spent years away from God, cannot be known to a child, and the transport of joy often experienced at conversion by a grown person is seldom known by a child. The reason for this is perfectly clear to one who gives the matter serious consideration. We should not expect the agony and joy of the Prodigal Son in the experience of a child. While all of this is true and must never be lost sight of, it is also true that a child may have and should have a definite experience. With some children this experience is an evolution; and looking back years later, no definite date can be recalled when that experience began. But to most children to whom the claim of God upon them is made clear, and the love of God for them made distinct, an experience comes that is definite and often recalled through a lifetime.

The child must be led definitely and fully to surrender to God, and definitely and fully to trust in Christ as a personal friend and Savior. Thus, "conversion" is as necessary with a child as with an adult, but the concomitants of this conversion differ widely in the one case from the other. With the child, as with the adult, this marks the beginning of the Christian life and experience and does not mean of, and by itself, the full consummation of that experience. Development, progress, instruction, must follow. Not only is it far easier by proper methods to lead a child into this vital Christian experience than it is to win a sin-hardened adult to God, but investigation has shown that a larger per cent of children really converted "hold out" and remain faithful, than is the case with people converted after reaching maturity.

Not only is it of the utmost importance to push evangelism among children; it is equally important that this evangelism be founded upon common sense, the laws of psychology and the Word of God.

The boy of ten or twelve, who is led into a definite Christian experience, guided and instructed through the years that follow, must ever prove of more value to the Kingdom than the remnant of a life snatched as a brand from the burning. In most cases children should be dealt with, one by one, or in small groups, in these vital matters of the soul, at least when it comes to the decision each must make. This does not mean that services may not with great profit be held for a large number of children at one time, but it does mean that the individualistic, rather than the mass method, should be employed to obtain the desired results.

THE REJECTED STONE

It is not every stone taken from the quarry that fits into the building, even if it be only a stone wall in the back lot. Considerations of size, workability, texture, and endurance qualities ought to be—though they are not always in practice—taken into account in selecting the materials out of which buildings are to be constructed. It is so in architecture and engineering, and it is so, in a figurative sense, in life. Many stones are rejected, many more stones ought to be. This rejection may be absolute or relative. Certain rocks are so crumbly, unstable, or it may be on the other hand so intractable, that they are practically unfit for any use. In other cases a stone unsuitable for one purpose may fit into a niche somewhere else. Occasionally, too, the builders, whether of church, state, or college, mistake in their judgment of stones. It was so most notably in the instance of one Galilean whose name and fame, spurned by chief priests and Pharisees and Sadducees, has "become the head of the corner"—an evolution that was "the Lord's doing," and "is marvelous in our eyes." Indeed, we may say that Jesus Christ is not only capstone but also foundation—the great Rock, not of rejection but of reconstruction. Men who have caught His spirit and are obedient to His will are in lesser degree stones disesteemed possibly by their fellow men, but chosen actually by the Lord for solid historic constructions. Let every man, then, ask himself this question: Am I rejected as a building item because of my own fault, or by reason of popular prejudice or ignorance? If the former, let me do my best to find my providential niche; if the latter, let the Lord do with me marvelously as He will.—Zion's Herald.

The Home Circle

A LESSON FROM SANTA CLAUS.

By Mrs. Georgo S. Brown:

In the North, where the reindeer and Santa Claus live,
The wind carries letters each day;
They come from the chimneys all over the land,
From the good girls and boys, so they say.

Old Santa receives them, and then with a smile
He adjusts his big specs on his nose,
And not till he's read every word of the notes
Does he sit by the fire to doze.

But one day last week such a queer letter came,
So bulky, so big and so fat,
That Santa exclaimed as the wind blew it in,
"Well, well! and whose letter is that?"

So losing no time, he tore open the seal,
And there, to his utmost surprise,
Was a letter, the length of which seemed to old Kris
To extend from the earth to the skies.

A boy from New Orleans had made out a list
Of the things for Kris Kringle to bring,
And the reindeer looked sad when they heard what it was
For he hadn't omitted a thing.

He wanted a boat and a car and a drum,
A knife and a bat and a ball,
A horse and a wagon, a tool-chest and blocks,
And an army of soldiers so tall.

He further requested some marbles and games,
Then of books, quite a dozen or more,
A sword and a top, some skates and some tricks,
And a dry-goods and grocery store.

He wanted a wheel and an automobile,
A dog cart, a cat, and a coon,
Then Santa Claus roared when he read the last line
Which said, "Send me the man in the moon."

The Brownies were up on the side of the hill,
Playing ping pong, and "one and run out."
But they broke up their games and rushed to old Kris,
To see what the noise was about.

"Ho! Brownies," he said as he shook his fat sides,
"Here's a youngster wants all of our toys,
He surely would like to monopolize things
Over all of the girls and the boys.

"We must teach him a lesson, so put on your wings
And hasten with main and with might
To the land of the South where this selfish boy lives.
Then take him to Dreamland tonight."

So 'twas thus that it happened one cold winter night
That this boy, when all snuggled in bed,
Spent hour after hour in playing with toys
Till tired from his heels to his head.

He rode and he jumped, he climbed and he fell,
He skated, he read and he drew;
He went spinning around till he couldn't keep still,
And then of a sudden he flew,

Till he stood alongside of the man in the moon,
And then, looking downward with shame,
He saw thousands of children all over the land
Who hadn't a toy to their name.

And there stood old Santa Claus stroking his beard;
A tear-dop was seen in his eye,
For one little boy had quite emptied his pack,
So the others he had to pass by.

But the Brownies came back and gave him a shake
Which caused him to wake with a scream,
But he was the happiest kind of a boy
When he knew it had all been a dream.

He sprang to his feet and rushed to his desk,
Seized pen, ink and paper, and then
He wrote these few words, saying, "Dear Santa Claus,
I'll never be selfish again."

So Santa got busy and packed up his sled,
And with reindeer and Brownie and sprite
He's loaded with toys for good girls and boys
And he's going to be with us tonight.

THE HISTORY OF THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

By Jane A. Stewart.

The bright and beautiful Christmas tree, with its attractive gifts, is naturally looked on as an essential part of the Christmas festivities. No celebration is quite complete without it.

To whom shall we credit its institution?

To attempt to locate the original source of the idea is a fascinating bit of research.

If we look for the origin and first introduction of the Christmas tree, we find it reaches far back into the night of time. Indeed, so hazy is the record back of the brightly glowing Christmas-tree that it is quite impossible to tell where or by whom it was first originated. Antiquarians are prolific in suggestion on the subject. But the clues afforded immediately lead back to the dubiousness of fable and tradition.

Nearly every country has its legend claiming for its own the popular feature of the modern Christmas observance. In Scandinavia the Christmas tree is said to have sprung from a "service tree" which germinated from the blood-soaked soil where two lovers met a violent death. The claim is substantiated by the statement that at the Christmastide inextinguishable lights gleamed from the branches.

In a French romance of the thirteenth century a great tree is described whose branches are covered with burning candles, and on whose top is a vision of a child with a halo around his curly head, the tree representing mankind, the child the Savior, and the candles (some of which are upside down) good and bad human beings.

Some old writers would have us believe that it may be Saint Winfrith (afterward called Boniface, the name given to him when he became a missionary), who deserves the primary honor of giving the Christmas tree to the world, as narrated in a charming suggestive story illustrative of the displacement of heathenism by Christianity.

Saint Winfrith, the story goes, leveled a majestic oak which had been worshipped by his Druidic converts, and immediately a stalwart young fir sprang up in its place.

Addressing the company of newly enlisted Christians, Saint Winfrith said:

"This little tree, a young child of the forest, shall be your holy tree tonight. It is the wood of peace; for your houses are built of fir. It is the sign of an endless life, for its leaves are green. See how it points upward to heaven. Let this be called the tree of the Christ-child. Gather about it, not in the wild woods, but in your own homes. There it will shelter, not deeds of blood, but loving gifts and rites of kindness."

That is an interesting story which attributes to Martin Luther the inauguration of the Christmas tree. A favorite engraving represents him sitting in his family circle with a lighted Christmas tree on the table beside him.

The story goes that the idea came to Luther when he was traveling alone one Christmas eve. The snow-covered country, the trees, the sky with its gleaming points of light, made such a deep impression on him that he could neither shake it off nor express it. After he reached home he went into the garden, cut a little fir tree, brought it into the nursery, put some candles on its branches, and lighted them. Affectionate regard for the great religious leader has fostered the desire of his followers to associate his name with the popular and kindly custom. The story has wide acceptance.

There is considerable ground, too, for the suggestion that the famous tree "Igdrasil," of Norse mythology, may be the original progenitor of the modern Christmas tree. The pine trees of the Roman saturnalia have also claim to be regarded as prototypes of the Christmas tree. They were decorated, not with toys and gifts, but with images of Bacchus, as described by Virgil in the Georgics. The practice of burning Yule logs was a reminiscence of the days of those wanton winter festivals.

The Egyptians may have originated the idea in their practice of decorating their houses at the time of the winter solstice with branches of the date palm, which they regarded not only as an emblem of immortality, but also of the star-lit firmament.

The first authentic account of the Christmas tree is dated in the seventeenth century. The manuscript is in a private collection in Friedberg, Hesse, and is dated 1608.

The world-wide adoption of the Christmas tree began at the opening of the nineteenth century. The introduction of the Christmas tree into England occurred after the marriage of Queen Victoria to a German prince, which brought German customs to England.

Holland is indebted for the Christmas tree to Queen Caroline, who introduced it in 1830. Ten years later the French were shown Christmas-tree customs by the Duchess Helene at the Tuileries, and at first the tree was disliked. In France the Christmas tree, root and all, is planted in a tub and kept fresh until New Year's day, when its beauty and its gifts are to be enjoyed.

The foreign immigrant who brought the Christmas tree to America did more perhaps than any other to give us the happy home festival which we now enjoy.—Western Christian Advocate.

Editorial

MEETING OF EDITORS IN BIRMINGHAM.

The editors of Southern Methodism met in Birmingham, Ala., on Wednesday of last week for the purpose of considering some of the difficult problems of present-day religious journalism, and to get such inspiration and help as might come from personal association and friendly counsel.

The meeting was held in First Church, of which the famous Dr. Geo. R. Stuart is pastor. The magnificent auditorium of that stately building would seem to an observer to be more than ample to accommodate as many as might reasonably be expected to attend the regular preaching services at a prominent church in a modern city; yet hundreds are turned away each Sunday for lack even of standing room. We have seen the statement that, since the return of Dr. J. H. Jowett to England, Dr. Stuart faces larger congregations Sunday by Sunday than any other preacher in America. Certainly he is one of the unique men of Methodism—but he preaches a sound gospel, and men and women by the thousands are blessed by his ministry. It was taken as a high compliment that Dr. Stuart cancelled a previous engagement in order that he might convey his greetings in person to the assembled editors.

Dr. L. C. Branscomb, editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, was the ideal host of the gathering. The luncheon served by the Doctor's good wife and charming daughters was a luncheon in name only—it was a banquet in fact. We observed that our brethren who wield the pen so skillfully are likewise possessed of a high degree of efficiency in the manipulation of the implements of the gastronomic art (in which art we ourselves are not a whit behind its chiefest exponents.)

The meeting was organized by the election of Dr. Carlton D. Harris, of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, as president, and of Dr. A. F. Smith, of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, as secretary. The roll-call showed the following in attendance: W. E. Arnold, of the Central Methodist; R. B. Eleazer, of the Missionary Voice; L. C. Branscomb, H. Whitehead, and L. M. Harris, of the Alabama Christian Advocate; A. C. Millar, of the Arkansas Methodist; A. F. Smith, of the St. Louis Christian Advocate; F. S. Parker, of the Epworth Era; E. B. Chappell and E. Hightower, of the Sunday school periodicals; T. N. Ivey, of the Nashville Christian Advocate; Carlton D. Harris, of the Baltimore Southern Methodist; F. M. Thomas, of the Methodist Quarterly Review; A. T. Wilson ("Jeff"), advertising manager of the Texas Christian Advocate; W. C. Kirkland and Mrs. Kirkland, of the Southern Christian Advocate; R. F. Eakes, of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate; H. T. Carley, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; L. S. Massey, of the North Carolina Christian Advocate. Dr. Geo. R. Stuart, pastor of First Church, and Rev. J. D. Hunter, assistant pastor, were invited to sit with the assembly.

An address of welcome was delivered by Dr. Stuart, which was such a fine presentation of the opportunities and responsibilities of the religious press that copies of it were requested for publication in the Conference organs. It will be found in another column of this week's Advocate.

The discussions of the problems now confronting religious periodicals were entered into vigorously by practically all of those present. The various questions connected with advertising, circulation, etc., were considered in all their phases by those whose successful experience had abundantly qualified them to speak with authority. A Committee of Findings was appointed to formulate the conclusions reached through the discussions, and to indicate the lines along which the development of the periodical literature of the church may properly take place.

The morning and afternoon sessions were devoted largely to questions relating to the Conference organs. The evening session was given largely to the consideration of the place, work, and problems of the connectional periodicals, brief addresses being delivered by Dr. F. M. Thomas, Dr. T. N. Ivey, Dr. F. S. Parker, Dr. E. Hightower, and Mr. R. B. Eleazer.

The concensus of opinion was that this gathering of church editors was, as a whole, the most notable that has ever been held, and there was unanimous agreement that a permanent organization should be formed. The organization was effected by the election of the following officers: President, Carlton D. Harris, of the Baltimore Southern Methodist; Vice President, H. T. Carley, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; Secretary-Treasurer, A. F. Smith, of the St. Louis Christian Advocate. A special meeting for the adoption of constitution and by-laws and for other steps in completing the organization will be held in Louisville, Ky., on January 15, 1920, at which time the Joint Commission on Unification will be in session. Dr. T. N. Ivey, of the Nashville Christian Advocate, expressed the opinion that the organization of the Southern Methodist Press Association marks a new era in the efficiency and usefulness of our periodical literature. We trust that it may be so.

COMMISSION ON UNIFICATION AT LOUISVILLE.

It is with great personal regret that we announce that the meeting of the Joint Commission on Unification will meet at Louisville, Ky., on January 15, instead of New Orleans, as had been thought probable. The only reason for the change of place was the fact that sufficient hotel accommodations could not be secured in New Orleans for the members of the Commission. It is well known that tourist travel is heavy at this season of the year, and thousands of visitors are said to be attracted to New Orleans every winter by the races. It is a fact, also, that the rates charged by the hotels for such accommodations as could be furnished were so much higher than similar accommodations could be had for elsewhere, as to be considered altogether unreasonable. We presume that the hotel proprietors are not to be blamed for the prices they charge, since they seem to have no difficulty in securing them, but we cannot help feeling that it is somewhat of a reflection upon the leading city of the South not to be able to take care of, even for a few days, a meeting of such significance.

The meeting at Louisville will be open to the editors of church periodicals, and we hope to be able to give our readers a full, first-hand account of the proceedings. It is our own feeling that this meeting will determine the issue of unification for years to come—for or against—and we are exceedingly anxious to give in the pages of the Advocate such record of the proceedings as will enable our constituency to become thoroughly informed concerning this important matter.

THE INTERCHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT IN NEW ORLEANS.

A State Training Conference of the Interchurch World Movement was held at the First Methodist Church in this city, Dec. 17-19. Necessary absence from the city made it impossible for us to attend the Conference except on the evening of the last day. We understand, however, that there was a good attendance of out-of-town visitors, especially ministers of our church, and that the proceedings were interesting and profitable. It was made very clear that there is no intention on the part of the promoters of the Movement to interfere in any way with denominational activities, the desire being simply to bring about such co-operation, based upon full knowledge, as will enable the Protestant church as a whole to meet the obligations that rest upon it at the present time.

Our own church is co-operating with the Movement in the survey that is now being made of religious and social conditions in the home field; beyond that, it has assumed no obligation whatever. It is not likely that we shall become further officially related to the Movement except as it proves itself to be a means of strengthening and facilitating the world-wide program which we have already adopted.

WHY IS THIS?

We have had occasion recently to make inquiry of authoritative sources concerning the circulation of our Conference organs. Using only round numbers, the following figures are interesting and suggestive:

The Alabama Christian Advocate	22,000
The Texas Christian Advocate	19,000
The North Carolina Christian Advocate	18,500
The Arkansas Methodist	12,000
The St. Louis Christian Advocate	12,000
The Baltimore Southern Methodist	10,500
The Central Methodist	10,500
The Wesleyan Christian Advocate	10,500
The Southern Christian Advocate	9,600
The New Orleans Christian Advocate	7,500

There are five other Conference organs whose circulation we do not know. Of those given above, some have a larger constituency than the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and some have smaller. The thing we do not understand is, why the New Orleans Advocate is at the bottom of the list. We are doing our best to find the explanation—and we shall be glad to receive suggestions that will throw light upon the situation.

One thing is certain: We do not expect to be at the bottom of the list on March 15, 1920. We believe our people are as loyal, and our preachers as faithful as those of any other Conferences in the connection. Our campaign to secure a minimum circulation of 10,000 by March 15 is getting under way, and by that time we confidently expect to be able to show a circulation that will compare favorably with that of any other organ in the church. We are looking for large lists of new subscriptions and renewals to begin to come in from all directions. We cannot believe that we shall be disappointed.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. J Walters is happily at work in his new charge, Daleville, Miss.

"The outlook is good for the new year," writes Rev. J. O. Ware from Centerville, Miss.

Rev. H. R. McKee writes that he is pleasantly situated in his new charge, Homewood, Miss.

"Everything goes well with us in our new charge—we have a great people to serve," writes Rev. L. P. Wasson, of Water Valley, Miss.

Rev. Ellis Smith, pastor of Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, of this city, will spend the Christmas holidays with relatives and friends in Texas.

The post office address of Rev. A. C. McCorkle, Field Agent for the Superannuate Endowment Fund of the North Mississippi Conference, is Durant, Miss.

Rev. D. W. Ulmer, of the Mississippi Conference, reports a splendid beginning on the Saucier and Lyman charge, notwithstanding the severe weather thus far.

Sister T. S. Randle is at her home in Yoakum, Texas, for the Christmas holidays. She sends Christmas greetings through the Advocate to all her Louisiana friends.

Rev. L. E. Alford is entering upon his second year's pastorate in Yazoo City, Miss., with many signs of encouragement, one token being a substantial increase in salary.

Rev. R. A. Davis, one of the honored superannuate members of the Louisiana Conference, preached a helpful sermon at the Carrollton Avenue Church last Sunday evening.

Rev. J. H. Hoffpauir requests us to state that his post office address for the present is: Crowley, La., Ave. H, 19th Street, 916. Correspondents are asked to be sure to give the streets address in writing him.

Rev. H. M. Johnson has been cordially received at his new charge, Eden, Miss., where he finds a loyal people to serve. We thank him for an invitation to visit him and preach in the beautiful new church.

Rev. Carroll Varner is happily settled and hard at work in West Point, Miss. His reception included committees at the train and at the parsonage, and a "pounding" already given the pantry of the parsonage.

Mr. O. C. Stapleton, a member of our church at Petal, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week. He was in the city with his wife, who is at the Touro Infirmary for medical treatment.

Miss Myrtle Sweeney, daughter of Rev. F. N. Sweeney, was married to Mr. Carl M. Babington, on December 14, at her father's residence in Franklinton, La. The Advocate extends best wishes to the happy couple.

The Stewardship and Tithing campaign, planned for the month of December, has been postponed by the Centenary Commission until after the revival campaign in the spring, except in the Alabama and the Florida Conferences.

Rev. H. W. Cudd, who was appointed to the Queensborough Church, Shreveport, La., at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, not being able to rent a house, has bought one. Every charge should, of course, own a parsonage.

Rev. A. M. Shaw, who was transferred from the Little Rock Conference to the Louisiana Conference this year, has entered upon his work at Trout and Goodpine with excellent prospects. He was given a cordial reception by the good people of that charge.

Rev. H. G. Roberts, who was granted a supernumerary relation at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, will continue to make his home at Schlater, Miss. Rev. O. L. Savage, the new pastor at Schlater, has entered vigorously upon his work.

We are not surprised to learn that the new year starts well at Franklinton, La., under the leadership of Rev. J. B. Fulton. There has been an increase in the financial resources of the church, and the Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society are actively at work.

At the meeting of the Evangelistic Committee of the Louisiana Conference, held in New Orleans last week, Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, was elected Conference Evangelistic Campaign Director, and Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles was elected secretary of the Evangelistic Committee.

Rev. G. P. Fikes, who was born and reared at Rose Hill, Miss., and who was, for several years, a member of the Mississippi Conference, was appointed to the Pangburn charge, at the recent session of the North Arkansas Conference, to which he was transferred two years ago. He has a fine field among a splendid people.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, who was lately transferred from the Mississippi to the North Mississippi Conference and appointed to Pontotoc, Miss., has reached his new field of labor and has been cordially received. We have known Brother Lewis since the days when we were schoolmates at Millsaps College—and we unreservedly commend him to the love and esteem of our people in North Mississippi.

Dr. O. E. Goddard, Secretary of the Home Mission Department of the Board of Missions, was in New Orleans last week to meet the Evangelistic Committee of the Louisiana Conference, and the executive committee of the City Board of Missions, which, in co-operation with the Parent Board, is planning for a great work in this city. Dr. Goddard honored the Advocate office with a call on Saturday morning.

The American Bible Society announces that a new translation of the Bible has been completed for the Chinese, to be known as the "Revised Mandarin Bible." The work of translation has been in progress for more than a quarter of a century, and the cost to the Society has been more than $132,000. The new version will be printed in China, and hundreds of orders from all parts of the country are waiting to be filled as soon as the first copies come from the press in February, 1920.

Dr. Carlton D. Harris, editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, paid a short visit to New Orleans last week. With Rev. A. Inman Townsley as his guide, he saw most of the points of interest in this historic city, and expressed himself as delighted with the opportunity of viewing scenes that are without parallel in any other American city. This editor greatly enjoyed fellowship with him. Dr. Harris was recently elected president of the newly formed Southern Methodist Press Association.

The Advocate office was honored with calls last Friday by the following brethren, who were in the city in attendance upon the Conference of the Interchurch World Movement: Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District; Rev. W. H. Jordan, of Arcadia; Rev. A. D. George, of Gilbert, and Rev. A. S. J. Neill, of Bastrop. Among others who were in attendance, were Rev. R. H. Wynn, Rev. L. E. Crooks, Rev. W. H. Giles, Dr. S. H. Werlein, Rev. Briscoe Carter, Rev. Martin Heberl, Rev. H. W. Bowman, Rev. W. W. Holmes, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Rev. Alonzo Early, Dr. J. M. Henry, Rev. A. J. Gearheard. We regret that absence from the city prevented our securing a complete list of the out-of-town brethren who were present.

TWO MORE.

Since last week's issue of the Advocate, we have received official information that the boards of stewards at Holly Springs, Miss., and at Franklinton, La., have accepted the Special Proposition for "An Advocate in Every Home," and that the lists will be furnished in the near future. Rev. W. R. Lott, of Holly Springs, Miss., in writing of the unanimous action of his board, says: "They considered it the best piece of work they could do. I honestly believe it will pay in dollars and cents for any board to put the Advocate in the budget." We fully agree with him.

The list now stands as follows:

Bernice, La., Rev. W. A. Mangum, pastor.
Baton Rouge, La., First Church, Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor.
Ruston, La., Trinity, Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor.
Holly Springs, Miss., Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor.
Franklinton, La., Rev. J. B. Fulton, pastor.

VISION FOR SERVICE.

Ye whose work is pre-eminently on the plain, get a preliminary glimpse of God! Come up and see the sunrise ere you go down into the toils of the wilderness! Ye who labor among the sick, come first to the top of the hill; gaze on the mountain glory ere you seek the burdens of the day! Ye who labor among the poor, come first to the top of the hill!—take a deep draught of hope ere you traverse the dens and alleys! Ye who labor among the lapsed come first to the top of the hill! —get a sight of human possibilities ere you tread the path of tears! For it is not despair that nerves you, ye workers in waste and wilderness. They among whom you sojourn may be sunk in depravity, dead in trespasses and sin; yet it is not despair that nerves you. Paul says we are saved by hope; yes, and we save others by hope. Ye that nurse in the hospitals, what is it you see? Is it the dilapidated form on the bed? No, it is the resurrection body—the body as God designed it. Ye that toil in the penitentiaries, what is it you see? Is it the depraved soul walking amid the tombs? No, it is the soul set free—the soul as God painted it. Never lose sight of the Christ when you stand in Bethlehem's manger! Never lose sound of the music when you watch in Bethlehem's night! for it is the Christ that makes the manger bearable, it is the music that makes the night tolerable. Beside the cradle of present impotence, behold the treasures laid! through the night of lonely watching, hear the angels sing! And your helpfulness will be greater by reason of the glory; your watchfulness will be deper by reason of the song. Hope, and you will help; be bright, and you will hear; enjoy the vision of triumph, and you will endure the vale of tears. They who have mounted up as eagles in the morning, shall in the afternoon walk and not faint.—George Matheson.

I AM ON THE LORD'S SIDE.

I am on the Lord's side because I couldn't refuse the inducements that he gives me to be on his side.

It was love that drew me to the Lord's side—the love that Jesus had for me, more than tongue can tell.

I am on the Lord's side because the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

I am on the Lord's side because all the blessings which I have received since I have been conscious of this existence came from my Heavenly Father.

In my distress I cried unto the Lord, and he hearkened and heard.

I don't know how I could help being on the Lord's side when he has done so much for me.

I am on the Lord's side because I know that he satisfies my longing as nothing else can.

I am on the Lord's side because his Holy Spirit came to my heart and convinced me that I was on the wrong side, and I changed over to the Lord's side.

I am on the Lord's side because I love him and want a home in his blessed Kingdom.

I am on the Lord's side because one time I found myself a debtor, bankrupt, with nothing to pay, and he freely forgave me all the debt.

I am on the Lord's side because I had a praying father and mother; when I was but eight years of age I gave my heart to the Lord, and I have continued on his side ever since because I love to be there.—A. B. Earle.

THE CHANGED SERMON.

The late George H. C. McGregor told me that he came one night to his London pulpit with his sermon carefully prepared, for he was a thorough student, and suddenly became impressed with the fact that for some reason he ought to turn aside from his well-though-out sermon and give an entirely different message, for which he was, in his judgment, not so well equipped. But he followed his leading, preaching his sermon not with great satisfaction to himself, and possibly not with such great delight to his people, but the next morning he found a letter on his table in which the writer said: "I was on my way to end my life last night and dropped into your church just to pass away the time. I do not remember your singing, nor the words you spoke, but the text you chose was my mother's favorite. It was her last message to me when I left home as a boy, and I could not get away from it last night. Instead of being a suicide today I have become a Christian." "From that day till this," said this sainted preacher, "I have tried to deliver no message that was not clearly dictated both in the choice of the text and the development of the theme by the Holy Spirit of God."—J. Wilbur Chapman.

The noble Christian life of MRS. MARGUERETTE BIRD SHANKLE came to a close on the morning of the 24th of June, 1919.

Many were her years and all full of sunshine and joy to those who came into contact with this choice handmaiden of the Lord.

She was born near Reeder's Ferry, in Panola County, Miss., on the 30th of June, 1838.

Her grandfather had been one of the first settlers of that part of the county. There was no church building near this settlement, and feeling the need of the ministration of the Word of life to his family and his neighbors, he invited the minister of God into his house to hold divine service. These services were held regularly. During early childhood Sister Shankle attended boarding school, where her lovable disposition and studious habits made her a favorite with both pupils and teachers.

At the age of twelve she was converted and joined the Methodist Church. Her father died when she was only six years old, and her mother when she was thirteen. After their death, she made her home with her sister, Mrs. Billy Whitten, at Chapeltown. When she was 21 years of age she was married to Mr. E. D. Shankle, of Panola County. The Shiloh church was built soon after their marriage, and together they joined this church and continued faithful to its obligations until their honorable discharge and call to higher rewards. God gave them four children, three sons and one daughter. Two of the sons survive their sainted mother, Dr. Seab Shankle, of Hollondale, and Jesse Shankle, of Batesville, Miss.

Sister Shankle was always loyal to the interests of her church and loved her pastor and his family, and very often inquired of their welfare. Her house was always the preacher's stopping place.

"She openeth her mouth with wisdom and her tongue was the law of kindness." "She looked well to the ways of her household and ate not the bread of idleness." "Her children rise up and call her blessed."

Everybody loved Aunt Margarette because of her beautiful, consistent Christian life and example.

"Death finds her prepared—'tis a message of peace,
A mandate of mercy to give her release.
Her Savior is with her—the valley is past;
Those accents of triumph and joy were her last,
And freed from its prison, her spirit flies
To the home of her heart, beyond the skies."

Her pastor, R. I. COLLINS.

On August 3, 1919, at the home of her son, J. S. Wilson, MRS. JEMIMA TEDFORD fell on sleep in Jesus, and thus she passed from this vale of pain and sorrow to that realm of infinite peace and happiness, there to exist in sweet communion with loved ones gone before. She was born Sept. 23, 1844, being the daughter of S. Y. and Rebecca Ragan.

She was twice married, the first time to a Mr. Wilson, this union being blest with one son, J. S. Wilson. After the death of her first husband, she was married to Mr. J. J. Tedford; to this union one son was born. This husband and son long preceded her to the realms of the unknown.

She united with the Methdist Episcopal Church, South, when quite young, and her life represented the highest type of true Christian character. One of her greatest pleasures was to attend church. She loved her pastors and was always glad to see them; and she never failed to pray for them. Her presence at church was always a benediction to the writer. If she failed to be there, we always felt that something was wrong.

She leaves to mourn her going away one son, J. S. Wilson, of Pocahontas, Tenn., also four sisters and three brothers, besides a host of grandchildren, other relatives and friends. In August, amid summer flowers, she was borne to her final resting place, in the cemetery at Old Camp Ground, there to wait that day when the dead in Christ shall rise.

Sleep on in peace, dear, tired body; we grieve for thee, though we know in higher circles thy soul rejoices everlastingly.

Her former pastor.

COLD-STOVE CHURCHES.

(Little Lessons from Life.)

Stepping into a chilly room the other day, we observed two men standing with their backs to a great drum stove. Essaying to join them, we backed up and remained for a minute or two before we discovered there was no warmth in the fire-box. Turning, we placed our hand on the surface of the stove to find it as cold as ice. The two men, one of whom had a rubicund countenance, had deceived us by their attitude.

We have in like manner been betrayed by the attitude of some churches. There is the pulpit, the choir, the preached Word, a fair audience in the pews. We join the listeners, we mingle with them afterward. Here is culture, a species of friendliness, a pride in the institution—but something lacks. The soul has not been warmed, the yearning satisfied. At last we discover the fire is out. They have the form but not the fact of godliness. The service is perfect, the sermon a classic, the audience the embodiment of culture, but with all this, the soul chills, it shivers in the atmosphere. If the flame could burst forth from banked fires or the Spirit rush down as upon Pentecost, a different story would be written. To pretend to warm, to sit under the sound of the gospel and not be stirred to better resolve, to sing hymns and not thrill with emotion, to clasp hands and not transmit the spark of true love, to go through the motion of the whole thing and receive no inspiration, catch no vision, make no offer of life—the performance is like standing before the half-consumed coal and ash of last year's fire.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN"

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Ohio Woman.

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"I suffered from irregularities, pains in my side and was so weak at times I could hardly get around to do my work, and as I had four in my family and three boarders it made it very hard for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. I took it and it has restored my health. It is certainly the best medicine for woman's ailments I ever saw."—Mrs. SARA SHAW, R. No. 1, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mrs. Shaw proved the merit of this medicine and wrote this letter in order that other suffering women may find relief as she did.

Women who are suffering as she was should not drag along from day to day without giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The rains and cold have shut me in for the past few days. I regret very much that I have had to break so many engagements. I do hope that the weather will permit the filling of every one for the coming year.

The standing of the districts in the acceptance of their Centenary Allotment is as follows: Meridian District, 63 schools pledged; Newton District, 32 schools pledged; Seashore District, 28 schools pledged; Jackson District, 27 schools pledged; Hattiesburg District, 26 schools pledged; Brookhaven District, 23 schools pledged; Port Gibson District, 28 schools pledged. This means a little less than 50 per cent of the schools are signed up. I do not know if this is correct or not, but, as far as my office has the records, these are the facts.

I wish to commend the superintendent of missionary education in the Meridian District. He deserves the credit for the fine showing of the Meridian District. May I say to the other superintendents, "Go thou and do likewise?"

The last Sunday in December is the day set apart for the taking of specials and pledges to missions. Mr. J. B. Holland, Meridian, will have charge of this work.

Put your missionary offering into a special and watch your school grow.

I wish to express my appreciation of the loving kindness of the brethren to me, and wish them each and every one a very happy Christmas and the most prosperous and successful year of their lives. Pray for me.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The task before the Conference Sunday School Board is to adopt a plan to train leaders. What plan will successfully do that? Your Board all through the last Annual Conference was dealing with that very problem. With the effective church organization that the Methodists have we should succeed in working any plan of the Board. Your Field Secretary has no sympathy with any movement that depreciates any department of the church in order to boost or magnify the Sunday school. When we say church, we mean every department, and I am just as interested in your success in the Missionary Society as I am in your Wesley Bible Class Department. My point is this: Every interest of the church well provided for.

Since Conference, I have visited Oak Grove church, and their school is making marked improvements. It is graded, and has separate rooms for classes. Brother Campbell is the efficient superintendent. Brother Nesom, the pastor, is doing good work. The red brick piled all over the church lot makes it look like a new church soon. They are meeting in the courthouse now.

Write me about your Sunday school.

A PLEASANT THANKSGIVING DINNER AT THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The dining was given in the home of Mr. W. D. Hawkins, one of Meridian's most consecrated and efficient laymen. (By the way, he was the man elected by the Conference Board of Missions to keep the Centenary pledges before the minds and upon the hearts of the people until the goal in payment as well as pledges is reached.)

Brother Hawkins had just completed twenty-five years of continuous service as superintendent of the South Side, now Hawkins Memorial, Church.

Some weeks before the Conference session was to be held in Meridian, Brother Hawkins conceived the idea of having all his former pastors during these twenty-five years dine with him on Thanksgiving Day. Invitations and notices to that effect were sent to each of us. All who are living and are in this Conference were present except Rev. I. L. Peebles, who was not well, but he sent as his proxy, Sister Peebles, who was thrice welcome, because she represented the preachers' wives.

Those present, in chronological order, were: Revs. H. Mellard, who served the church as pastor in 1896; H. G. Hawkins, 1897-8; L. F. Alford, 1900-1; F. B. Ormond, 1902-4; L. E. Alford, 1906-8; C. M. Crossley, 1912-13; A. M. Broadfoot, 1914-17; H. L. Norton, 1918; A. J. Davis, 1919, who was returned for the ensuing year.

An honored guest present was the Rev. Mr. O'Bryant, a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, who was Brother Hawkins' boyhood pastor.

The guests were seated around the table in chronological order. At each plate was found a beautiful card in the shape of a heart, containing the name and years of service of each pastor. Thanksgiving verses of Scripture were also found at each plate, which were read before the thanksgiving prayer was offered by Brother O'Bryant.

Mr. Hawkins sat at one end of the table and his accomplished wife at the other.

After eating to the limit of the feast, Brother Hawkins made a very impressive talk of his work and pleasant association with his pastors during the last twenty-five years, stating that a real contribution and uplift to his life had been received from each of them.

Had time permitted, each of the pastors present would have told of many experiences in their work with Brother Hawkins as superintendent of the Sunday school. Of those who did speak on that occasion, it was the consensus of opinion that the pastorate of that church had been one of the most pleasant in their entire ministry. Each of us felt that Brother Hawkins had been one of the most helpful laymen with whom he had ever worked.

The closing prayer was offered by Rev. A. J. Davis.

The present brick building was erected in 1907, with W. D. Hawkins as chairman of the Building Committee, and this writer as pastor. A considerable debt was left at that time, which was finally paid in 1916, under the pastorate of Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, at which time the name was changed to Hawkins Memorial Church, in memory of W. B. Hawkins and W. D. Hawkins, Jr., father and son of Superintendent W. D. Hawkins, who, together with his brother, E. B. Hawkins, paid the major portion of the debt. If every church in Methodism had one layman in it who was as active and efficient in the Lord's work as is this man who had his former pastors to dine with him on this occasion, we could accomplish a great deal more than we are now doing.

LIVE HONESTLY.

All that a man can do in this world is to live honestly, faithfully and loyally, from day to day. What the immediate end will be, neither he nor any one else knows. He only knows that the highest success crowns those who work in the highest spirit, and that the supremest failure confronts those who work in the worst spirit. No man knows what a day may bring forth in the way of opportunity, nor at what point the door may be thrown open which shall be the great chance for life. The only assurance that we are not missing the one opportunity lies in making the most of every opportunity; in treating every day as if it were the one eventful day of life; in trying every door as if it were the one entrance to the palace; in doing every piece of work as if upon our fidelity depended all our future lives. The man who works in this spirit may safely leave the future with God. Whatever material success is worth having, he will command. Better than all, he will be sure of that greater success which is expressed in character, that "sublime health which values one moment as another, and makes us great in all conditions, and is the only definition we possess of freedom and power."—Christian Union.

SAYING "FATHER" TO GOD.

Consider the possibility of saying "Father" to God. What would life be if you could not say "Father" to God? We know what it is, perhaps, from having been unable to say it ourselves once, or from having been able to say it once, though we cannot say it now. You never can know all that it means not to be able to say that until you see a great race of men which cannot say "Father" to God. The Mohammedan cannot say "Father" to God, because it is irreligion to him. The Hindu cannot say it, because God is not a person to him. The Confucianist cannot say it, because he has only the most speculative ideas of what God is. The Buddhist cannot say it, because he does not believe there is any God. It is impossible for him to call an impersonal chain of causation his father. But you and I can say it, speaking with reverent familiarity to the great Life that lies behind all things. "Father, my father!"—Robert E. Speer.

TWO AMERICANS.

The Christian Century, September 11, 1919, tells us that. "When the liquor men began casting about for a man to contest constitutional prohibition in the courts, they decided to look for some one of social prominence. They laid down on a table in front of Charles Evans Hughes a check for $150,000. This great jurist replied, 'I would not champion this cause before the courts for any sum of money you could name.' Failing to buy Mr. Hughes, they next went to William Howard Taft, and placed before him a signed check, telling him to fill it in for any amount he wanted. The reply of this statesman will be memorable: 'Gentlemen, you couldn't pile enough gold on this continent to induce me to take your case before the courts and before the public, for I will have you know my conscience is not for sale.'"—Exchange.

CHILDREN FOR MISSION WORK.

If we are going to claim the world for Christ, we must claim the children for mission work and train them to be missionary workers. We have failed to begin at the beginning.

We spend hours arguing with some opposer of mission work, who is so "set in his ways" that he has no eyes for the Lord's way and who has grown so confident and boastful of his own wisdom that he dares contradict the commands of the Savior.

Let him alone. It is a pity, but, while we are wasting time on him, a whole generation of children are likely to follow after him. Go to work with the children. They need no argument. They only want leadership. It is so easy to interest them in the work if some one who is interested will make the effort.

Dr. Jefferson said: "With all her follies and crimson stains, Rome goes on her conquering way because she knows the value of a child."

Missionary work with the children is missionary work of the greatest possibility.

The teacher who gave a missionary application to a geography lesson in the class in which sat little eight-year old Eliza Agnew little thought that she was sowing seed which would bear fruit in the work of a woman who was afterwards known as "the mother of a thousand daughters" in Ceylon.—Selected.

NOW GETS 48 EGGS A DAY INSTEAD OF 3

Mr. Vincent Cured His Hens of the Winter Loafing Habit. Easily Done.

"My egg supply has increased wonderfully. Early in January, I started using Don Sung. I had been getting about 3 eggs every other day from 70 hens. By the end of January I was getting 30 eggs a day. In two weeks more, I was getting 4 dozen a day."—G. W. Vincent, South, Ky.

Mr. Vincent's results, in January, prove that you can get the eggs when eggs are high. It's no trouble and costs nothing to try. The same offer that Mr. Vincent accepted is open to you.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

A FEW DONT'S.

Don't work three hundred and sixty-five days a year, notwithstanding that some other Trojans did that year after year in their days of struggle. Take vacations.

Don't, however, let pleasure-seeking supplant success-seeking.

Don't become wholly self-centered.

Don't succumb to the temptation to be too busy to have any time to be rationally sociable.

Don't cultivate exclusiveness.

Don't forget that there are no express trains to the summits of success.

Don't look for any escalator to do your climbing for you.

Don't depend upon others to push you along.

Don't count upon any "pull" which you yourself did not create.

Don't fancy that others succeeded because of mere luck and that you are where you are solely because luck did not come your way.

Don't expect to hear Opportunity knocking at your door until you have trained yourself to recognize her when she comes.

Don't eat more than you feel you have to.

Don't oversleep.

And finally:

Don't forget that things are apt to go right if we do.—Forbes Magazine.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

Where Can I Find Relief From Itching, Terrifying Eczema?

Question on Lips of Afflicted.

There is a harrassing discomfort caused by Eczema that almost becomes a torture. The itching is almost unbearable, and the skin seems on fire with burning irritation. A cure from local applications of salves and ointments is impossible, because such treatment can only allay the pain temporarily. The disease can only be reached by going deep down to its source, which is in the blood, the disease being caused by an infection which breaks out through the skin. That is why the most satisfactory treatment for all so-called skin diseases is S. S. S., which acts by cleansing the blood. Get a bottle today, and you will see results from the right treatment. S. S. S. is a splendid system cleanser; it is not sold or recommended for venereal diseases. Medical advice free. Address Medical Director, 48 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.—Adv.

Weak, Thin, Nervous People Should Tak Bitro-Phosphate

What It Is And How It Increases Weight, Strength and Nerve-Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms and neck, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is obtained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should soon produce a welcome transformation in the appearance, the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes brighten, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing food.

THE YEARBOOK.

The new Yearbook is now ready; let us hope that auxiliaries will provide themselves with these fine programs, in order that the work of 1920 may move on in harmony of progress.

The plan of the Yearbook is based on the thought of the Christ-ward Movement of the World." Each program given lends itself to this fundamental idea. Order supplies from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

WANTED—NEWS.

This Page is awaiting anxiously some news items from the Mississippi Conferences. Messages from the Presidents and from the Publicity Superintendents should find their way through this column. Send us reports of what you are doing and in due time they will be published. If we should receive a good number of reports at one time, comparative items might be published for the interest of the reader.

A MESSAGE TO PUBLICITY SUPERINTENDENTS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

There is no field of missionary effort more important than the dissemination of missionary news. The Publicity Superintendent has it within her province to give the missionary message not only to the entire membership of her own church, but also to a much larger circle who receive their inspiration through the printed page. One of the chief avenues of service she will find to be through the columns of the church and secular papers. Dr. Stelze says:

"There is no agency which can be made quite so effective as the daily newspaper in enlisting the interest of those who do not go to church. It already has an entre into the homes of the people. It is not looked upon with suspicion. It appears every day. The matter it contains is discussed by nearly every one, and worth-while advertisements paid for by the church and proclaiming religion, will be read by millions who would never, in the first instance, go to church to hear it discussed."

We suggest below some ways that the Auxiliary Superintendent of Publicity may accomplish the task set for her:

Publicity in the Auxiliary.

1. Use the Bulletin. Be sure to make all the important announcements which appear in the Bulletin. (This is the best way for your auxiliary to keep the connectional touch.)

2. Clip from the Bulletin news items that you consider to be of special interest and ask members of the auxiliary to tell or illustrate. Make this one of the most interesting features of your meeting.

3. Gather missionary items of local, Conference, and general interest and tell to the auxiliary.

Let these news items suggest subjects for prayer within the auxiliary and in the private devotions of the membership. Be sure to note "Prayer Reminders" in the Bulletin, adding others that may appeal to you.

Publicity in the Local Church.

1. Use a bulletin board. Select missionary items and put on the bulletin board. Be sure that they are in type large enough to be easily read. Place the board where all who come and go to church services may read.

2. Try telling missionary news in the church services. Perhaps the pastor would welcome this innovation in the prayer service. It would help widen the sphere of intercession. Possibly the Epworth Leaguers would be glad to receive news items for their meetings, and Missionary Sunday in the Sunday school could be greatly enlivened by the presentation of the latest missionary news.

Use of the Newspaper.

The Publicity Superintendent should never neglect this part of her work. She should use every possible means to keep in touch with the town and parish editors and get into the columns of the newspaper interesting news concerning the auxiliary, the Conference and Council, and also general missionary news. Efforts along this line should be untiring, because they will be far-reaching in their results.

Sources of Information.

The Publicity Superintendent should be on the alert for news items from every source, securing them from the Bulletin, missionary magazines, church papers, and through general reading. Select the most interesting and important missionary news from all these sources and present it in as enthusiastic and attractive a manner as possible.

Reporting.

Be sure to fill out report blanks and send to your Conference Publicity Superintendent.

N. B.—Send clippings of all items you may have succeeded in placing in your local columns to Mrs. R. H. Wynn, Ruston, La.

LIFE ENLISTMENT.

The responsibility for a large enlistment of life on the part of young men and young women rests, in a great degree, with the women of the auxiliaries. There should be a portion of each meeting devoted to prayer that the Kingdom of Christ may have a large force of volunteers for life service, else its progress will be greatly hindered. The earnest prayer will go far toward preparation for the personal word that will help to determine the trend of a life. More often than we think, young people drift into their life purposes. They let circumstances decide for them, and, all too late, the lament comes. From a service of prayer for them, women may go out to show them how to face the question of life work clearly, and to decide it in the right way.—Selected.

In the twenty mission hospitals of Korea over 200,000 patients are treated annually, and none go away without having heard the gospel.

A WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN CONGO BELGE.

Miss Etta Lee Woolsey, of our Woman's work in Africa, reports the organization, February 14, of a Woman's Missionary Society with an enrollment of forty-five charter members. Since then the number has increased, until now the membership numbers sixty-five. The dues are one egg or its equivalent, one cent, in money.

At the April meeting the women decided they would like to have a share in the work of God by supporting an evangelist in a village which had not had one before. They are now paying the evangelist's salary ($1.30). At first, the chief of the village refused to enter the church, so the fifteen members of the society who are baptized Christians have been meeting for about two months with one of the missionaries, once a week, for special prayer for the chief and for Mundadi, the evangelist. The chief, we are glad to say, has begun going to church. —Selected.

RACIAL STRIFE.

We view with great concern the evidences of racial strife between the white and the negro races, both in the North and in the South. We must endeavor as Christian patriots to face the facts exactly as they are. With wide-open eyes—and, if possible, without prejudice—we must recognize the existing serious conditions. These two races, with differing characteristics, capacities, and possibilities of development, are in this land side by side in the ratio of about ten to one. They must live together under such laws and with such limitations, privileges, and responsibilities as experience shall demonstrate to be for the highest interests of both races. While we believe that socially they must walk in separate paths, both in the North and in the South, they can and must help each other in every possible way.—Selected.

HOW THE BETHLEHEM HOUSE HELPS.

The following is from a letter received by one of our secretaries:

"Dr. W. W. Alexander called on me at Columbus to say he had found the Bethlehem House one of the best agencies for prevention of race riot or feeling and to beg that we multiply the work. He is placed at Camp Gordon (Y. M. C. A.) where he says in a few weeks he rubbed up against five hundred negro soldiers. His specific charge was to keep down race rioting among soldiers. The Bethlehem House furnished his talking points and he said over and over, 'We certainly are indebted to the Methodist women for instituting these houses, and we get on our knees to you to multiply them. It is the best thing now for race interpretation and co-operation I know anything about.' He said with enthusiasm, 'You haven't heard anything about riot among the Negroes we have worked with.'"

ABOUT RHEUMATISM

What Thousands Have Found Gives Relief From This Painful Trouble.

Rheumatism is a constitutional disease, manifesting itself in local aches and pains, inflamed joints and stiff muscles. It cannot be cured by local or external applications. It must have constitutional treatment.

Take a course of the great blood-purifying and tonic medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acid condition of the blood on which rheumatism depends, and gives permanent relief. This medicine combines, with excellent alteratives and tonics, what is generally conceded to be the most effective agent in treatment of this disease.

If a cathartic or laxative is nee take Hood's Pills. Purely vegetal

Exchange Your Old Body For A New One

You can do it in three weeks and thereby renew your health. This article is written by a physician who has seen it demonstrated in numerous cases and explains how it is done.

Listen: If your weight is one hundred and thirty-three pounds your body contains eighty pounds of water, for according to standard medical books the human body contains sixty-seven and one-half per cent of water. Now, disease is invariably caused by impurities which we call poisons, and these are readily dissolved by the right kind of natural mineral water. Drink ten gallons (eighty pounds) of Shivar mineral water (use no other water for twenty-one days), and you will have exchanged your old body for a new one, so far as the soluble part of it is concerned. The impurities will be dissolved and pass away. If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other curable conditions due to impure blood, accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer which appears below. Read the following letter carefully; then sign and mail it:

A GREAT CONVENIENCE.

About three miles from his place of business lives Mr. Jones, and he goes back and forth every day in his automobile. Now, Mr. Jones has a kind, generous heart, and when he sees a pedestrian trudging his way he will often offer the man a "lift."

One morning, shortly after leaving home, he saw a large Irish woman struggling along with a huge bundle. He stopped his car and said politely:

"Mayn't I give you a lift, madam?"

"In that thing?" she said. "I never rode in one in all my life."

"Well, jump in," he said; and when she had climbed in and deposited the bundle on the seat beside her, they started on.

After he had covered a mile, Mr. Jones became a little uneasy; but he kept on for nearly another mile, and then turned and said, "Where do you want to go, madam?"

She gave him a broad smile and a gracious nod of the head, and replied, "Anywhere you wish; it makes no difference to me."

"But where were you going when I took you in?" asked Mr. Jones.

"Oh," she said "only to the next house!"

And kind Mr. Jones had to turn back and take her two miles to the "next house."—Youth's Companion.

EDUCATIONAL WORK IN CHINA AND RUSSIA SURE TO BRING BIG RETURNS.

The good that lectures do for the Chinese and Russians is not fleeting, declares Prof. C. H. Robertson, a Young Men's Christian Association educator, in his article "Simple Science Opens Doors to Isolated Peoples" which appears in ASSOCIATION MEN for September. The writer has given years to the natives of the Far East, and has had the hearty support of powerful public officials. Do these lectures leave a lasting impression? he was asked. This instance is an adequate reply:

Jaded from twenty-one days of railroad travel out through Siberia, I left the train at Khabarovosk, and the answer came, unlooked for and refreshing:

"Were you not in Peking about five years ago?"

The speaker, a Chinese coolie, had stepped up to me as I crossed the platform, and stood looking at me most intently.

"What makes you think so?"

"I saw a man there looking like you."

"What did he do?"

"He gave us a very interesting and instructive lecture."

"What was it about?"

And then followed an account, most intelligent, of the subject presented in the capital of China.

A Chinese coolie, a thousand miles north of Peking, five years after he had heard it, remembering the speaker, the subject and content of the lecture!

Catarrh is an excessive secretion, accompanied with chronic inflammation, from the mucous membrane. Hood's Sarsaparilla acts on the mucous membrane through the blood, reduces inflammation, establishes healthy action, and radically cures all cases of catarrh.—Adv.

THRIFT AND CHARACTER.

The effect of thrift on the moral character and welfare of a community or an individual cannot be too strongly emphasized, according to George K. Home, chief of police of Los Angeles.

"Thrift is a deterrent of crime," said Chief Home, "because thrift develops character. Police records show that few thrifty persons land in jail. The regular saving of money usually requires courageous determination and some self-denial, but it pays big dividends in better citizenship, greater independence, power, initiative, confidence and self-reliance."

THE BEAUTIFUL TOWN OF COLLINS.

Dear Brother Carley: We made a safe landing in this lovely town on Friday, December 12. We had intended coming on Wednesday, but the floods were raging and the bridges were damaged, so we had to wait until the way was cleared up.

We unintentionally stole a march on these good people, and arrived before any one was expecting us; however, as soon as it was known that we were in town, the 'phones got busy and Brother Corley came to the parsonage in his big car and soon had us in his lovely home, where we were treated to a feast of good things to eat, and were told to stay away from the parsonage until further notice. Well, about four o'clock we were invited to the parsonage, where we found a good crowd of ladies to welcome us—and such a royal reception we did receive! A good, warm supper was waiting for us, and the pantry was full of good things. That was a consecration night with us. The Lord has been too good to us for us not to reconsecrate our all to him anew on the altar.

We served the Prentiss charge four years, and I never served a better people. I thought, when we left there, we were leaving the best people in the world, but when we got to Collins, we found that we were still among the best people that ever lived. We are praying and hoping for, as well as expecting, a great year here.

I find that these people dearly love Brother and Sister Williams—they did a great work for the Master in this country. They will live in the hearts of these people when their bodies have returned to dust and their spirits returned to the God who gave them.

To my mind, the town of Collins is very beautiful. I like its location; it is as a city set upon a hill that cannot be hid.

I am going to make an effort to put the Advocate in every home in the church on the Collins charge. Hoping that we all will help you pass the ten thousand mark, and that the paper will be a still greater paper, I am

Yours for the Kingdom,

REPORT FROM LELAND.

I came to Leland from Pontotoc, Miss., on the night of the 4th of December over the Southern Railroad, and Dr. J. T. Mathis and wife, of Leland, met me at Elizabeth with car. One week later, my wife came from Gilmore Sanitarium, at Amory, Miss., where she had undergone an operation three weeks before. She is now doing well. On Tuesday evening before leaving Pontotoc, the Senior Epworth League gave a party in honor of Mrs. Young and myself, which was a most delightful affair socially, and then they proceeded to pound us with Christmas gifts, which called for another box to bring them to Leland.

We had four delightful years at Pontotoc; that is a delightful station of progressive, liberal people. They now have a splendid parsonage, well located; happy should be the preacher who goes to Pontotoc.

We have found a royal welcome here at Leland. The next morning after getting in Dr. J. T. Mathis and Brother B. R. Jones accompanied me to the parsonage, which was already being pounded by the good ladies. Sunday morning, the 14th, I preached to a good congregation; that night, we had the Baptist congregation and their new pastor, Brother Morgan, which gave us a great hearing. Sunday afternoon, in conference with the officials, we decided to remodel, re-cover, repaint and re-paper the parsonage, at an estimated cost of fifteen hundred dollars. The stewards have already paid the pastor his first month's salary. We hope and pray that this will be a great year in the spiritual uplift of our people here at Leland. We find quite a number of the choice spirits among our big-hearted Delta people here at Leland. They talk of the enduring work done by the men who have preceded me. All with one accord speak of the high class of preaching of Brother S. A. Brown, whom I succeed.

"THOU HAST PUT GLADNESS IN MY HEART."

By Minnie Leona Upton.

"Thou hast put gladness in my heart!"
Lord of the silver and the gold,
The cattle on a thousand hills,
And all earth's wealth untold,
I thank Thee that instead of these—
Instead of riches of the mart,
Or any prize my hands can hold—
"Thou hast put gladness in my heart!"

"Thou hast put gladness in my heart!"
And only Thou canst take away,
And only I can give to Thee
Cause why it may not stay!
Lord, help me keep my heart for Thee,
So that this guest may ne'er depart,
So that I still unshamed may sing,
"Thou hast put gladness in my heart!"
